As for the offer of Trans-Canada Air Lines to enter into a new contract at a higher price, I can only say that by establishing a higher charter price they are taking away the advantage of an operation of this kind, because it then becomes impossible for us to offer to the prospective immigrants any lower-priced trip. There is absolutely no excuse in the world for Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe demanding Trans-Canada Air Lines asking a higher price because Transocean Air Lines, which is operating strictly on the basis of ordinary commercial operation without a subsidy of any kind, is prepared to continue at the present price which brings these people in at a figure that they can afford to pay.

They will go on and continue this operation indefinitely, with even more machines, if Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe will permit us to continue this operation, as we have so successfully, ever since August 3rd. We should be permitted to go ahead.

I am not only placing these facts before this Legislature, but through this Legislature I am placing these facts before the people of Ontario, and of all Canada, as a whole.

If immigration is desirable then it is particularly desirable this means of immigration should be available. This new and efficient and speedy means of immigration—the only successful plan which has yet been started in Canada—has now been stopped by the Dominion Minister of Trade and Commerce (Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe). This man, remember, a few months ago, was promising to fly thousands under their own plan long before this; this man a few months ago was promising, in addition, to fly thousands of displaced persons here. Where are they?

Not a single one under any plan of that kind, but he is stopping ours, the only successful one which has been undertaken.

I am placing these facts in detail before this Legislature for the information of the hon. members as to why our plan has been scuttled and so the people of Ontario and of Canada may know only one man stands in the way of the continuance of this movement of the very finest type of immigrant into the Province of Ontario.

This is still a democracy, and I have hopes, by placing these facts before the public, the strong voice of a democratic people may still be sufficiently strong to insist we be permitted to continue this movement of these fine people from the British Isles who are so greatly needed for our expanding activities throughout every part of Ontario for the years ahead.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Another stage in the cold war?

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I will carry it one stage further. I am still before the Orders of the Day.

I have the local Pravda, the Toronto Daily Star, and across the headlines is:

"Ontario Homes Plan Off. Howe. Forty Million Dollar Housing Plan cancelled by Howe—Blames New Drew Law."

Then it goes on to refer to the law which has been under consideration here, and which has been approved by the Liberal and C.C.F. groups of this Legislature, as I recall it.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Which law?

HON. MR. DREW: Not by the Communists.

MR. SALSBERG: Which law?

HON. MR. DREW: The one in regard to Crown properties,—

MR. SALSBERG: The one which—

HON. MR. DREW: —which you opposed naturally.

MR. SALSBERG: No, the one in which I raised—

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, of course I would attribute just as much accuracy to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) as I would to Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe in a statement of that kind, because the fact is this bill, of course, has no earthly relationship to Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's plan for housing in this province—none whatever.

This is simply another of the same kind of statements to which I was referring. Mr. Speaker, let me say this slowly so there may be no mistake, this simply demonstrates, in addition to what I have said, that under no circumstances, is there any relationship, except by accident, to truth in anything Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe says.

MR. MACLEOD: Does that mean the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has won the cold war?

HON. MR. DREW: I have won something if the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) and the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe are tied together.

MR. SPEAKER: May I ask the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) to refrain from these beautiful remarks, please?

MR. SALSBERG: What is wrong with them?

MR. SPEAKER: You should know.

MR. SALSBERG: I know there is nothing wrong with them.

MR. SPEAKER: That will be enough from you.

MR. SALSBERG: If you are going to begin on "remarks," there are plenty to take outside of these two members.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Cool down, now.

MR. SPEAKER: Would the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) mind repeating that, please, for the benefit of the House, and hon. members can judge just what sort of remark you sometimes "get away" with.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair and that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion approved; House in Committee, Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 4th Order.

FIRE DEPARTMENTS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 4th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 111, An Act to amend the Fire Departments Act, 1946. Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive approved.

On Section 4.

MR. AURELE CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question of the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell), There has been some suggestion that possibly this Act may be retroactive. Is that the case, that it may be retroactive in its provision?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, what provision does the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) suggest is retroactive?

MR. CHARTRAND: I have not that information before me, but I understand some city solicitor got the impression that it may be retroactive to the first of the year.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) got the impression that who got the impression?

MR. CHARTRAND: He got the impression.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, none of the substantive provisions of the act are retroactive. I believe I explained this point at introduction. When this statute was introduced, it was not thought necessary to introduce sanctions. The sanctions relate back to the substantive operation of the act. The substantive operation of the act itself is not retroactive.

MR. CHARTRAND: Thank you.

Sections 4 to 6 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 111 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 5th Order.

POLICE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 5th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 112, An Act to amend the Police Act, 1946. Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive approved.

On Section 6.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I want to make the comment to the House that I think this section is a very useful one, but at the same time I want to point out that we discussed the same point when the bill was before us in 1947.

If we refer to Volume 1, No. 19 of the Official Report, Daily Edition of Wednesday, April 2nd, 1947, page 770, we find the following report; I was speaking on Section 27 (e) at that time, subsection 2 of which provides as follows:

"Every agreement made under Section 27 (b) and every decision or award of a majority of the members of the Board of Arbitration under Section 27 (c) shall be binding upon the council of the municipality, the board, where there is a board, and the members of the police force."

And then subsection 2:

"The provision of an agreement, decision or award involving the expenditure of money by the council of the municipality shall not be enforceable until the commencement of the next fiscal period in respect of which the council may include provision for such expenditures in its estimates."

These are the comments which I made at that time:

"I am thinking of where the settlement has taken some considerable time, and after several months of negotiations, a settlement is arrived at just a little bit too late to be included in the estimates for the current year. Then as a result of the negotiations, the increased salaries which the police officers may have won in their negotiations, will not become effective until after the next budget may be set up by the council. I was wondering if you would agree to include an amendment there after the words 'next fiscal period,' in the third line to be deleted and the words 'after negotiations are commenced,' substituted therefor. That is, just as soon as the municipal council and the police officers, or the police committee, have commenced negotiations, the increase would be included in the estimates for the next fiscal year after that time, and not wait until the whole transaction has been settled."

Mr. Chairman, those were my remarks at that time, and they were very strongly opposed by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). I just wanted to point out to the House that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) is capable of changing his mind the same as hon. members of the Liberal Party, or hon. members of the C.C.F.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, I am always very happy to change my mind in the light of experience, and if the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) showed foresight on that occasion, I wish to compliment him.

I still do not feel, however, that the amendment now proposed does exactly what the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) suggested then, and which he now feels has been accomplished. The Act has exactly the same structure, but where the negotiations are not got under way in sufficient time, there is now the application of the sanction.

I may say in all sincerity to the Legislature, that without the sanction, it would not work. If the municipalities had accepted 100 per cent. the spirit of the Act without the sanction, the suggestion of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) would have been unnecessary. To have made the suggestion of last year effective, it would have been necessary to have at that time included the sanctions which I had hoped it would have been possible to avoid, but which experience has demonstrated are necessary.

Section 6 to 12 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 112 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 6th Order.

MUNICIPAL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 6th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 90, An Act to amend the Municipal Act. Mr. Dunbar.

Sections 1 to 8 inclusive approved.

On Section 9.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, what changes in 9 have been made from the existing laws?

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Chairman, that section provides instead of members of the council being justices of the peace, they just have authority to take an affidavit now.

MR. OLIVER: No, Section 9, at the top of page 4 of the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I thought the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) was going to have that taken out. What happened to that?

MR. OLIVER: Repealed, I hope.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Under Section 9, the sections of the Municipal Act are repealed. "These sections under which certain members of municipal councils are ex officio justices of the peace are repealed." Have you not the new number?

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Yes.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The reprint?

MR. GRUMMETT: We did not get the reprint, that is the trouble, Mr. Minister (Mr. Dunbar).

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That would be 8 then, would it not?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: The one having to do with the surplus.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That was withdrawn.

MR. OLIVER: It is not in here.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That was withdrawn by the committee, the one having to do with the surplus.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Do I understand that in the redrafted Act, No. 9 calls for the repeal of Sections 360 and 361; is that right?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) has the correct No. 9, but the original—I understand now when hon. members have the wrong section—No. 9 had reference to the surplus, and there had been left out something regarding moneys which were due the municipality, subsidies and-so-forth and arrears of taxes. We thought it would be better to consider everything when we have the conferences between the municipalities and the Government, so we withdrew that section.

Sections 9 and 10 approved.

On Section 11.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Making you all amateurs now.

Sections 11 and 12 approved.

On Section 13.

MR. MacLEOD: Is that the section on stray pigeons?

Sections 13 to 20 inclusive approved.

On Section 21.

MR. OLIVER: On Section 21, Mr. Chairman, is there a new scale of license fees set out there?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the question of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), it is controlled more. That is where we put in a section last year for peddlers. Some of the municipalities had gone a little, may I say "haywire", on it. One municipality wanted to charge the Fuller Brush Company $500 to go into the small village or township in order to sell goods. That particular factory is located in Hamilton where they manufacture brushes. It is an Ontario factory and it employs a lot of people not only in manufacturing but in selling, therefore, we wanted some control over this and we put the limit of the licence at $2. Anything above that has to be with the approval of the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Another instance, is if a man is paying a business tax in a municipality. Supposing you have a hardware store in a municipality and you brought in Beatty Washers, and they put on a campaign to sell more washing machines, that is for you; you have your business and you pay your business tax, and there is no charge in that way.

Any person who is already doing business in the municipality and goes out to canvass and put on a campaign—there is no fee in such a case.

MR. OLIVER: It was Section 21 I had reference to, $10 for a cabin and a maximum of $100.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am sorry, Section 21 does cover cabins.

MR. OLIVER: Is that a new set of fees?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, there was considerable trouble experienced there, too. In some of the municipalities they wanted up to $100 per cabin, a ridiculous price, therefore, the hon. Minister for Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) thought it would be better to put it at $10 per cabin and $100 limit on a tourist camp. Of course, that can always be appealed, if it is over $100.

MR. OLIVER: The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) has over $100 for a trailer camp.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: A trailer camp, yes.

MR. OLIVER: That might be more than the thing would be worth.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You know it is a very serious matter, this matter of trailer camps where people come in and reside in trailers for a period of years and have children going to school. In that case, the other residents there have to pay the cost of education, therefore, they should pay their share in just the same way. That is the meaning of the section.

Sections 21 to 26 inclusive approved.
Bill No. 90 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 7th Order.

ASSESSMENT ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 7th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 99, An Act to amend the Assessment Act. Mr. Dunbar.

Section 1 to 10 inclusive approved.
On Section 11.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, what is the change in Section 11?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, any citizen can appeal to the municipal board, if he wishes to pay $25. Prior to that, a man had to be assessed at $5,000 in unorganized districts, or $10,000 in counties, whereas now if a man is assessed at $3,000 he may make his appeal. Some people thought it was not fair to put the amount where a man with a smaller property was denied the opportunity of appealing to the municipal board.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): He still has to pay the $25 though?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh, yes.
Sections 11 to 23 inclusive approved.
Bill No. 99 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 8th Order.

RESEARCH COUNCIL OF ONTARIO

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 8th Order; House in Committee on Bill 114, An Act respecting the Research Council of Ontario. Mr. Michener.

Section 1 approved.
On Section 2.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): How many members would constitute the committee?

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER: Not more than twelve.

Sections 2 to 14 inclusive approved.
Bill No. 114 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 9th Order.

NATURAL GAS CONSERVATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 9th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 115, An Act to amend the Natural Gas Conservation Act. Mr. Frost.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 11th Order.

SNOW ROADS AND FENCES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 11th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 117, An Act to amend the Snow Roads and Fences Act. Mr. Doucett.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 12th Order.

AMUSEMENT TAX

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 12th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 118, An Act to Impose a Tax on Amusements to Provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals. Mr. Frost.

On Section 1.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question? Is it the intention of the Government to extend this tax into fields which are not now taken in, under the present arrangement; to extend the levy into fields other than those, and if so, into what fields?

HON. MR. FROST: To what fields are you referring?

MR. ROBINSON: Any fields, under the new tax.

HON. MR. FROST: You mean under The Dominion Act?

MR. ROBINSON: Yes.

HON. MR. FROST: The Dominion Act is very broad; it taxes everything, but there are provisions which provide exemption which in some cases have been granted.

This Act, obviously, is very broad in its terms, and the intention is this—and we think it is a sound one—that all amusements are taxable for which an admission fee is payable. I think the soundness of this is perfectly obvious.

The people who go to amusements are contributing something as a protection to themselves, if for nothing else; they are contributing to the hospitals.

Last night I was in a place of amusement where there were some 16,000 or 17,000 people, and I can well imagine those people saying "Well, if my 20 per cent. is going to provide security for the people in this building, for myself, and for my family, it is a sound situation." We think it is the finest type of insurance to which they could contribute.

The Act is intentionally and obviously broad in its application, and so it should be. If the hon. member (Mr. Robinson) referred to Sections 9 and 24 (c), it will be observed there are provisions to get away from what might be nuisances in connection with this matter. There are such things as church entertainments, charitable affairs, and things of that sort which obviously will be exempted in the course of time, when we get into the operation and administration of this Act.

I may say to the hon. members of the House, Mr. Chairman, that the Treasury Department is not without experience in this. For many years we had an Amusement Tax Act in the province. We have many officials who were associated with that Act, and know about the features and difficulties which there were in connection with that particular Act. We have our motion picture branch, which in its day, up to 1937, was engaged in that particular work, so we are not without experience, and I may say to the hon. member (Mr. Robinson) that when the Act comes into force we think it will work very smoothly and he and others will be very delighted to make their small contributions towards the security of themselves and their families.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question. In the face of this legislation, I was wondering if this was an indication or a forerunner of what the size of our deficit will be in the budget—or the surplus.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member (Mr. Taylor) knows perfectly well this has nothing to do with the budget. It has no connection whatever with the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Is that a good point or a bad one?

HON. MR. DREW: At least it will not change the budget.

HON. MR. FROST: No, it does not change the budget.

Section 2 approved.

On Section 3.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, in connection with Section 3: I referred very briefly yesterday to the point about allowing children and others entering theatres, where there is simply a small admission fee, to so enter without being taxed. I think that should receive some consideration from this House. I say again that I believe the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) is perfectly right in bringing down a bill of this nature for the purpose indicated in the bill, but some little consideration should be given to those who feel the pinch of having to pay an additional amount for the admission of children to theatres.

For that purpose, Mr. Chairman, I would like to move this amendment:

"That Bill No. 118, 'An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to Provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals,' be amended by striking out Section 3 of the bill and substituting therefor the following:

3. (1) Every purchaser shall pay to the Treasurer for the use of his Majesty in right of Ontario a tax at the rate of

(a) 20 per centum where the price of admission is more than 50 cents and less than $2,

(b) 35 per centum where the price is $2 or more, calculated upon the price of admission charged by the owner, and, in the calculation, every fraction of 1 cent shall be counted as 1 cent.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no tax shall be paid upon an admission the price of which is not more than 50 cents."

HON. MR. FROST: The amendment is not acceptable. It is not workable, and it would lead to endless confusion and difficulty and would achieve nothing.

MR. GRUMMETT: May I ask, Mr. Chairman, of the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) in what way would it be unworkable, and where would you find the confusion.

Motion negatived.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, on Section No. 3, had there been a recorded vote on the amendment, I would have found it very difficult to decide how to vote, because I think any attempt to amend what I consider to be very bad legislation, would be like putting a mustard plaster on a wooden leg.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It has been done.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: I would suggest the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) might read with profit an editorial which appeared in the publication of Dr. McCullagh, of Richmond Hill, this morning in which he argued, through the pen of his editor, the tax mentioned in Section 3 is inordinately high, in the present circumstances.

When the 20 per cent. amusement tax was imposed by the Federal Government, it was imposed under conditions of war, and as the Globe and Mail suggests, it was probably intended as much to discourage the spending of money on amusements, as it was to derive revenue.

We are not living under conditions of war today, and there is no reason under the sun why a wartime tax of 20 per cent. should be perpetuated into a period of peace.

It is a little embarrassing to invoke the Globe and Mail in support of an argument, especially since the Globe and Mail is notorious as the main supporter of this Government, but, nevertheless, the argument contained in the latter part of that editorial and the elaboration of the editorial delivered over the air last night by Mr. John Collingwood Reade, who is certainly persona grata with the Progressive Conservative Party, is bound to carry conviction to a great many people in this province, who will be impressed by the arguments put forward.

I suggest, having had the night to think about it, and having read, as I am sure the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has, the editorial in the Globe and Mail, he may, on second thought, feel that perhaps he overreached himself and this tax could be cut in two. That, I think, would be a step forward. It is true it would not give him the amount of money of which he spoke yesterday, but, as I suggested, in the remarks I made yesterday afternoon, if you had been able to come to terms with Ottawa on the matter of taxation, as you are prepared to come to terms with Ottawa on a piece of legislation which has not yet been dealt with by the Federal Government, you would have such a large amount of money on hand you would not have to impose even a 10 per cent. tax. This year you would have had $38,000,000 to play around with, if you had signed the agreement in 1945.

Now you come along with a piece of legislation which can only be characterized as a "footnote to your own folly." You "missed the boat" in 1945, and now are going to make the wage-earners of this province, a vast majority of whom earn under $2,000 a year, pay for your mistake.

I suggest to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) since this bill is in committee stage, he might very well profit by the wise counsel and advice of Dr. McCullagh and reduce this amusement tax by 50 per cent. What does he think about it? Would he consider it?

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) should give and perhaps has given very serious consideration to the level of tax that is about to be employed. I think the picture from the Dominion point of view is that we have collected in the Dominion for amusement tax something between $15,000,000 and $16,000,000 in a year.

I understood my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) to say yesterday that he would require something in excess of $3,000,000 to meet the added commitments which the Government has properly undertaken to further help the hospitals in the Province of Ontario. If we can assume for a moment that the total income from amusement tax in the Dominion is between $15,000,000 and $16,000,000, it is proper, therefore, to assume that Ontario's share would be something like double the amount that my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) needs to meet these financial commitments. Therefore, I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) should give very careful consideration to reducing this amount.

I think the only other argument I want to present now is this; I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) will agree that this 20 per cent. levy may well prove foolish in the days to come in that it does not bring in the revenue that a smaller impost might,—I mean on that basis,—because you can tax anything too much and it might be, in the days to come, we will realize a 20 per cent impost on amusements is more than that industry can stand and still maintain its position in the province and in the economic and entertainment field. I do ask my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) to give very careful consideration to this before we pass it, because even if a 10 per cent. impost did not fully meet the financial commitments that my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) mentioned when he spoke on the bill, it would be an easy matter, indeed, for this Government to save by economies in the various departments of government enough to make up whatever small deficiency there might be. Let us put it at 10 per cent. this year, let us try it out and see what the revenue is and how far it goes towards meeting the commitments that the Government has in mind.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I might say the law of diminishing returns does apply. The power to tax is the power to kill. We are not anxious to do that and we are determined not to.

I think the record of this Government with the expansion of business and prosperity in Ontario is every indication that this Government is carrying on a very wise policy of taxation.

I might say to my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) there is no indication the 20 per cent. tax is too heavy this year. One only has to go to the theatres and to the hockey matches and other places to find you cannot get seating room. The Dominion tax of 20 per cent. at the present time is going to swell a $500,000,000 surplus at Ottawa. We will take this 20 per cent. at a time when the people are able to pay and not complaining of paying and are going to places of amusement and we are going to apply it for the good of the sick and people who will be sick in this province of ours.

I should say to my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver); nothing this Legislature does is the last word. This Legislature will be meeting again next year and the years following and these things can be considered in the light of conditions at the time.

Some reference has been made to the Dominion-Provincial offer. I wonder if the hon. members of this House would like to be sitting here on this afternoon, the 25th of March, 1948, and debating whether we were going to impose a poll tax of $12.00 a head on every person in this Legislature today and the same amount on the head of every working man, woman and child in the Province of Ontario. That is what that would entail.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): I think the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) should be fair. He knows perfectly well the seven provinces which have signed agreements at Ottawa are not imposing any such poll tax.

HON. MR. FROST: No, because you are protecting them.

MR. MACLEOD: You could have signed the tax agreement without in any way involving yourself in any social security measures.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): You are taxing them now with this bill; I do not know that it will be $12.00 but it will be high.

MR. OLIVER: I just want to say to my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) he did not enlarge on the argument I made.

I think you will find if you study the figures of the Dominion income from tax on amusements, in all probability you will get almost twice what you have to have in order to meet the commitments. Does my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) think that is necessary?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, our study of the hospital question indicates that we are on the edge of a very, very large problem and if we collect more than $3,500,000 or $4,000,000 from this, or if we collect $7,000,000, which is double, as my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) has inferred, I can assure him the money will be used for just twice as good a programme as we have at the present time, and we have a pretty good one right now, but every cent will go into hospitals.

Sections 3 to 8 inclusive approved.

On Section 9.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): This seems to be getting rather involved. I recall in the old days, a good, economical government repealed the amusement tax entirely. There used to be a great deal of difficulty and confusion about getting rebates or exemptions from the collecting of taxes.

HON. MR. FROST: Might I refer my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) to Section 24, sub-section C?

MR. NIXON: I have already read that, but we are dealing with Section 9.

HON. MR. FROST: "C" is complementary and gets rid of the nuisance problems you have in mind. It does not mean every amusement. It is not necessary in every particular case to make a rebate if you find a certain class is to be exempted, they can be exempted under Section 24 (c) and it is not necessary for them to file returns.

MR. NIXON: That is under the regulation section?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. Sections 9 and 10 approved.

On Section 11.

MR. OLIVER: Are the penalties comparable to those imposed at the moment?

HON. MR. FROST: Under the Dominion Act?

MR. OLIVER: Yes.

HON. MR. FROST: I really do not know.

Sections 11 to 25 inclusive approved.

On Section 26.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: (St. Andrew): Before we complete the bill, has the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) any idea how many people we have to employ to enforce control of this tax, and the approximate cost for that purpose?

HON. MR. FROST: I could not say, Mr. Chairman, with this exception; it is obvious to the hon. members that this Act is very simple in its operation and all the nuisance provisions of the old Act of a dozen years or so ago have been abolished. It is an Act on a percentage basis something like the Gasoline Tax Act and it appoints the owners or operators of places of amusement as agents. That is the purpose of the licence. The small licence is merely a registration, that is all, and they then act as agents for the province and the amount is collected without a lot of fuss and difficulty with the people themselves and without the nuisance features there have been in Acts of this sort.

MR. SALSBERG: You will need a number of inspectors and watchers and collectors and checkers. In other words, would it not be far cheaper to collect that amount or more through the imposition of a corporation income tax, as suggested,—which, of course, would be more undemocratic,—instead of spending a large amount in setting this up?

HON. MR. FROST: It would be a very simple matter and maybe expensive.

MR. MACLEOD: Just a word on Section 27, which says:

"This Act shall come into force on any day to be named by the Lieutenant-Governor by his Proclamation."

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) told us yesterday that this tax would not become operative until the Dominion Government withdrew from the field. It was intimated in the MacKenzie King organ last night that Ottawa is not prepared to give any assurance as to when it will withdraw from the field. The only intimation we have is the rather obscure statement in a letter from the hon. Mr. Abbott to hon. Mr. Angus L. Macdonald.

Once a bill is passed by the Legislature, and becomes law, the Lieutenant-Governor on the advice of the hon. Ministers can bring this legislation into effect. I am not suggesting for a moment that would be done with the present hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in office, but there is always the possibility within the next year or so the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) may be sent to the Senate and we will have a new Provincial Treasurer, and armed with this Act he might say "we have waited long enough for the hon. Mr. Abbott to get out, and we have authority to proceed, we will go ahead with the 20 per cent. amusement tax," and then we would be paying 40 per cent.

Would it not be better if the Act stated specifically it shall not come into force until such time as the Dominion jurisdiction has withdrawn from this field? Would there be anything unusual about that and would it not give more assurance to the intended victims of this Act? Is it not a fact once it passes through committee and third reading this Government has power to impose this tax?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. There is no doubt, if we wanted to proclaim the Act on the 15th of April, there would be two taxes in effect, the Dominion tax and the provincial tax, but the Government has intimated to this House it has no intention of proclaiming the Act until the Dominion vacates the field, and the Dominion have said they would and have given reasons why the hospitals should be bettered and extended and I have no doubt the Dominion will pull out shortly.

I would just like to say that to the House, to clarify the situation, because I noticed one of the papers intimated in all probability no decision would be made on the part of the Dominion until the budget is brought down.

I may say to the hon. members of this House it is not necessary for the Dominion to wait until the budget is brought down. It was not necessary at this time last year. Last year the budget was brought down sometime in the month of June, but prior to that time and as part of the price of the Province of Nova Scotia signing the Dominion-Provincial agreement, the Dominion pulled out of the gasoline tax on the 31st of March, 1947.

Every hon. member of this House knows that is true, and there is no reason in the world why the hon. Mr. Abbott or the Dominion Government should not pull out of the amusement tax field on the 31st of March, 1948. It follows that is correct, and it is true. My hon. friends opposite know this is true and I again ask my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) to exercise every bit of influence he has down there. The problem of our hospitals is acute and difficult and this is an Act which everybody, including the Opposition, has commended as a proper move to assist. If the Dominion is, as I assume they are, anxious to help in the health situation in this country, this is a very excellent and proper move by which they can help simply by doing what they did last year with the gasoline tax, that is, getting out on the 31st of March.

MR. MACLEOD: They are in power at Ottawa and if they are noted for anything it is stubbornness. They are very stubborn people.

We listened this afternoon for a whole hour to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) denouncing a Minister of that Government who has created all sorts of difficulties for the Province of Ontario and they are going to be in power until 1951. If they do not withdraw from the field, how are you going to cope with the problem of Ontario hospitals without imposing this tax? I think it is fair to assume that the Ottawa Government, the way things stand today, will do everything in its power to block anything that this Government tries to do and vice versa, because that is the way things stand. There is a cold war between the two jurisdictions.

HON. MR. FROST: We appreciate we sometimes do not receive the fullest co-operation from Ottawa although we are extending co-operation continuously. I cannot think any Government at Ottawa would be inhumane enough to take their spite out on the Ontario Government at the expense of the sick people of the Province of Ontario; surely not.

Bill No. 118 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 13th Order.

AID TO PUBLIC HOSPITALS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 13th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 119, An Act to provide for greater aid to Public Hospitals. Mr. Kelley.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) how much earmarked funds he has in the treasury now that are not in Consolidated Revenue Fund; are there any at all?

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): I do not think we have any, other than the Athletics Control Fund. I am speaking from memory.

MR. NIXON: There was a provision for years, as the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) will recall, that all funds from the Highways Department should be put into a separate fund.

HON. MR. FROST: That was passed back in the days when my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) had another political allegiance; when he was a member of the Farmer Government.

MR. NIXON: I know.

HON. MR. FROST: The Highway Improvement Fund was brought into effect, I think, when the first gasoline tax in Ontario was imposed, but that fund still operates.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): They got so badly mixed up that they had to stop it.

HON. MR. FROST: That fund, of course, still operates.

MR. NIXON: But it was never kept separate.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, other governments used to plunder that fund quite extensively by using the money for other purposes. I know my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) will be pleased to know that last year we spent more money on highways than we collected from licences or gasoline taxes, therefore there was nothing accumulated in the fund. Actually, we spent more than we received, so that we cannot be accused of what I used to accuse the government years ago of doing, that is, plundering the fund.

MR. NIXON: But when you bring in your budget, Mr. Treasurer, we will see whether you call it part of the capital accounts, or whether it is considered ordinary—

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) will be quite satisfied, I am sure, when the report is brought down, that we have played fair with the people.

MR. NIXON: The same as every other treasurer did.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, having looked over all the governments in the past which spent the Highway Improvement Fund, including the Government of which my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) was a member, this bill has been drawn in such a way that the same thing cannot happen in connection with this. Every dollar that goes into the Hospital Aid Fund is used for hospitals, and for no other purpose.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, an explanatory note reads: "This bill is designed for the purpose of providing for greater aid to public hospitals."

I submit, Mr. Chairman, the bill does nothing of the sort. If the government feels a little displeased with the little opposition they meet to this bill, I would like to remind them their colleagues in Ottawa have shown far more opposition to measures far less iniquitous than this.

I submit to you, Mr. Chairman, this bill does not provide greater aid for the hospitals, because it does not provide funds to aid the hospitals. The complementary bill provides for the collection of a very severe tax from the common people if and when the Dominion Government withdraw from the field.

In the meantime the problem of the hospitals remains as serious as before this Act was introduced, and will remain as serious, and without assistance, when this Act is adopted. The Act is therefore misleading and reveals only what I said yesterday in my remarks during second reading, that it is a political football.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Is the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) discussing Section 2?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I am discussing the section.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) seems to be wandering rather far afield.

MR. SALSBERG: It is a political football, and it enables the government to evade responsibility to the hospitals and to the municipalities, and provides them with an instrument to raise a cry against Ottawa for its failure, and at the same time to do nothing to aid the hospitals or the municipalities.

I think it should be clear that this is a bill which does not provide the aid promised and stated in the explanatory note.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): You are bucking the line when you should be intercepting a pass.

MR. SALSBERG: I use very moderate language, sir.

agent's fees and disbursements shall be paid by the Official Guardian and shall be deemed a disbursement of the Official Guardian.

Sections 1 to 14 inclusive approved.

On Section 15.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods) : Mr. Chairman, on No. 15, there were some amendments made to this bill in committee. I think that it is worth noting at this stage in the representations made by the official of the City of Ottawa it was pointed out that their original draft followed very largely some legislation passed by this Legislature in 1930 respecting the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway. The members of the committee, however—and particularly the member from Ontario—took the position that it was not in the best interests of the province to have the particular provision they advocated smuggled into a private bill. However, as some hon. members of the House took the trouble to check up on the representations made by Mr. Medcalfe, and found the facts of the case were as he stated.

I do feel that some time during the Session, or whenever in his wisdom he chooses to speak on the matter, it would be a very good thing if the hon. Attorney-General of the Province of Ontario (Mr. Blackwell) expressed an opinion on attempts that have been made to take damage actions away from juries and to have them tried by a judge.

I spoke to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) about this privately and I hope whenever he sees fit, at some later stage, a statement will be made to this Legislature on this very important question.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General) : Mr. Chairman, the matter involved is one of public policy. In view of the fact that the matter has been raised, without expressing to the Legislature at this moment any dogmatic view about the course which should be followed, the principle is this: There is one other municipal corporation, as distinct from "municipality," under the Municipal Act which has such a provision in its bill. It would seem to me a matter for careful consideration, not only to restrict the extension of such a principle in the private bill before the Legislature and others that come here, but also to review the question whether such provision should be continued in any bill.

For the benefit of hon. members, although I do not wish to express any opinion on it today, it is already under careful consideration and some of the considerations which apply to municipalities, for the sake of argument, might very well be entirely different. It is not a subject on which I think it would be helpful for me to express any ill-considered views, but I would like to indicate to the Legislature those are the broad circumstances, and the matter is receiving consideration.

Sections 15 to 20 and schedule A approved.

Bill No. 27 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) : Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report certain bills without amendment and one bill with amendment.

Motion approved.

The House resumes. Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole begs to report several bills without amendment and one bill with amendment, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion adopted.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that when the Legislative Assembly adjourns the present sitting thereof, it do stand adjourned until Wednesday, March 31st, 1948.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

Orders of the Day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I wish to deal with a matter that has arisen since we adjourned on Thursday afternoon.

After I had spoken prior to Orders of the Day on Thursday, my attention was drawn, just as I was sitting down, to the press report of a statement given by the Rt. Hon. Minister of Reconstruction (Mr. Howe) in regard to the wartime housing projects being carried on by the Dominion Government. The heading in one newspaper on Thursday afternoon is rather explanatory:

"Forty Million Dollar House Plan is Cancelled by Howe,—Blames New Drew Law."

Since then, further action has been taken by the Rt. Hon. Minister concerned (Mr. Howe), which has raised a question in the minds of many people, which I think I should now deal with.

I have received a number of communications from municipalities and individuals in connection, not with this statement, but with instructions which have been given to the Central Mortgage Corporation, which is a Dominion Government agency, to withdraw the call for tenders which have been published, in some cases, and stop work on housing projects actually under way.

I am dealing with this now so those municipalities which are interested may understand what the situation is without my communicating in each case separately with them, and also so the Legislature will know precisely what the situation is and when they may expect further details in regard to the situation which has been created.

The provincial legislation referred to was a bill which would have the effect, if and when it became law, of assuring the municipal councils some measure of adequate payment for the services they are being called upon to render to Crown areas where a large number of homes have been built as part of special war construction such as was described in the explanation of the bill which was given in this Legislature.

As hon. members of this Legislature will recall, in answer to a direct question, I explained this bill would have no application to the houses being constructed under these housing projects referred to. I explained this was a special situation which had arisen because of the construction during the war years of great war projects in places where there had not previously been substantial communities. I referred particularly, as every hon. member will recall, to the developments at Ajax and at Malton, where the construction, in one case of a huge explosive plant and in the other case of the largest plant building heavy bombers in Canada, had called for the building of homes to house the workers in those plants. I indicated this was the type of Crown area covered by the bill, and the other areas affected would be areas of a similar nature. As I have already said, in response to a direct question, I made it perfectly clear this bill would not apply to the housing projects under Central Mortgage Corporation or similar wartime housing.

There is an additional reason why the statement made by the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) on Thursday, and his subsequent action in giving the instructions he has to Central Mortgage Corporation are utterly unexplainable on any reasonable ground.

The bill which was before this Legislature, and which was supported by every hon. member of this Legislature—and may I remind hon. members, not only by hon. members supporting the Government in the ordinary course of events, but by hon. members of the Liberal and C.C.F. groups as well was conditioned upon one extremely important consideration which has a direct bearing on this statement by the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe). The bill made it clear it could and would only be invoked, when a municipality reported to the Government, and demonstrated it had been impossible for them to enter into a satisfactory agreement with the Dominion Government in regard to one of the Crown areas.

I hope that point is clear, because that point demonstrates beyond all shadow of doubt that whatever the reasons were which impelled the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) to give the instructions which he has, stopping construction on these wartime houses, the reason was not to be found in anything in the bill before this Legislature. That would be clear to any child of ten, at the very eldest. The bill has made it perfectly clear its purpose is to ensure municipalities an opportunity to find some appropriate revenues to reimburse them for the services they are called upon to perform at such places as Ajax, Malton, and similar areas, but only in similar areas.

The construction of houses under Central Mortgage Corporation can only begin when an agreement satisfactory to the municipalities has already been signed. May I emphasize that point, Mr. Speaker? There is no possibility of construction proceeding under the housing programme affected by the decision of the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, unless the municipalities have already set aside the land required and have entered into agreements with the Dominion Government under which the Dominion Government, through its agencies, proceeds to build, under the terms of their legislation. Consequently, since the agreements must exist, and presumably are agreeable to the municipalities this Act before the Ontario Legislature could under no conceivable circumstances apply to the building of houses which are affected by the decision of Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, on Thursday.

Mr. Speaker, that merely demonstrates the utter irresponsibility of the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) in question. It is dangerous enough to give despotic power to any individual at any time, but it is more than doubly dangerous to give despotic power to a man whose word is worth nothing—absolutely nothing.

On the evidence, it is perfectly clear he is simply seeking an excuse for doing something he has intended to do for some time. It is an open secret. In this particular case he doubtless thought it would be a rather smart trick to place the blame upon the Ontario Legislature, and I say, "Ontario Legislature," because this bill was supported by the Legislature, not just by the members of the party to which I belong.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Not by all the members.

HON. MR. DREW: I think this bill has a certificate of health in that it was opposed by the Communists.

MR. SALSBERG: For good reasons.

HON. MR. DREW: It is quite true it was opposed by the Communists, as I would expect it would be, but it was supported by the hon. members of the Liberal and C.C.F. groups, as well as by those supporting the Government.

This situation is simply reminiscent of another expression on behalf of that same Government, when the very famous statement was made that there would not be, "One five-cent piece for the Province of Ontario." The statement to which I refer today had as its purpose something in no way related to the bill before this Legislature.

The irresponsibility of the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) in question, I think, can best be demonstrated by placing before the hon. members exactly what the relationship of this Government has been with the Government at Ottawa. The people of Ontario, and of the rest of Canada, were told on Thursday last that this Government was simply "looking for a chance to take a round-house swing at the Dominion Government." The statement implied there is no measure of co-operation between the Ontario and the Dominion Governments.

The hon. members may recall, Mr. Speaker, a statement made by the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe), while in Toronto some weeks ago, in which he said there would be 4,000 homes available in Ontario, if Ontario would supply the land which was required.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, did the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) not say "Toronto"?

HON. MR. DREW: In this case I welcome the correction. The statement was there would be 4,000 homes available for the Toronto area.

The truth was that no new statement was contained in those remarks, and the Hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) immediately wrote to the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) to find out what this was all about, and naturally enquired if this statement referred to proposals which had been released as far back as October 10, 1947.

The Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) replied on January 30th of this year, and the opening words of the letter are as follows:

"You are quite correct in your assumption that my remarks in respect to rental housing in the Toronto area had reference to the Dominion proposal of October 10, 1947."

And he went on to discuss this proposal, and indicated their problem was related to the unsuccessful nature of their discussions with the municipalities. The closing paragraph indicates where the matter stood, that is, the whole question of housing under these very provisions of a Dominion Act.

The closing paragraph of the letter to the Hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), dated January 30th, is as follows:

"I would be glad to have your views on this subject, and particularly any suggestions which you may have to offer. I do feel that a large number of rental units for the Toronto area is desirable, and I would appreciate any help which you or your Government might give toward this end."

That was the atmosphere in which discussions were taking place between these governments in regard to housing of that type.

The Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) is well aware that in the Speech from the Throne it was indicated there will be a housing bill introduced in this Legislature by the Government. He was well aware of that. He was also well aware that the particular subject of "housing" will, of course, be in a position for much more effective discussions when the bill has been dealt with by the Legislature.

This Government has not only indicated its willingness to co-operate with the Dominion Government, but it is effectively co-operating with the Dominion Government through many of its departments. There is a very high degree of co-operation with every one of the departments, which is prepared to co-operate, at Ottawa.

Mr. Speaker, I received a very interesting communication in my office at 10.30 yesterday morning. The letter was addressed to me personally, and closes with the following paragraph:

"I should like to express my appreciation for the assistance received from several departments of your Government in providing our economic research branch with the required information.

"Sincerely yours . . ."

and by whom do you think it is signed? "C. D. Howe."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, it is true this letter is dated prior to last Thursday. It was not despatched from Ottawa until Saturday, and was received in my office yesterday morning at 10.30.

On the one hand, you have the public statement by the Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) that they could not do business with us in any way at all; on the other hand, I have a letter on my desk, received yesterday morning, expressing his appreciation of the courtesy received, not by one department, but by "several departments of your Government," and signed, "Sincerely yours, C. D. Howe."

I cannot imagine anything which better illustrates exactly the problems with which we are faced in dealing with this man on any occasion, than the difference between his correspondence when he is dealing with something of this kind, and his utterly irresponsible statements when he thinks he can create some political capital, by public remarks such as those which he made last Thursday, followed up in this particular case by the actions to which I have referred.

Mr. Speaker, may I point out to the hon. members of the Legislature who supported this bill—which support, as I have said before, was not confined to the hon. members of the party to which I belong—there was an atmosphere in which business in many fields is being done between these governments, highly-satisfactory co-operation, and, further, the fact that the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) told the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) just a few weeks ago that he welcomed our assistance and wished any suggestions we could offer.

When this bill was introduced in this Legislature, which bill he now uses as an excuse for cancelling the housing arrangement, it did not occur to him to communicate by telephone, telegraph, or letter with any hon. member of this Government, suggesting that the passage of this bill by this Legislature might in some way embarrass the Dominion Government in its housing activities. The first we have heard of any possible objection to this bill by the Dominion Government, which has been seeking our co-operation and asking for suggestions from us, was when this statement appeared in the press on Thursday afternoon.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) may have communicated with the Liberals in the House and they did not pass the message on.

HON. MR. DREW: That is always a possibility. I believe there are some communications with them from time to time, but the fact remains, in this particular case the instructions must have gone "haywire," if they were given, because the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and his supporters voted for this bill on a recorded vote in the Legislature, so they apparently agree it has the desired effect, or the Rt. Hon. Minister's (Mr. Howe) instructions had not been given in time, if at all.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I was wondering if the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) had written to the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) advising him the bill could not possibly have regard to the Dominion's housing programme, and ending up "With kindest personal regards, yours sincerely, George Drew."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I attribute to the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) sufficient common sense to know that a bill, which the hon. members of the Liberal group supported, had no such effect as he stated publicly it had. No matter how critical I may be of the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe), I would not place his common sense on so low a plane as to think he did not know about the bill.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): It would not do you any good if you did.

HON. MR. DREW: In regard to the objection by an unidentified hon. member, I may say that it did not occur to me to write to the Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe) in regard to this bill, because with all the co-operation we have extended—and it is easily demonstrated how wide that co-operation has been—we are not in a position where we are going to ask Ottawa what legislation we can pass, now or at any other time.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to place this explanation before the Legislature, because I felt the hon. members who supported the bill would want to know the situation. I know the hon. members of the Liberal and C.C.F. groups would not want to be embarrassed—

MR. HABEL: Do not worry about us. Just think of yourself.

HON. MR. DREW: I wanted the hon. members of this House to know the situation.

However, it will not be necessary for them to ask for explanations much longer, because the Housing Bill will be introduced tomorrow afternoon, with an adequate and complete explanation of its effect, which will be given on first reading, and I feel sure the hon. Liberal and C.C.F. members, as well as the hon. members on the Government side, will be able to indicate their approval of the course we have followed.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

AN ACT TO IMPOSE A TAX ON AMUSEMENTS TO PROVIDE FOR GREATER AID TO PUBLIC HOSPITALS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 10th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals. Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Chairman, I want to refer to Section 3 of the Act. The concluding words of that section are "every fraction of 1 cent shall be counted as 1 cent." That sounds innocent, and, indeed, it is very innocent, but it has the effect in a 25 cent ticket, of sometimes making that ticket 26 cents and a 30 cent ticket 31 cents. A very small alteration gets away from that difficulty, and that nuisance, and I beg to move, Mr. Chairman, that the words "every fraction of 1 cent shall be counted as one cent" in Section 3 be struck out and in place thereof these words be substituted: "every fraction of less than one-half cent shall not be counted, and every fraction of one-half cent or over shall be counted as 1 cent."

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Is that all the light you saw?

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Are not you going to reduce it to 20-10?

Section 3 as amended approved.

On Section 10.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I should like to refer to Section 10, sub-section 2. These are only small matters in administration. It will be noted that returns shall be verified by an affidavit. In many cases the returns by Regulations are perhaps made every week. I mean, the Act provides that they have to be made within 1 month, I think, and be verified by affidavit, but in actual practice many of the theatres and amusement places would be settling this every week and the matter of an affidavit there has come up under The Corporation Tax Act, which is found to be troublesome, and, therefore, we desire to substitute the word "certificate" for "affidavit."

In the fifth line of the section will be noted "showing receipts and expenditures." Now, in the other case we are not interested in the expenditures and, therefore, we want to strike out the words "and expenditures."

There is another provision in the Act whereby if expenditures are required, they can be obtained under the other provision in this section. In any event, we want to strike those words out, and so, Mr. Chairman, I should like to move that the word "affidavit" in the first line of the sub-section be struck out and the word "certificate" substituted therefor; in the third line the word "swearing" be struck out and the word "certifying" be substituted, and in the fifth line before the word "receipts" be inserted the word "the" and following the word "receipts" the words "and expenditures" be stricken from the section.

Section 10, sub-section 2 as amended approved.

Bill No. 118 as amended, reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report 1 bill with amendments.

Motion approved.

The House resumed: Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report 1 bill with amendments, and moves the report be adopted.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 10th Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 10th Order, third reading of Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals.

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I move third reading of Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to Provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I think in view of the remarks that were made a few moments ago there ought to be some opportunity provided for redemption for those members who may have discovered that they made a mistake in voting for this bill on second reading and in its committee stage. Therefore, I move, seconded by Mr. Salsberg, that Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to Provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals, be not now read a third time but be read a third time this day 6 months hence.

I hope the Government will be willing to give a recorded vote on this one.

The House divided.

NAYS—68.

The amendment negatived on division.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I had an amendment which I know will be much more acceptable to the House.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I want to rise on a point of order. Does the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) propose to move an amendment to the bill?

MR. NIXON: Yes.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: If so, it is out of order.

MR. NIXON: The hon. Attorney-General (Hon. Mr. Blackwell) might at least let me put my suggestion before the House.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is the very point. I am quite prepared to assist the hon. member (Mr. Nixon). His proper procedure is to move discharge of the order and the bill referred back into committee.

MR. NIXON: That is what I have—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: If you want to move that amendment the proper way—

MR. NIXON: I have been in this House as long as my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Blackwell) and I know the procedure.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am taking your own word for it.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) I think as an actual fact when this motion, which has just been defeated, was lost, Bill No. 118 automatically carried third reading.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No, no.

MR. SPEAKER: I cannot give a different ruling, if that is not the case.

MR. NIXON: If that is your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I shall certainly abide by it, but I do submit that third reading of the bill is not yet carried. What was voted against was a resolution for a six-months hoist.

MR. SPEAKER: Did I not say after I announced the motion was lost that Bill No. 118 automatically was carried.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No, no.

MR. NIXON: No, Mr. Speaker, I asked for your attention before you said that.

MR. SPEAKER: I said that, but you may have interrupted me—

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, so we may not get into unnecessary argument as to the refinements of the rules, I am quite prepared to concur in the suggestion that the motion before you to set aside the order and return the bill to the Committee of the Whole House, if that is the motion—

MR. NIXON: Yes, that is the motion. I thank the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew). In that case, Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. McEwing, that Bill No. 118 be not now read the third time, but be referred back to the Committee of the Whole House with authorization to reduce the rate of taxation from 20 per centum to 10 per centum—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: No, Mr. Speaker. The only motion which can be made is to decide whether to move the bill back into committee. If that motion carries, then the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) would be at liberty to move an amendment.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, before you rule, I would like to make an observation. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has deliberately misled this Legislature.

MR. NIXON: I did not deliberately mislead the Legislature. I said I wanted to refer this bill back to committee, and to move an amendment.

MR. SPEAKER: Let us have no further argument on this.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to leave that where it is. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) indicated that he was going to move this order be discharged, and the bill be referred back to the Committee of the Whole House. That is what he said, and that was the basis upon which I gave my concurrence, and upon no other basis.

Then the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) who has sat here so long and claims such knowledge of the proceedings of the Legislature, knowing that the remainder of his motion was one he could not put, went ahead and read the motion which called for a reduction in the percentage of taxation, which was the real purpose of making his motion. This amendment cannot be accepted, within the rules of the House, and I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to rule this motion out of order.

MR. NIXON: Mr. Speaker, I think there can be many precedents given where a motion of this kind carried with it instructions to the Committee of the Whole House. I submit the motion is in order.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I realize that your patience is almost exhausted—

HON. MR. DREW: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I want to clarify one thing. You made the ruling this was not a proper motion for discussion at the moment.

MR. NIXON: No, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) suggested that.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker ruled it was not a proper amendment for consideration, and I arose on the understanding that it referred only to the motion to strike out the order and refer the bill back to the Committee of the Whole House, and I said I would remove any ground for discussion by concurring in the presentation of that motion. Having heard the whole motion, which was not in accordance with the statement to which I concurred, I do now withdraw my concurrence and ask you, Mr. Speaker, to rule as you have done previously.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) when the motion moved by himself, and seconded by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) was defeated, the third reading of Bill No. 118 automatically carried.

As I see it at the present time, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) moves that this bill be not now read a third time, but be referred back to the Committee of the Whole House. When he mentioned that, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) said he was very happy to afford him that privilege. As the matter now stands, on the motion from the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), I am inclined to think there is a direct amendment in the wording, different to that to which the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) agreed. I will stand by my ruling that Bill No. 118 carried itself, after the motion was defeated.

MR. MACLEOD: Would you read the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

MR. SPEAKER: I am not accepting the amendment.

MR. MACLEOD: May we hear it.

MR. SPEAKER: No, I am not accepting it.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I do not think there is anything less satisfactory than these debates with regard to the refinements of the rules. I think the hon. members of the Legislature should have opportunity for a full discussion on anything calling for discussion. I concurred in the presentation of the motion which would strike out the order, and the bill be referred back to the Committee of the Whole House. If the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) is prepared to leave the motion there, I am prepared to concur.

MR. NIXON: No, Mr. Speaker, I am certainly not content. I believe the rule, as I understand it, and the precedents, allow such an amendment to carry definite instructions to the Committee of the Whole House as to what they are to do with the section. I am asking for a ruling on that basis, Mr. Speaker. I think it is a very important point on procedure.

MR. MACLEOD: May I refer you to page 61 of the Rules of the House?

MR. SPEAKER: I might say again to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) and the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) I made a ruling and I will not allow discussion on my ruling. If the hon. members are not satisfied with the ruling as I made it, they have the privilege of appealing to the House.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, if it is acceptable to the mover of the motion which is before the House, (Mr. Nixon) I think the simplest way to terminate this, and not leave any question as to whether there has been adequate opportunity for discussion, is to allow me, as Leader of the Government, remove the objection and call the motion which has been presented, and we will vote on it.

MR. NIXON: Mr. Speaker, let me point out why that is not acceptable to me. In the discussion in committee I asked the hon. Provincial Treasurer

(Mr. Frost) if he was prepared to reduce the 20 per centum to 10 per centum. He claimed this would not be acceptable and would not provide the amount of money required, and the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) said "You are committed to the 20 per cent." I am not committed to the 20 per cent., and it is my right to point out in the discussions in this House, which appear on the record, while favouring the principle of the bill to collect so much money for hospitals from amusements, I consider that 20 per cent. is twice too much, and it should be 10 per cent. That is why I included that in my motion.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, as is apparent, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) is using this motion to put observations on the record which he knows are improper, and I propose to deal with the comment he has made.

The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) is using the discussion before the House for one purpose, to get the statement on the record that the percentage should be reduced. Mr. Speaker, a search of the records will show that at no time has the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) made any move to contest the amount contained in this bill. Now he is presenting this motion, which is utterly improper. Once a motion has been presented, it cannot be debated; you either accept the motion, or you take a vote on the motion which has been presented.

MR. NIXON: That is all I want. That is perfectly acceptable to me.

HON. MR. DREW: I suggested putting the motion. Now Mr. Speaker, I beg to move an amendment to this amendment, as follows:

"That the amendment now before the Legislature be amended by striking out the words after 'Committee of the Whole', so that the amendment before the House will read 'That Bill No. 118 shall not now be read a third time, but be referred back to the Committee of the Whole.'"

MR. NIXON: I submit, Mr. Speaker, you have already called the vote and this amendment to the amendment is out of order. Under the rules, after Mr. Speaker calls the vote, further amendments are out of order.

MR. SPEAKER: I do not think I had completed my calling for the vote.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, in order that we may proceed, I am prepared to withdraw my amendment, and take the vote on the motion which has been put, rather than go on into all this endless detail. In order to get a decision on this matter, I will be quite prepared to withdraw the amendment to the amendment, and vote on the motion.

MR. NIXON: I think we are entitled to that.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We changed your mind for you.

MR. NIXON: I am the only one who has been insistent.

Motion approved; third reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Resolved that the bill do now pass and be intituled as in the motion.

The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor entered the Chamber of the Legislative Assembly and being seated upon the Throne.

Mr. Speaker addressed His Honour in the following words:—

May it please Your Honour:

The Legislative Assembly of the province has at its present sittings thereof passed several bills to which, in the name and on behalf of the said Legislative Assembly, I respectfully request Your Honour's Assent.

The Clerk Assistant then read the titles of the Acts that had passed severally as follows:—

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 40th Order.

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 40th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 116, An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act. Mr. Doucett.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2.

MR. ROMEO BEGIN (Russell): Mr. Chairman, does the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) not think that for a first offence, the provision there of forfeiting a motor vehicle to His Majesty is rather stiff?

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Chairman, I do not think so under that clause. That is the same provision as contained in the bill last year except that we are putting in the forfeiting clause this year for a man who procures a licence for another car. Previously his car could be forfeited, but now if he procures a licence for another car, or in another name, the same penalty applies, as I explained before.

MR. BEGIN: Does that mean he would forfeit the second car if he had purchased another car?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, he would have his licence cancelled and then if he procures a licence after it is cancelled, he would forfeit the car. It would not be necessary for him to forfeit the car, if he had a cancellation.

MR. BEGIN: He could have both?

Sections 2 to 4 inclusive approved.

On Section 5.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, under Section 5, sub-section 4, after the word "and" in the fourth line of the first paragraph, and after the word "and" in paragraph 5, I would like to move the following:

"That sub-section 4 of Section 5 be amended by inserting after the word 'and' in the 6th line, the words: 'any amount paid out of the fund in excess of the amount authorized by this section', and by inserting after the word 'and' in the 25th line the words 'any amount paid out of the fund in excess of the amount authorized by this section'."

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): What line is that amendment, Mr. Chairman?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, on page 6 you will see: "provided that where any amount is recovered from any other source," the 4th line of that paragraph, and the same in the proviso in 5 (b).

Section 5 (as amended), 6 to 9 inclusive approved.

On Section 10.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, on Section 10: I move that Section 10 of the bill be amended by adding thereto the following sub-section:

"Section 5 to 9 shall apply to motor vehicle accidents occurring in Ontario after the first day of July, 1947, provided that sub-section 3 of Section 5, and Section 6, shall apply only where the trial or assessment of damages, as the case may be, is not concluded before the 1st day of June, 1948."

Mr. Chairman, I move that sub-section 1 of Section 10 of this Act shall come into force on the day upon which it receives the royal assent.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, if the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) would explain the import of the amendment; there are so many sub-sections referred to that it is rather difficult to get the full import of the amendment.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, sub-section 2 of Section 10 of the Highway Traffic Act, is the part which was enacted in 1947 and which provides for the setting up of the unsatisfied judgment fund and for payments out of it in the case of unsatisfied judgments as well as judgments against the Registrar of Motor Vehicles arising out of hit-and-run accidents. By the terms of the 1947 Act, and the proclamation passed under it, part 12 (a) applies to motor vehicle accidents occurring after the 1st day of July. Sections 5 to 9 of this bill contain provisions amending part 12 (a). Most of the amendments confer further benefits or extend the rights of persons having occasion to use part 12 (a).

As there are actions and applications for payments out of the fund in various stages, some pending, some yet to commence, but all relating to accidents which have already happened, it is deemed advisable to put them all on the same basis, so long as no person's rights will be adversely affected. Accordingly it provides these amendments will all apply to the same extent as part 12, which was passed last year.

In other words, I would say that people who had actions started would have the benefits of the amendments, or even in the case of actions under way. In other words, all the sections are retroactive.

Sections 10 (as amended), and 11 approved.

Bill No. 116, as amended, reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise and report 1 bill with certain amendments.

Motion approved.

The House resumes, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report 1 bill with certain amendments, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion approved; report adopted.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 22nd Order.

CIVIL RIGHTS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 22nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 38, An Act to protect certain Civil Rights. Mr. Grummett.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 38, An Act to protect certain Civil Rights.

Mr. Speaker, this is the same bill which was introduced in 1947 in this Legislature. In re-introducing it, we felt that perhaps the Government would have reconsidered their opposition of last year and be prepared to support it.

In case some hon. members have not studied the bill, I propose to read the explanatory notes:

"The general purpose of this bill is to protect by statute the rights of freedom of religion, freedom of speech and freedom of association, and more specifically to prohibit discrimination against any person by reason of race, nationality or religion in such matters as employment, education, right of access to any place serving the public, etc.

"The rights here protected are generally accepted as common rights of citizens, but have in the past been infringed by such methods as municipal by-laws restricting distribution of literature, etc., and recourse to law has been difficult because of the lack of express statutory declaration of these rights.

"Prohibits discrimination in employment, with proper protection for institutions in which religious teaching is conducted.

"Prohibits discrimination in the right to engage in any occupation.

"Prohibits discrimination in the right to own or lease property. Discriminatory conditions in terms of sale have been found contrary to public interest by the courts, and it is desirable to give this protection the force of statutory law.

"Prohibits discrimination by hotels, restaurants, theatres and other places to which the public is admitted.

"Prohibits discrimination with respect to membership in any professional society, trade union, etc.

"Prohibits discrimination by educational institutions, with proper protection for religious institutions.

"Prohibits publication or display of discriminatory matter.

"Provides penalties for violation of the Act and provides for laying of information on behalf of a class of persons whose rights are affected, as well as an individual.

"Provides for restraint by injunction.

"Repeals the Racial Discrimination Act, 1944, since its provisions are fully covered in this Act."

Mr. Speaker, arguments have been used against this bill on a number of occasions in that it expresses a pious wish on the part of those who support its principles that in order to do away with discrimination, we have to educate our people. That is correct, we have to educate our people in order to do away with discrimination, but in order to prevent discriminatory acts, it is necessary that we have some form of legislation. We all remember what happened in connection with a young nurse, or a young negro girl who wanted to enter the General and Marine Hospital at Owen Sound, to train as a nurse. She was not permitted to do so. Eventually, after searching around, she did find a hospital which would take her in.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it does not matter what a person's race, colour or religion is, surely in this country of ours they should have an equal right to all the privileges and advantages of our country, and if our people, and our institutions are not prepared to give those rights freely and justly, then let us put an Act on our statute books which will compel them to do so. We have the precedent of President Truman in the United States asking for certain statutory rights. We know what has happened in the United States. For years and years, the coloured races in the southern part of the United States have suffered under discrimination, so much so that the President of that great country has seen fit to advocate laws being placed on the statute books for the protection of those people.

Here in Ontario we have on many occasions seen acts of discrimination. I remember reading about some coloured boys being excluded from a rink right here in Toronto. If we had on the statute books an Act which would prohibit anyone taking this step against any of our citizens, we will be going a long way to see that an ideal state of a free citizenry would be set up in Ontario. We pride ourselves in Ontario on being one of the leading provinces. Why not then take the lead in introducing an Act of this kind and providing our people with the freedom to which they are entitled.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, in rising to make some comments on this bill I have no intention of making the same lengthy speech I made on the very same bill last year and which is transcribed in the Hansard record of the House.

I would wish again, however, to draw attention to what I feel is an extremely objectionable feature of the bill. I said last year I know of no place on earth where people are more tolerant than they are in the Province of Ontario, and one of the most objectionable features of the bill is the inference it carries in so many of its paragraphs that those freedoms of religion, association, etc., are not now fully settled under the law of this province.

The hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) made reference to specific cases of discrimination in this province which he advanced as being examples of objectionable forms of discrimination.

In relation to both of those, Mr. Speaker, the remedy very particularly asserts itself. In the case of the girl of the negro race who wished to train as a nurse she was rejected by one hospital—

MR. GRUMMETT: She was entitled to train in her own home town.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am not saying what she is entitled to do, but the fact remains that another hospital immediately came forward and offered her admittance.

The other case was one which happened in my own riding, and that was exclusion from a skating rink. The civic council of the City of Toronto promptly made the licences of those places conditional on them being open to the public generally. There was a remedy immediately found there.

Last year I sounded a note of warning that with the advanced views which people in this province have in relation to almost anything, I know that there are great hazards. The test is what sanctions are you going to impose to make the very narrow field of this bill work. As a matter of fact it is quite possible if the very same people, who progress in these matters on a purely voluntary basis are told by statute that they must do thus-and-so, the next thing you know, for that reason alone, they decide they will not do thus-and-so. It is quite conceivable with a person who today might, for the sake of argument, hire a negro maid because she presented herself for employment, the very next day might say if anyone says I have to hire them I will show them "I don't have to." There are thousands of good reasons you cannot bring before a court or commission whereby a person can refuse to do that. Do you want to create issues in this province by a bill which will operate to the prejudice and injury of the people it is put forward to help?

I would like to close with one observation; I think it is generally recognized, as far as this question of civil liberties is concerned, the only way in which a legislature or a parliament, in their respective fields, could be prevented from dealing with that question would be by writ and constitution, which is quite foreign to the constitution under which either the Dominion Government or this Legislature functions. There was a great deal of misconception over that.

I do not propose to express any opinion whether they were continued on what might be considered a sound basis. The fact of the matter was they were continued under special legislation. Under emergency powers there was delegated to the Executive Council or the Cabinet the power by order-in-council to make regulations, and they made a regulation which was delegated legislation, and if there is some criticism of that legislation it lies not in the acts which were done but in the enactment of the delegated legislation which authorized it, and unless you have a written constitution, the moment the question of the safety of the state comes into issue—as always has happened in the past—there will be Defence of Canada regulations and special legislation, and when these great emergencies arise a parliament will on all such occasions pass that type of emergency legislation and unless there is a written constitution it sweeps away all existing law and has no force and effect.

I might say I for one would be completely opposed to the conception in this country that we should ever end up in any sort of national emergency and there should be some form of written constitution which would prevent parliament from passing emergency legislation, no matter how justified, which would prevent the executive looking after protecting the safety of the state and, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Government I wish to say that the Government will oppose this legislation again this year.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the bill and to express some thoughts of why the bill should be carried. In doing so I want to also repeat what I said a year ago—that while I support all of the clauses of the bill I am particularly interested in one clause, that dealing with fair employment practices. If I had a choice I would at this stage limit legislation to that very important aspect, to that most repugnant type of discrimination which exists. However, I may have an opportunity at this session to speak about that aspect of the discrimination problem. But the bill contains that and other items which I submit is very important and deserve complete support from all.

I am surprised, Mr. Speaker, to find the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) repeating an argument used a year ago which I believe holds no water. He says that the majority of the people of the province are not tainted by discriminatory practices. They don't practice discrimination and therefore no legislation is required because it is required only for a small minority. I agree—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I said no such thing.

MR. SALSBERG: I beg your pardon. I agree with the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that the vast majority of citizens in this province do not practise discrimination and they are fair-minded.

Mr. Speaker, unfortunately there are people in this province and elsewhere who are bigoted and are influenced by undemocratic ideas in relationship to other people, to minorities and to groups, and they do practise discrimination. I say if the reasoning of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) was to be applied generally, no legislation would be justified. Of course, the vast majority of the people are honest; they are intelligent in settling their affairs, yet we have legislation to protect the community at large from actions of individuals and small groups. That is true of every type of legislation which is introduced. It is introduced precisely to protect the majority of the province against the action of small groups who do not observe what is obviously legitimate and correct. I believe that when we deal with the problem contained in this bill we should, therefore, also enact it, because it will protect the people at large against the acts of individuals who poison the atmosphere, and the relationships of people, even though they constitute a small number.

I know, Mr. Speaker, legislation itself does not necessarily cure that evil that exists, but it does establish something very important; it places such evil actions outside of the law. Those practising it know that they are going contrary to the law, and that the law expresses the wish of the overwhelming majority.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) referred to a skating rink, in his constituency where an injustice was righted, in this case, by the action of the City Council in amending its licensing act to apply to all businesses, including that of skating rinks, and specifying that licenses be granted on condition that no discrimination be practised. Mr. Speaker, the fact was that the individual owning a rink known as the "Icelandia" was able to discriminate against negro boys and against Jewish lads, and against other minority groups, as was proven, and that legal action was necessary. The fact is the municipality did act. That argument does not prove the contention of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that no legislation is required. But, Mr. Speaker, there is another feature about this Icelandia which should be mentioned, too, and that is this; that to escape the law, Icelandia became a club—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: They always do, once you pass these laws.

MR. SALSBERG: Icelandia became a club, and as a club it is not covered by the licensing act of the municipality, and they can continue to practise discrimination. I might say, Mr. Speaker, when this issue was before the public, I attempted to approach the owner of Icelandia, through his legal counsel, and suggested we meet and discuss this action of his, and I said that I was hopeful that as a result of the discussion he would change his ways and would cease to practise discrimination. The owner of that rink refused to meet with anyone, not only with me, but with others, and they advised if legislation was enacted, he would evade it by turning it into a club. That was predicted to me many months before he took that step.

Furthermore, when the intention of the owner of Icelandia was transmitted to me, the person who transmitted it said: "Look at the Granite Club, which is restricted; you cannot do anything against the Granite Club," and I might say that the Granite Club," is restricted under this section, it is committing an offence against the best interests of the citizens at large, and I think it is performing a disservice to its own members.

There was talk in this town about an attempt to give a reception to a world-famous negro singer in that club, but as a result of the restrictions, that reception could not take place, and I might say it would be an excellent lead to the citizens at large if prominent people, particularly those who are in Government, were to set an example by refusing to belong to clubs that discriminate against any person because of race, colour or religion, and to publicly withdraw from such clubs, and demonstrate their disapproval and their disassociation from any such action.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are other examples. Take Section 7 of the bill; it deals with the question of ownership of property, or the renting of property. I might say we had a very good experience in this regard. The decision of Justice MacKay was a great step forward in re-establishing rights which no individual had the right to restrict. But, Mr. Speaker, I am not at all ashamed to tell this House, because I think the shame falls upon those responsible for it, and not upon me—I am not ashamed to tell this House that I was refused reservations—or rather I was denied the right to rent apartments on the Toronto Island, after I told the owners that I was Jewish, and I experienced that in a number of cases on the Island. The accommodations were satisfactory; the price was satisfactory; I was quite satisfactory until I told a given owner that perhaps he should be advised that I am Jewish, and if that made any difference he might as well know it in advance. When he was told, he said how sorry he was and how much he regretted it, and that he really had no personal objection, but the association on that Island, you know, would rise in protest against him, if he was to do that. That happened in a number of cases. I went out to the Island to prove the existence of such discriminatory practice. I would not live with a person, I would not be in the same house, if I could help it, with a person who would discriminate against any man solely because of his racial religion or national origin. I think it is the right of an individual to select people he likes to live with, on the basis of their behaviour, on their way of life, but not because they happen to be Irish or Scotch, or Jewish or negroes, per se.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You do not get that way “per se.”

MR. CHAPLIN: That is a political speech.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You do not stop the Irish that way.

MR. SALSBERG: The example mentioned by the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) is, of course, only one of many such occurrences, and that falls into another category which I do not want to deal with now. Because of all these actual relationships which exist, and because of the undeniable fact that the small majority, notwithstanding the fact it is introduced, but knowing the personal views of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), I do not for a moment suggest that he favours discrimination of any sort in any way, and I am sorry he does not see the need for such legislation in order to establish beyond any doubt or question the public view of such evil practices, which a law would establish. I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, that the Government did not introduce this bill, or a bill like it. I have always urged the Government to introduce legislation of this sort as government measures.

In the absence of such action on the part of the Government, I think hon. members should support this bill moved by the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett).

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, while I do not want to prolong the debate on this bill, because the day is far spent and everybody wants to get away at the adjournment hour.

I happen to represent a portion of Toronto where the need for legislation of this general type is felt rather keenly.

I listened with great interest to what the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) had to say when this bill was before us last year, as I always listen to what the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has to say, because as a rule he states a case rather well, but I must say in the brief remarks he made today, I felt that he did himself less than justice as a logician.

The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) begins by telling us that there is no place on earth where people are more tolerant than they are in the Province of Ontario, and I agree with that. This is a wonderful province, and down through the years, the people of Ontario have become much more tolerant. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, only last year we had a demonstration of that in this building, and it was a demonstration of tolerance and mutual respect for another point of view, which all of us welcomed. And because the people are more tolerant, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) suggests that we should not interfere with the steady growth and development in that direction by cluttering up our statute books with laws and restrictions.

Well, it might be argued that in no place are the people more generally considerate of the rights of others than in the Province of Ontario, consequently we shall abandon passing traffic laws, and sanitary laws and other laws which may be necessary to curb offenders, because if we pass such laws people will be encouraged thereby to break them, and instead of removing an evil, you create one. I do not think that makes very good sense, at least it does not to me.

My proposition is this, Mr. Speaker, this country of ours from time to time—twice in the past quarter of a century—makes demand on all of its people regardless of race, creed or colour. In time of danger, in time of national emergency, the State imposes an equal obligation upon all to render service to the State and to take up arms for its survival. I suggest to you, sir, that because we do that in times of national emergency, that we should, by law, establish certain basic rights for all the people of this country which no individual or no group of individuals shall have the right to offend against.

If we can, by voluntary methods, convince our fellow citizens that they should acknowledge the duties that accompany every right, that would be very good indeed, but if we cannot by voluntary method get people to acknowledge the duty that accompanies every right, then it may be necessary for us to enact legislation which will curb that small group in the community who are prepared to do violence to the rights of others.

It seems to me that all the arguments the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) advanced against the principle of the bill—and it is only the principle of the bill that we are dealing with this afternoon—that all of the arguments advanced by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) would have had the same force had they been advanced against the Anti-Discrimination Act which this Government itself put on the statute books in 1944. If this Government in its wisdom saw fit to put the Anti-Discrimination Act on the statutes of Ontario in order to deal with, perhaps, a small minority who place offensive signs in hotels and beach resorts and so on and so forth, then it seems to me that the logic that caused them to pass legislation should lead them to the point of making secure in law the right of all citizens of the Province of Ontario to have the right of employment regardless of race, creed or colour. There is not much use, Mr. Speaker, removing an offending sign because the people against whom such signs are directed will inevitably steer clear of such places anyway, because their sense of decency would be outraged by the presence of such a sign, but there is not much point in doing that if you give the employer the right to discriminate against a man or woman because of his or her race, creed or colour.

I agree with my colleague (Mr. Salsberg) that had we been introducing a measure of this kind, we would have confined it to the simple question of fair employment practices rather than extending it to the point where it conflicts with perhaps a jurisdiction over which the federal Parliament has control. I do not yet lose hope that this Government, if it decides to fill out its term of office, will see the wisdom of taking that step beyond the Anti-Discrimination Act which will elevate our province in its attitude toward all its citizens to a point where it will earn the respect of all the citizens of Canada, and that other provinces will emulate our example, Mr. Speaker, in any vote that may be taken on the bill, I shall support the principle.

The House divided on the motion.

The motion was negatived on division.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods) : Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) a question?

I was wondering if it was the intention of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) at any time during this session to afford hon. members of this House an opportunity to discuss the report of the Committee on the Revision of Rules of the House which was tabled at the last session. Where does this report stand, and is it the intention of the Government to do anything about it?

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) : I think, Mr. Speaker, this is a matter that could be properly raised before Orders of the Day at any time.

Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 6.03 o'clock p.m.

MR. T. A. MURPHY (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the 5th Report of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and move its adoption.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Mr. Murphy, from the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills presents its 5th Report, as follows:

The committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 28 An Act respecting the City of Toronto.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Report approved.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

DEVELOPMENT OF HOUSING ACCOMMODATION

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Dunbar, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to assist the Development of Housing Accommodation, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I may say I was prepared today.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Hear, hear.

HON. MR. PORTER: In introducing this bill, I wish to point out that the terms of this bill are very general. It is framed in very general terms so as to give the widest possible authority to the Government to encourage and assist effectively the building of housing accommodation. The bill gives broad powers to provide for the utmost flexibility. It is, therefore, essential that the hon. members of the Legislature should understand what we propose to do under this general authority.

In the first place, we intend to provide for the reduction of down payments on newly built houses under established methods of financing through lending institutions. In most cases, at the present time, the down payment required for the lower priced house is too high. When I say "lower priced house", that is a relative expression in view of the high costs of construction today. In many areas of the province few houses can be built today for a down payment of less than $1,800. This is seriously restricting the number of people who can afford to buy a house. On the other hand, if the down payment can be provided for, the payment of the balance under the prevailing system of financing house purchases, is much more convenient than it was twenty years ago.

As a matter of fact, twenty years ago when a purchaser bought a house at a cost of $5,000, he could do so with a down payment of about $500, but owing to the high interest rates that prevailed at the time and the system of first and second mortgages that prevailed at that time, the actual cost per month of paying off that balance was more than the cost per month of paying off the balance on an $8,000 house under present conditions of financing. Therefore, if some provision can be made to bring about a reduction in down payments, so that, for instance, instead of a $2,000 down payment we can provide for a $1,000 down payment—that is merely an example which would of course differ in different types of houses and different prices of houses—if that could be accomplished, there is no doubt that a new market would open up in home ownership, because one of the reasons why home building has shown some indication of falling off recently—there are, of course, a number of reasons, but one of them certainly is that the number of people with $1,800 or $2,000 cash for the down payment are fewer than they were a little while ago.

The Government will, therefore, offer to guarantee to lending institutions sufficient to bring about reductions in the down payments on lower cost houses. We are ready to extend these guarantees to the limit of 10,000 houses. We estimate that the average amount guaranteed per house may amount to $1,000. This will amount in all to guarantees totalling $10,000,000.

I may say that in view of the flexibility of the bill and the general terms of it, we shall be in a position to meet any changing conditions from time to time that arise, but I have indicated those figures to outline the general target as to what we might look forward to over the period that lies ahead.

Secondly, we shall provide for the financing of approved building developments where a new method of construction is applied with the result of substantial reduction in the cost of houses. New methods of construction are emerging in several forms. Some consist of the use of new materials as applied to house construction. Some consist of improved methods of organization which depend upon large scale operations to effect the desired economies. Therefore, upon the approval of a plan for a building development designed to accomplish a sizable reduction in building costs, we shall underwrite the development to the extent necessary to make possible the required financing. We are prepared to extend guarantees for approved building developments of this kind to the limit of $2,000,000.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Each or total?

HON. MR. PORTER: Total. After all, I will indicate that on any single project of that kind, it may not require a very large guarantee, it may be only a small portion of the financing to be raised would require any guarantee at all. I also would indicate that once any project of that kind became proven as a sound method of construction, it would no doubt carry on from that point on its own momentum.

Thirdly, we shall participate with municipalities in the financing of re-development where this appears to be a sound policy. We shall thus assist in the re-development of the central areas of municipalities where by reason of obsolescence of buildings and overcrowding, the housing shortage is felt most acutely. Re-development in selected areas upon a new and suitable plan, attacks the problem of congestion at the core. By this means, existing municipal services, public transportation systems, and schools are most fully and economically utilized. People living in the more central areas are generally close to their work.

Re-development on sound lines, in selected places, will increase municipal assessments in the surrounding areas as well as in the development itself. It will contribute towards better conditions of health and amenities of living. It will clear the slums. Rather than impose new continuing and increasing burdens upon the ratepayers, a well planned re-development will steadily assume the proportions of a sound investment from all points of view. It is in the central parts of the larger municipalities where the greatest number of tenant occupiers live. A re-development can be designed to provide rental accommodation on a larger scale. We are ready to join with municipalities to guarantee to the extent necessary, undertakings for urban re-development. We are ready to do this to the total limit of $15,000,000.

Fourthly, I wish to point out the following has to do with our relation to the federal low rental housing programme.

I may say at the outset that from the very beginning this Government has placed no obstacle in the way of any federal project or any federal plans which were designed to bring about building of houses either for rent or for sale, or in any other way. As a matter of fact, it is under legislation that has been passed by this House since this Government came into power that many of these projects which have been built under federal auspices have been enabled to proceed. Indeed, as I have reminded this House on previous occasions, in 1944 this Government offered the Federal Government to contribute, with municipalities, one half of the equity in low-rental housing that might be carried out under part 2 of the National Housing Act, and at that time, the offer was rejected. The record of this Government has been consistent to pave the way and to make it possible and to encourage to the very limit the activities of building of houses by the Federal Government where they are much needed.

In view of the fact that in this House a bill was presented, known as the Crown Tenants Act, and in view of the fact that the Federal Government has cancelled its programme for the building of rental houses in Ontario on the ground that that bill embarrassed them, I wish at this point, to read a telegram sent by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) today to the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada:

"I have today made the following statement in regard to housing, which is self-explanatory:

"I introduced the bill described as an Act respecting the provision of services by the province and municipalities to persons occupying dominion Crown lands for the purpose of clarifying the relationship to the municipality in which they are situated in those Crown areas such as Ajax and Malton, which are owned and controlled by the Dominion Government.

"The bill itself, and my explanation when it was introduced, left no doubt that it did not apply to any of the present housing projects of the Dominion Government.

"Nevertheless, this bill has been given as the reason for the Dominion Government's action in notifying Central Mortgage Corporation to stop work on housing projects now under way.

"The Ontario Government has at all times done everything within its power to facilitate the building of houses which are so urgently needed throughout Ontario. It will not permit an unnecessary dispute regarding the interpretation of a bill of this nature to be used as a reason for stopping the construction of urgently needed housing, even though the bill affords no justifiable ground for such action. The Ontario Government has therefore decided that this bill will not become law and has so notified the Dominion Government today.

"As at all times in the past, the Ontario Government will co-operate in every way with the Dominion Government in speeding the construction of new housing accommodation, whether under Dominion legislation or under the progressive new housing legislation introduced in the Ontario Legislature this afternoon."

The telegram is signed by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew).

As a matter of fact, not only have we been on record from the outset as being willing to participate with the Federal Government in the production of low rental houses, but the fourth part of our programme which we propose to carry out under the authority of this Act deals with that very situation. We are prepared to participate with municipalities which wish to take advantage of the federal low rental housing plan.

Under these proposals the Federal Government offers to build houses for rent on land supplied and serviced by the municipality. The cost of the land and services to the municipality is not to exceed $600 per house. I understand that if it does exceed $600 per house, the excess is absorbed by the Federal Government.

The municipality also receives a payment in lieu of taxes which is frequently less than would be paid if the house were assessed and taxed in the usual way. Many municipalities have indicated they wish to take advantage of this plan. In several places, the financial burden placed upon the municipality has been a deterrent.

Indeed, Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, in a letter I received, pointed out that he was encountering some difficulty in arranging for the building of some of these houses in some municipalities, and indicated these difficulties were an obstacle to his proceeding in some cases, and asked me whether we had any suggestion to make or whether we had any way of giving assistance to the Federal Government in making this plan possible. The answer to that is in this fourth part of our programme.

In order to reduce this burden we shall offer to pay one half of the cost of land and services to the limit of $300 per house to the present limit of 10,000 houses. Thus we are renewing in principle the offer made to the Federal Government in 1944 when we offered to contribute one half of the equity in low rental housing. The cost of this might thus amount to $3,000,000.

Naturally, the programme is not put forward without the full realization of the risk of loss. It involves total commitments that may amount to $30,000,000. Yet, to a very large extent these commitments represent advances or guarantees which will be liquidated.

Thus, on the whole, losses should not relatively be unduly heavy. This whole policy is sound and constructive. In considering possible deficits, they should be amortized over a long period. The benefits to be derived from the encouragement and assistance provided for the building of more and better housing accommodation will fully offset any losses that may in the long run have to be borne.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, before the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) takes his seat, will he kindly tell us whether he has received an answer to that telegram, from Ottawa?

HON. MR. PORTER: No, we have not.

MR. BELANGER: Mr. Speaker, this bill is not introduced. The hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) made his remarks, but he has not introduced the bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: Oh, yes, the bill is introduced.

MR. BELANGER: Thank you, I am sorry.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to say in connection with Question No. 56, by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) that the answer to this question requires such a lengthy reply that I would ask the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) to make an order for return.

Mr. Speaker, every now and then a very pleasant time comes to this House. We have with us today one of the oldest hon. members of this House in point of years, and still a young man, who has a birthday. Year by year, I have been sitting here, hearing others say nice things about him on the occasion of his birthday.

I would like to repeat all these nice things which have been said, and add many more to them. I have sat with the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) for 26 years, and it seems the older he gets and the older I get, the more I like him. There seems to be something in the air which makes us less bitter than we were in the old days.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Government, I would like to congratulate the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) on the anniversary of his birth, and to wish he and his wife Godspeed and many happy returns of the day, even if he does come back and ask us rather nasty and embarrassing questions.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Mr. Speaker, I congratulate him; I personally like to have him in the House—I hope that will not be held against me by any of the hon. members—but I do wish to congratulate the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I thought it behooved me to say a few words. I was going to do it anyway, but was forestalled by the alert young man on the other side of the House (Mr. Kennedy). I appreciate this privilege of speaking, particularly because about two weeks ago I was the recipient of some very congratulatory remarks in this Chamber.

I have known the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) for a very long time. He is, as has been stated, the dean of this House.

It is not difficult to see why the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) has such a liking for the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), a liking that will not be downed. It is because the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has invariably been a perfect gentleman in this House.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. BELANGER: Never has he had recourse to abuse; never has he resorted to unparliamentary terms, but has always observed the dignity of this House; never has he lowered himself to an ungentlemanly term, but is an outstanding example, as an hon. member and a former Minister of the Crown, of what should direct the actions and words of every hon. member of this House, when he rises to his feet to take part in a debate. He does not depend on abuse; he does not depend upon ungentlemanly terms, but, rather, he depends upon reasoning and argument in order to drive home his point. He is truly an example to every hon. member of this House.

Mr. Speaker, there is one thing of which I would like to remind the House. It may open an old but always living wound in the heart of our hon. friend (Mr. Nixon), but I do want to join to him the name of the dear member of his family who would also be celebrating his birthday today, as is his father. I refer to the son whom he lost overseas, while doing his duty in military aviation, and who gave his life at the very outset of the last war. For that reason, if for no other, it is mete we should join the name of Mrs. Nixon in these congratulatory remarks today, because there is no doubt that her mind too goes back to that boy of hers, barely out of his teens, whom she lost to her country.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, to Mrs. Nixon and to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), on behalf of all the hon. members on this side of the House, as well as other groups, may I be permitted to extend to him our sincere congratulations and our heartfelt compliments on his anniversary, and unfortunately I must also say we extend our renewed sympathy, to which we have given expression before.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my congratulations to our very good friend, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

I remember back in 1909 when I was a sophomore at the Agricultural College, Harry (Mr. Nixon) came in as a freshman, and he has added a great deal to the agricultural development of western Ontario. He has been a good citizen. I would be remiss in my duty if I allowed this opportunity to pass without adding my congratulations personally to our good friend from Brant (Mr. Nixon).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the group I lead in the House, I wish to join with the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), who is leading the Government this afternoon, and with the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) who spoke on behalf of the Liberal Party, in extending to our good friend the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) our sincere congratulations.

We in this House have listened with a good deal of respect to what he has said in this Chamber. He always speaks in a gentlemanly manner, never excited, nor angry, and what he has to say has weight, and we are pleased to listen whenever he enters into a debate in this House. I am sure each and every one of this group extends to our good friend the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) our heartiest congratulations upon his birthday.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I think the kind words which have been addressed to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) should be made unanimous. I rise, not because I want to add anything to the tributes paid to him by those who have preceded me, but merely to indicate to him that these words of congratulation are fully shared by my colleague and myself.

Mr. Speaker, it has been suggested on more than one occasion during the past years, the time was approaching when the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) might be lifted out of the lovely atmosphere of the Ontario Legislature, and be transported to the drowsier and more languid atmosphere of another chamber in another city.

Having regard to the fact that the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has served 29 years in this House, I can see a reason looming on the horizon, why the change from one Chamber to another might have to take place. The reason is because the record of the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) is very rapidly approaching that of his political chief at Ottawa, and I am sure that the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King) would not want to be outdone in years of service by his hon. friend from Brant County (Mr. Nixon), so there may be a tendency in the coming period of time to hasten his departure elsewhere.

I may say, however, should that occur it would be accompanied by feelings of regret in this House. I am sure that all the hon. members who have sat with him down through the years, and particularly his eldest colleague, the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) would very much regret it if he left this Chamber.

In extending congratulations to him on his birthday, on my own behalf and that of my colleague, it is my very sincere hope that come what may in this year 1948, the people of Brant County will return my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) to this House, and all of us may look forward to the day when we shall rise to congratulate him on having served at least 35 or 40 years in this Chamber.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I am completely overwhelmed by the all-too-kind words of felicitation from the hon. members who have spoken, the acting Leader of the Government (Mr. Kennedy), my good friend from Prescott (Mr. Belanger), the hon. Leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) and the hon. Leader of the Labour-Progressives (Mr. MacLeod), and also my good old friend from Oxford (Mr. Dent). I was particularly touched by his reference back to 1909 when we were both in Agricultural College.

There is one thing about which I have never had to complain, and that is people forgetting my birthday. Coming on April 1st, this morning at 6 o'clock somebody whom I had not seen for years telephoned me to congratulate me, even a little too early in the morning.

I must apologize for being absent during prayers this afternoon, but on the eve of your stepping in, a very lovely lady called me out to give me a kiss and this rose, so I may be excused for being absent from prayers on this occasion.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. NIXON: I was particularly touched by the remarks of my good friend for Peel, the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy). We came here together in 1919. We have always sat on opposite sides of the House, so I could look across and admire him much more than I could, had we been sitting on the same side. Certainly as between the two of us, as I am sure he will agree, there has never been any bitterness in debate, in attack or defence, and I am sure that will continue to the end of our relationships in this House and outside.

I hope hon. members will not feel this is my "swan song", but there must be some factor of limitations which catches up to a member after he has celebrated 29 years, as a member of this House, and I have no reason to believe that I can forever escape those limitations which seem to take other hon. members away. I can assure my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) who referred to some mysterious and very indefinite "higher chamber," that I am very happy indeed to continue sitting in this Legislature as the member for Brant. Somebody has said this is the finest club of gentlemen in the world. I can endorse that wholeheartedly.

Looking back over the somewhat lengthy period of years, I have great pleasure in recalling the warm friendships which have been formed with hon. members on all sides of the House, representing the different parties, and I can meet them today with the greatest of pleasure and the warmest friendship. While at times in the past the debates have been strenuous, they have never been on a basis which would in any way affect those happy relationships.

The hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) said we were mellowing as the years advance. Perhaps that "mellowing" is the factor which finally eliminates a member from the House after a number of years. I sincerely hope it does not catch up to my hon. friend from Peel (Mr. Kennedy) in the too-near future.

Mr. Speaker, I can only say thank you, and thanks to the hon. members of the House who have so kindly felicitated me on the occasion of my birthday today.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

without amendment, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion approved.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, it was the intention of the Government to proceed with Order No. 6, second reading, and the debate which would follow, on Bill No. 124, the Labour Relations Act, 1948.

The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is ill this afternoon, and I think it is inadvisable to proceed with this very important piece of legislation without the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) being present.

I had also hoped this afternoon to have typed certain amendments to the Mining Act, Bill No. 63, but have been unable to have them completed. These were arrived at as a result of the meetings of the informal committee of this House, and I am not desirous of proceeding with the bill until the hon. members have full opportunity to study the amendments which are proposed in connection with the bill.

Under these circumstances, Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Are we sitting tonight?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Getting ready for the budget tomorrow, I suppose.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 3.57 of the clock p.m.

Orders of the day.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I wish to clear the air in my own particular case in regard to the announcement I made last week, when I declared on the floor of this House that I have switched my allegiance.

There have been so many press reports, and I have received so many letters from various people throughout the province, with clippings from various papers which seemed to be so conflicting that I believe not only myself but everybody else wants to know just "what is what."

Mr. Speaker, I would like to read one report here, the heading of which is:

"Meinzinger awaits nod from Tories before switching."

Mr. Speaker, I switched the other night; I am not waiting to switch. I made my statement very emphatic and clear, and I know that every hon. member in this House understands what I said that evening.

It goes on to say:

"Joseph Meinzinger wants to join the Government ranks in the Ontario Legislature, but, to use his own words, he does not want to 'look foolish'."

Well, I might say no one has to look foolish to join the Tory ranks.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MEINZINGER: I continue to quote:

"The unpredictable member from North Waterloo broke with the Liberal Party last week, saying he had 'seen the light'."

Mr. Speaker, at this time, that is very true. I meant every word of and every letter in those five words. I came down here as an independent, I threw my lot in with the Liberals because they showed me a platform which I thought was very good, but since I have been here, while I have been quite a critic of the Conservative Government up until last week, I have not seen anything that would persuade me to stay with the Liberal ranks.

On the other hand, the Conservatives have brought in some very good legislation, matters that I have been advocating for years, and I was very glad to see they have done, and are doing a good job.

I feel it my duty to my constituents to support the Government in the future as long as they bring in legislation of the kind they have. I think they are doing a good job, not only in supporting the workers, whom I have always favoured and shall to my dying moment, but I think they are legislating on behalf of both classes. Therefore, again I say, I am with the Government in the future.

I quote again:

"Worried as to status, Mr. Meinzinger told reporters he was puzzled as to his status."

I never worry about my status. I know where I stand in the whole matter and I made myself clear, I think, and I hope, Mr. Speaker, there will be no more confusion. I am now, I feel, a supporter of the Government, and it is entirely in the hands of the hon. Prime Minister of this province (Mr. Drew) and his Government whether they give me their blessing or not. If they do, it is o.k., and if they do not, it is o.k., but we are not making any overtures to one another.

Mr. Speaker, I have never discussed the matter with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) or the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) prior to my announcement. It came purely out of a sense of duty to my people, not only the people of my constituency, but of the Province of Ontario.

Again, I wish to say that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and his Government are doing a good job, and as long as they are doing a good job they have my support in or out of the House.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Before the Orders of the Day, Mr. Speaker, I have a message from his honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, signed by his own hand.

The Lieutenant-Governor transmits the estimates of certain sums required for the services of the province for the year ending 31st of March, 1949, and recommends them to the Legislative Assembly.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair and that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion approved; the House in Committee of Supply.

BUDGET ADDRESS

DELIVERED BY

THE HON. LESLIE M. FROST
Treasurer of the Province of Ontario

IN THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Friday, April 2, 1948

Mr. Speaker:

In support of the historic resolution that you do now leave the chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply, I take the opportunity of again presenting to this House a complete statement of Revenue and Expenditure for the fiscal year ending 31st March, 1948.

The year just closed is the first fiscal year since the wartime tax suspension agreements were entered into, that the province has operated without a subvention from the Dominion, other than the Confederation subsidy. In the ordinary course of things we might have said that this was the first normal year. Actually, it was far from a normal year. The aftermath of the war and the troubled international situation have projected themselves into the affairs of the province. Prices have risen to an inflationary level. The Dominion Government is maintaining the Canadian dollar at parity with the United States dollar. This has noticeably affected some of our primary industries and particularly gold mining. The Dominion Government has seen fit to impose restriction on imports, embargoes on certain exports and other restrictive controls, with the result that we are far from operating on a normal peacetime basis.

It is disappointing that such should be the case. We had all hoped that it would be otherwise. We, however, should not allow ourselves to be blinded by the difficulties and irritations of the days in which we live. We should not let these things obscure the great days of development and the days of trade, commerce and expansion which lie ahead. Whether we agree or disagree with measures which have been taken to meet our economic problems, I am quite sure that there is no disagreement on this point, namely, the ability of Canadians to surmount our present difficulties and to grasp our opportunities, the like of which have come to very few people.

Canada, as a whole, has undergone a very remarkable transformation in its comparatively short history. Our first development was as a primary producer. Fur trading and fishing first attracted European enterprise to North America, then came the development of the lumber industry. Agriculture became a great industry indeed and gave Canada a place in the markets of the world. The great importance of our natural products of farm, forest and mine, accustomed us to think of Canada mainly as a primary producer. A change came about early in this century and was hastened by the first world war. Canada has become the second largest manufacturing country in the Empire. We are in third place in export trade among the nations of the world. This is a most impressive record for a country so little removed in time from the pioneering stage as is Canada. The resounding blows of pioneer axes are not too far removed from any of us. We are still one with our pioneer forefathers. We are a very young country with a fine record of achievement and with very brilliant prospects.

Our province is centrally located with respect to the whole of Canada. We are an empire in extent. Ontario extends 1,000 miles from east to west and from south to north. We have a total area of 412,582 square miles, of which 363,282 square miles consist of land and 49,300 square miles of water. Our interest in, and ownership of, the Canadian part of the Great Lakes, Superior, Huron, Erie and Ontario, are among our richest possessions. Of our land area about 237,000 square miles are in forests still belonging to the people of Ontario. Our mineral development is only in its infancy. Our standards of living and nutrition are much higher than in the old world. There is no comparable area in the new world where they are higher. We are attracting people from other countries. We are attracting over one-half of all of the immigrants coming to Canada and indeed a substantial population has migrated here from other parts of Canada.

Ontario is the leading industrial province of Canada. Many factors have contributed to this position—abundant natural resources, water power, transportation and strategic location in the North American continent. The rapid development of railways and highways which now span the province provides efficient transportation. On every hand is expansion and development. One has only to look around to see this. Our industry covers a wide range—iron, steel, non-ferrous metals, chemicals, synthetic rubber, pulp and paper, wood-working, glass fabrics, plastic products, nylon fabrics, agriculture, mining, tourism—the whole constituting a field of endeavour and opportunity challenging our powers of description. We have a greater volume of skilled labour, new craft skills, new techniques and new ideas for industry, than at any time in our history. Our Ontario Research Foundation, as well as the work of Canadian universities, is enabling industry to make great advances in new products for pulpwood, plastics and chemicals.

Taking the manufacturing industry alone and omitting agriculture, forest and mineral products, the net value of Ontario's manufactures is one-half of the total Canadian production. We are responsible for 68 per cent. of Canada's total iron and steel production and almost its entire output of automobiles, agricultural implements and scientific equipment. In 1946, we had over 15,500 manufacturing establishments, large and small, using about 4½ billion dollars in capital, employing over 600,000 workmen, paying a billion dollars in wages and using 2¼ billion dollars in materials, with a gross production of between 4 billion and 5 billion dollars.

So great has been our industrial development that we are paying nearly 50 cents of every tax dollar which goes into the federal treasury. We are a paying partner in our federal system. I am glad to say that the financial position of our province and of our municipalities, which are part of the provincial system, is strong. It is our obvious job to keep our financial position strong. As a great and expanding province we shall constantly undertake more commitments and added responsibilities.

Our fertile, arable lands are responsible for our leadership and the value of our agricultural products. In 1947 the cash farm income was about 546 million dollars. We produced more agricultural products than any other province, and our farm income is the largest. Last August over 350,000 persons were employed in farming. Our extensive forest industries in 1946 produced $150,000,000 in wages and work for 100,000 people. Great new well-planned communities are coming into being. Undoubtedly the days to come will see emphasis on iron ores and base metals. The iron and steel industry plays a predominant role in Ontario's economy, and will continue to assume greater proportions as a dynamic factor in the production of new wealth.

While as a province we have no coal resources, this deficiency is offset very considerably by vast water power resources which make possible the development of large amounts of electrical energy.

We are indeed a fortunate people. We have an abundance of natural wealth. We have a very high standard of living. Let not these things spoil us. There is a very definite place for thrift and avoidance of waste, and for real conservation, and this applies particularly to electrical energy. Let us remember that electrical power provides all manner of home conveniences, a better standard of living, work and wages for hundreds of thousands of workmen, and is in large measure the life blood of the nation's economy. In Ontario power is cheap and freely used. We use four times as much power per capita in Ontario as in Great Britain, and twice as much as in the United States. In the past eight years the average domestic consumption has increased from 175 kilowatt hours monthly to 226 kilowatt hours. This indicates that we are all using more electrical energy for one purpose or another.

It is not difficult for us to conserve electrical energy; it is so easy for us to waste. All of us should remember that electrical energy keeps the wheels of industry going, enables us to maintain a high level of employment, helps us to manufacture the necessary goods for export and is indispensable if we are to retain our present high standard of living. We should not waste this vital resource—electrical energy.

The very great increase in the use of electrical power is, of course, in main attributable to the fact that we are geared to a peak-load of industrial expansion. From the inception of hydro there has been an approximate annual increase of 10 per cent. in demand. In 1937, following the repudiation of the Quebec contracts, the Commission urged the necessity of maintaining large amounts of power reserve, and it urged that it was unsafe to make provision for growth in primary demand for less than 7 per cent. annually. This was accepted. This probable best provision has been outdistanced. With the conclusion of the war and the conversion of war industries in 1945, one would have thought it reasonable that the demand should fall off. Instead, it has hugely increased. From September, 1946, to September, 1947, the demand increased by 460,000 horse-power, or 19.6 per cent. in one year. This enormous increase in electrical power demand is indicated when compared with the fact that 2,680,000 horse-power was our total available supply at that time.

We shall have some difficulties in the long dark winter months for a year or two, the alleviation of which will commence next September. The following is a list of new developments presently being constructed which will correct the situation:

Name	Place	Horse-power Capacity	Estimated Date in Operation
Stewartville.....	Madawaska.....	80,000	Sept., 1948
Des Joachims.....	Ottawa River.....	480,000	½ June, 1950
Chenau.....	Ottawa River.....	158,000	½ June, 1951
Aguasabon.....	Long Lac Diversion.....	53,000	1951
Tunnel Site.....	Mississagi River.....	56,000	Sept., 1948
Pine Portage.....	Nipigon River.....	80,000	1950
Ear Falls.....	Patricia District.....	7,500	1950-1951

These developments are being proceeded with at an estimated cost of over $300,000,000. The development of the St. Lawrence River is in prospect, where our share of the additional power to become available will be over a million horse-power. No doubt, future plans will include a more efficient development at Niagara, where a large block of additional power will be generated.

I believe you will all agree that in this period of shortage, now at its most acute point, we should utilize our power resources in a manner calculated to facilitate rather than to impede the industrial development of this province and, in industrial development, I include agriculture, which we must not forget is still our principal single industry. The importance of the Ontario farmer to the national economy is well recognized. In a province such as Ontario, the maintenance of the farmer's position must be, at all times, a matter of chief concern.

Ways and means must be sought continually, to give the farmer the most modern methods of production and marketing. Not less important, the farmer must be provided with opportunities for a home life comparable in convenience and comfort to that enjoyed by the urban dweller. Educational facilities, good roads, snow-plowing in the winter, hydro-electric power are among the prime necessities which we as a province must make available to our rural dwellers. There is no doubt whatever that the extensive use of electricity on the farm, means reduced cost and increased production. To the mixed farming, which is typical in Ontario, hydro is an indispensable requirement.

Among our needs as a growing and expanding province, great, new blocks of power for domestic, industrial and agricultural use is only one. In order that a great portion of our province shall not be isolated industrially, frequency conversion from 25 cycle to 60 cycle is among our absolute requirements. This will involve large sums of money and the use of our credit, as will also our housing plans, which have already been outlined in some detail in this House. Before turning to our fiscal position and plans for the future, I shall first deal with another matter.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

From the brief account which I have given, it will be seen that our problems are those of an expanding economy. At this stage, it is important to bring into bold relief the problems with which we have been confronted in the Dominion-Provincial negotiations, and for which, due to the failure of the Dominion Government to reconvene the Conference, no successful solution has yet been found. It will be seen quite readily, that with our industrial expansion we shall have a multiplicity of new problems relating to matters of health, welfare, education, roads, public works and, last, but not least, the preservation of our credit, which is one of our greatest assets. Last year I said:

"Ontario's problem is that of an expanding economy. Its Government and people are bent upon the development and expansion of all branches of industry with resultant full employment and better standards of living for our increasing population. The position taken by Ontario—which view was shared by some of the other provinces—was that, by whatever the arrangement, we must share in the direct and progressive tax fields in such manner as to enable us to participate in them in relation to the increasing revenues which accompany expansion, which expansion we anticipate and for which we constantly strive. With expansion comes added responsibility involving greater financial commitments. Inflation and rising prices with anything approaching a fixed or rigid subvention, or indeed a subvention which did not reflect the productivity of these direct and progressive tax fields, would make our position most precarious."

In other words, our province was not interested in large minimum payments, but rather in the productivity of the major direct taxes which most truly reflect the fiscal power to meet the days of expansion and development which lie ahead.

It will be remembered that last year this Government, in order to assist the Dominion Government to make sweeping income tax reductions, did not impose a personal income tax, although Ontario might have imposed a tax of 5 per cent. of the Dominion tax, which would have been deducted from the Dominion tax and therefore would not have increased the level of the total personal income tax in this province. The Province of Ontario, however, did impose a 7 per cent. corporations tax. Some of the honourable members of the Opposition expressed great concern because, they pointed out, the province would receive approximately $20,000,000 less revenue than it would have received had the Government surrendered our taxing rights and accepted in lieu thereof for this year ending March 31, 1948, the sum of $74,438,000. The spread was actually not $20,000,000, taking into consideration the potential of at least a 5 per cent. income tax which would have produced $15,800,000 without raising the level of our income taxpayers. However, some of the honourable members of this House argued that we should surrender the taxing rights of this province in return for what they considered to be the glittering prize of $74,438,000. This Government took the position that the price was too great and that in so doing, even if a greater sum were realized from the Dominion, we should be surrendering our financial freedom and that within a short time the Province of Ontario would be unable, because of the lack of financial resources, to carry out the great work which it is hers to do.

In the light of one year's experience, it is now possible to point out to some of the honourable members of this House, and to others outside of this House who cast doubt upon the wisdom of this Government's actions, instead of projected figures, we can now give you actual figures, and I am sure that every member of this House will now commend this Government for its wisdom and foresight in protecting the future of this province.

Hon. D. C. Abbott in January, 1947, was $73,969,000.

Estimated Rental Payment to Ontario in proposal of

From the foregoing, it is apparent that the Dominion was offering us $74,438,000 for tax fields worth at present rates $87,863,000, and from which, without entering the personal income tax field, which is a potential tax the province has in reserve, we collected no less than $72,063,000. By accepting the Dominion offer, not only would we have been accepting much less than we should have received on any formula, but we would have been selling our financial freedom and the means with which to do the great things this province is to be called upon to do this year and in the future. Overwhelmingly significant, we should have jeopardized our credit upon which we must depend for the great expansion programme which I shall outline presently.

The financial benefits accruing to this province as a result of the non-acceptance of the Dominion's tax proposals must now be understood and fully appreciated by every member of this Assembly. In sharp contrast to our own comfortable situation due to our insistence upon retaining our constitutional taxing powers, is the plight in which one of the agreeing provinces finds itself after one full year of functioning within the framework of the Dominion-Provincial Tax Agreement. The province I have in mind is British Columbia. That wealthy province has a population of about one million souls—approximately one-quarter the population of Ontario. Its economy, in several respects, resembles the economy of our own province. The production of the four more important industries, agriculture, fisheries, forestry and mining, approximated, in line with its population, about one-quarter of that of Ontario.

The Province of British Columbia is one of the agreeing provinces, having signed the Dominion-Provincial Tax Agreement in 1946. The policy of that Government was outlined in an address delivered in the British Columbia Legislature on February 17, 1947, by the Honourable John Hart, then Premier of British Columbia. In his address, Mr. Hart said in part (pages 13 and 14 of the printed copy of his address):

"Thus the agreement measures up to all the requirements I constantly reiterated.

"It avoids double taxation.

"It does not encroach upon our constitutional rights.

"It gives us approximately what we would have received had we re-entered the tax fields affected.

"It provides an expanding revenue to meet our growing requirements.

"It takes into account the need for greater social security and high-level employment."

After such a glowing announcement of what the Dominion-Provincial Agreements were expected to mean to the economy of British Columbia, it will be interesting and enlightening to turn to the budget address of Honourable Herbert Anscomb, Minister of Finance of British Columbia. The address was delivered on March 17, 1948. It contains, on pages 42 and 43, two statements of more than ordinary significance. I quote:—

"Let us now examine the effect of this agreement on our provincial economy. We were told that in 1940 the gross national product amounted to $6,708,000,000. The taxes we surrendered to the Dominion under the war tax agreement were valued at $12,048,000, and, of course, were related to our provincial proportion of the said product. We are now advised that the gross national product has risen to, at least, $13,052,000,000; we know that our population has increased during that period at a greater rate than in most areas of the Dominion; and, we also know that, relatively speaking, a larger amount of industrial development took place during that period. We, therefore, have every reason to assume that, had we retained all our taxing rights, we would have enjoyed an increased yield, from the tax fields originally surrendered; but while it is not possible to say what our position would have been had we not given up the tax fields referred to, I think it can be assumed we would have collected in our own right a very considerable sum. We have to remember, however, that in completing the agreement we were compelled to impose a 5 per cent. tax on corporations until all the provinces had signed the agreement and we have done that. It looks as if we will continue to do so because indications are that neither Quebec nor Ontario proposes to come in. In effect that means that we collect 5 per cent. from our own industrial and other corporations, handing the money over to the National Government to apply on the $22,000,000 to $23,000,000 that they give us."

On page 50, the statement there recorded gives every indication that insofar as the budgetary requirements of the Province of British Columbia are concerned, the Dominion-Provincial Tax Agreement has not turned out to the entire satisfaction of the province. I quote from Mr. Anscomb's address:—

"Mr. Speaker, I now wish to call attention to the Government's proposal concerning new taxation. The Honourable the Premier, in his speech on policy, has already stressed the need for additional revenue sources to enable the province to carry on the programme of social advancement and social security apparently desired by the majority of our people. As you are aware, by the terms of the Dominion-Provincial Agreement ratified by this House last year, we are unable to enter the fields of corporation, corporation income and personal income taxation and succession duties, with the exception of the 5 per cent. corporation income tax which is offset against the rental fee paid by the Dominion.

"While some measure of increased revenue is available through higher timber royalty charges and from greater liquor profits, gasoline tax, motor vehicle licence fees, etc., the possible volume is quite inadequate. There is, therefore no alternative but to consider the only source of revenue capable of yielding sufficient funds, which is still open to us by constitutional right and by the terms of the existing Agreement with the Dominion."

The important factor revealed is that the financial results of the Dominion-Provincial Tax Agreement have proved disappointing and inadequate to meet the needs of British Columbia's expanding economy. Therefore, we underscore Mr. Anscomb's words:

"There is, therefore, no alternative but to consider the only source of revenue capable of yielding sufficient funds."

And that alternative, Mr. Speaker, is that the Province of British Columbia must resort to the introduction and levying of a sales tax, imposing a tax of 3 per cent. on all retail sales, to equal an estimated revenue of $12,000,000.

Compare this with the position of the Province of Ontario with no sales tax and no personal income tax, free from any financial strait-jacket, but with its full financial freedom to raise without restrictions, revenues from sources best able to pay.

From press reports, the Dominion Government surplus this year may exceed $800,000,000. Obviously, the course taken by Ontario has helped rather than hindered the Dominion, which has been relieved of the necessity of raising approximately $74,000,000 to hand over to Ontario by way of a subvention.

The Dominion does not have to face this heavy obligation, and finds itself in a substantial surplus position. There is every reason why the Dominion should now reconvene the Dominion-Provincial Conference when plans might be laid for it to implement its pledges relative to old-age pensions for every one over 70 years of age without means test, and for other social security measures which have been advanced by both the Dominion and the provinces. The delay in reconvening the Conference can not be justified. Today, the Government of Ontario reiterates its oft-repeated request, that the Dominion Government reconvene the Conference.

Mr. Speaker, with permission of the House, I now table the Interim Statement of Ordinary Revenue for the fiscal year April 1, 1947, to March 31, 1948, consisting of 10 months' actual receipts and 2 months' forecast. Our estimated receipts reflect the prosperity of this province and the wisdom of the Government in retaining our own taxing powers, the buoyance of which is indicated in our total net ordinary revenue, which amounts to $190,850,000.

I also table the Interim Statement of Ordinary Expenditure for the same fiscal period. I may say that despite the buoyance of our revenues, we adhere generally to the plan of expenditures outlined in the budget of a year ago. We expended about $1,800,000 more on health and about $5,000,000 more on highways. Otherwise, our Estimates were generally adhered to, with the result that our net Ordinary Expenditures total $165,811,000.

Since we assumed office we have endeavoured to finance the advances of the future out of the savings achieved by better management. Therefore, in 1945 and 1946 we applied the surplus which we had accumulated in those years against the increased grants to education. This enabled us to absorb into our budgetary plans, increases of nearly $25,000,000 in grants to education without any increase in taxation, and with continuously balanced budgets. In the year 1946-1947, by careful administration we were able to overtake an estimated deficit for that year of $21,065,694.35, and instead achieved a surplus. Now we are accumulating against our capital commitments for highways and various public works with the object of keeping our net debt completely in hand. Accordingly, during the past year, we have scrutinized all expenditures in order to apply the surplus of our buoyant revenues to the reduction of net debt, which improves our general financial position and helps to finance the great capital commitments I shall presently outline.

I now table a summary which shows that after making full provision for sinking funds and maturing railway aid certificates, we have the largest surplus in the history of this province, amounting to $25,039,000.00. This surplus which we have striven to accumulate with the increased revenues over estimates, will be of inestimable value in carrying out the great undertakings of the province upon which we are embarking.

With the permission of the House, I table an Interim Statement of Gross and Net Capital Receipts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1948, the total net capital receipts amounting to $50,447,000.

I also table a statement of Capital Payments, the same amounting to $42,694,000.

PROVINCIAL DEBT

In all of my previous budget presentations, I have referred quite extensively to our net debt position. Last year I stated that it had been the steady aim of this Government to preserve and to improve the credit standing of the province. Net debt must be paid from taxation. Interest and principal constitute a first charge on our revenues. It is, therefore, with pleasure I announce to you that our net debt reduction for the year ending March 31, 1948, will be the record sum of $25,003,183.76. The previous all-time high reduction was that which we made in 1944, amounting to $12,947,000. We, therefore, in this debt reduction just announced, have doubled the previous all-time high.

Ontario's credit is a very real asset. The use of this credit for financing the cost of capital works to be repaid over the lifetime of such works is legitimate and proper. In this coming year, which will be a year of great expansion and development, we intend to use our credit in the creation of works, self-liquidating in nature. I refer particularly to the great hydro-electric developments which are in project. We aim, however, to keep our net debt strictly under control.

This Government will soon complete its fifth year in office. This is the fifth budget delivered during that period. It is with deep satisfaction that I tell you that every foot of highway we have constructed, every building we have erected, every hospital grant we have given, every grant we have made for rural hydro extension has been completely paid for. The people of Ontario do not owe one dollar for any capital work which we have performed and, in addition to that, during our period of office we have paid from the debt of the province the huge sum of $27,357,470.85.

Never in the history of this province has any government, at the end of 5 years in office, been able to say that everything was paid for and that the net debt had been reduced. I know that every member of this House will regard with unqualified approval the statements which I now table.

With the permission of the House, I now table statements of Gross Debt, Net Debt, the Funded Debt and the Indirect Debt, showing a reduction in the gross debt of $18,651,938.61.

WAYS AND MEANS

Mr. Speaker,

In view of the fact that the investment and developmental programme formulated by this Government is of such a character as to employ to the greatest extent in our history, the resources of the province, some general observations appear to be in order at this juncture. In placing our programme before you today, let me say that there are deep and fundamental reasons why a programme of expansion should be adopted at this time. Today, there is a new and broader outlook in Ontario. We are opening a new chapter in the economic history of the province. This is no time for faltering. In this post-war period we dare not stand still. Today, the nation that stands still, does so at its peril. There is every reason for confidence in the ability of the province to put into execution and carry to a successful accomplishment the plans which have been prepared. The foundations for building have been already laid. We have been preparing a firm foundation, as evidenced by consideration of the following accomplishments since this administration became responsible for the direction of affairs in Ontario.

HYDRO EXTENSIONS

When this Government came into power it was faced with a very serious and difficult problem in connection with the extension of rural hydro lines. For some years practically no lines had been built. Commencing in the Fall of 1939, all rural construction, except in a very small way, had been cancelled. In the year 1943 up to October 31st, only 21 miles had been constructed. This only involved 718 new customers, who were mainly connected with war-time housing, and only 1,287 customers had been taken on existing lines. In the meantime, a very large backlog of applications had accumulated. The agricultural communities in Ontario were very properly complaining that they should be recognized as a war-time industry and receive priorities. One of the first acts of this Government was to take the matter up with the Dominion Government, and to have agriculture recognized as a war-time industry, with the result that, in 1944, in this Government's first year of office, 350 miles of line were constructed, and 8,054 customers were added. Up to October 31, 1947, no less than 3,679 miles of lines had been constructed, with the addition of 58,248 customers. For the coming year, it is planned to construct 3,400 miles of line, with the addition of approximately 30,000 additional customers. In 1944 this Government announced a five-year plan. The five-year plan has been completed in four years. What is planned for the year ending October 31, 1948, is in addition to the five-year plan. This year we have over 100,000 horsepower of new energy coming in, and of this agriculture will get its proper share.

From the standpoint of cost, in the last year of the previous government, only $100,184 was spent in bonusing rural construction. Since this Government assumed office and up to October 31, 1947, this administration has expended over $7,500,000 in rural extensions, and this coming year is appropriating for rural extensions the huge sum of $10,800,000. This sum will be matched by the Commission, with the result that the total construction programme this year will be $21,600,000.

HIGHWAYS

During the year ending March 31, 1948, we have seen the greatest highway expenditures in the history of Ontario. Heretofore the greatest expenditure of capital and ordinary account in Ontario was for the year 1945-1946, when nearly $45,000,000 was expended. During this last year we have expended no less than $61,900,000. It is imperative to integrate the highway building programme with the demands of the expanding economy of this great province.

Included in the expenditure are over 1,000 miles of paved, concrete, asphalt and mulch road surfaces. Two hundred and fifty miles of old roads have been re-surfaced. Major work has been undertaken on mining roads to Red Lake, Matheson East, and Matachewan area. New roads are projected to Barrie, south of Chapleau, the re-location of many existing roads, the construction of highways for The Hydro-Electric Power Commission at their great developments at Des Joachims, Aguasabon, Cameron Falls, Pine Portage and Tunnel Rapids. Gravel roads have been rendered dust proof. Great as has been the achievement of this department in construction work, one of its most useful accomplishments has been the degree of co-operation established with municipal governments. Municipal road expenditures as approved by the Department of Highways totalled more than $30,000,000 in 1947. The province actually contributed more than $15,700,000 by way of municipal road subsidies in the current year. The comparable expenditure in 1942 was but $3,600,000. This co-operation is shown by the fine snowplowed roads from one end of the province to the other and in the condition and maintenance of municipal highways. Last year, 348 additional municipalities were added to those entitled to participate in provincial road grants, and over $3,000,000 in subsidies were disbursed among urban municipalities. The municipalities have further been assisted by the establishment of machinery pools with machinery approximating half a million dollars in value, which is available to municipalities at nominal rental. This year the estimates of the Department of Highways are for the sum of $57,000,000, which covers the maximum amount of work which the department can do with available labour, machinery and material.

DEPARTMENTS OF WELFARE AND HEALTH

Last year, I mentioned the huge expenditures this Government had made up to March 31, 1947 on agriculture, education, health and welfare, totalling to that time over $231,000,000. The expenditures on the Departments of Welfare and Health have shown further increases last year, and additional large amounts are being included in the estimates for the year 1948-49.

In the Department of Welfare the increase in expenditures is best evidenced by the comparison between the years 1942-43 and the present. For the year 1942-43, total expenditures for the department were approximately $9,600,000. The estimates for next year are approximately $17,000,000.

Notwithstanding that present employment figures indicate a condition of peak employment across the Dominion, the necessity for increasing expenditures for welfare services, generally, continues apace. The amount paid to individual mothers' allowances beneficiaries has increased greatly over the payments of 1943. The health services to the children of beneficiaries under this Act are being extended by a provision for dental care to such children, to be applied on the same principle as medical services are now provided.

As a result of the province entering into an agreement with the Dominion to provide a greater monthly pension to old age pensioners and the fact that a person, who has greater outside income than hitherto, may now qualify for pension, the expenditures for old age pensions are rapidly increasing. The number of pensioners in 1943 was 57,692. The cost to the province was a little over $3,500,000. For the year ending March 31, 1948, the number of old age pensioners is 70,859 and the cost to the province, including medical services and bonus, exceeds $7,000,000. New pension applications are being received at the rate of approximately 1,800 to 2,000 monthly.

In addition to the increased amount of expenditures required to meet the 25 per cent. which the province pays to old age pensioners, during the past year a bonus up to $10 per month, based on need, was extended to old age pensioners, with an automatic review of each case. As will be seen, this has involved a huge task of examination of all of the over 70,000 cases administered by the province. Many of these cases have income other than the old age pension. At the present time, 38,111 cases have been reviewed, and additionally any case which has come to the attention of the department, in which hardship was indicated, has been especially reviewed. Within a comparatively short time all cases will have been reconsidered for bonus payments.

The soundness of this approach to the problem should be recognized by the members of this House. Due to recent changes in the regulations, old age pensioners are now allowed to receive certain income in addition to their pensions. It is apparent, therefore, that a flat increase does not meet the situation. There are also large variations in the cost of living in Ontario. It is therefore not only sound that any bonus should be paid on a basis of need taking into consideration all of the facts but it is also a sound approach for another reason. The Dominion Government has stated that it will sponsor pensions for everyone at seventy years of age. It is hardly conceivable that an old age pension can be arrived at which will be equitable in all cases. Much, of course, depends upon the basic payment. If, for instance, the basic payment were $30 per month, it is apparent that public assistance would have to be given to some pensioners from some source. We believe that it should be from the Dominion Government. Failing that, however, this Government is prepared, within its means, to supplement the basic amount in cases of need. This assistance could be placed on no other basis. The advantage of the work now being done by the Department of Welfare must be apparent to everyone. The department will in most cases know where assistance should be given and can extend the same without the delays which otherwise would be caused.

In 1943 the number of blind pensioners was 1,502. This has increased to 1,790, and the expenditures have increased from about $97,000 to over $227,000.

As a result of the increased cost of living, relief regulations have been expanded to provide for increased grants to unemployable persons eligible for assistance under the Act.

Provision has been made in the estimates for developing rehabilitation services for handicapped persons.

In view of the extended references which have already been made to the Department of Health and The Hospitals Aid Fund which has been created, I shall not elaborate other than to say that when this Government took office five years ago a little over $13,000,000 was being spent in this very important department. This year the estimates are approximately $22,000,000.

Grants to sanatoria are heavily increased. The sum of $3,450,000 is included for general hospital, capital and maintenance grants which will be placed in The Hospitals Aid Fund. It will be noted that the amount to be raised by the hospital tax is in no way included in this budget as the funds are to be set apart for hospital purposes only and will form no part of the revenue of the province as such.

DEPARTMENTS OF MINES AND LANDS AND FORESTS

I shall make brief references to these two great developmental departments.

In 1943, the estimates provided for the expenditure of $3,300,000 for the Departments of Lands and Forests and Game and Fisheries. This year the estimates are approximately $8,200,000. We are expending this year $2.50 for every $1 spent in 1943.

We have doubled the number of transport and semi-transport type aircraft, as well as the hangar facilities. Air bases have been increased for field operations. We have provided an increase in nursery stock production of 30,000,000 trees annually, being three times that of the 1943 schedule. A Forest Ranger School is in operation. The Division of Research has been greatly expanded. Determined efforts have been made to bring to the attention of the people of the province the relationship between their forest resources and the general prosperity of the province.

In mining, there is a good possibility that in 1948 the dollar value of Ontario's mining production will top the all-time record of $269,000,000 established in 1941. Higher prices for base metals and industrial minerals are stimulating record outputs. Mine labour is steadily increasing in both quantity and efficiency.

Iron ores are playing an increasingly important part in the mining picture. Great developments are in being or in prospect at Michipicoten, Steep Rock Lake and the Goulais River Range. Industrial minerals, which abound in this province, are attracting attention and their development is freeing the country from its dependence on outside sources for such materials. I am happy to say that the trend in gold output is towards greater improvement. Mill capacity is being stepped up in most of the producing mines. Before the end of this year, Ontario will count on several new producers.

The Department of Mines is steadily increasing its services and facilities. Let us not forget that Ontario's mineral reserves are not the least of the great resources which guarantee the future of our province and our country.

In summary I may say, during the lifetime of this Government to date we have spent on our developmental and social Departments of Agriculture, Education, Health and Welfare no less than $313,400,000, particulars of which are in the following schedule:

DEPARTMENT OF ATTORNEY-GENERAL, REFORM INSTITUTIONS AND TRAVEL AND PUBLICITY

Time does not permit me to elaborate upon the magnificent job being done by the Attorney-General in a large and difficult department. The improvement in crime suppression agencies alone would justify extended reference, as would the work of reformation of the Department of Reform Institutions among old and young offenders. The development work of the Department of Travel and Publicity also deserves mention. These and other departments will be dealt with by their respective ministers in the debate which will follow and I shall not further refer to them here.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY AND LABOUR

The Department of the Provincial Secretary is now a great secretarial department which is doing immensely valuable work in co-ordination and administration. Under this department comes the important work of the Research Council.

The Department of Labour ranks small in the amount of its estimates, but very large in the service it is rendering.

RELIEF OF THE BURDEN OF TAXATION ON REAL ESTATE

The removal of unfair taxation on real estate is a matter in which this Government is very greatly concerned. In my Budget Speech of 1944, I made extended reference to real estate taxation and the cost of education. In that first year in which this Government was in power preliminary steps were taken to remedy the situation. Since that time in succeeding years many advances have been made towards a solution of the problem. This year a Provincial-Municipal Conference is being held to examine into the present situation. This, therefore, is an appropriate time to make some reference to the same. The main source of income of our municipalities is from taxation on real estate. In the past the result has been that the costs of many services were either charged against real estate or else were either not performed at all or were improperly performed. One of the basic reasons for the assumption by the province of 50 per cent. of school taxes was in order to transfer some of the municipal burden to broader taxing fields. In 1943 the total school grants made by the province to the School Boards was $8,351,824. In 1947 the amount was $28,872,000. For the coming year the total amount of school grants paid by the Government to the School Boards of Ontario will be the sum of $33,200,000, an increase of $4,328,000 over last year. It is quite apparent that if we revert to the system of grants which we had in the province in 1943 and retain the same type of services as obtains today, the additional burden on the real estate owner in Ontario would be, this year, the sum of $24,843,176. In 1943 the total grants to municipal roads was $3,589,480. In the year 1948-49 the amount will be $15,990,000. In these two items alone it will be seen that if the old grants still obtained and the municipalities and School Boards were to maintain the same type of services as today the additional cost to them would be a total of $37,248,696.

Since the conclusion of the war, our municipalities have been faced with rising costs because of increased prices for material and services of all kinds and also due to the fact that a backlog of work accumulated during the war years as of sheer necessity had to be done at the present time. The result is that municipal expenditures, presently, have not decreased. It is quite probable that a peak in municipal expenditures has been reached and that from now on they will tend to recede. In the meantime, the costs of other services which might have become an increasing charge on municipalities have been contributed to by this Government and this has tended to keep these charges down. For instance, grants have been increased to public libraries. Reference has been made to hospitals, which are municipal in their origin. The grants to public ward beds have tended in these days of rising costs to alleviate the almost intolerable burden which would have been thrown on the municipalities if this course had not been taken. It is hoped that the steps which are now being taken will stop the upward trend of hospital costs and that the curve from now on will be downward. It can therefore be said that, in these days of tremendously mounting costs for services of all kinds, the upward trend of municipal costs is at a point of stabilization and from now on we may look to municipal tax reductions.

After a lapse of four years it is now possible to reduce to figures, the actual assistance to our municipalities because of the assumption by the Government of costs which have heretofore been largely municipal. These figures can be given for every municipality in Ontario but the following are some very interesting examples of representative municipalities. These figures are based upon the assumption that present day services were being performed and costs incurred with the system and percentage of grants which applied in 1943 when this Government came into power.

The above figures do not include such items as hospital grants, which were doubled for 1943. Library grants also greatly increased, and other assistance. It is plain from the foregoing that, without regard to these additional items, in the case of the City of Toronto, if the same services were being performed as now with the old system of grants, the tax rate would be 4.3 mills higher and there would be increases in the tax rates of municipalities comparable to Brantford, Orillia, Kingston and Amabel Township along the lines of the figures which I have just given.

As regards our mining municipalities, all of the above assistance has been extended and more. The income of these municipalities is closely related to the profits of mining companies. There has been a very great variation in recent years. The revenue of these municipalities has been stabilized at an amount approximately double that of the statutory rate, with a minimum guarantee for a period of five years at this high level. This year in the estimates is the sum of $180,000 for this stabilizing subsidy.

ONE MILL SUBSIDY TO MUNICIPALITIES

I have to announce that it is the intention of the Government to continue to pay the usual one mill subsidy to every municipality in the province; such subsidy to be based on the general assessment. I have therefore placed in the estimates under Vote No. 121 of the Department of Municipal Affairs, the sum required, being estimated as $3,325,000.

These signal accomplishments are the results of good government succeeding through the exercise of a wise economy. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, "the exercise of a wise economy". For in the performance of what I have just recited, the credit of the province has been kept at the highest rating. There is good reason for this satisfactory state of affairs. As I have already said, not only have we done all of the things which I have recited but we have reduced our debt by over $27,000,000.

This impressive betterment in the financial position of the province is without parallel in our financial history. This, you will agree, warrants the statement: "We have builded upon a firm financial foundation." Not only have we preserved and enhanced the public credit of the province, we have improved private credit; for public credit and private credit are inter-related, the one depending upon the other. In making full use of our productive resources, material as well as human, we are mindful of the problems of public finance which we are handling. I shall discuss the problems briefly.

Our great plans for the expansion of Ontario involve the use of our credit. One has only to read the past budget speeches to see that we have arrived at a point which we have anticipated and planned for. As a province, we intend to pay as much of our own provincial capital commitments for roads, public buildings, rural hydro extensions and other matters as we can from ordinary revenues. We have kept our net debt strictly in hand. We show a large reduction over our period in office. This policy we intend to follow, with the effect that our provincial guarantee becomes yearly more valuable. Our plans, however, call for raising very large sums of money through hydro and subsidiaries, partly of course on the soundness of the schemes themselves, but subject to our valuable provincial guarantee. We also must take care of our own provincial refundings because, although we do not incur any new debt, we have an old debt maturing annually. The developmental projects now in progress will cover a period of approximately fifteen years, until 1963, but will bear most heavily upon us in the next four years, up to the end of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission's year on October 31, 1952. During this period we shall need approximately $210,000,000 for our own refundings, and about $350,000,000 of new money for developmental projects, of which approximately $275,000,000 will be for hydro, the balance for housing, Ontario Northland Railway and other subsidiaries. These huge plans are faced with confidence. They are an anticipated part of our post-war plans, which we have been working on since 1943.

I point out that our refundings would have been for us to take care of in any event. With the Government's financial position very strong, and with the economy of the province expanding and becoming wealthier yearly, this presents no insurmountable difficulties. The balance of the money required for the next 4 years, of approximately $350,000,000, is for great self-liquidating projects which should not cost the taxpayers of the province, as such, a single dollar. In other words, we are using our credit in the form of guaranties to enable subsidiary bodies to borrow the money which will be repaid from the income of the works which are created. Our present capacity to pay will be continually increasing, because of the sound investment and developmental programme which I have outlined, for the greater the productivity of industry the higher will be the level of prosperity and well-being of the whole community. The Government is determined to exert every effort to afford encouragement to industry in the building of a prosperous future for our people and, to the attainment of this goal, the Government hopes and intends to give courageous and continuing leadership. We shall keep our credit clean and bright. On the successful carrying out of our programme rests the future of our province. On the practicability and the soundness of the plans we have formulated, we stake the political future of this Government.

I shall now turn briefly to some tax reductions and measures of a remedial character. First, an amendment to The Corporations Tax Act will be introduced:

1. The rate of tax on insurance premiums of every kind, life, fire, casualty, etc., will be reduced to 2 per cent., the rate applicable in other provinces.
2. An amendment to The Corporations Tax Act will give, as an incentive to companies engaged in exploration and production of natural resources, particularly natural gas, petroleum and precious and semi-precious minerals, a special deduction from taxable income equal to the amounts expended by such companies for exploration, drilling and mining which they undertake in Ontario.
3. The Mining Tax Act will be amended allowing as an exemption any tax up to $250 payable as a royalty on production of natural gas. The effect of this amendment will be to exempt entirely most of the small producers, and it will encourage them to further efforts in the exploration and development of natural gas wells.

NO NEW TAXATION

For the coming fiscal year I know that the House will receive with satisfaction the announcement that there will be no new taxation. The comments which I made last year with relation to personal income tax are good for this coming year as well. The words which I said last year I reaffirm now, "In these days of high living costs, where in many cases there is still a great gap between the take-home pay of wage-earners and the amount of real income necessary to raise a family, educate the children and ensure a decent standard of living, income taxes which begin at such a point in a man's income as to trench upon the necessities of life, must be abolished. There should be a sweeping reduction in personal income tax rates."

As was said last year, we propose to offer no impediment to drastic income tax reductions by the Dominion Government; rather, we intend to co-operate and assist the Dominion authorities in bringing about much needed tax relief. Therefore, I shall, during the present session, introduce a bill authorizing the suspension of The Income Tax Act of Ontario for the fiscal year 1948-49.

Up to this point, Mr. Speaker, my remarks have been directed to providing a comprehensive account of the Government's stewardship, together with an outline of future policies formulated by this administration. My remarks, concerned as they have been with the problems of provincial finance, were, quite naturally, expressed in terms of money. I should like, Mr. Speaker, for a few minutes to direct the thoughts of honourable members to a mental picture of what our investment and developmental programme holds in store for the people of Ontario. Let us look upon the human side of the scene.

Instead of dollars let us visualize our expenditures as investments in human betterment. The security is ample—the certain rewards will be mass gains for all our people. Look upon the expenditures for highways as efforts to create new arteries of communication permitting the convenient movement of our people and channelling the fruits of their labours from remoter parts of the province to the market places and points of distribution easily accessible to consumers; avenues of travel to encourage the inflow of tourists and visitors from the United States as well as from the other eight provinces of Canada attracted by our hospitable towns, countryside and places rich in historic interest and scenic beauty. Our Hydro-Electric plans for expansion are designed to ensure an adequate supply of power to overtake and satisfy the ever-increasing requirements due to the stepped-up tempo of our economic growth. The labour saving devices made available through a supply of electrical power will go a long way towards bettering farm life. The formulation and initiation of a programme calculated to carry us safely through uncertain and changing economic circumstances will make for better farms, better equipped farm buildings; more homes; improved housing conditions; modern schools; additional and adequate hospital accommodation. All of these may be counted as the hoped-for results of our investment and developmental plans.

From the very first day on which this Government took office, the policy of the administration has been and today is, one based on a high resolve to improve the living conditions, the standards of life, of every man, woman and child in the province. The programme of improvement and development formulated by this administration, the details of which I have given you but a glimpse, is designed to carry the blessings of good government to every home—mansion or cottage—in this province. No one can dispute the truth of this statement. Few will quarrel with our objectives. Some may differ with the ways and means with which we plan to accomplish the goals which I have today attempted to set before you. Once these plans have been approved by this Legislature, I invite and urge each and every citizen of this great Province of Ontario to give wholehearted support to make the fiscal year 1948-49 one of signal achievement.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 4.50 of the clock p.m.

MINING TAX ACT

And the House having met.

Prayers.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

MILK CONTROL ACT

MR. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Drew, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled The Milk Control Act of 1948, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, is it the intention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) to say something about this bill?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Mr. Speaker, I prefer to do that on second reading. It is a very simple bill.

MR. MacLEOD: Thank you.

FUEL SUPPLY ACT

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Fuel Supply Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Mining Tax Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would give us a short explanation of this bill?

HON. MR. FROST: The Mining Tax Act?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, the one the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) just introduced.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the amendments to The Mining Tax Act are those which were outlined in the budget of Friday. The principal amendment is in relation to the tax on natural gas. At the present time there is a small tax on natural gas, and the effect of the amendment is to remove any tax up to $250, which takes all the little drillers and producers out of the picture.

ASSESSMENT ACT

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Scott, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Assessment Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

PUBLIC LANDS ACT

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Dunbar, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Public Lands Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

FORESTRY ACT

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Dunbar, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Forestry Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

INCOME TAX SUSPENSION ACT

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled The Income Tax Suspension Act (Ontario) 1948, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would explain why this legislation is necessary?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, in 1937 or thereabouts, there was introduced into, and passed in this Legislature, the Income Tax Act—I am not just sure of the actual name; but in any event, by the Wartime Suspension Agreement Act, which was passed, I believe, in the Spring of 1942, the operation of that statute was suspended.

The agreement came to an end on March 31, 1947, and automatically that Act would have been revised again but for the Act of last year, which suspended the operation for last year, and the effect of this present Act is to further suspend that Act.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, before Orders of the Day, I beg leave to present to the House the report of the Department of Public Works, Ontario, for the 12 months ending March 31, 1947.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 1st Order.

THE MINING ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 22nd Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 63, An Act to amend The Mining Act. Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Chairman, before we proceed with the committee stage of this bill, I might give a little explanation to hon. members of this House.

This bill was introduced two or three weeks ago. In part, it contains some very routine amendments to the Mining Act. However, Section 160 contained in this very voluminous amendment, is a complete revision of the mining rules, and Section 160 contains no less than 413 sub-sections. It is a very, very lengthy, and a very important section.

Mr. Chairman, as a result of the requests which were made on second reading of this bill some weeks ago, an informal committee was set up, consisting of all hon. members of this House who were interested. The committee met in the Mines library, and we held three or four sessions, and the whole subject was gone over with experts of the Mining Department.

I must say to hon. members of this House, there are many of these sections contained herein which are highly technical, and I would not profess—and I do not think any hon. member of this House would profess—to be an expert and to have other than just a general knowledge and understanding of these sub-sections.

However, I will say we had the advantage of having Mr. Rickaby, the Deputy-Minister of Mines, who is a highly-trained official, also Mr. Tower, the Chief Mines Inspector, and Mr. Sinclair, the Assistant Deputy Minister of Mines, who was, in his day, the Chief Mines Inspector. These gentlemen have had great experience in the whole field of mining operations.

In addition, we had some hon. members of this House among them the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin), who has worked as a practical miner in some of the mines in the north country, as a hoistman.

We have had a number of letters in the course of the last two or three weeks, from labour unions relative to one feature or another in connection with this Act, and I would say, Mr. Chairman, that the Act was gone into with all the thoroughness that could be given to it by a body of laymen, and I think that we have given all the proposed amendments very thorough consideration.

We had at that time a memorandum prepared setting out all the amendments to Section 160, which is the real “$64-section,” and in that we have marked the sections which particularly applied to the Paymaster Mine disaster, and each one of those sections was considered separately.

Perhaps I should say to the hon. members of the House,—repeating what I said on second reading of this bill—this Act is the result of very careful consideration which has been given over a period of some months, in fact, some years, in connection with the whole matter of mines’ regulations.

First of all, we had the advantage of the ordinary revisions of the Act which take place every six or seven years; we had the advantage of the Paymaster Mines Committee, under the chairmanship of Dean Young and some leading scientists, who considered the whole matter of the Paymaster Mine disaster, which, as the hon. members of the House will recall, resulted from the breaking of a rope in that mine some two years ago.

We sent out several hundred copies of this Act to every mine and every mine manager, and I think there were some 200 copies sent out to labour unions, some six or seven months ago, and consideration has been given, I think, to every representation which has been made.

Some of the representations were received after the local committee ceased to sit. Local committees were formed in every mining camp in Ontario; finally they were consolidated into one committee in Toronto, and they considered the whole matter.

The bill introduced in the House has been considered by hon. members interested in this particular Act.

Mr. Chairman, we have to look at this Act from this standpoint; after all, we are laymen; there are many things in this Act which would involve a very great deal of study to understand the technicalities and technical points thoroughly. I think our position is to make sure the Department of Mines has exercised its very best judgment in getting together and taking the advice of the very best technical advisers available. I can assure the hon. members of the House I am satisfied this has been done, and I hope the members of the informal committee who attended its meetings are also satisfied that those who work in the mines of Ontario, in occupations which sometimes are hazardous, are receiving the benefit of the very best protection which can be given to them. I want the hon. members of the House and the members of that committee to feel such is the case.

Mr. Chairman, there is no disposition to hurry the passage of this bill. If there are sections which require further explanation, or points upon which hon. members are not completely satisfied, it is quite easy for us to let this section stand over for further consideration.

However, I think we have reached a position where, unless there are some exceptional cases, we can come to an agreement on the whole situation.

As a result of meetings had, there have been a number of amended bills distributed. I think those who attended the committee meetings have copies of the amended bills, together with a memorandum setting out the changes. For the benefit of the hon. members I will say there have been some changes made, some not particularly extensive, but, nevertheless, all are important in their own way.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Chairman, before we proceed I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) if he will agree to what was suggested at the special meetings; that was to consider the bill not so much by sub-sections, but page by page. That is, the chairman will read out the sections, but in these unofficial meetings we felt it might be better to consider the bill page by page, which would expedite the handling of it. If we consider all of the sub-sections, it might take us considerable time in this committee, but page by page, it gives the hon. members an opportunity to bring up any point they may think of interest on any section on a particular page.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I stated during the informal meetings of the committee, that next year we would set up a mining committee in the House, the same as the committee on agriculture or the committee on education. We will have a mining committee which can be convened to consider these very important and very highly-technical sections, in the event of anything arising. Personally I think that would be a great advance, if we had something of that sort, and the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) has authorized me to say that such a committee will be set up.

In regard to the other point raised by the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett): Section 160 is an enormous section; it covers, I suppose—

MR. GRUMMETT: 90 pages.

HON. MR. FROST: —80 pages. It has a very large number of sub-sections.

In the ordinary course, Section 160 would be called, and it would mean that the whole sub-section would come up for discussion at one time, which would be an absurdity.

The committee discussed this matter and decided when we reached Section 160, the Chairman could call "page 17, page 18, page 19," and so on, which would obviate the necessity of calling each individual sub-section. If any hon. member is interested in any sub-section which appears on any page, it may be dealt with as it arises.

On Section 1.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Would it not be better, Mr. Chairman, to take them in order, one, two, three, four, five and so on, until we reach the large section? I think we had better do that, because one runs into another.

HON. MR. FROST: I think under the rules we have to. The chairman has to call the sections in order, but in relation to Section 160, it contains so many sub-sections, we thought it would be better to call the page. However, sections 1 to 13 may be called.

Sections 1 to 13 inclusive approved.

HON. MR. FROST: Now, Mr. Chairman, will you call the pages?

On page 6.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, on page 6 under "Hours of Labour Underground"—perhaps I am incorrect, but I had a feeling that was going to be deleted, Mr. Chairman, and given over to the jurisdiction of the Department of Labour.

HON. MR. FROST: The entire Section 153, running down to the centre of page 8, was a matter which was debated in committee. I have some amendments to suggest, but I am quite prepared to agree to having this section stand over if the hon. members prefer it. The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is not here today, and I would like to have him here for any debate in connection with this.

The situation in connection with Section 153 is this: This section was passed a great many years ago, before there was any 8-hour legislation in Ontario, and I must admit I am doubtful of the necessity of this section. It seems to me it should fall under the general labour laws of the province, and there is no longer any necessity for it.

Does the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) move the deletion of this section?

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, I would be guided by what has been said here by the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost), and wait until the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is in his place.

HON. MR. FROST: I have certain amendments to suggest in connection with this.

On page 7 you will notice sub-section "a" at the top of the page. I suggest an amendment to strike out all of the words of this section after "holiday."

Amendment approved.

HON. MR. FROST: In sub-section 2 (b) to strike out all the words of that sub-section, after "hours," and to strike out all the words after the word "shaft."

Amendments approved.

On page 8, that which would be sub-section 4, to be struck out entirely. That, in effect, leaves the section as it was before these revisions were attempted, and this would also strike out the powers of the Lieutenant-Governor in those "great emergencies," to which reference is made in sub-section 4, but which have never occurred, and which appear to us to be superfluous.

We could amend the section to that extent, leaving it exactly as it was, with the exception of sub-section 4, and the matter could be allowed to stand, if any hon. member prefers that.

We are anxious to do nothing to interfere with the protection to the working man, and if you think it would be better to allow this section to stand just as it was before these revisions were attempted, I am prepared to do that.

In the alternative, if some of the hon. members would prefer to have the section repealed entirely, I would be prepared to take advice from the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) on that point.

I am now in the hands of the hon. members.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I think this is a very important section. I have received several communications from different union organizations in my riding. My riding is one of those vitally affected by mining operations, and I have received several communications in which the union organizations protest the incorporation of the 8-hour day extending from the time the men arrive at their place of work. In other words, their desire is the old "collar-to-collar" arrangement. The union representatives urge that nothing be put into the Act which provides for a man's time to start it should be from the time he arrives at his place of employment, that is, at the minehead or the shaft head, and not at the time he might arrive at the face of the workings, where he may be employed. It may take him a half an hour or three-quarters of an hour to reach the working face.

I am not exactly sure which would be the better procedure, but I am rather of the opinion if we left this section out altogether it would be more satisfactory to the working men.

This Act was drafted many years ago, prior to the time of certain regulations laid down by the Department of Labour. The Act at that time had to have certain regulations incorporated in it which would protect the health and working ability of the men.

At that time there was no such thing as an 8-hour day, and-so-forth. That was why these regulations were put in, more or less as health and safety measures.

Other Acts have taken over that job, and to incorporate this section in the Act, would cause the working men in the mining areas to feel we are giving an opportunity to the mine operators to say, "Well, here it is in the Act; you will have to commence your working period from the time you reach the working face."

The majority of contracts—practically all of them in my area—have a "collar-to-collar" provision. It is the fear of some of the union representatives that to carry this provision over into the new Act will destroy what they have already won, and for that reason, Mr. Chairman, I would prefer to hear what the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) has to say, and also the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), and perhaps we can argue this question at a later date.

HON. MR. FROST: Let us withhold the section then. It is on the bottom of page 6, on page 7, and at the top of page 8.

MR. GRUMMETT: All of the portion sub-titled "Hours of Labour Underground."

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, although the section is going to be held over, I would like to get some clarification from the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) as to why he made these particular amendments. I would have thought if he was going to leave them in the Act, those are the very sections which ought to remain. What is the logic of making the amendments proposed?

HON. MR. FROST: In the first place, when the original amendments were introduced, to bring this section into line with the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, it, as you know, allowed some latitude in the 8-hour provision. I think the Act now is interpreted that you must not exceed 48 hours in a week, but various industries are not held too strictly to the hours which are worked, provided they do not exceed 120 hours in a year, overtime.

This was introduced as a safety measure, and I think it was the feeling of the committee that 8 hours was the safety limit which a man could work underground, and there should be no lee-way from that. If we are going to keep to that, we have to revert back to Section 2 as originally proposed, and not allow a man to work 48 hours underground, working 10 hours on certain days.

However, let it stand over, and we can see what will be done.

Pages 6 and 7 (as amended) approved.

Page 8 (except the first three paragraphs) to 16 inclusive approved.

On page 17.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, in regard to that page, I would like to propose an amendment in addition to paragraph "C" of Section 5. This was originally proposed by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin).

I move that a new section "C" be added, to read:

"Suitable metal containers for the temporary disposal of inflammable refuse such as scrap paper, oily waste, rags and other similar materials, shall be provided at all shaft stations, underground shops, lunch rooms and buildings or enclosures necessary for the housing of machinery or equipment or stores, and such containers shall be regularly emptied and the material so accumulated brought to the surface and disposed of in a suitable manner."

HON. MR. FROST: I see a minor change is proposed, in connection with sub-section 16 and 17. They should be transposed, so that 17 becomes 16 and 16 becomes 17.

Page 18 (as amended) and 19 approved.

On page 20.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, on sub-section 24; we had some discussion at the committee meeting about the exits for storage rooms for explosives. I think it was suggested that the storage rooms for explosives be arranged so there would be two exits.

HON. MR. FROST: We did discuss that, but the practical features of it were almost impossible. In some cases, as the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) knows, an explosive storage house may not be any more than sort of a vault, not larger than the table in the chamber, therefore, a second door was not practicable at all.

On the other hand, if the place where explosives are stored is much larger, it might be practicable to have the doors, but to put that into the Act might lead to confusion, and therefore, as the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) will recall, we dropped it.

I think the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) mentioned that at the time, but we felt it would not be practicable to do it.

Pages 20 to 31 inclusive approved.

On page 32.

MR. CARLIN: Mr. Chairman, page 32, sub-section 83. I know it is going to be rather difficult to find what is "dangerous zone," but I am just wondering if some thought should not be given to that.

HON. MR. FROST: Where is that?

MR. CARLIN: Page 32, sub-section 83. It states here "Dangerous places would be in connection with the igniting of fuses, and after the blasting." There are many other dangerous places underground which could be easily designated as "dangerous places."

HON. HAROLD SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): On sub-section 83?

MR. CARLIN: No, it is above 83. It is sub-section 80, on page 32. It refers to the fact that no one man work alone when setting off a blast. There are other places underground which are equally as dangerous as blasting sites, and I wonder if we could not designate those places.

I know it would be rather difficult. That was agreed upon in the committee, but there are certain dangerous places underground. In proof of that, we had an accident in Kirkland Lake Gold, to which I think I drew the attention of the House, where a man was seriously injured while working alone, and was only by accident discovered in the chute.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I recognize and appreciate the point my hon. friend (Mr. Carlin) has raised, but the situation is that in committee it was suggested that perhaps it could be made a rule underground that men should always travel in pairs, at least, that is, there would be two men present at all times.

When we began to discuss it from a practical standpoint it was completely out of the picture; it was impossible. There was a discussion on different operations which are carried on underground, which are quite safe and quite proper for one man to perform alone. I remember the Assistant Deputy Minister, Mr. Sinclair, giving several instances of that.

The problem gets down designing a place which is more dangerous than the ordinary place. In the Act they have attempted to do that. In blasting operations, for instance, according to sub-section 2, the men must be together. There cannot be any deviation from that, but there are lots of places where deviation is not only permissible, but is common sense and reasonable.

We in committee considered that matter very fully, and I would say at the moment it is beyond human ingenuity to provide more protection than we have in this one. I would say to the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) that as study has been given to this, let the matter stand, and if there are places where any member can devise and describe situations where two men should be together, if you advise the department, they will give it consideration. There is, as you know, a regulation section in this section itself which permits the Chief Mines Inspector to make regulations, and we will certainly give consideration to any suggestion which may be made not only by any hon. member of this House, but anybody else who could suggest anything in that relation which would give more protection than we have at the present time.

On Section 20:

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, I am not rising to speak on Section 20, but I would like to say a word or two before the bill is finally disposed of. I realize we are going to come back to it again, and that we are going to get expert opinions from the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). After the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) finishes, it is not always easy to get a word in, so possibly the time to speak is now.

I would just like to say, as one of the members who sat in that committee, it was a very gratifying experience, and I want to very warmly commend the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) for giving such hon. members of this House as were interested, the opportunity of sitting down with the technical experts and discussing this very comprehensive Mining Act.

I would like also to commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) for the suggestion he put forward in the committee, and repeated in this House, that a permanent committee on mining will be added to the standing committees of this Legislature, but I think it would be most unfortunate if the Mining Committee operated in the same way as the Labour Committee of this Legislature operates—a committee which is set up every year, but which has not met once in two years. That really is a scandalous state of affairs. I hope, now that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has given his assent to the establishment of this Mining Committee, the miners' unions and the operators will be made aware of the fact that this committee exists and that the leaders of the miners' unions and the mine operators will feel free to come before that committee when the House is in session and make proposals for improving The Mining Act.

I am satisfied, and I am sure all other members of the committee are satisfied, that it is the desire of the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) and the technical experts in his department to give the Province of Ontario the best mining act in the Dominion. I am quite satisfied of that. But, after all, the men who work underground learn from their own experience of things that can be done to strengthen and improve the safety measures and devices that operate underground, and if, as I suggest, the unions which took the trouble to make representations to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) are informed that this committee has come into being, and they may at each session appear to make their representations for improvement in the Act, I feel that will be a great step forward.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I want to say again, in my opinion, the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) has done a real service in making it possible for hon. members to sit in with him and his experts, and in coming forward with a suggestion which I feel sure will contribute greatly to strengthening The Mining Act in future years on the basis of experience.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Chairman, I just wish to say a few words on the question of the manner in which this Act was dealt with. I feel that it is our duty to express our thanks to the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) for giving us an opportunity to meet with his experts in an informal way and go over the bill. In my opinion, that is the best and most proper method to consider all legislation. We ought to have the advice of all of those who know what the measure is about, and in this instance, we were given that opportunity and I wish to extend to the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) my personal thanks and the thanks of those of my group who were in attendance at these informal meetings. I also wish to extend to the officials of the department, that is, the experts who sat in with us on every occasion and were quite ready and willing to give us the very best advice. They assisted us a great deal in understanding this complex problem.

This is a very important bill, and having had the opportunity of discussing it with the experts in the presence of the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost), I feel that the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) is due a little thanks for the way he has presented this bill, had it considered, and brought it forward for consideration by the whole House.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, first of all, it is very good of my hon. friends to express the appreciation they have. I can assure them they should not extend any appreciation to me, it is to my officials that any good words should go, because I must admit that although I have been over these sections before, the committee was very instructive to me also.

I would say to my hon. friend for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) that it is the right, I believe, under the Rules of the House, that any hon. member of this House may call together any members' committees—I think that is the case, however, I may have to stand corrected on that, because I am not sure.

However, I would assure hon. members opposite that as far as the Department of Mines is concerned, my officials and everybody are most anxious, that hon. members should feel that the door is wide open there.

After all, it is a great department which deals with actual operation of mines, and if the individual miner could feel that he has a department which is there for his protection and that he has every opportunity of going to that department and making suggestions and having them considered, is I think a very desirable state of affairs, and I can only say that the door is always open there and if any hon. member, or any member of the public or any person interested in mining, has anything to suggest, let us have it at any time, and we will give it consideration.

Sections 20 and 21 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I beg to inform the House that the hon. the Lieutenant-Governor, having been informed of the subject matter of the proposed resolutions, and recommends them to the consideration of the House.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Resolved,

That there shall be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund such amounts as may be required under sections 5 and 6 of Bill No. 125, An Act to assist the Development of Housing Accommodation.

Resolution approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise and report progress on one bill, and a certain resolution adopted by the House.

Motion approved.

The House resumes, Mr. Murphy in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole begs to report progress on Bill No. 63, and a special resolution, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair, and that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion approved.

The House in Committee of Supply, Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Vote 1, page 7, Department of Agriculture.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Chairman, and Honourable Members of the House: Before going on to a consideration of the details of the estimates which have been presented to this House for the Department of Agriculture, I would like to speak, at not too great length, on the activities and plans of this department, and on the position in which the farmers of Ontario find themselves today and their prospects for the future. May I repeat what I have said in this House on previous occasions when I have had the privilege of submitting the estimates of my department, that it is a real joy to me to have the opportunity of serving the farmers of this province, and to develop plans and policies which are aimed at improving the conditions under which they are carrying on their most important task of food production. Wherever I go throughout the province, meeting groups of farmers and talking to them as individuals, I take pride in the fact that, regardless of politics, they express the highest appreciation of what this Government has done and is doing to improve the standards of Ontario agriculture, and make it a more profitable calling for those who are engaged in it.

First of all, however, I wish to place on the records of this House an expression of the great loss which agriculture in this province has sustained in recent months in the untimely passing of two of its most valued civil servants in the Department of Agriculture, Ray Green, who was agricultural representative for the County of Oxford for a period of 34 years, and Louis E. O'Neill, Commissioner of Livestock for the Province of Ontario, and an outstanding member of the staff of the department for 30 years.

The value of the contribution which Ray Green made to the agriculture of Oxford County, and to the province as a whole, can never be measured in dollars and cents. The results of his work have been widely felt, far beyond the boundaries of the county he served, into all parts of the province. I question very much if there has been any man in the agricultural representative service who has done more to promote farm prosperity than Ray Green did during his lifetime of self-sacrificing work. His passing left a great gap in our service, and those of us who were privileged to be associated with him in his work feel a great sense of personal loss.

Louis O'Neill was also a man who gave his whole life to the Province of Ontario in a very real sense, for he was hard at work in his office up to the very day of his death. He was known all over Canada, and throughout the United States, as an outstanding authority on all matters pertaining to livestock. In many directions, he initiated and carried out policies of livestock improvement which have been responsible to a large extent for the excellent position in which our livestock industry finds itself today. Louis O'Neill never spared himself in his labours on behalf of our farmers, and he enjoyed a popularity given to few men in the public service to enjoy, and he deserved it. To say that he is sadly missed in the department is a great understatement, and his loss will long be felt in the circles in which he was for many years a prominent figure. The Province of Ontario as a whole is the poorer for the passing of these two splendid civil servants to whom I have the privilege of paying tribute today.

I want to tell this House that there are no more hard-working men in the civil service than those of my department. They work long hours and without sparing themselves. I have mentioned these two have passed away. At the present time, three others of the staff, two of them agricultural representatives and the other a director of one of the branches are off duty with illness which I think can be attributed to their hard work. And across this House I see a man who is another example of how the men on the staff sacrifice their health by devotion to their duty. I refer to the member for Elgin, who was one of our hardest working agricultural representatives and suffered a long illness. I went to see him twice when he was in hospital, and did not think he would live long, but we are glad to see him back, well restored to health and strength.

In the Department of Agriculture we have been keeping on with the thought which we originated in 1943—that of interfering with the farmers as little as possible. We believe Ontario farmers are more capable of carrying on their own business than anyone else, and that the less interference there is from Government, the better it is for the farmers and the better it is for government.

One of the most hopeful features in our agriculture of today is the development of Junior Farmer activities throughout the whole province. A few months ago, Miss Margaret Watson, of Kleinburg, a farm girl, wrote and composed the music for a new Junior Farmer Song. That song starts off with the words "The Junior Farmers Everywhere are Marching Right Along" and in that sentence she caught the spirit of the whole Junior Farmer movement. In its educational programme of conferences, short courses, informative talks and addresses, as well as practical demonstrations, the Junior Farmer movement is making a great contribution to the development of better trained, more skilful and more scientific farmers for the future. I can remember how we used to say that Ontario's agricultural wealth came from the top six inches of the soil. That is not good enough today. In these days of scientific farming, we need the top six inches of the soil, plus the top six inches of the man—we need to mix brains with our soil to get the best results out of it. So in the Junior Farmer movement we are cultivating the top six inches of the men who will be the farmers of the future. These young people in our Junior Farmer organization are bringing to light qualities and capabilities we never knew they possessed, through their participation in its programme. They are showing great qualities of leadership, and, what is even more important, a willingness and a desire to accept the responsibilities that are placed on their shoulders and discharge them conscientiously and efficiently. With such a group of young farm people looking ahead to the future, we have every reason to look forward with hope and optimism to what lies in store for our agriculture.

Another of the bright spots we can see in our agricultural life in Ontario is the splendid work which is being done by the Women's Institutes of Ontario. Last June at the Ontario Agricultural College, 12,000 members of the Institutes gathered for the celebration of their 50th Anniversary, and never have I seen a more impressive or inspiring gathering. These women are doing great things for the betterment of rural living in Ontario. As a tribute to Mrs. Hoodless, the founder of the Institutes, they have established a Memorial Scholarship Fund, with which to provide scholarships for girls from farm homes to have the training given at the Institute. I want to thank, publicly in this House, the members of the Women's Institutes for the great work they are doing and will continue to do.

As Minister of Agriculture, I have been greatly encouraged by the hopeful and optimistic outlook of our farmers and those who are leaders in the agricultural industry. Much of this is due to the close working partnership which has been established between the research scientists in our agricultural institutions and the farmers on the land. The spirit of co-operation which has been developed in connection with research work for the benefit of agriculture has been most encouraging. For instance, not long ago a committee from the potato growers of Ontario came to see me and asked for a programme of research into potato scab, with a view to bringing it under control. They were not only anxious to have this programme started, but were willing to put some of their own money into the project to help it along. That problem, which has cost the potato growers of the province a lot of money, has been turned over to the Ontario Agricultural College, and the research project to deal with it is now under way.

I would like to mention one other research project. We have been greatly concerned at the great decline in the growing of clover, alfalfa and alsike seeds in this province. This used to be an important part of our farming operations, but in recent years we have not been getting the yields we used to have, and the growing of these seed crops has declined very badly. We felt there was a reason for that, and that something had gone out of our soils to cause the failure in production of clover, alfalfa and alsike seeds. So our research men at Guelph have undertaken a project to find out the reason, and see what can be done to remedy the situation, to put back into the soil those things which have disappeared and which are essential for the production of high yields of forage crop seeds.

It will be noted that dairy products provide the greatest single source of farm income. Thus it is natural that the department should devote a great deal of attention to the dairying branch of our industry. Speaking in general terms, it is the objective of the department to assist farmers to increase their returns from dairying by helping them to lower their costs of production through the encouragement of better breeding and better feeding methods. The work of the department in this connection is directed along several lines.

In the forefront of the department's programme for livestock is the expansion of artificial insemination units to all parts of the province. As I stated in this House a year ago, artificial insemination has now passed beyond the experimental stage, and is recognized as the quickest and most economical method of improving the quality and the production of our dairy herds. It is the aim of the department to have units established at strategic points throughout the province, so that the service may be made available to all dairymen who are interested in improving their herds by this type of breeding programme.

Last session, an Act to Control Artificial Insemination was passed by the Legislature. Since then, three units have been licensed. One at Maple, in York County, provides service for the owners of Holstein cattle in York, Peel, Halton, Ontario and Simcoe Counties. This unit had a banner year in 1947, providing service for just under 7,000 cows. In all probability, Ayrshire and Jersey bulls will be added in 1948, in order to broaden the scope of the unit, and the directors anticipate that 20,000 cows will be serviced by it this year.

A centre for Eastern Ontario was established at Kemptville and began operations on July 1, 1947. This centre is providing service to local units in all counties east of Frontenac. Ten local units were serviced in 1947, and three additional units have affiliated this year.

The third licensed unit is situated in the County of Essex and started operations in January. It is organized in such a way that service can be extended to neighbouring counties, and it is probable that farmers in Kent County will receive service from Essex this year.

Two other centres for artificial insemination are at present in process of organization. One will have headquarters in the Belleville area, and will service the district between Kemptville and Maple. The other centre will have headquarters near Hamilton, and will provide service for six counties in and around the Niagara Peninsula. All of the units are using a high type of pure-bred bulls, of proven milk production strains, and are operating at a service fee of $5.00, with service for either grade or pure-bred cattle at the same rate. They are also prepared to provide service for a number of breeds if the demand justifies such action.

The effect of this programme of encouragement of artificial insemination cannot be over-estimated. It is going to be very effective in lowering the costs of milk production by increasing the production per cow and per herd for those who take advantage of it. It is particularly gratifying that the dairy farmers of the province have taken hold of it with enthusiasm, and are co-operating whole-heartedly in its development, because they have faith in the future of their industry and faith in what the department is doing to help them.

It is a matter for great satisfaction to me, personally, and as a member of the Government, that we can approach a consideration of agriculture in Ontario with optimism and great hope for the future. One thing that has always amazed me is the power of our agriculture to overcome difficulties and troubles, to rise above the handicaps of adverse weather conditions and continue, year in and year out, its important job of producing food for our own people and for many other countries of the world. Last year was a bad year for weather. Heavy rains at the time of seeding interfered with our crop production and left the farmers short of feed grains for their livestock. In spite of that, gross farm income in the province was never before as high as it was in 1947. For last year, the gross farm income of Ontario farmers reached the record total of $546,300,000, as compared with $472,000,000 in 1946 and $453,000,000 in 1945. This must be regarded as a highly gratifying result in view of the fact that crop conditions were as bad as they were, and is due entirely to the great diversity of our agriculture, which makes it possible for one branch of agriculture to make up for poor results in some other branch.

It is significant, in showing Ontario's place in the agriculture of the whole Dominion, that of the entire farm income of close to $2,000,000,000 for the whole of Canada, Ontario contributed 28 per cent., and exceeded the second province in the list, Saskatchewan, by a margin of $110,000,000. So that not only was this record of farm income the highest ever reached by the farmers of Ontario, but it was the highest of any province in the Dominion.

There is a definite reason for this predominance enjoyed by Ontario in agriculture. It is the direct result of our diversity in farming, and of the fact that the foundation of our agriculture is livestock and livestock products. Out of the total farm income of $546,000,000, no less than $393,000,000, or 72 per cent. of the total, is derived from livestock and their products. I never like wearying this House with too many figures, but I think it is worth while to place on the record some details of what our livestock industry has meant to our farmers in the way of cash income. The breakdown of the income from our livestock industry is as follows:

Dairy Products$123,276,000
Hogs 106,933,000
Cattle and Calves 80,088,000
Sheep and Lambs 2,788,000
Poultry 32,194,000
Eggs 45,436,000
Horses 1,965,000
Total	$393,432,000

By concentrating on livestock production as the major branch of their farming activities, the farmers of this province made a great contribution to a higher standard of living for the people of our own province, as well as in other countries of the world. It has been proven by medical science that the peoples of the world who consume the greatest quantities of meat, milk and eggs enjoy the highest standard of living and have the longest expectancy of life. One can see this in the conditions which prevail in countries where the people depend on rice or other cereals as their main diet. Our people in Ontario are fortunate in that their needs for food are met by an agriculture which directs so much of its activity to the production of livestock and livestock products.

Our dairymen in Ontario have been suffering heavy losses every year on account of Bang's Disease and mastitis. Ever since I became Minister of Agriculture in 1943 I have been concerned about these losses, because they had a serious effect in increasing costs of production. In recent years, it has been definitely established that calfhooed vaccination, if properly conducted, was effective as a method of establishing immunity to Bang's Disease and bringing it under control. We gave Dr. MacNabb and his associates at the Ontario Veterinary College the signal to go ahead with research into this disease, and to establish a province-wide programme of calfhooed vaccination. This programme is being taken up eagerly by farmers in all parts of the province. In most cases, calfhooed vaccination is being organized on a township basis, with every farmer in the township having his calves vaccinated. Officers of the department are active everywhere in organizing this work, and the vaccine is being supplied free of charge by the Ontario Veterinary College. We are satisfied that by a general adoption by all of our farmers of calfhooed vaccination under the department's policy, this disease will be reduced so that it will no longer be a constant menace and threat to dairying, but will become only a minor nuisance until it is completely eradicated. And our farmers who are conscious of what we are doing are looking forward hopefully to the day when they need no longer worry about Bang's Disease.

Mastitis does not lend itself to control on an area basis as does Bang's Disease, but our research men at the Ontario Veterinary College have made great progress in coping with this disease. Working in close co-operation with veterinarians throughout the province, they have developed at the College at Guelph a new method of treatment which is giving very encouraging results.

It is also gratifying to be able to report that T.B. testing of cattle is now being revived, and has been instituted in a number of counties under the restricted area plan. Oxford, Perth and Hastings, three counties in which dairy cattle predominate, are being tested at the present time. We are glad to see this work again under way, and it is our hope that it be extended as rapidly as possible, in order that the cattle owners of the whole province may soon share in the benefits enjoyed by those who live in the counties that have been tested.

All of this work with animal diseases is already producing results, and will produce even greater results as it is developed, and will have a highly satisfactory result in increasing the returns of the farmers of Ontario from their herds of cattle.

Our plans for 1948 call for the initiation of a Cow Testing Project. While we know that artificial insemination of cattle can be used for rapid improvement of dairy herds, the actual results of that policy can only be determined by a definite plan of testing the production ability of the original animals and their daughters. If the daughters are not an improvement on their dams, both in type and production, artificial insemination programmes are not doing what they were intended to do. The most effective way of eliminating the possibility of failure in that respect is through the introduction of a practical plan of cow testing, and I am pleased to announce to the House that some comprehensive plan of this nature will be introduced during the present year. Hogs constitute the second largest source of farm income in Ontario. In 1947, Ontario farmers marketed over 2,000,000 hogs, or about 44 per cent. of the total for the Dominion. This province is the stabilizing influence in Canada's hog industry, and is the principal link in maintaining the British market for Canadian hogs. If that position is to be maintained in the future, we must have stability in production and high quality in the product, and it is vital to our future in agriculture that it should be maintained.

Last year, the department initiated a policy on hog production, to demonstrate production methods of bringing down costs and keeping up quality at the same time. Under this policy, 55 co-operating farmers, selected by the County Hog Producers' Associations, are keeping official records of their hog operations, under close supervision of the officials of the department. These men have been selected because they were considered representative hog producers in their respective areas. They have been permitted to follow their own methods of feeding.

The official results of the first year of their operations will not be available until July 1, but casual observations of the inspectors lead to the conclusion that there is a wide difference in costs of production, and that certain methods are better than others. For instance, a summary of six months' operations shows that the average cost of the feed—present prices—needed to maintain a sow for one year is around $85. If the sow raises seventeen pigs, the cost of producing each pig up to time of weaning is $5. If on the other hand a sow raises only ten pigs, the share of her cost charged against each pig is $8.50. So the co-operator who is successful in raising the larger number of pigs starts feeding operations at an advantage of $3.50 per pig by having raised them to that stage. Returns for the first six months show that 43 per cent. of the hogs graded "A", 39 per cent. graded "B1" and 18 per cent. were in lower grades. That is a better average than the rest of the Dominion can show, but we are going, by using the results of this project as widely as possible, to raise that percentage of Grade "A" hogs.

These and all other significant factors brought out by this hog production project will be widely publicized, and made available to all our farmers, in the hope of bringing about a general adoption of the methods which are proven most successful in promoting greater profits from hog production. Once these methods and factors have been established, we are confident that there will be greater stability in our production, a substantial improvement in quality and a lower cost of production which should ensure us a steady overseas market for our surplus hogs at satisfactory prices.

The department is assisting farmers in improving the quality of their hogs through the medium of a new Boar Rental Policy established last year. Under this policy, good boars are made available to clubs organized in any part of the province, on a nominal rental basis. To ensure that top quality animals are placed in these clubs, purchases are confined to boars of Advanced Registry Stock, that is, stock that has been tested and found satisfactory on the basis of performance from standpoint of the number of pigs produced, rate of gains and quality of carcass. By this policy, there will be a general improvement in the quality of our breeding stock, and in the pigs which have to be fed to produce the top grades of bacon for shipment overseas.

In 1947, Ontario's surplus beef was exported to Great Britain, as has been the case since 1942. There has been a tendency to treat the British market as one of convenience, in other words, as a place for selling any beef that is not required at home. As a result of this trend, Ontario consumers have enjoyed the best quality beef produced in this country. In the years ahead, however, quality will be a big factor in determining export markets, because buyers will be in a position to pick and choose, and Canadians may be forced to consume more of the lower quality product at home. So the objective of the department with relation to beef cattle is to improve quality so as to reduce the proportion of low quality animals being sent to market. As a means of improving the quality of our beef cattle in Ontario, the department last year instituted a "Bull Premium Policy" to encourage the use of the best type beef breed sires throughout the province. Under this policy, generous financial assistance is available to organized clubs purchasing approved bulls of the beef breeds, and I am happy to say that several clubs in the province have already taken advantage of that policy, and are using a very fine type of beef bull in their breeding operations.

There is one more factor of great importance to our livestock produce—Ontario's dairy cattle are still in great demand in other parts of the world as foundation breeding stock. Last year, over 30,000 head of dairy breeding stock were shipped from this province to the United States. Several large shipments were also made to South America. All of these sales augment our supply of badly needed American dollars. These outside buyers like our dairy cattle because they are healthy and are productive. It is our intention to keep them that way, through vigorous promotion of the policies which are now in effect, or which may be introduced from time to time, in order that our producers can continue to enjoy the benefits of these markets. As long as Ontario's farmers maintain good livestock, they will have a ready market for their animals, regardless of whether prices are high or low, and there is a bright outlook ahead for all of those who are doing a good job as livestock producers.

Dairy cows require large quantities of roughage to give maximum milk production. Because of this, it has been shown that milk production costs can be reduced to the greatest extent by increasing the production of high quality roughage in the form of luxuriant pastures for summer feeding, and to provide well-cured, good quality hay for feeding during the winter months. It has been the policy of the department to promote the production of such pastures. Hay and pasture crops in Ontario occupy nearly one half of the cleared farm land in the province, and they provide the most economical source of feed for our livestock. In the last three years, a great work has been done in pasture improvement.

The long-term pasture project of the department, working in co-operation with the Ontario Crop Improvement Association was undertaken in 1944. Its objective was to direct attention to every phase of pasture improvement, including seeding, management, seed mixtures, comparative yields from different types of pastures and costs. In this pasture project, carried through over the years from 1944 to 1947, improved pasture plots for demonstration purposes were established in each township in old Ontario, nearly 400 of them. They have proven very clearly that high quality pastures will increase milk production and lower the costs of producing it. In the year 1946, some 32 dairy farm co-operators in the pasture project kept definite records. These showed that the average milk production per acre on improved pastures was 3,820 pounds, while on the check plot of ordinary pastures it was 2,759 pounds, an increase of a little more than half a ton of milk per acre by using improved pastures.

That is a great thing for the farmers of Ontario. It has made them more pasture-conscious than ever before, because they now see that they can make more money for themselves by having improved, long-term pastures, and they are going right ahead putting down these pastures, once again, because they have faith in the future of their industry, and believe that it will repay them rich dividends in the years to come.

Some interesting things were learned from this pasture project. It was noticed that in some cases the increase on returns was much greater than in others. It was believed that soil and pasture management was important in securing the best results. So last year we arranged to take a number of samples from these pastures, picked at random throughout the province, and analyse them. This was done, and samples were taken on some 30 farms in different sections of the province. All of these plots were seeded in the same year, with the same seed mixture used and the same amount of fertilizer applied. I want to place on the record the results of the analyses made, because they provide very significant information:

The significant thing about this analysis was the wide variation in protein, calcium and phosphorus in the samples, in spite of the fact that they were planted at the same time, the same seed mixtures and the same amount of the same fertilizers used. Protein content varied all the way from 10.1 per cent. to 27.43 per cent. Calcium varied from 0.32 per cent. to 1.20 per cent. and phosphorus from 0.27 per cent. to 0.54 per cent. This showed the importance of soil fertility in the feeding value of pastures. Every farmer in this House knows that the feeding value of pasture depends on its content of protein, calcium and phosphorus. So when we received the results of this test, we decided to do something about it through the Soils Department of the O.A.C. at Guelph. The men in that department are now going ahead with a research project to find out what is lacking in the soils which produced the low content of protein, calcium and phosphorus, so as to tell the farmers what to do to remedy this condition. This will, we believe, provide one more means whereby our farmers can lower their costs of production and make more money for themselves.

A new pasture project is being undertaken this year. The purpose of this is to demonstrate to our farmers that production on many unworked fields can be increased, and to study methods of improving unworked, permanent pastures. So far, the pasture work we have carried out has proven conclusively three things:

1. The importance of quantity and quality in pastures, per acre.
2. How to have better pastures throughout the entire growing season.
3. That cost of production of meat and milk can be definitely lowered by the use of good pasture.

I want to pay tribute to the Ontario Crop Improvement Association for its wonderful co-operation and assistance in these projects. This association is doing a great work for improvement of all types of field crops, and has won a reputation for itself which has gone far beyond the boundaries of Ontario and Canada. For instance, just the other day we received in the department, from the Royal Agricultural College of Sweden, a request for copies of all papers and addresses given at the recent annual convention of the association. That shows the importance which is attached to its work by the agricultural authorities of other countries.

During the last year, we have come to recognize the serious situation in our position with reference to supplies of feed grain for the livestock producers of Ontario. Our livestock men have become far too dependent on shipments of Western feed grain, and that became very apparent last fall when ceilings were taken off feed grain at a time when there was a short supply. The farmers themselves have decided to remedy that situation. Through the Ontario Crop Improvement Association and its branches in every county and district, they have set an objective of 200,000,000 bushels of feed grain to be grown in Ontario in 1948. This is 50,000,000 bushels more than the 10-year average of grain grown in Ontario, and about the annual amount of Western feed grain shipped into Ontario. Our farmers believe they can reach this objective, and given favourable weather conditions, I am confident they will. They have taken hold of this challenge earnestly and seriously, because they see in increased production of feed grains on their own farms—which is the cheapest kind of grain they can use for their livestock, a definite means of lowering their costs of production and increasing their own returns.

The marketing of farm products has always been a matter of great concern to me. It has always been my idea that we should do all we can to see that our products are marketed in the best possible condition, so as to secure the best possible price. When I was Minister of Agriculture before, I started a system of cold storage plants, with one object in view, that of improving the marketing of our farm products. We started the use of grading machines, with the same object of better marketing. In 1930, when we shipped apples to England, if there was a good market, and the apples arrived in good shape, the growers received a fair price. If they arrived on a falling market, and in poor shape, they did not receive enough to pay the freight. By 1934, all that had been changed. Through the use of grading machines and cold storage, the buyer in England knew that if he bought a barrel of apples of a certain grade, he would receive exactly what he paid for, with so many apples of a certain size in every barrel. The farmer was able to bargain for the sale of his apples. Cables would come from Andy Fulton, our representative in England, to the men in Ontario, so that the grower would know how much he would be paid for his apples at the cold storage plant. We had also marketing representatives at Winnipeg, Montreal and in the Maritimes at certain times of the year. These men were placed there, not only to sell farm products, but to report back to us on the condition in which the products arrived, and make suggestions as to the needs of these markets.

In 1935, that splendid system of marketing arrangements which we had made disappeared completely when there was a change of government.

Now all our exports are controlled by Ottawa. We can ship nothing from Ontario to Great Britain or the United States without an export permit from Ottawa. I have asked whether we might have an export permit to ship 5,000,000 pounds of bacon and 5,000,000 pounds of cheese to the United States as an experiment, so that if these controls come off, we might have information as to the difficulties to be overcome to get into that market.

We are extremely busy making plans and preparations for the time when controls on export will be taken off, so that the farmers, with government assistance until they have become self-sustaining, can send men, as we did in 1930, to open markets in Britain, the United States, the Western Provinces and Montreal and the Maritimes, and to any other place where there is a market for our farm products. Today we are shipping 4,000 cars of turnips a year to the United States from Western Ontario. I am convinced that quality could be multiplied many times over if we had proper marketing agencies in the country to the south.

Probably the greatest need of our farmers in marketing has been the need for proper food terminal market facilities. These are now coming. The land has been purchased, graded and tile drained, and the plans are drawn for a terminal market that will be second to none on the North American continent. This will cheapen food for every consumer in the province, and will help the farmer who every now and then has to dump his products in the fields. Let me illustrate. In 1946, in Essex County alone, 1,000 tons of cabbage and 24,000 dozen heads of lettuce were plowed under because it was not worth while to harvest them at the prices being paid. This year we cannot buy them at any price. Last year, tons and tons of parsnips were left to rot in the fields at this time, and today they are selling at $6 a bushel, which is far too dear to the consumer. If the farmer knows that through the food terminal he will get a fair price, he will grow crops sufficient to meet all our needs, and the consumers will be assured of ample food supplies at fair prices.

Another thing that is important is that farmers should have some definite information on costs of production. There is no such thing as the absolute cost of anything grown in Ontario. In one part, wheat may be grown at a cost of $1 a bushel, and in another part it might cost $1.50 a bushel. That is true of every product. But we can arrive at what would be a fair cost of production for the good farmer for that part of the province in which he lives. This may help to improve the methods of the lower category farmers when they find out how the better farmers can reduce their costs. So we are planning to establish a Costs Branch in the Department of Agriculture, to work out these costs of production for various products in the different sections of the province, and I know that this will be welcomed by the farmers of this province.

I like the way they fixed prices in England during the war. They did it on a cost of production basis. For instance, when the war began, they found that the cost of producing eggs was 4 shillings and sixpence, or about $1.08 per dozen. So the government agreed to pay the farmers 4 shillings and sixpence a dozen for all the eggs produced. I like that method much better than the system of having ceiling prices on foods as we have done in this country.

The situation throughout the world today is such that for a long time to come our farmers will have an assured market for all they can produce. The world is more short of food than at any previous time in modern history, and that shortage is going to continue. The population of the world is growing more rapidly than its capacity to produce food to feed the people of all nations. Medical science has made tremendous progress in saving lives; engineering science has brought under control the disastrous floods which used to take thousands of lives, and, on top of that, higher standards of nutrition are being demanded by people who were formerly always on a starvation level. With that world picture before them, the farmers of Ontario have every reason to be hopeful and optimistic that so long as they do a good job of production, there will be markets for all they can produce.

The Ontario farmer, and particularly the Junior Farmer, has faith in the future. He knows that in the soil he has a great replaceable natural resource that will go on producing high quality food for his fellow-countrymen and for all countries of the world that need it, so long as he takes care of that soil and safeguards its fertility. He believes in this province as a good place in which to live. He believes in his vocation as a way of life as well as a business. So the Ontario farmer is going forward, making a great contribution to the welfare of his own community, his province and his country, and playing his part in producing the food that is so urgently needed in many parts of the world, and which is essential before we can have any guarantee of lasting peace and world security.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, before you call the first item in the estimates of my hon. friend, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), I want to say we, in a general way, agree very largely with the remarks he has made this afternoon. I should say, however,—in case there are some here or outside who have not fallen under the spell of my hon. friend from Peel (Mr. Kennedy)—that he drew a picture this afternoon which seemed to depict the basic industry of agriculture enjoying at last a measure of prosperity. You would almost think to hear my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) tell it that he was the author of that prosperity, that he had a major part in determining just what measure of prosperity he was going to give to the farmers of this province. Of course, nothing could be farther from the facts, as my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) well knows.

The farmers of this province are enjoying prosperity to a degree today, not because of the policies of my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) and his administration, but rather, in spite of them.

When we consider it from that angle, we must take my hon. friend's (Mr. Kennedy) statements at their face value. I want to say seriously—not that I have not been serious up to now—I do place particular emphasis upon 2 subjects which my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) brought up. One of them is research. I agree entirely with what my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) has said, that there is a great field of achievement open for agriculture in furthering the research abilities of this province.

Research which can helpfully affect agriculture is two-fold. One branch of that research is to help eradicate diseases, to help and develop new species of certain products, help to “knock the scabs off potatoes,” as my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) says.

The other angle of research which can apply to agriculture is that field of research which lends itself to the use of agricultural products for other than food for the human body. I think we are swiftly coming to the day when certain basic agricultural commodities may be utilized, through the avenues of research, in an industrial way very much more than they are today. If we can achieve that place, Mr. Chairman, where research has lent itself to the use of agricultural products in industrial uses, we have taken a great step forward, as my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) knows, because there are times when the surpluses of agricultural products in this province and in this country creates a worrisome condition, and if we had a situation where industrial uses could take care of part of those surpluses, which we have had in the past, and which we will have again, then we will have gone a long way toward stabilizing, over a period of time, the basic industry of agriculture.

The other point I want to make before we go into the estimates, Mr. Chairman, is that I believe as a province we have to lay much more stress upon the feasibility of cold-storage plants in this Province of Ontario. I think we have just come to the place in Ontario now where we realize the possibilities which are entwined and wound up in the cold-storage question and what it can do for the basic industry of agriculture. I think we have only been fooling with the problem of cold storage up until now, and I think this Government, if it is not expecting too much, should give even a greater lead towards the establishment and the enlarging of the field of cold storage in Ontario until we get to the place where we can say, and mean it, that we have enough cold storage to take care of our needs.

Mr. Chairman, as we go through these estimates, this afternoon, we will unquestionably have certain things we want to ask the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy). We will not do that in any spirit of animosity, but in order that we may get information which will help us complete the agricultural picture and make ourselves acquainted with its possible future.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, I want to assure the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) that I am not rising to hold him up, but there are one or two words I would like to say which may come more appropriately at this juncture than on some particular vote.

I listened with great interest and close attention to the very eloquent remarks of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), and he always leaves one with the feeling that life outside the cities, as "Andy" Clark puts it, is "a little short of Paradise."

I received as other hon. members did, a bound volume on my desk last year called "The Ontario Conspectus," which I believe was issued under the authority of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost). Then somebody took it out of my office, and what I am going to say in a moment may explain why someone thought it was better not to read it.

There are some figures in that Conspectus which make abundantly clear that the farmers of Ontario, who have contributed so much to the development and the enrichment of this great province, have certainly not received their just share of its mounting treasury, and I would like to draw the attention of the House to a few figures gleaned from the Conspectus issued by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost). What do we find?

We find that over 50,000 Ontario farmers in 1947—or whenever these figures were compiled—have no automobiles—50,000 farmers in Ontario, with no automobiles; that over 160,000 Ontario farmers have no motor trucks—

HON. MR. KENNEDY: How many farmers did you say?

MR. MACLEOD: 160,000 Ontario farmers have no motor trucks according to the—

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is all the farmers in the province of Ontario, and there are a lot of motor trucks in Ontario.

MR. MACLEOD: I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is the number of farmers in the province of Ontario, and I can assure the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) that many of them have motor trucks.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, all I have to go by is what I read in the Conspectus.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: You must have read the wrong column.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, if the Government's statisticians have published wrong figures, do not blame me for that. I am only judging by what I read in the Conspectus. One thing I read is that 140,000 Ontario farmers have no tractor. There are less than 9,000 threshing machines in Ontario to serve 178,000 farmers—and I would suggest that there are 178,000 farmers in Ontario—less than 9,000 threshing machines.

90 per cent. of Ontario farmers have no milking machines. Of course, those figures are a bit deceptive, because a fruit farmer would hardly need a milking machine, but I am only taking the figures as they appear in the book.

30 per cent. of the farmers have no binders, and 30 per cent. have no cream separators.

In regard to the farm home; the Conspectus reports, over 110,000 farm homes in Ontario have not yet received the benefits of electric light and power which the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) described so beautifully this afternoon—110,000 farm homes.

Then we go on and we find that 145,000 farm homes in Ontario have no means of refrigeration. 160,000 farm homes have no vacuum cleaner. Over 60,000 farm homes have no radio set.

Now, listen to this: Over 125,000 farm homes have no running water in the homes, and no equipment for pumping water.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Chairman, that is why we have $21,000,000 in the estimates for hydro, to help that situation out.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): You mean to hurry it up.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) is notorious for putting things in the estimates that are never spent.

HON. MR. FROST: We put on 60,000 rural customers in the last four years.

MR. OLIVER: And 100,000 waiting.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): They will not wait long.

MR. MACLEOD: Now gentlemen, do not get into an argument, just listen to me. Hearken to my words, and may the Lord give you understanding in all things. I commend that to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy).

Listen to this: Over 85,000 farm homes have no telephone. In this great industrial age, over 85,000 farm homes in Ontario have no telephone. About 130,000 farm homes are still heated by stoves and have no furnaces. Over 160,000 farm homes are still using outside toilets, and have no inside toilet facilities. I would think in a province like Ontario, the farmers ought to be able to do as well as they do in Kansas City.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: What about Hallowe'en? They would not have fun at Hallowe'en if they did not have those.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, they ought to be able to do as well as they do in Kansas City, "where they can walk to privies in the rain and never wet their feet." You cannot do that in Ontario.

Over 160,000 farm homes have no bathtub or shower equipment. And so the story goes.

I suggest to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) and all the representatives of rural Ontario who sit in this Legislature, that you keep far too quiet about the just grievances of the farmers of the province of Ontario. You sometimes complain that people who represent urban ridings in this House are constantly beefing about the grievances of industrial workers. I say to you, that on the basis of what I have abstracted from the Conspectus, there are an awful lot of things for representatives from rural Ontario to talk about, and instead of extolling the glories of the Ontario countryside and translating the production into figures, you should be concerning yourselves about bringing some of the amenities of modern life to the Ontario countryside.

HON. MR. FROST: That is what we are doing.

MR. MACLEOD: That is one of the reasons why there is a shortage of farm labour today. The farmer's son and the farmer's daughter are not prepared to put up with some of the primitive conditions which prevail in rural Ontario today. I did not see anything in the budget introduced a few days ago by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) which is going to correct any of these things very much.

HON. MR. FROST: How about the $21,000,000 for hydro—40,000 new customers?

MR. MACLEOD: That is true.

HON. MR. FROST: More customers next year than the last five years.

MR. OLIVER: You get so excited.

MR. MACLEOD: It shows very clearly that you are on the defensive.

HON. MR. FROST: Offensive, you mean?

MR. MACLEOD: No, defensive.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, no.

MR. MACLEOD: Now, I do not wish the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) any hard luck—

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I am not going to have any either.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) told us last year that he was going to be back this year. Well, of course there was no election in the meantime, so he is here. It looks as though there is going to be an election in the not far-distant future. I wish the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) the best of luck, but "not too much luck" as Rt. Hon. Mr. Lapointe once said to a political opponent.

However, Mr. Chairman, I would suggest to you and the hon. members of this House that the figures that I have cited are a very sad commentary on the state of affairs in the magnificent countryside of this great province. The farmers of this province made a contribution to Canada's victory in the war unsurpassed by the farmers of any other country anywhere in proportion to their numbers. They have helped to make Ontario a great province, and do not think for a moment that I am not in a position to speak with feeling and conviction about farmers because from my father back for generations never did anything else but farming, and I was born on a farm. I know something about the inconveniences.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Have you no ambition at all to go back?

MR. MACLEOD: Well, not as long as you permit conditions like that to prevail. I would rather live in Bellwoods than live in a countryside which cannot give its people any more of the modern conveniences of life than that.

Mr. Chairman, I raise this question very seriously, and I hope what I have said will cause hon. members from rural Ontario to feel that we from the urban centres do not take a narrow view of these things. We realize the farmers of Ontario have many grievances, many of which are well justified, and demand a remedy. So I would say to my hon. friend, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) that instead of painting beautiful word pictures about the size of the crops, he should be raising his voice on some of the issues of the day which will have the effect of bringing life on the countryside into line with the advances which have been made in the urban communities.

I would suggest that the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) think that over.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I will.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, I had not thought of saying anything but I am just going to add a few words to the discussion.

I listened with a good deal of interest to the words of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), but I must confess after reading a statement of the president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and then hearing the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy), it is hard to arrive at anything but a state of confusion. The hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) speaks as if things were going along pretty well; if I understood his remarks rightly he rather criticized control and subsidies and expressed the opinion, at least, when these controls were removed we would have something much better to put in their place.

Let me read what Mr. Hannam had to say about this situation. Mr. Hannam, President of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, on November 2nd of this year, ten days or so after the ceilings and subsidies had been removed, said:

"Nothing that has happened in many years has stirred farmers and dairy farmers throughout Canada to such a high pitch of resentment as has the recent action of the Dominion Government in removing ceilings and subsidies from coarse grains at this particular time."

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): This is Ontario.

MR. ANDERSON: This affects the whole of Canada. I listened to a very capable speaker over the radio from Toronto, who pointed out because of the removals of subsidies on coarse grains many of the farmers were forced to sell their young pigs and their brood sows. Now, the cash value given for hogs marketed in 1947—

MR. W. G. THOMPSON (Kent, East): May I ask a question?

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, I think you can; I would rather you wait until I finish.

MR. THOMPSON: Was it not the complaint of ceilings coming off coarse grains but still being left on the finished products?

MR. ANDERSON: I am not trying to interpret what was in the mind of this gentleman, Mr. Hannam, the president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, I am quite satisfied to go by what he said, not by what you think he thought.

Getting back to what I was speaking about. When the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) gave us the cash value of hogs marketed in 1947, I think you and the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) will agree the reason we have such large figures is because many farmers have been forced out of the hog business. You will not have such big figures next year, in my humble opinion. Another reason is this; I was at the stockyards—maybe at the invitation of the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy), I do not know—but I went down the other day, I was not feeling very well, but I hobbled along, and I never left a place in all my life so disappointed. If I had been going to the stockyards just to see pens, God knows I could see those at Schreiber or any place where they feed stock.

I went down with the hope of seeing some hogs and cattle and maybe a goat or two. I think we walked miles, and all we saw was half a dozen old cows being tested for T.B., a couple of scrub bulls and two or three very poor quality feeders. All the rest were empty stalls. I am not blaming this on the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy), but I do submit—

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I should have sent you Monday when there were thousands there.

MR. ANDERSON: I hope I am not too critical of the kind old gentleman who showed us around. He trailed us across a very muddy road to see how they piled baled hay. To me it was not much of an educational trip because I was born on a farm and lived there until I developed a sickness and I had to quit when I was 23. But I am quite familiar with the piling of baled hay.

Getting back to the question of removing the subsidy on hogs and small pigs offered at 50 cents a piece, one person told me they went into town with some 12 little pigs they wanted to give away. They put them in a wagon, and when they came back there were 15 little pigs.

Now, the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) gets up and paints a very glowing picture of the farm problems of this country, that the farmers are on the road to Utopia.

Last Fall I had occasion after the House closed the October session, to make a trip to Bruce County, to my old home, and I do not think I am exaggerating when I say any of you gentlemen who go up there I think will agree with me it would be hard to picture a more forlorn, forgotten-looking place than some sections of that country. Farm after farm, with old dilapidated looking buildings. If they have ever been painted, the vintage of the paint dates back so far it is all gone.

From the things my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) pointed out, the fact the farmers have not been able to take advantage of the work they have done. God knows no one works harder and yet, after raising his family, he does not have a decent place to live, and because of that many of the young men and women have left the farms, and I will venture to say in some sections of that part of the country if more than about three out of ten farms are really going concerns, I would be surprised.

I know it is hard for some of us to believe we should have plans. As a matter of fact, many people worried the Liberal Government in Ottawa to take off the controls, and one of the groups up in the very front were the Conservatives in the Federal House.

I am going to tell you what Mr. Ilsley said about controls and subsidies. I am going to quote from Hansard, and this is dated December 9, 1947, page 6. Mr. M. J. Coldwell, the Leader of the C.C.F. is speaking, and he says:

"May I say that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Ilsley) made the statement that for every $200,000,000 we have spent each year in subsidies and controls, the people of Canada had been saved $2,500,000,000 annually. In other words, for every dollar we spent on controls and subsidies, the Canadian consumer, or the Government, who was also a very heavy buyer, had been saved $12.50; and when the Government was saved under that policy, the taxpayer of course also saved. So great were the benefits that only blind adherence to the ideology of private enterprise can account for the removal of these beneficial controls at a time when post-war inflation was upon us."

There you have a statement from hon. Mr. Ilsley to the effect that for every dollar spent on controls and subsidies, the people of Canada saved $12.50.

While I appreciate here the hon. Minister's (Mr. Kennedy's) remarks, I only wish the farmers were in anywhere near the happy position he tried to picture.

Just before I sit down there is one thing I would like to say regarding the very important question of cold storage. The hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) remarked, I think in his own riding, some hundreds of tons of cabbage had been ploughed under.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: In Essex.

MR. ANDERSON: In Essex, was it? Yet, when you go to buy cabbage it is 8 or 9 cents a pound. I do not think that increase is because of the policy of the present Government, but because the new regulations prohibit the importation of vegetables from the United States.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Those are all American cabbages, they are not Canadian cabbages.

MR. ANDERSON: You are talking about American cabbages?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No, but you are.

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, that is quite right.

I was going to say that owing to the fact they could not ship in American cabbages, there is naturally a market for the Canadian cabbage.

May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) if he got my note? I said because the importation of American cabbage had been stopped, naturally there is a market for our Canadian cabbage. That may not happen continuously, and I think this Government should do what it can to encourage the farmers, particularly in the north and north-western parts of the province, to become interested in the establishment of cold storage plants. I am not suggesting the Government build them, but I do believe the Government should help the farmers, encourage them in organizing and encourage them to establish cold storage plants, because the day is coming, just as sure as we are in this House, when there will not be as good a market for farm products up in the part of the province in which I live. The same thing will happen again as I saw happen before, that is, see farmers throwing out thousands of tons of vegetables which people in the other parts of the province need in order to have healthy bodies.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I do not wish to raise any "$64.00 question," but I hope the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) would not mind. I want to ask him an inexpensive question, a sort of "73-cent question." Could the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) tell us at this time why there is a shortage of butter, and when will that shortage be eliminated?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Mr. Chairman, there is a very great shortage of all dairy products. We are not producing enough milk because of the prices paid us to ship our cattle to the United States, where they get a much higher price for the milk, and we were never, in the Province of Ontario, as short as we are today in cheese, butter and skimmed milk. We are very short. I would say in another month we will be coming up in those products, but they are very, very short, due to the lack of price the farmers get.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington, North): Due to the lack of good grain last year.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Has the subsidy which has been paid on wool been withdrawn?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: As from when?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: As of January, 1947. We paid off 50, and they went out of business, and we automatically do not pay them. They paid it, and we reimbursed them.

MR. OLIVER: The amount set out to pay the hog subsidy this year is considerably less. What is the explanation of that?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Probably less hogs. We anticipate less hogs. We think there will be a shortage of hogs in the province this year, the same as last year.

Item 1 approved.

On Item 2:

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane, North): There is a difference here, a spread of $10,000.00. Is there any reason for the increase?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: We are getting more accurate information. We are trying to get this thing down more scientifically than we ever did before. For instance, we are getting a trained man to assist our man.

MR. OLIVER: On 17, appropriation $2,500.00 for agricultural enquiry commission, are we keeping that thing on and on?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: The thing is completed outside of marketing of fruit. We hope to get that through this year. As you know, the chairman has been sick and we have had to appoint another chairman.

Items 2 and 3 approved.

On Item 4:

MR. OLIVER: I am very interested in Vote 4, and I am sure every hon. member of the House from a rural section is interested, in regard to T.B. test. It seems to me we are getting in a rather awkward situation in respect to that test. I have particular reference to my own county of Grey, which has not been tested, I think for 6 years. It may, now the re-testing is on, and yet there are some counties have not had the initial test.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: In some counties it is almost impossible to start testing.

It is particularly hard to get a test on the steers from the West. You see, while the war was on, all testing stopped due to the shortage of veterinaries. I understand they are going to use some third-year students.

MR. OLIVER: Will re-testing be carried on?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Oh, definitely. As soon as we can get the veterinaries, it will be done right away. They are starting on some of them.

MR. HABEL: I notice also in No. 4 there is quite an increase from 1943 to 1947, and then another one from 1947, 1948—so much so, there is a difference of $162,000 between 1943 and 1948.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: In combatting disease. We are trying to get a disease-free province, and we are spending a lot of money on it.

MR. McEWING: If you do not mind reverting back to No. 3, there is a grant to community halls. In the light of the fact that the Act is changed, are you anticipating only $5,000.00 more expenditure this year?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: It is hard to look into the future. We spent very little last year, but we will have some more money spent on that, I know.

MR. McEWING: You have increased the amount to the Ontario Winter Fair, $50,000.00?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No.

MR. McEWING: The Ottawa Winter Fair?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes. The $12,000.00 is what we gave in 1943. Then in 1935 it was cut down to $8,000.00, and it has been $8,000.00 ever since. They did not have any Fair while the war was on, and we are putting it back to what it was.

Items 4 to 6 inclusive approved.

On Item 7:

MR. HABEL: On No. 7, I notice also there is a wide spread between 1943 and 1947, in fact a spread of $8,700.00 on one item, $30,000.00 on another, and $3,000.00 on another. In fact, the difference in this item this year from 1943 is $42,660.00, and as far as we know the Milk Control Board has no more to do, if everything is done by regulation. They have no authority whatever.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: If you will read—

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Why do you not tell us about it?

MR. SALSBERG: I really think the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) should agree to let this item stand over until an opportunity is given the House to get acquainted with the bill introduced this afternoon.

There are undoubtedly hon. members in the House who would perhaps feel that the estimate for the Milk Control Board should be drastically reduced if all it accomplishes is an increased price of milk, and bringing about a reduction in the consumption of milk.

I might say, Mr. Chairman, many hon. members might have a lot to say about it. We are waiting for the promised bill. The bill came down this afternoon, but we do not know its contents. We had no chance of hearing from the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy). He declined the opportunity, and this should stand over so we can discuss it, after the bill will have been before hon. members, and have read it and have had some opportunity of discussing it.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No, I am afraid I will have to ask you to pass it.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not charging you are spending too much; I do not want you to spend less provided the spending serves the interests of the primary producer and the consuming public. At present I do not think it does. I do not want to speak about this further, because there is a bill coming before the House.

MR. OLIVER: Before it passes, I think my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) should give some explanation for the almost $20,000.00 increase.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: We have inspectors going out from the Milk Control Board more than ever before. They will see tests are made for the farmers and secure correct weights, and they are extending services to the farmer very materially, as you will see when the bill comes through.

Items 7 to 9 inclusive approved.

On Item 10:

MR. HABEL: On No. 10, I notice an increase of $65,000.00, and I notice that most of it is in salaries and travelling expenses. Is there a reason for that?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes. If you will look in the Public Accounts you will see where every bit of it goes to. These men have tremendous travelling expenses, 25,000 miles a year for each one of them, and many of them go much over that. As everyone knows, if you will look at page 820 of the Public Accounts, you will see where every cent was spent last year in every county. That is where it is spent, doing much more work, as the hon. member (Mr. Habel) well knows.

MR. HABEL: On that I will have to agree with the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy), except for one thing. Up in the northern part of the province I say something must be done about it—in fact you are in conflict with the department of highways, always a sort of fighting up north between the department of highways and the department of agriculture.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): There has never been a fight yet.

MR. HABEL: I know something about it. Something should be done about it.

MR. SALSBERG: On weed control: In view of the fact this was raised, could the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) tell us what is being done to stop the movement of the ragweed northward? Is anything being done? We have always prided ourselves on the fact that the Muskoka area is free of ragweed, and sufferers from hay fever can find relief there. It is a fact that the weed is moving rapidly northward and menacing areas that are still considered to be free of ragweed. I am not saying anything about the wonderful benefits to be derived by hay fever sufferers going to Muskoka, but I do submit unless something is done the benefit of Muskoka to that section of people—many of whom have come from the United States seeking relief—will be seriously endangered. I would suggest that it might be of value to hear something.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: We are trying to get the railway cars which are unloading grain in the city, to be swept clean of all coarse grain here, and also the trucks which are going around. We have had wonderful success with the sprays. I think the day of the sprays are here, and I would not wonder if inside of three years, almost every highway and farm will come under the spraying system. As soon as we can get that started, we will go a long ways toward eradicating the weeds.

MR. SALSBERG: I am a hay fever sufferer, and I know the age of spray is here. I am sure the Government does not want me to suffer. Somebody suggested they would not do a thing, if what they did would keep me from suffering.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): That is putting a great strain on the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy).

MR. SALSBERG: I know some of the Government who go around sneezing when I sneeze, and crying when I cry. For a great number of the public who suffer during this part of the year, I appreciate the hon. Minister's (Mr. Kennedy) statement that the spray is here, but how much spray is it going to take to stop the weed growth spreading to the north country.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Quite a bit.

MR. SALSBERG: Unless something is done, I shall have to travel to the North Pole, and not be able to come back in time for the session.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: By the way the House is opening later and later every year, one almost could go to the North Pole in the Fall, and come back in time for the sessions.

I think the large section of the people want to be advised by the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) as to what is being done to stop the spreading of these horrible weeds to the northern areas of the province.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) has the figures before him to enable him to tell me how many of these county commissions are in operation.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: 28. There was a question on the order paper, and I happened to look over it.

MR. SALSBERG: Is there no answer about the weeds being stopped. Items 10 to 15 inclusive approved.

On item 16.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane, North): Mr. Chairman, I notice there is nothing in the estimates this year for the farm at Hearst. What is the intention of the Government in regard to the farm at Hearst? Is there anything to be spent there in the way of helping the settler?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: You mean the clearing of land?

MR. HABEL: No, the farm at Hearst.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Part of it does not belong to me. I understand part of it was sold to the town of Hearst for an extension. We are keeping a certain amount of land there, and we still have a man up there.

MR. HABEL: But there is no money available to take care of the remaining part—none in the estimates this year at all. What are you going to do with that?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: The money is in connection with the district representative. We have given him some expenses to work with up there.

MR. OLIVER: You are going to continue the farm?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Oh, yes.

MR. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, when we were dealing with the estimates last year and came to this section, I asked the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) if he could give us the figure of the number of veterans who had taken up farms under the northern Ontario development scheme. At that time the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) said that 1,422 veterans had taken up farms in northern Ontario. I asked him then over what period of time, and I see on Hansard, and I understood the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) to so say at the time, that in just one year, 1,422 veterans had taken up land.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I would not deny that—

MR. MACLEOD: I can refer you to Hansard—

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I am not doubting your statement at all.

MR. MACLEOD: I thought the figure was somewhat exaggerated. I wonder if you can give us the number of veterans who have settled on the land under this scheme in the last year or so.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I have not the faintest idea.

MR. OLIVER: You can get the figures.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes, I will try my best to get them. I think, perhaps, Victoria Street might have them. It is a dominion project. We have nothing to do with it as a province, except in connection with the educational work. I think we can get those figures from Victoria Street. Probably the figure of "1,422" was the figure I got from Ottawa.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, when I asked the question last year, the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) evidently had some figures before him.

I think this is important, because it is on the record, and I would not want anything to be on the record which would do an injustice to the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy).

This was my question:

"Two or three years ago there was a great deal of discussion about northern development and settlement of veterans in the northern part of the province. I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) could tell us what progress has been made in the development of the north, and opening up possibilities for veterans to go on the land."

The hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) replied:

"All those who want to go have been able to secure land, and we are spending money opening up the land for them. You will see there is quite a vote for them later on."

Then, Mr. Chairman, when we came to the vote, I asked the specific question:

"How many veterans have settled on the land under the scheme?"

and the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) said:

"1,422, if I am adding up my figures correctly."

and I said:

"Over what period?"

and the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) said:

"In just one season."

I was a little "flabbergasted" at the time, and I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) could help the House if he would indicate some time while we are in session, before we adjourn, the actual number of veterans who have taken up farms in northern Ontario under this scheme.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I will find out from Ottawa. I think probably they will have it on Victoria Street. I must have misunderstood your question, because the number of settlers whom we have assisted this year is 1,654, but they are not all veterans. I must have misunderstood your question, and perhaps answered by giving the number of settlers whom we have assisted in all of northern Ontario.

MR. MACLEOD: Does that mean that these 1,654 have settled there in the past year?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Oh, no. Over a term of years. I think I must have misunderstood your question.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane, North): Mr. Chairman, I would like to know from the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) if it is the intention of the department to go in and buy the implements that are needed for clearing the land. That was in the election platform of 1945, and the department was supposed to buy the necessary equipment and provide it for the use of the settlers. Nothing has been done so far.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I never heard of it. It never came through me. What we are doing is trying to keep away from heavy machinery, and getting the contractors to do it.

We assisted, at Timmins, to get a heavy bulldozer through the credit union there. I am opposed to buying heavy machinery.

MR. HABEL: Now, the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) will agree with me that after visiting clearings which have been done in Quebec, he came back with the idea that it would be a good thing indeed to have bulldozers and provide equipment for the use of the settlers. That is what we understand up there. I must say that we are greatly disappointed so far that so little has been done in that regard.

I appreciate very much what has been done in the way of assistance and payments to settlers for whatever clearing they have done, but we are expecting the department to indicate to us they will continue to do it on a larger scale.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, on item 16, number 4; does that mean that you are only spending $400 to provide scholarships and prizes for potential farmers in this province? That is to say, in the Ontario Veterinary College?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Oh, no, no. That was a special vote for one scholarship, where a man gave so much money to the treasurer many years ago, and it has gone on year after year. There will be many scholarships up there.

MR. MACLEOD: Is the Ontario Government providing scholarships for the Ontario Veterinary College in excess of this amount? There is nothing in the estimates to indicate that.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: We do not supply scholarships, but many others do. There are a goodly number of scholarships provided up there. There are a large number supplied by various companies and by individuals in Ontario. I know one individual who has given $1,000 a year for scholarships, and I think others are doing the same thing.

The scholarships we have at Guelph are educational scholarships, from the educational scholarship funds, which apply, of course, to the Veterinary College.

MR. MACLEOD: That means, in the estimates of the Department of Education there will be provision for scholarships in the Ontario Veterinary College?

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Will my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) follow down to number 7, and tell me why that particular association received a grant, and others did not.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is a very interesting thing. Some of the Waterloo breeders put their herds at the disposal of Dr. McNab, to do some special work. They were willing to pay—and I am speaking from memory—two-thirds of the cost, if we paid the other one-third. It was close to Guelph, and was quite an interesting piece of research work. That is why it was put down.

Item 17, approved.

On item 18.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I recall distinctly in the 1944 session of the House, when the political relationships in the Legislature were not as they are today, the hon. member for East York at that time (Miss MacPhail) made a very impassioned plea to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) to place the Ontario Agricultural College on the same basis as other educational institutions, removing it from politics, and taking it away from the Department of Agriculture.

I was sitting over on your side of the House at the time, and I was watching you very carefully, and I got the impression that you were impressed by what Miss MacPhail had to say. Since that time you have evidently changed your mind. Is that because Miss MacPhail is no longer here to exercise her charms upon you? Is there not something to that?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Mr. Chairman, I have not changed my mind. The Government has not changed its mind. I think I should take a minute to tell you about this.

Part of the O.A.C., and the Veterinary College, is under the University of Toronto. I, as Minister of the Department, or the Government, have nothing to say about the examinations, the courses they have, and what-not in connection with those two colleges. It is completely divorced from the department.

There are two other parts to it, research and extensions, and that is what we claim to be under the department. How are you going to divide the research and extensions from the educational? If you consider a man like Dr. Routley, who teaches, and is also one of the finest men on soil on the North American continent, and also a capable extension man, you will see it is not as easy as may appear, but we are making progress.

MR. MACLEOD: Do you have any particular disagreement with the idea of the Ontario Agricultural College having its own board of governors? Could it not be affiliated with the University of Toronto, in the same way as other colleges are?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes. If you can take the research and extension out of it.

MR. MACLEOD: That would not be difficult.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is quite a job of work. Try it some time. I have done a tremendous amount of work on this, and we are making some progress. The difficulty is to know how to take a man who is teaching and doing research and extension work, and saying, "You are under the University of Toronto for one thing, and under the department for another." It cannot be done. We will have to set up a new division there.

I can tell my hon. friend from Grey South (Mr. Oliver) that we are making progress.

MR. OLIVER: I did not even ask you.

Items 18 and 19, approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report certain votes.

Motion approved.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply reports certain resolutions, and moves the adoption of the report, and begs leave to sit again.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, I may say it is proposed to sit tomorrow evening.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The debate will continue tomorrow night?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 6.03 p.m.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before Orders of the Day, I find it necessary to correct certain statements which have been made, which have a bearing on a matter of very direct concern to this Legislature.

In today's press there is a statement by the Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, which bears so little resemblance to the truth at any point, that it is impossible to deal with each one of his mis-statements in order, or in fact, in any extensive way.

The Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe states that he dislikes being accused of dishonesty. The simplest way for him to avoid that would be for him to try a little honesty for a change.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane, North): Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: Yes, I hear the hon. member (Mr. Habel).

MR. HABEL: Only one man is a real honest man—"Honest George."

HON. MR. DREW: We have heard that voice before.

MR. HABEL: He is the only honest man.

HON. MR. DREW: We will not hear it too long, though.

The Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe says I made precipitate arrangements in England last year to fly immigrants to Ontario, and that I undertook certain commitments. He leaves the impression that his generous action relieved me of these commitments. In the first place, there was no commitment of any kind. Tentative arrangements were made in England, and our first commitments were assumed after we had obtained Mr. Howe's approval of our plan.

Hon. members of this Legislature have been fully informed of steps taken by the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) to consult with the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, and to obtain his agreement in view of the fact he occupies so many offices, before any attempt was made to reach a final agreement.

He says the steps they took were to relieve the Ontario Government of any obligation it might have had to Transocean. That statement is simply untrue.

Just as a measure of the accuracy of all of the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's statements, he tells us it was necessary to pass an Order-in-Council on July 29th last year to waive the provisions of the Aeronautics Act so that the Transocean operation could be carried out. We are informed no Order-in-Council was passed on July 29th dealing with this subject, and that none was necessary.

He then goes on to say, as a result of the waiving, the Canadian authorities had no further responsibility for the safety of the Transocean operation. That statement is as ridiculous as it is inaccurate. Under the contract which we signed on the 25th of July, Trans-Canada Airlines assumed full responsibility for the airworthiness of all Transocean and Trans-Canada aircraft, and for the efficiency of the crews. They have continued to assume that responsibility since that time.

It was in accordance with that overall responsibility which they insisted upon assuming that the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) pointed out certain delays which had occurred in the first flights, and for that reason, officials of the Trans-Canada Airlines assured themselves of the airworthiness of all aircraft operated by Transocean.

I hope hon. members of this Legislature will read this latest outburst of the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, and then pay some attention to the fact that on October 2nd, the Regional Traffic Manager of Trans-Canada Airlines wrote to the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) stating that before any flights were undertaken by Transocean, their officers had studied the operations of Transocean Airlines, that they had conducted further examinations, and that their operations were satisfactory. This is simply one of many examples which could be given from the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's statement which demonstrate that his word is worth absolutely nothing.

The most interesting commentary on the complete unreliability of his whole statement is to be found in his own letter, written to the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) as recently as March 20th last. In that letter he quite frankly admitted the difficulties we had encountered, and he sought to explain "the several conditions which tended to place the Canadian company at a disadvantage." He then went on to describe our operations as a "well-established and very commendable immigrant movement." That is the movement which he now tells us has been a cause of so much concern to him and to his officials. The fact is, we entered into a contract in July of last year, under which 7,000 air immigrants were to be flown to Ontario under special charter arrangements. That contract was completed three weeks ago Sunday. By mutual agreement, operations were extended under the original terms. That new arrangement was cancelled by the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe when he notified us that Transocean Airlines would no longer be permitted to land in Canada, and also told us that any future charter arrangements must be at a higher rate.

The Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe makes a very childish reference to me as a Monday-morning quarterback. That is quite in keeping with his usual level of debate.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: I might remind him, however, that this Government arranged the first and the only airborne immigration plan in history. It has carried that plan out successfully in every detail in spite of his interference. We have proved that air immigration is a practical possibility at rates which immigrants can afford to pay. We made the arrangements to use the services of Transocean Airlines because Trans-Canada could not undertake this work. If Trans-Canada had been able to fly air immigrants to Canada, there would have been no reason for the Ontario Government to provide this form of transportation. Trans-Canada Airlines were only able to carry 1,361 of the 7,000 immigrants. Unless we had engaged the services of Transocean or some other outside airline, no air immigration could have been undertaken.

I wish to make it abundantly clear that the Ontario Government recognizes the very great debt to the officers and crews of the Transocean Airlines who carried out this successful operation with efficiency, despatch and safety. At the beginning they had certain delays. So had Trans-Canada. Those delays and the reasons for the delays were removed as a result of the consultations to which I have already referred. In every respect the operation carried out by Transocean Airlines deserves the highest praise, and I can only express the utmost regret that with his reckless disregard for the truth, the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe has seen fit to make these slanderous and unwarranted remarks he has about these operations. Through his control of the Air Transport Board, he has made it impossible for Transocean to land in Canada, and has, therefore, denied us their services.

So much for the services of Transocean. The Ontario Government has no intention of entering into a new contract with Trans-Canada Airlines. The Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe tells us that Trans-Canada Airlines now has plenty of aircraft to fly immigrants from Britain at satisfactory rates. If that is so, then it is his duty to make those machines available for a Canadian air immigration programme. He has described our operation as a "well-established and very commendable immigrant movement." If Trans-Canada Air Lines have the machines available, then there is no earthly reason why the Ontario Government should be subsidizing a "well-established and very commendable immigrant movement" of this kind when the aircraft are owned by and are under the control of the Dominion Government. The simple and proper course is for the Dominion Government now to inaugurate their own immigration programme with the machines which are available, and at rates which will make it possible for immigrants to use this means of transportation.

The Ontario Government will now await the announcement of the Dominion Government of their own immigration programme in view of the statement that they have plenty of machines now available to carry out this movement. As I have stated before, our Immigration Offices in London will continue to operate for the purpose of facilitating immigration to this country by whatever means of transportation the immigrants choose. The Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe has scuttled our own immigration plan. In doing so, he claims, however, that he is in a position to carry all air immigration. That being so, we will await the opportunity to arrange air transportation under the Canadian plan, and in view of the fact that other provinces have already indicated their desire to have transportation of this kind available, we hope that there will be no further delay in the announcement of the details.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I may be allowed to say just a word arising out of the remarks of my hon. friend the Prime Minister (Mr. Drew).

He has just concluded delivering another verbal broadside on Ottawa, in which he has used very uncomplimentary terms about Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe. I do not stand in this House possessing any need to defend Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe. He has proven himself quite capable of defending himself, but I do want to call into question, Mr. Speaker, the propriety of saying in this House of a man of Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's calibre, who carried a tremendous burden throughout the war and carried it well, that his statements are untrue, that he savours of dishonesty, in other words, that he is not a man for ordinary people to associate themselves with. Mr. Speaker, we can surely argue on the merits of any particular question without entering into the sort of personalities indulged in by my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) this afternoon. When my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) makes one of these verbal attacks on the Federal administration and any particular official there, he makes it with political intent and political purpose. Surely, Mr. Speaker, we can argue the merits of questions such as this. The hon. Prime Minister's (Mr. Drew) remarks today and on previous occasions have not served to clarify the issue at stake, but rather to confuse it still more.

So I say to you, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of this group here, we disassociate ourselves from the character of the remarks this afternoon, and we do believe the Federal administration has proven itself in the past to be the guardian of the people's interest, and will rise in the days to come to command the admiration and confidence of the people at large.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, regarding the statements which have just been made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I can only express my regrets that he did not direct remarks of that kind to the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe when he made his statement provoking my remarks in this Legislature, because the remarks that I have made are the only remarks that are in keeping with the irresponsible remarks of that Rt. Hon. Minister (Mr. Howe), to which my remarks were in reply.

I can only add that the great concern about the possibility of any probable implications of my remarks is well highlighted by the closing bouquet handed by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) to the Dominion Government, before which he bows down and kneels on all occasions.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I wish to assure you I rise on a note of peace and goodwill.

Yesterday afternoon when the estimates of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) were before us, I made some references to a publication issued last year under the imprimatur of his beatitude under the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), and I said in the course of my remarks that a breakdown of figures shown in that publication or conspectus indicated that 160,000 Ontario farms had no motor trucks, to which the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) replied that is all the farmers in the Province of Ontario, and there are a lot of motor trucks in Ontario. Then he said a number of farmers in the Province of Ontario have motor trucks. I do not deny that, of course. Then I repeated what I had to go on, in making my remarks, was the publication issued by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

I have since checked up in the conspectus and I have double-checked by consulting the Canada Year Book, and I find, according to the last census published, there are in the Province of Ontario, occupied farms numbering 178,204. That census took place, I believe, in 1941, and it is very difficult for me to believe, Mr. Speaker, that more than 18,000 farms have been abandoned since 1941, which covers a period of unprecedented prosperity. I only raise this point to indicate to the House I was not "talking through my hat"; I had authority to go by, and I am not suggesting the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) had anything to do with the preparation of the conspectus, and I am not suggesting the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) had anything to do with the census taken by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics which publishes the Year Book, so the situation is best described by an old Quaker saying: "Everybody is inaccurate, but thee and me, but sometimes I am doubtful about thee."

I think the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) ought to know how many farms there are in the Province of Ontario, and if I might bring him up to date, I would point out the last Year Book shows that in addition to the 178,204 farms, there are in Ontario today 1,449,022 people living in rural Ontario. I thought you might be interested to know just how large the farm population of Ontario is, because a couple of years ago you were quoted in the press as saying there were 50,000 too many farmers in the Province of Ontario.

HON. GEORGE. A. DREW (Prime Minister): 1st Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 1st Order, resuming the adjourned debate on the motion, that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair, and that the House resolve itself into the Committee of Supply.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, in rising to address you at the start of this budget debate, and the first speaker for the official opposition, I would like to take the opportunity to extend greetings and felicitations to you upon the completion of a little over a year in the very honourable office to which you were elected. I think I was the first one to address you in the formal debate last year after you assumed the duties of Speaker, and I predicted then that we would have a very happy experience indeed under your genial direction, and I can repeat that on this occasion, and assure you it is a source of inspiration and confidence to see your ever-ready smile at all times and to know how anxious you are to be fair to every hon. member in the House. I assure you I am going to need this very badly for the next hour or so.

I rise to address you on this sixth day of April, some two weeks later than the budget debate of last year, and well after the Easter recess. Every year since this Government has started calling a session in March, I have protested, as one of the farmer members, and urged upon the Government that they should call the session at an earlier date. With me, and I think with most farmer members in the Legislature, it is a matter of serious moment. I can say, without reservation, that I would much rather sit in this House for two weeks in January and all of February and March in order to complete the work of the session, than to have to take the first two or three weeks out of April. I know every good businessman should have his business organized so that it goes better in his absence than in his presence, but I have to admit, personally, I like to be home when the ground is ready to break and the good seed ready to put in the ground. Once you get that stage passed, then the farm will look after itself pretty well in the absence of the owner. I can assure those hon. members who are not farmers that there is no tonic like working on the land in the spring. It is much better for you than several months in Florida or Nassau. If we were only through now, I would be most happy to invite you and other members to assist, and you would get the benefit of that tonic on the farm this beautiful April day.

I would like to make a few brief comments on the matter of hydro, before addressing myself to the budget proper.

Hydro does, of course, constitute an important part of the budget affairs of this province. The hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) made one or two rather lengthy references to it in his address, and in the years past and in the years to come our hydro responsibility will show up in the guaranteed debt of the province, and for that reason it is quite a proper subject for discussion in this budget debate, and it was discussed at some length also in the previous debate. The second speaker (Mr. Hamilton) who seconded the address, went into this matter at great length and almost explosively, and was obviously very extensively briefed by the Government and hydro, and this was undoubtedly brought on by the fact that there were hydro cuts in the service of hydro in this city and some other places in Ontario which had been in effect since, I think, the 16th of February, and are still going on, and those cuts were causing very great inconvenience to all people, to manufacturers, to householders, to institutions, and to all who have come to depend so greatly upon this wonderful service which hydro brings to our people. Those speakers sought to blame the interruptions of hydro on a previous administration which went out of office in August, 1943, that had they done their duty, according to the arguments, there would be no necessity for the cuts which have taken place.

Mr. Speaker, there is an old saying on the farm that "every barrel should stand on its own bottom," and it does seem to me it is about time this Government did take responsibility for the affairs in this province and read what we said of the barrels when we used them in the fruit industry.

After all, it is now four and half years since the previous administration went out of office. My hon. friend, the member for Dundas-Grenville (Mr. Challies) the hon. Minister representing hydro in the House, referred to the nine long years when the Liberals were in power, and the four and a half short years the present Government have been in; that they have produced as much power in the four and a half "short" years as we did in the nine long years. It may just have seemed the years were long when they were in the Opposition. The Tories always think they are with the treasury benches by Divine right, so it could have been like the young chap who asked his father whether or not it was true that married men lived longer than single men. His son was contemplating matrimony; and the father said "No, son, it just seems longer." That is the reason it might have seemed so long when my friend was in the Opposition.

We have been and are being accused for this serious interruption in the hydro services. We have listened to speeches, and in the one of the hon. Minister himself (Mr. Challies), he said that actually there is no great cause for alarm, that rather the difficulty owing to natural causes is seasonal, and that whole-hearted co-operation by all our consumers will solve it, and very little hardship will result to anyone if the consumers will conserve what is being wasted, it would not be necessary to restrict power even at will, and there will be power enough for industry, farm and home.

If that is the case, one wonders why there was all this fuss by speakers from the Government side of the House in the previous debate in attempting to fix the responsibility on the previous administration for the shortage of power.

This question has been thrashed out at great length; even the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) referred to it as "threshing wet hay." I do not intend to thresh a lot of straw, even in my contribution, if it is possible to avoid it, but there are one or two matters I feel I am entitled to bring to the attention of yourself and the hon. members of the House.

Those two hon. members to whom I referred, the hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton), and the hon. member for Waterloo, South (Mr. Chaplin), read excerpts from letters written in 1938 by the then Premier to the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King at Ottawa which indicated that Ontario had all the power reserves we felt we needed at that time. But, as everyone knows, and as I pointed out to those hon. members, the war which followed immediately after the writing of those letters—probably we should have foreseen it, certainly we would have been much better off if other and more important authorities had foreseen the coming of that war and entered into more extensive power developments—but immediately after war was declared, and under a resolution of the legislature of that day, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province and the then leader of the opposition, now, the hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew) made a special trip to Ottawa to put at the disposal of Canada's war effort the complete facilities of the Province of Ontario including our hydro development, actual or potential, and it was clearly indicated that the government of the day was ready to proceed with any amount of power developments which the war authorities felt would be needed. That was in 1940.

In 1941 we signed an agreement with the Dominion of Canada for the development of the St. Lawrence. Previous to that, my hon. friend the then Provincial Secretary in the early thirties did sign an agreement for the development of the St. Lawrence, but it did seem under those war conditions that we had every reason to believe the development might proceed. That would have meant that the 1,100,000 horsepower certainly would have put Ontario in good shape as far as power resources and reserves were concerned and would have cost the province probably between $90,000,000 and $100,000,000.

This matter of the St. Lawrence development has been one of more or less active interest for the last 30 years. I recall when I first entered the House in 1919, it was an active subject for debate, and our good friend, who is now the Clerk of the House (Major Lewis), was secretary of an organization seeking to promote that development. But it seemed that certain powers and interests in the United States and elsewhere, whenever it came to a time it seemed possible to proceed with the development, have been able to shift it off, and nothing has been done other than preparatory investigations, and if this Government can bring about the development of the St. Lawrence during its term of office, I will certainly be the first to give them every credit for having done so, because I have always felt, Mr. Speaker—and introduced resolutions in this House in 1926 and 1928—we should urge the development of the St. Lawrence, and my support and assistance and commendation will go to any government which is able to bring about the development of this great, marvelous source of power in Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, reference has also been made to the old Quebec contracts, and we were blamed for having cancelled or repudiated them, and, therefore, caused the shortage of power from which we have suffered in recent weeks.

Certainly the government of which I was member did cancel those contracts, but they renewed them at what was certainly stated at that time to be much more favourable terms, and a very amicable and satisfactory settlement was made with the power companies of Quebec. I have not heard them complain they have not been able to show profits even under the new settlement, which was completed under those circumstances.

There was evidence given by Dr. Hogg before a committee of the Legislature that the saving to the power users of this province would amount to some $92,000,000 over the time the contracts were to run.

Not only was it from the reduced costs of this power arranged for in the new contracts, but there were other features which were most unfavourable to Ontario, which were changed. I might remind the hon. members that one was a great deal of power would have to be paid for in American funds under the original contracts, and there ensued a period when Canadian funds were at a discount of 10 per cent., and if our money were permitted to take its own level today—and in this I am somewhat in agreement with the attitude of the hon. Prime Minister—unquestionably our funds would again be at a discount, and we would be paying 10 per cent. or 12 per cent. additional for our power, because the contracts required payment in American funds.

Certainly these former original contracts should appear good to the administration, and if they do, they have the power in this House to restore them. However, I do not anticipate such action will be taken. The amended contracts were infinitely more favourable to the power users of this province than the original contracts.

With respect to the amount of power which was made available during the war years by the previous administration; that also has been debated. Naturally I have not access to the files which my hon. friends have. The hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) gave the previous administration credit, I think, for 285,000 horsepower, and I think he said that did not include the last unit on the Decew, for which the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) was prepared to give credit to the previous administration, as it was practically completed in August, 1943, when the present Government came into power.

My recollection, however—and any references I find in my own files—is that the Hydro Commission of that day claimed to have produced, generated, and found in one way or another in the neighbourhood of one half million horsepower, which is quite different from the amount allowed by the hon. Minister in charge of Hydro (Mr. Challies).

On two occasions, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has stated in this House that it was never the intention of the previous administration to proceed with the power development on the upper Ottawa. I cannot understand what grounds the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) has for that statement, because I know we were extremely anxious at that time over the power situation, and advanced the agreements for the upper Ottawa division of power, and certainly had every intention of proceeding as rapidly as possible with that development.

The hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) has said that some months elapsed after the Act was placed upon the statute books before the Government went out of power, and no order-in-council had been passed authorizing the construction to proceed. I understand, Mr. Speaker, that many months elapsed after the present administration came in—until November, 1945, in fact—before any such order-in-council was passed by them, and the development could and should have been well under way by that time.

There seems to be some question as to how long it should take to bring about these developments after work is actually started. The hon. member for Dundas-Grenville (Mr. Challies) says it takes from three or four to five years. My information was that these powers on the Ottawa could have been developed in two years under a rush programme, and even on the great St. Lawrence, development of power could have been secured in three and one half years.

I know during the war the Aluminum Company of Canada brought about the great development on the Saguenay River, the Shipshaw power development. That was outstanding as an achievement.

As a war project, it involved the excavation of a canal one and one half miles long, and the building of power houses and dams. The first generating unit was put into operation 15 months from the time the excavation work began. Completion had to be hastened because of the war-time demand for aluminum; construction was carried on day and night by a force of over 8,000 men. By reason of the many trades and skills required to build so vast an enterprise, more than 47,000 workmen were used in completing the project.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): From what are you quoting?

MR. NIXON: A leaflet spread around by the Aluminum Company at that time.

The amount of power developed there two years after operations began was 1,200,000 horsepower. That shows. Mr. Speaker, how rapidly these developments can be brought into being, if there is need for a special rush programme, which might conceivably be more expensive than a programme which was not so badly needed.

There is a suggestion that the hydro construction department is not as efficient today as it was in the old days. Probably no constructional activity is as efficient as they were some years ago. But if my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) really puts his energies and abilities to this job, I am sure we can have the power available from the upper Ottawa before 1951, as was suggested by the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in his address.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I had it in mind to read to the House a letter which I personally wrote to Dr. Hogg. I was acting Premier at the time, in the absence through illness of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Hepburn), and I was very seriously concerned over this power situation which was obviously developing in the province. If I may be permitted, I would read into the record this letter which I wrote, on February 24, 1942:

"My dear Dr. Hogg:

"For many months nothing has caused me more concern as a responsible member of the Government of Ontario than the position into which we are drifting in connection with our reserves of hydro power. While we as a province have little jurisdiction or authority to influence Canada's war effort, it does seem to me that, having a monopoly in the hydro field, our responsibility is very great to meet any possible demand for power for war industry, and I would infinitely rather be criticized some day for having provided 300,000 or 400,000 horsepower more than required than be in the position of not being able to supply power for war contracts, thereby being responsible for a deficiency of equipment and munitions resulting in greater war casualties and delayed victory. All this seems too elementary to mention, but it was a great disappointment to me when you made your speech to the Electric Club last week in which you are quoted as having declared, "That all power reserves in Ontario had been used up, and that the province faced a shortage of 300,000 horsepower by next fall and that restriction would have to be placed before long on domestic consumers and non-essential industries," that you did not announce some adequate development programme to meet this alarming situation because, obviously, "Restrictions placed before long on domestic consumers and non-essential industries" can never meet the requirements of the situation and should not be necessary after two and a half years of war with the certainty that we were approaching the exhaustion of our resources.

"At our very first conference with Mr. Symington in the Prime Minister's office a few days after he was appointed Power Controller for Canada, I brought up this matter of a major development on the Ottawa, preferably at Carillon, and Mr. Symington stated then that he had the authority to and would clear away any inter-provincial complications and make it possible to proceed with such a development if asked to do so by the Hydro Commission or the Government of Ontario. I am firmly convinced that this should be done at once. No one regrets more than I, the failure to make progress on the St. Lawrence, but, having seen it batted around since I came into public office 23 years ago, and having in mind the international, federal and interprovincial interests that must yet be compromised, I fear we cannot hope for power there in time to save us.

"May I respectfully suggest, therefore, that you should immediately place our alarming position formally and definitely before the Federal authorities. Ask them what calls their war manufacturing programme will make upon us in the next two years, and, if it is as great as I anticipate, they should make available to us a site for an adequate development. If we can have this well on the way before the exhaustion of our resources is complete, I am sure the public will accept temporary restrictions and rationing of their hydro with much better grace."

I may say, Mr. Speaker, although Dr. Hogg had spoken to the Electric Club just a few days before, his health was in such a condition at that time, that by the time my letter got to his office, he was in Nassau.

HON. MR. DREW: We had the same difficulties.

MR. NIXON: Yes, I appreciate that. I have not been one who unduly criticized the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) for what he has done, although I did suggest it might have been done in a different way which would have caused the reorganization just as effectively.

It was a difficulty which was embarrassing at the time, as I very definitely recall.

However, the Hydro did actively proceed to negotiate the agreement on the Ottawa River, and if my hon. friend the Minister (Mr. Challies) has ever read the letter written on March 7th by the Secretary, Mr. Osborne Mitchell, to the Power Controller, Mr. Symington, he will have some idea of the problems which faced the Hydro at that time.

As I say, we were definitely committed by agreement with the Dominion of Canada, and they in turn with the Government of the United States—providing the agreement could be put through the Congress of the United States—to proceed at once actively to the development of the St. Lawrence, which would give us 1,200,000 horsepower, and cost $100,000,000. However, month after month went by and the governing authorities in the United States could not complete the agreement, and it became obvious we had to return to the Ottawa, and as rapidly as possible, under Dr. Hogg's constant and able negotiations, these agreements were completed and placed upon the statute books, where my hon. friends found them when they came into power, and, believe me, it was something to have achieved. It would have been much more difficult to achieve these agreements afterwards.

I do not intend to quote from this particular letter. It does set out the time the Hydro thought necessary to complete developments upon the Ottawa River as two years or two and one half years, and they could get power from the Niagara in a little over three years.

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, may I interject. I know the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) wants to be fair. Quotations of that kind are given not from the initiation of the project, but from the time the actual construction was commenced.

MR. NIXON: Oh yes, sure.

With respect to the activities of the Commission during the war years, Mr. Mitchell says:

"The Commission has been active in the development of power resources within its own control. It has completed a 60-cycle development on the Musquash River and another 60-cycle development of 54,000 horsepower capacity, together with extensive associated storage works is nearing completion on the Madawaska. It has proceeded with the Ogoki diversion in accordance with an agreement between Canada and the United States, and it is developing 65,000 horsepower at Decew Falls with all speed. Throughout its entire system, very substantial additions to its transmission and station facilities are being made to supply war loads.

"Upwards of $50,000,000 have been and are being spent by the Commission almost entirely on what could be termed war expansion in Southern Ontario."

So, Mr. Speaker, I submit that neither the government nor the commission of that day were remiss in their duty with respect to Hydro and hydro development. They co-operated in every way with the war authorities to supply the power needed to carry through Ontario's wonderful manufacturing war effort.

Now considerable reference has already been made by the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and other speakers to the activities of the present administration in extending power into the farms of rural Ontario. Let me assure my hon. friends that they cannot go too fast in this respect to suit me. Having enjoyed the benefits and blessings of hydro on my own farm for many years, I have, when in the government or in opposition at all times urged that no effort should be spared, and no money considered unwisely spent to extend power, and I, as one of the farm users, know of no more bitter rivalry existing between the different administrations than as to which can more rapidly extend power to the farmers of Ontario.

I hope we will soon see the day when every farmer who is in a position to apply for this great benefit and blessing on his farm, has his wants filled by the activities of the Hydro Commission in the Province of Ontario.

I recollect when we were on the treasury benches, at times we rather boasted of the fact that we were extending hydro much more rapidly than those who had occupied the treasury benches before us. As I have said, there is no more bitter rivalry, of which I know, between administrations than as to which can extend the hydro the faster throughout the Province of Ontario.

While I do not want to shock my hon. friend, the Minister in charge of Hydro (Mr. Challies), I might tell the House there has been a very busy and active hydro work camp set up in my own riding for some months now. They are doing a splendid job, and I hope they will be left there until the backlog of applications for farm service has been completely cleaned up, and the farmers in good old Brant, who have not been receiving hydro service, will be served by these hydro activities.

And if I may put a little "plug" in for myself, Mr. Speaker, I may tell the hon. members that many years ago I recall Sir Adam Beck coming to the council room with a strip of cable, an electric wire inside of a lead cable, about one foot long, and saying that this was going to revolutionize the development of power and the distribution to the hydro users. They were going to put this cable in a furrow ploughed along the side of the road. It was as simple as that, but unfortunately they tried it out on me. For many years we had the service from the cable, but it is becoming more and more unsatisfactory, as the cable becomes weaker. Many attempts have been made to repair it, but interruptions have been our regular experience. So you who have only had a few of them for the last few weeks, should have some sympathy with us who happen to be located on that particular line. I think there are only two in Brant County; the rest of the users are in the constituency of my hon. friend, the Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley). The hydro has attempted repairs, and along short sections have installed overhead lines, and I suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) when he gets his other demands satisfied, he give us an overhead service which will be infinitely more satisfactory than the cable services have proven to be.

I would like to direct attention for a little while more particularly to the budget, and the statements made by my hon. friend the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

I congratulate him on the able manner in which he presented the material in hand. It, of course, is only what we have learned to expect from the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

However, I cannot extend the same congratulations to him on his ability as a forecaster of what the surplus of this province will be, or of what the taxing sources will bring to the treasury as revenues. As a matter of fact, I think a review of his forecasts will lead us to believe that he is certainly the province's worst forecasting treasurer in all history.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): He is on the right side, anyway.

MR. NIXON: That depends on which side you are looking at.

I was going to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that they change one of those monotonous Friday-night governmental broadcasts into a "snappy" quiz programme, and have the people guess as to what the surplus will be, or what the revenue will be from liquor, or the corporation tax, and give suitable prizes, and then draw a figure out of the hat which will be the estimate of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) for the ensuing year.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Have you noticed they are having the same trouble in Ottawa on that point.

MR. NIXON: I was referring to the Province of Ontario.

I recall, Mr. Speaker, on one occasion when the government of which I was a member forecast a revenue of $15,000,000 from the gasoline tax,—which was very moderate in those days, with a smaller number of motorists in Ontario—the budget critic of that day, hon. Mr. Price, ridiculed the idea that we could ever get $15,000,000, and carried his criticism on to such length that I offered to bet him a new hat we would. That might have been quite unparliamentary, but nevertheless it did attract some attention to that particular estimate, and it was, in fact, only six days before the fiscal year ended, when I was able to tell him across the floor of the house that the estimated $15,000,000 for the provincial treasury of that day had been reached. That was how accurately forecasting was done under a good government.

AN HON. MEMBER: Did you get the hat?

MR. NIXON: I got the hat. Now, let me point out that the surplus forecast for this year was $367,000, whereas the actual surplus was $25,039,000.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): He was seeing through a glass darkly last year.

MR. NIXON: Well, one wonders if he is seeing just as darkly for this current year. The budget forecast was estimated at $160,000,000 and we actually received $199,000,000 or an increase of $32,500,000. It was not very long ago that that was the whole revenue of the province, just the amount you were out in your forecast.

The corporation tax was forecast $38,000,000 and received over $50,000,000, an increase of $11,500,000. Liquor was forecast at $26,400,000 and you received $34,000,000.

You underestimated the capacity of our citizens to the extent of $7,600,000 for profits from liquor. I am surprised the hon. Treasurer (Hon. Mr. Frost) does not speak more about this sort of revenue. I can remember in the old days when they were in opposition they used to call it the "booze" budget when we only had $16,000,000 or $17,000,000 from liquor and now my hon. friend is getting $34,000,000 and says nothing about it.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR: The people are in a happy mood and want to spend their money.

MR. NIXON: The gas tax was forecast at $44,000,000; received $46,800,000, an increase of $2,800,000.

Succession duty forecast $11,750,000 and received $17,500,000, a difference of $5,750,000. For the year March 31, 1947, forecast $21,000,000, a difference of $21,500,000. This year the difference was $32,500,000, so that he is getting worse instead of better. One wonders what will be the result this year. I will predict now that in due time, if the treasurer is still in office when we come back here next year, he will show a very handsome surplus again. Why should he predict a gross revenue of $185,000,000, a drop of $14,000,000 from what it was this year? What is going to bring about a drop of $14,000,000 in the year? In liquor, $26,000,000, a drop of $8,000,000. Less liquor in the province. Why do we anticipate such a drop there?

Our tourist season is going to reach a high time high and one wonders why that estimate is reduced in the gas tax, a drop there of over $1,000,000. Of course, I will admit that certain matters may develop and gas not be as plentiful and as readily available as it has been in the past. That is something we cannot certainly predict at the moment.

Mr. Speaker, I suppose I should commend the Government for having brought down the budget after the completion of the Throne Speech, a procedure obviously contemplated and provided by the rules of this House, but I think on a previous occasion the Treasurer brought down his budget before the Throne debate was completed, and we objected most vigorously to that procedure. Why? I suggest to you that there was some motive in the Treasurer's willingness to have the budget brought down at such a late date in the session, and I suggest that the motive was he wanted his Amusement Tax Bill to pass this House before the hon. members knew that there was a surplus of $25,000,000 in a gross revenue of $200,000,000. Certainly you could not have twitted the Opposition when they were opposing that bill as to where the money was going to come from. All we would have had to say is "one-third of your surplus will pay that," and I suggest that this taxing measure should have been announced in the budget address instead of having been put through and even given Royal assent before the budget was presented to this Legislature.

I may be out of order to some extent in discussing a matter which has already been dealt with by the House, but a certain amount of latitude is generally allowed in this debate. He thought it was wise to set up an earmarked fund outside of the budgetary arrangement of the province entirely, to be held in trust for a special purpose. Personally, I do not think it is a wise provision and I hope future treasurers do not carry that to the extent where the province will cease to have a budget to present to the Legislature and will simply consider corporation tax set aside in a trust fund for hospital development, and gas tax, etc. for the Highways Department to ear-mark for one of the departments. I think that all these funds which come to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) should go into the Consolidated Revenue Fund and be voted out of that fund by this Legislature.

Notwithstanding the good purpose for which the revenues from the amusement tax are to be used, there is no reason why they should not go into the Consolidated Revenue Fund and be voted by this Legislature for hospital purposes in accordance with the need of that very worthy cause at the time.

One could easily see that the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was very proud of his financial statement. It rather reminded me of the sunshine budgets of the previous administration.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Moonshine.

MR. NIXON: We were not taking one-half of the taxes from the taxpayers that my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) is taking today, nor are we claiming any such surplus of funds taken over and above what is required to carry on the services of this province. I even wondered, as he was reading off those beautifully-rounded phrases, if some one of the Treasury Department had not turned over the old barrel and we were being treated to one of the old sermons in years past which we so often experienced in our churches.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, it is possible for the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and his department, with all the facts and figures available, to present pretty near any picture he likes to the House. It suited him to present a $25,000,000 surplus. That could just as well have been $55,000,000 surplus as $25,000,000, because he received in the fiscal year from Ottawa the sum of $29,000,000, in round figures, which was owing to the province from moneys which the Federal Government had retained in connection with the war tax agreement, in effect during the war. This money came from corporate taxes just the same as $55,000,000 that were put in as ordinary revenue this year and only reason they were put into capital was they did not need it in current and so he would be above criticism if he placed that $55,000,000 in current account and had $55,000,000 surplus. I think if he had done that he would certainly have invited a raid on the treasury. I notice the Government's special organ, the Star, the day before yesterday conducted a survey of the reeves and mayors of the surrounding municipalities as to what should be done with this $25,000,000 and all the municipalities said "Hand it back to us."

The hon. Treasurer's (Mr. Frost) lot has certainly been a very happy one. He inherited the department with a very able staff, and has experienced nothing but good times with buoyant revenues. How different this was from the experience the Liberals encountered when they took office in 1934. There are not very many members in the House today who went through that period.

I do recall how we faced a $30,500,000 deficit that year, a $62,000,000 increase in the gross debt, and there had been a $45,000,000 annual increase in the gross debt under hon. Mr. Henry during his entire regime. So we had very great difficulties to face in our financing activities, Mr. Speaker, and we had to bring that runaway engine to a stop without wrecking the entire train, if I may put it in that way, but that difficult job was done, and when we went out of office and I am sure the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) will agree with this—he found the finances of Ontario in a healthy condition indeed.

I certainly, as a critic, will not quarrel with the general remarks of the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost), or the platitudes which made up the budget statements. Truly, this is a great province, centrally located, like an empire in extent, abounding in natural resources, with developed industries, with great people, with great agricultural districts, etc. This is all very true. The only thing wrong with it is the Conservative Government with which the province is saddled, and I am sure the good voters of the province will take an early opportunity to change that.

Far from being the cause of self-congratulation over the $25,000,000 surplus, I suggest, Mr. Speaker, the Government should frankly admit they have taken $25,000,000 more from the taxpayers than they required to carry on the governmental services in this province.

They should either improve and expand those services, or reduce taxation, or both. Certainly there are places where more money could be spent, and could be spent very advantageously for the relief of the people of the Province of Ontario. They could be more generous, for instance, in the old-age pensions, mothers' allowances and hospital care, and I do suggest with this surplus, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) does not have to wait for Ottawa to vacate the amusement tax field; he has the funds in hand to help the hospitals in their present emergency.

After all, Mr. Speaker, the Federal Government has a $15,000,000,000 war debt to pay off, and they might claim they should retain some of the taxes until they make a little dent in that war debt of $15,000,000,000. I have no doubt they would like to pay off this debt just as my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) likes to pay off the debt of this province in moderate amounts each year.

Then, of course, they have had the unhappy experience of having taken 3 cents off the gasoline tax, which was a war tax, and of seeing this Government pick it up and slap it on. As soon as they take off their 20 per cent. tax on amusements, this Government will pick it up and slap it on, and not give the people one hour of respite from the burden of taxation by their having taken off their war taxes. They reduced their corporation taxes by 10 per cent., and we immediately put on a 7 per cent. tax, so they are beginning to suspect, I fear, that the people do not reap the benefits of their tax reductions, but the Ontario Government hastens to put them right back on.

I have pointed out as emphatically as I can in this session, and in previous sessions, that the 20 per cent. amusement tax is too high. It should be reduced. It was a war tax, and was put on in a deliberate effort to discourage people from spending their money on amusements, and if they did so, they had to pay into the war effort to that extent.

Also, we voted against the increase of 3 cents in the gasoline tax, and 42 per cent. tax on gas is too high, as the motorists of this province are beginning to realize. Evidently, it is possible for this Government to give much-needed relief from the burdens of taxation.

Even the 7 per cent. tax on corporations, as the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) pointed out, is simply passed on to those who use the products or the services that are sold by these corporations, and it is a tax upon the ordinary man on the street. That tax produced $11,500,000 more than was expected, so that it also is evidently too high.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) stresses the high credit standing of the province, and with this I am sure we are all glad to agree, but I do not find, on a comparison of the value which the people place upon the debentures of Ontario, they are valued so much higher than the debentures of other authorities when they bid for these securities upon the open market. The $2\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. debentures of the Canadian National Railways, for instance, are quoted at \$95.25, those of Ontario at \$91.50, Nova Scotia \$91.50 and Manitoba \$92.75, so while our credit is good, evidently the other provinces are making just as successful a job of their financing, and their debentures are regarded as highly on the markets of the country as are those of Ontario.

I did notice in this last issue of debentures by the Government that it had to jack the rate up to 3 per cent. to sell them at 98.75, a yield of 3.09 per cent., and I believe they are selling for even less today upon the open market. Compared with the other provinces, the credit standing of Ontario is good, but no better than throughout the rest of Canada. We hope that every effort will be maintained to keep it good, although there is a limit, surely, to what can be spent by governments and still not endanger their credit standing.

I note the estimates this year call for $149,000,000, to be voted, and $108,000,000 in statutory or a total of $257,328,000 over a quarter of a billion dollars. Never before in the history of the province has a programme of the Government anything approaching this staggering sum of money.

In 1943 the estimate was for $120,000,000, less than one-half of the present sum, and I can imagine how the budget critics of that day would have exclaimed in holy horror had such a programme of a quarter billion dollars been presented to this House.

Mr. Speaker, I am old-fashioned enough to want to see any debtor pay a little off his debt every year, and certainly I would urge the Government to continue reducing the debt as the buoyant revenues make it possible. In addition to this surplus in ordinary, we have, of course, an $8,000,000 surplus in capital, and that would make a very nice, healthy reduction in the debt of the province, and some of this might be used as I have suggested, to look after the hospitals, to help the old-age pensioners, to reduce the gas tax by 3 cents and, if the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) will do these different things, which I think are right and proper, and certainly within reach of the province under these circumstances, I will support his budget and vote for it; otherwise, I am afraid I will have to vote against it.

The hon. member for Bruce (Mr. Johnstone), in his very interesting address the other day, almost gave one a text for the criticism of this budget. Quoting from a local paper, he said that the Government was regarded as the "big milch cow," they were "certainly spreading the gravy." He seems to me to have got a little mixed in his metaphors, because it has been my observation that once you get the gravy out of the cow and spread it, she is no longer a milch cow, and it might be you could do just that with the taxpayers of the Province of Ontario as well.

Mr. Speaker, I had it in mind to deal with 2 or 3 of the departments, but somehow or other I always seem to take much longer than I intend when I start discussing these matters on the budget debate. Therefore, with your permission, I am going to reserve these matters for discussion on the estimates for the different departments brought forward, and I will close my address with this amendment:

Moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Oliver, that the motion "that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply" be amended by adding thereto the following: "But this House regrets that the Government has not taken the necessary action to render greater assistance to old age pensioners and others requiring financial aid and to reduce the burden of taxation."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Speaker, in rising to participate in the budget debate, let me first congratulate the hon. Provincial Treasurer on his most able presentation of the budget. This, of course, is not unusual. He has had considerable experience in the art of juggling figures.

Truly it can be said he is an excellent treasurer, a poor accountant and entirely without social conscience; this, coupled with his charm and personality make his budget sound almost real.

Before proceeding to discuss the budget, I wish to hand out a few more bouquets. I am very sorry that the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) is not in his seat at the present time, because he spent a considerable time discussing my riding. I wish to congratulate the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) for his contribution of sincere and constructive criticism; I wish also to express my appreciation to my friend the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts), who spent considerable time telling you of the virtues of the northern mining areas and particularly his reference to Cobalt. I appreciate warmly his reference to our great loss in the death of Bill Smith, one of Cobalt's best loved citizens and the holder of Ontario's oldest prospector's licence.

Since the hon. member (Mr. Roberts) spoke, we have suffered another great loss in the death of Dr. Ernest Armstrong, one of Mr. Smith's closest friends and associates. They were both pioneers of the earliest days of Cobalt, and while Dr. Armstrong was a dentist by profession, he also found time to participate in mining, in municipal affairs and in politics. He was active in every line of municipal endeavour from volunteer fireman to mayor of the town of Cobalt, which post he held for many years by acclamation. He also served a term in the federal House as Conservative member for Temiskaming. In the death of these two pioneers, the town of Cobalt and the north country have suffered a great loss.

I agree with the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) that Cobalt is having a glandular operation performed on it and I am glad that this Government saw fit to call in a specialist in the person of Dr. Thompson to diagnose the case and perform the operation, rather than allow the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) and the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) to administer the treatment they had prescribed in 1944. This was when they reneged on their guarantee of 75 cents per pound for 10 per cent. cobalt ore, and told us we were through as a mining camp.

Since then, new rich silver and cobalt deposits have been discovered in virgin territory. A new smelter is almost completed. To say the least, we are a long way from dead.

Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) says that Cobalt, the "Grand Old Man of the North" is dying hard, I submit he should have said from this Government's experience, it does not kill easy. And now, Mr. Speaker, I come to the gem of the hon. member for St. Patrick's (Mr. Roberts) remarks:

"We need better liaison in northern Ontario. For too long we have had coming down here heading delegations people who are opposed to this Government."

What a pity that this Government should have opposition. I wonder if the hon. member (Mr. Roberts) ever tried to discover the reason for this situation which exists in the north. I can assure him there are good and valid reasons. The main one is that all governments in the past have bled the mining municipalities white. The wealth extracted by so-called "FREE" enterprise from the town of Cobalt alone, is now largely in Bay Street in Toronto, and what did free enterprise leave us, the citizens, when the big mines pulled out: gaping holes in the ground with a few strings of barb wire around them to keep our children from falling into them, wooden sidewalks, dilapidated schools, broken-down water main and sewers, a lot of silicosis patients and broken-down miners, with little or no avenues of revenue or taxation. These same free enterprisers are now down here discouraging any new capital from coming into our camp in case that they should find additional ore and expose what a poor job they made of mining the camp. Yes, Mr. Speaker, we were the world's fifth largest silver producer, and we do not even own our own post office.

The only Government buildings in our town are the Temiskaming Testing Laboratory and the liquor store, which were purchased by the previous government. I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, there is a better example on the North American continent of the evils of uncontrolled free enterprise and lack of planning.

I would also Mr. Speaker, like to correct the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) when he says delegations are headed by people who are opposed to this Government. Insofar as my riding is concerned, I have not headed one delegation to this Government. Under this Government's idea of democracy, this is the function of the defeated Tory candidate and not the elected representative. When even a stenographer's job becomes vacant in the Government service, he investigates the applicants and if they are not old enough to vote he inquires as to how the parents voted before they are hired. Occasionally, it has not been possible to find a qualified Tory, in which case applicants are hired on the basis of merit and ability.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Shame.

MR. TAYLOR: Mr. Speaker, of the entire cabinet who I know have visited my riding several times, only three of them have bothered to see me, the elected representative. They were the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost), the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), and the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow). The hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) and the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) came to see me in 1944 when they were delivering the knock-out blow which failed; of course, I was mayor at that time which probably was the reason they came to see me.

I had heard that the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) was to visit our town and I made it my business to see him; otherwise he would have most likely passed by on the other side.

Right here I want to correct one remark: I said there were only three Ministers; I was pleased to have the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) meet me at one time while I was mayor of the town.

The hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Stewart) called at my office when he visited the north, and I was delighted to see him. Apparently, he has suffered no ill effects. All other hon. members have run true to form and have relied for their information on the defeated Tory candidate and the few local Tories who are left.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, the people of the north know the true definition of democracy, and are determined to elect a government that will actually practise it. They have pretty well succeeded in the north and will eventually make their influence felt throughout the province. These are just some of the reasons why the people of Temiskaming are fed up with the old line parties.

I cannot agree, Mr. Speaker, with the hon. member for St. Patrick's (Mr. Roberts) suggestion that we should bring our children down to Toronto to see the sights, but rather that you should bring the children from Toronto up north, out of the slums which still exist in this city, away from the smell of smoke and gas, where they can have a change of scenery, and associate, if for only a short while, with the salt of the earth. I am reminded of the story of the little boy from the north who visited this House in session and when he returned home, his teacher asked him to write his impressions of the Legislative Assembly. He started out with an explanation of how the Clerk calls order and the members all stand; the Sergeant-at-Arms enters carrying the mace, followed by the Speaker, who ascends to the platform, acknowledges the salute of the Sergeant-at-Arms, looks over the Government benches, and proceeds to pray for the country.

I was also interested in the remarks of the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts), criticizing politicians and newspapers who would descend to so low a method of assault as to refer to that great Progressive Conservative party as the Toronto party. Can it be possible, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. member (Mr. Roberts) has forgotten how low the press and other publications, to which I am sure he subscribes, descended in the last election campaign. I refer particularly to Social Suicide and the Toronto dailies. No, Mr. Speaker, when I assisted the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) to the train, it was not with a desire to get him out of my bailiwick. The people of Cobalt are always glad to see my good friend (Mr. Roberts) even though he did desert the part of the country he professes to love so much. He will always be welcome. The same goes for all the hon. members of the House regardless of their politics.

Now, Mr. Speaker, before I discuss the budget, I would like to repeat some of the needs of our people in the north. I am glad to see that we are finally getting started on some rural electrification. I have had some complaints about the priority given certain lines out of Earlton. The people up there feel that lines should be built where they will serve the greatest number of farmers, rather than any other consideration. However, now that this House has approved the Government's hydro policy and given them the green light, it is hoped that all our farmers will be served by hydro as quickly as possible.

I wish, Mr. Speaker, to commend the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) for getting started on the road from Matachewan to Swastika and building a cutoff around the sink hold between Cobalt and Latchford. We still need the road from Larder Lake to Englehart. Our farmers are asking that more of their main roads be kept open in the winter. The department kept some of these roads open for part of the season last winter, then when a heavy storm came, they ceased ploughing. In the farmers' opinions, this was worse than if they had never started ploughing them. It just left a bank on both sides of the road which drifted full and made the roads impassable.

I was over the highway from Cobalt to Kirkland Lake a week ago, and must say I was disappointed to see how some of the new surfacing of last year has heaved, particularly north of Englehart. I know how difficult this is to overcome in our extreme climates, and no doubt, experts are working on a solution to this problem, and it is hoped it will soon be solved. The people of the north would like to know when the proposed cut-off bypassing Cobalt, Haileybury and New Liskeard will be undertaken and would like to see some work done on the highway between Cobalt and New Liskeard. This piece of highway along with the piece from Swastika to Kirkland Lake are the worst parts of our highway and the most travelled.

There is a great need in my riding for a technical school. I would like to see one built adjoining the mining school in Haileybury; this would be the most central location and could service the pupils from Temagami to Englehart.

Now, I come to agriculture. I am glad to see that more money has been voted for farm clearance and drainage this year in the north. I had a request for a small drainage job last year for one of our farmers and was advised that this department had exceeded its estimates and the work could not be done. I think this was a poor excuse in the light of the budget.

Mr. Speaker, for the past three years I have complained about the treatment our Indians are receiving, but so far, I know of nothing that has been done in this province. I know this comes under the Federal Government, but I still maintain a lot could be done in the way of improving their educational facilities and with respect to the game laws as they affect our Indians. I would urge our Government to at least show some interest in these people. Now, Mr. Speaker, I come to the budget.

I have stated before that if the municipal councils of this province did not come closer in their estimates of receipts and expenditures than has the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), they would all be under Government supervision.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. TAYLOR: That statement still holds good. I wonder if the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) ever found himself in the embarrassing position of having to explain to his wife where he got all the money having told her all along that she would have to cut down on her budget. Yet, that is exactly the position in which he finds himself with regard to the people of this province; and that responsibility must be shared by the whole Government.

All year you have been telling the people of this province that there wasn't enough money to pay adequate old age pensions; there wasn't enough money to subsidize milk, so that children could get enough to drink; there wasn't enough money to meet the crying need for better health services, not even enough to put X-ray equipment in all our hospitals so that nurses and patients alike would be protected from the danger of undetected T.B. Just last Christmas, the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) stood on the main staircase in this building and told the civil servants that he couldn't give them any promise of a salary increase to meet the rising cost of living—because it would cost over $2,000,000—less than 10 per cent. of the amount the Treasurer now pulls out of the hat as a surplus.

But, before I go further into that subject, I want to deal with some other aspects of the budget.

I want to congratulate the Government on having accepted the proposal which was put forward last year by my colleague, the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) for a Provincial-Municipal Conference. Less than six months ago, in our fall session, a resolution moved by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) calling for a Provincial-Municipal Conference, was debated in this House. We wanted such a conference because we knew that the costs of health and welfare and other services were weighing very heavily on the municipalities, and we wanted a conference to discuss what could be done about it. But the Government said, "No, it wasn't possible," and they voted that proposal down. Now the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) tells us:

"This year a Provincial-Municipal Conference is being held to examine into the present situation."

Well, we are very glad that the conference will be held. Usually it takes years before the old parties pick up the ideas that are put forward by socialists, and adopt them as their own. This time, they have managed it within six months. I think that can be called real progress.

We all hope that they will do better with this conference than they did with the Dominion-Provincial Conference. I noticed that on almost every other page of his speech the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was calling on the Dominion Government to reconvene the Dominion-Provincial Conference—so he can tell them why we won't make a deal—and on the pages in between, he was giving the reasons why Ontario is better off having not made a deal.

Now, I don't want to thresh over that whole problem again, but there are one or two points raised in the budget speech that I want to deal with.

First, I was interested to note that the money received by the Ontario Government from the revenues which it would have surrendered under a Dominion-Provincial agreement was actually less than we would have received from the Dominion. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) told us that the revenue he actually received from these sources was $72,063,000 and the revenue he would have received in exchange by the agreement would have been $74,438,000.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): With income tax in reserve, sir.

MR. TAYLOR: Just a minute—in other words, we lost $2,375,000 by not signing an agreement.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh no, nonsense.

MR. TAYLOR: Yes, your own figures. You did not levy the tax anyway, or you did not get it. If you had levied the tax, certainly you would have been away up in the game, but you did not levy the tax and therefore, put things right back where they are now. If you had signed that agreement, you would have—

AN HON. MEMBER: That is a foolish argument.

MR. TAYLOR: Of course, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) tried to cover that up by adding on the amount he would have received by levying a provincial income tax.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, of course.

MR. TAYLOR: But for reasons that he knew best, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) did not levy an income tax and the cold fact is that if he had signed an agreement the Government of this province would have had $2,375,000 more in its pocket than it has today.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, no.

MR. TAYLOR: According to your own figures.

Then the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) referred to the problems of British Columbia. He did not claim that British Columbia was getting less revenue as a result of the agreement it signed with the Dominion; there would be no basis for any such claim. He did point out, quoting the Provincial Treasurer of British Columbia, that the costs of their programme of social advancement and social security were very heavy, and in order to meet those costs the province had to raise still more revenue through a 3 per cent. sales tax.

Now, why are those social security costs so heavy in British Columbia? The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) didn't answer that question, but the answer is a very simple one.

First, their costs are heavy because their social security programme is far in advance of that in Ontario; to give just one example, British Columbia is paying a pension of $40 a month to every old age and blind pensioner. They're not paying it to just the ones who can prove they're actually starving to death. They're paying that $40 pension to every pensioner—and, of course, it costs a lot of money. And I understand that other social services and health services in British Columbia are also well in advance of Ontario.

But there is a second reason why British Columbia has to find so much money for a social security programme. It is because the proposals of the Dominion Government to develop a national social security programme have never been implemented. And why have they not been implemented? Because Ontario and Quebec refused to come in with the other seven provinces and sign a Dominion-Provincial agreement.

That is one point which the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and his colleagues in the Government never mention when they are trying to justify their position. It's all very well to argue this on a financial basis, on a constitutional basis, on the basis of abstract provincial rights. But what concerns the men and women who make up the people of this province is the problem of their social welfare. We haven't got a social security programme in this country today, and the reason we haven't got it is because the hon. Premiers of Ontario and Quebec refused to sign a Dominion-Provincial agreement.

HON. MR. FROST: "None so blind as those who will not see."

AN HON. MEMBER: Quite correct.

MR. TAYLOR: We both wear glasses, but mine are a little clearer than yours, it seems.

By this time we could have had an old age pension for every needy person in Canada over the age of 65; we could have had a pension for everyone, without a means test, over the age of 70. We could have been well under way with a national health insurance programme. The reason we haven't got those things is because the hon. Premiers of Ontario and Quebec refused to let us have them.

I do not say the Dominion Government is not partly to blame too. I believe they are. I think the Dominion Government was only too happy to see that conference fall through, and have an excuse not to carry out their promises. They made those proposals because it was an election year, and they knew the people of Canada were demanding a national security programme. But the Premier of Ontario and the Premier of Quebec played right into their hands. If they had taken Mr. King up on his proposals, he would have had to go ahead with them. But they turned him down, and now he is in a very happy position. He can say, and he is saying, "I wanted to give you all these good things, but Mr. Drew and Mr. Duplessis won't let me." I don't think he is very sincere when he says he wants to do these things, but at least he has a good argument; because a national social security programme is impossible till Ontario at least has signed a taxation agreement.

I don't intend to follow all the ins and outs of the argument that has gone on ever since between the Premier of Ontario and the Prime Minister of Canada. The people of Ontario—at least, I know the people in my riding and I think they're typical of people in the rest of the province—our people just aren't interested in long-winded arguments about who's right and who's wrong. What they're interested in is better old age pensions, better health services, more social security of every kind.

Of course we all know that as long as we have the present Government in power in Ontario we're not going to get a Dominion-Provincial agreement. But I'm going to tell you what will happen when we get a C.C.F. Government here—and that won't be so long. A C.C.F. Government will go to Ottawa and open discussions with the Dominion Government, prepared to negotiate an agreement. Of course, we won't go prepared to sign just anything they put before us. We'll use our bargaining power—and Ontario, with half the wealth of the country, has a lot of bargaining power. When we elect a C.C.F. Government here, we'll have a lot more bargaining power because the Dominion Government will see the handwriting on the wall. We'll say to the Dominion Government, we're prepared to sign a fair taxation agreement but on one condition and a very important condition—that you go ahead with a national social security programme and a national health programme NOW. Let's stop arguing and get down to work.

Now I want to deal with the hon. Provincial Treasurer's estimates for the coming year. In one respect they are exactly like the estimates he has presented to this House for several years past—any resemblance between the figures he presents and the actual revenues he receives are, as I have told him before, purely coincidental. The chief difference is that in other years we have had to wait till the end of the year to prove that. This time it's obvious from his figures on the face of them.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer tells us that his receipts next year are going to be $13,000,000 less than they were this year. How does he arrive at that figure?

First, it is interesting to note that revenues from the corporation profits tax are going to remain exactly the same—$50,000,000. We must assume from that that the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) expects the present high level of business activity to be maintained. Business will still be enjoying a boom. Business prosperity will be maintained. Business profits will be maintained. Everybody will be doing just as well as ever—except the Provincial Government.

For in the face of this high level of business activity, this continuing prosperity, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) tells us that the revenues of almost every other department of Government will fall off—by amounts ranging from 10 per cent. to over 50 per cent.

One of the most amazing of these estimates is the drop he anticipates in liquor revenues—$34,000,000 this year, only $26,000,000 next year. I wish the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) had told us exactly how this drop is going to take place. Does he think that the workingman won't be able to afford his glass of beer—or is he going to take the water out of the whiskey? Or is he simply underestimating his liquor revenues, as he has every year since this Government took office, because he doesn't dare admit how much they are actually going to be? Certainly the number of new cocktail bars that are being opened up all over the place don't indicate any falling off in liquor revenues.

Another interesting figure is a drop of 54 per cent. in liquor authority transfer fees—from $1,300,000 this year to $600,000 next year. Of course, this is easier to understand. When the Government introduced its new liquor policy two years ago, there was a tremendous scramble to buy up licensed premises—a lot of people with capital to invest saw the chance of a lifetime for tremendous profits. Now things are getting stabilized, and that source of revenue will fall away.

Among the most peculiar figures are those for the Department of Highways. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) estimates that revenues from motor vehicle permits will increase by $500,000, but revenues from the gasoline tax will decrease by $1,300,000. There will be more cars than ever on the road, but they'll be using less gasoline. Again, a word of explanation would be in order.

For the rest of the provincial revenues, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) tells us to expect a falling off in almost every department. True, he expects that agriculture and reform institutions will be up, and there will be a slight increase in lands and forests, but all the rest will fall off.

Revenues of the Attorney-General's department will fall by 11 per cent. Education will fall by 10 per cent. Health will fall by 11 per cent. Insurance will fall by 10 per cent. Labour will drop off by 15 per cent. The Department of Mines will collect 5 per cent. less. Municipal affairs will get 23 per cent. less. The Provincial Secretary will collect 8 per cent. less. The security transfer tax will bring in $50,000 less—apparently there'll be a slump in the stock market. The land transfer tax will bring in 37 per cent. less—that doesn't sound very good for the real estate business. Sale of law stamps will fall off 25 per cent.—the lawyers will be having a thin time. Even the motion picture branch will take in 12 per cent. less—perhaps that ties in with the amusement tax that the Provincial Treasurer put over on us.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that picture just doesn't make sense—corporation profits staying up, and almost every department of Government heading for Poverty Row. To my mind, there are only two possible explanations for it. I don't know which one is true, but they're the only two explanations I can see.

The first possibility is that the hon. Provincial Treasurer is playing exactly the same game as he has played for the past two years—underestimating his revenues, and then he'll come back at the end of the year and say, "Look what a fine job I've done. I've ended up with a surplus." Well, Mr. Speaker, that tale's wearing pretty thin. Somehow I don't believe that even he expects us to swallow it for the third time.

The other possibility is that the Provincial Treasurer really expects conditions to be worse next year, but he doesn't dare admit it. If business does fall off—if purchasing power fails to keep up with prices and goods start piling up on the shelves—the first place it will be reflected is in revenues from the corporation profits tax. But if the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) estimated a decline in corporation profits, he'd be admitting that business was headed for the skids—

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Does my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) know we have not this year got a full year's revenue from corporation tax, actually speaking? For instance, capital taxes, we only started to receive them in September, a portion of which is profits tax does not come in until June, so that $50,000,000 we got does not really represent a full year.

MR. TAYLOR: You are estimating what they are going to be next year. You have been in four years now; surely to heavens you have had a full year some place there.

HON. MR. FROST: We just brought in this tax last year.

MR. TAYLOR: With the Government planning an election this year, he doesn't dare say that. So he keeps his estimate for corporation profits tax up at last year's figure and underestimates all his other revenues, hoping that everything will balance out even at the end of the year.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I'm sorry to be so critical of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost). But the fact is, that in the past four years, he has never taken this House into his confidence. Always he has offered us figures which never compare with the year-end financial results. Two years ago, for example, he prophesied a $21,000,000 deficit—and ended up with a small surplus. Last year he predicted a balanced budget—and ended up with a $25,000,000 surplus. How can we expect him to be any closer on this year's estimates?

And that criticism, Mr. Speaker, is not made by the Opposition alone. No less staunch a supporter of the Government than the Toronto Globe and Mail had this to say about the budget last Saturday. I am quoting from an editorial in the Globe and Mail headed "Not Without Blemish," on Saturday, April 3. It said in part:

"It would be regarded as bad budgeting to have an unanticipated deficit of $25,000,000. An unexpected surplus of similar proportions is no more praiseworthy. Budgets are supposed to be an estimation and allocation of taxation to meet the requirements of specified expenditures. While Mr. Frost stated, 'we have striven to accumulate (the surplus) with increased revenues over estimates,' that surplus was undeclared, and in fact would have been larger had last year's estimated expenditures of $159,322,000 been adhered to.

"Welcome as the surplus is for debt reduction, the use does not justify the method. Moreover, since there is no provision for similar debt payments in the current year, it is reasonable to question some of the budget's features."

Mr. Speaker, I think that's putting it mildly.

I want to deal with this question of debt reduction. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) told us they had paid for all capital expenditures, and in addition had reduced the net debt by $27,000,000. Well, that isn't an awful lot to brag about in these times of buoyant revenues. Out in Saskatchewan, in a shorter period of time, they have paid for all but $3,000,000 of capital expenditures, have reduced their net debt by $68,000,000 and have increased their sinking fund to retire future debt by over 50 per cent. And that in a province with far less resources than Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST: That is because the Dominion Government wrote off those treasury debts. There is nothing for them to write off for us. We pay our way. Does my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) notice their revenues far exceeded their estimates? If it happened there, why not here?

MR. TAYLOR: They increase their estimates occasionally. You stick the same $26,000,000 revenue every year on to liquor.

But how did the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) bring about this debt reduction of $27,000,000? He would like us to believe that it is the result of his careful budgeting. But if you look at the Interim Statement of Capital Receipts which he tabled last Friday, you'll find a little item tucked away there—"Received from Dominion Government re Tax Suspension Agreement . . . $28,964,000." That was a windfall the Provincial Treasurer got last year on the final reckoning of the wartime tax subventions. He won't ever get it again. And instead of boasting that he has reduced the net debt by $27,000,000, he should be explaining to us what happened to the $1,964,000 that was left of what he got from Ottawa. If it hadn't been for that nest egg we'd have been deeper in debt than ever.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I want to refer to one of the most outrageous statements in the entire budget. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) had the audacity to say to this House:

"For the coming fiscal year I know that the House will receive with satisfaction the announcement that there will be no new taxation."

HON. MR. FROST: That is better than British Columbia and Saskatchewan, they increased theirs.

MR. TAYLOR: If they did it was after they brought down the budget, not before.

And that, less than a week after he had tricked this House into passing a 20 per cent. amusements tax. I know it is now being levied by the Dominion, but it is a new tax as far as this province is concerned—and in the light of the $25,000,000 surplus, an entirely unjustified tax. We were given to understand that this tax was absolutely necessary unless the hospitals were to close their doors, or drive some of the municipalities into grave financial diffaculties. We in this group voted for it because we believed the hospitals needed that help. I say that the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and the Government which approved his action were less than honest with this House. If he had waited till his surplus was announced to bring down that bill, he couldn't have mustered even a majority of his own members to support it.

And, Mr. Speaker, I predict that this Government is going to get into a lot of trouble over that tax. They have not been maintaining that degree of co-operation with Ottawa which would persuade the Dominion Government to step quietly out of the field and let them enter it. I predict that the Government are going to take a worse spanking from Mr. King over this tax than they did over the bill respecting services to Crown tenants that they had to withdraw last week. The only thing that troubles me is that if that happens, it is our hospitals that will suffer.

HON. MR. FROST: I thought you said the hospitals did not need it.

MR. TAYLOR: They needed it out of the $25,000,000 you robbed them of last year.

We on this side of the House are sick and tired of seeing health and welfare problems being kicked back and forth like political footballs between Queen's Park and Ottawa. I strongly and sincerely urge the hon. Provincial Treasurer, before this session is ended, to bring down a supplementary estimate to guarantee the needed assistance to hospitals in case he finds that for any reason it isn't possible or politically feasible to impose his new amusements tax.

And now, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to express the opinion of this group regarding the government's $25,000,000 surplus—and it is an opinion which I am sure will be shared by most of the people of this province. We believe that it is a shame and a disgrace for this Government to have starved the health and welfare and other essential services of this province as it has, simply to build up a $25,000,000 surplus. One-third of that amount, Mr. Speaker, would have been enough to provide a $40-a-month old age pension for every pensioner in this province. The Government has stolen one-third of that surplus from the pockets of the needy aged people of Ontario. One-eighth of it would have been enough to bring mother's allowances up to a minimum level of decency—say $50 a month for the mother and $15 for each child. One-tenth of it would have provided a sufficient increase in the salaries of the Government's own employees to catch up with the rising cost of living, and give them some economic security in their jobs—the men and women who work in these buildings and throughout the province, the staffs of our mental hospitals and reform institutions, the members of our provincial police force. They are feeling the pinch as never before. The Government could have helped them—but it preferred to pile up a $25,000,000 surplus.

Or if the Government had done nothing else, it could have knocked a few cents off our eleven-cent gasoline tax—so that the working man who takes his family out in the car on Sunday would not have to pay a 42 per cent. tax on every gallon of gasoline he buys.

The government could have done all these things—but it chose instead to pile up a huge and unnecessary surplus. That surplus, Mr. Speaker, may look very fine to the Provincial Treasurer—but it was built from the sufferings and the heartaches of the people of Ontario. And if the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and his cabinet colleagues are prepared to stake their political future on that record, we welcome the challenge. Let the people of Ontario decide.

MR. H. A. STEWART (Kingston): Mr. Speaker, following the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) I want to thank him for his kind remarks on the occasion of my having missed him when visiting Cobalt. At that time soap and soap flakes were in short supply, and I want to say to the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) we were able to get some soap flakes in Cobalt.

Last Friday, April 2, this Legislature was privileged to hear the presentation of the finest budget address that has ever been given in this House. In 1943, the caption "Make Ontario Strong" was endorsed by a sufficient number of voters to enable the Progressive Conservative Party to form a government under the able leadership of the hon. George Drew. Plans were formed to give the people of Ontario a government which not only enacted legislation to make Ontario strong, but to legislate for the benefit of the citizens of the whole province.

In 1945, when owing to the miscalculations of the political opposition groups in this Chamber, the Government was defeated despite the warning that an adverse vote would be considered the same as a want of confidence motion, another election produced the slogan "Keep Ontario Strong." The confidence of the people had been firmly established and the Government was enthusiastically returned with a sizable majority and a mandate to keep in step with and to anticipate the needs of the expanding economy of the present and future for the people of Ontario.

This budget, therefore, reflects the wisdom of carefully laid plans which every hon. member of this House conscientiously admires and to which all parties appear to subscribe, knowing full well that the people of the province are being satisfactorily and adequately served in their own best interests to "Keep Ontario Strong."

I am, therefore, pleased on this occasion to express my appreciation and congratulations to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) on behalf of those whom I represent in this Legislature.

While a budget generally anticipates the requirements of the province as a whole, each member is primarily interested in his own constituency as an integral part of the 90 ridings in the province, and in relation to the service given to that constituency, public opinion is, therefore, reflected in all ridings either favourably or adversely upon the government in power.

As the representative of a riding, which as a community dates back to 1673, with a history not sufficiently known even throughout the Province of Ontario, I ask this assembly to bear with me while I endeavour to draw to your attention the importance of the moderately-sized City of Kingston in relation to eastern Ontario, and thereby to the rest of the province, in the expansion of the whole province in the Dominion of Canada.

It is readily apparent when Kingston is mentioned, that most people have heard that all the bad boys and girls go there for a stretch. To many this appears to be the sole mark of distinction for a progressively growing city. True, there are three penitentiaries in the immediate vicinity of Kingston, where free board and room is provided for those from all parts of Canada who can qualify. Let me assure you that if any of you contemplate a visit to these institutions I shall do my best to make your stay pleasant. I might add that the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) and I spent a few hours inside the walls of two of the three penitentiaries one day last summer. I believe we felt that the women were the toughest.

In the early days Kingston, at the mouth of the Rideau River, the foot of Lake Ontario and the source of the great St. Lawrence River, was the site of an Indian village, Cataraqui, long before the days of Muddy York. It became the early French settlement where the first Fort Frontenac was built in 1673. Down through the years it carries a great history of military importance which is evidenced in the four remaining Martello towns and the forts that are still in existence today and the great camps and barracks that were so useful in the past two world wars. It has been a military centre since the early days, and still is.

While a discourse of the history of Kingston is interesting, it is not my intention at the moment to burden you with detail. One aspect as it relates to Toryism, however, I should like to mention now.

Before the past war the Department of Highways of Ontario entered into an agreement with the Department of National Defence to restore Fort Henry situated on the Barriefield Hill overlooking the harbour of Kingston. More than $500,000 was spent by the Department of Highways to restore this fort to its original appearance. The purpose of the fort, as indeed were all of the fortifications in the area, was to keep the Americans out as in the war of 1812-14. The purpose in restoring Fort Henry was to bring the Americans in, as a tourist attraction. This was accomplished after the opening by the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King on August 8, 1938. In the first 13 months, 93,000 people paid an admission fee of 25 cents to visit this fort. When war broke out in 1939, according to agreement, the fort reverted to the Department of National Defence. Since the conclusion of the war, the Department of Highways has again been given control. Work on reconstruction has again been undertaken and this tourist attraction will be ready to receive visitors about May 24th next month.

In passing, I feel that a word of commendation should be expressed to Ronald Way, an employee of the Department of Highways who has been in charge of the forts at Niagara (Fort Erie) and Kingston. His work and his interest in preserving these historical monuments merits the fullest measure of commendation from a grateful Government. He has written an interesting book, Niagara Parks, a copy of which I believe has been received by every member of this House. The hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) recognizes in him a man of sterling worth.

In association with Fort Henry as a tourist attraction I should like to make a proposal to the Government through the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett). The background of this proposal emanates from the historical sketch of the fortifications of Kingston given at a Kiwanis luncheon Easter Monday last by Col. Stacey, Historical Section, Dominion Government.

During the war of 1812-13 Kingston was a naval base as well as a military centre. Between Fort Henry and Fort Frederick a stretch of water called Navy Bay was used for shipbuilding purposes. Both the Americans and the British engaged in a boat-building race to keep the other off Lake Ontario. The American yachts were no good in rough weather, the British boats were not so good in smooth weather, so between the rough and smooth waters of Lake Ontario each ran from the other and there was no actual naval engagement.

In his work as historian, Col. Stacey has visited the archives in Washington and there discovered plans to cross the St. Lawrence River below Kingston. These plans were never carried out. It is possible that if they had, all the country west of Kingston might have fallen to the Americans. The British realized this at the time and to provide transportation facilities between the capital of Canada and Kingston, the Rideau Canal system was constructed at very great cost to the British taxpayers. This was purely a military undertaking which fortunately has never been required for that purpose. The Rideau Canal has its beginning at Kingston, and is used mainly now for pleasure trips by both Americans and Canadians.

At the conclusion of the war of 1812 it was agreed that no naval vessels were to be harboured on either side. Consequently, 11 ships were sunk in Navy Bay. In 1938 an inspection of these ships was made, and they were found to be in a good state of preservation. It was my privilege during the visit of the late President Roosevelt, to present him with a replica of two cannon in miniature representing cannon from Fort Henry mounted on a wooden base taken from one of the sunken ships in Navy Bay.

Now, as the ships were built in Kingston to keep the Americans out, my proposal to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) and the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) is to raise the best of these ships, fit it out as of yore and let the ship bring the Americans in. This would be an attraction of great national importance, and I believe would pay very large dividends.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): What if the water is rough?

MR. STEWART: This ship was built to take care of that.

MR. SALSBERG: And if the water is calm?

MR. STEWART: We can take care of that, too.

It is highly desirable at all times to exhibit goodwill amongst the great tourist population, to make them glad they came and to provide something that will cause them to feel repaid for their visit to Canada. Here is something in line with the expanding economy keynote of the budget address.

I said earlier that to mention Kingston, most or many people think only of penitentiaries. You have heard a very sketchy outline of one phase of early history leading up to the proposal of placing a battleship on view for public inspection.

As a preliminary to my next thought, let me bring you up to more modern times.

Before 1939 the population of Kingston had never reached 25,000 persons. Today it is in the neighbourhood of 35,000. Never before have the opportunities for advancement been greater than they are today and with a Government that favours expansion and plans toward that end, our hopes for the future are brighter than ever.

Let me enumerate a few of the institutions within our borders, each of which has a history.

Education—public schools, three of which are new buildings under this Government plan; high schools, K. C. I. and Regiopolis, Universities, Queens, R.M.C.—the military college—and Regiopolis.

Industries; The Aluminum Company of Canada, Shipbuilding Co. of Canada (Canada Steamship Lines), Davis Tannery, Gould Storage Battery Co., Canada Dredge and Dock Co., one large elevator, with a capacity of 2,000,000 bushels, the nylon plant, of Canadian Industries Ltd., the Canadian Locomotive Co., the Frontenac Floor and Wall Tile Co., the only one of its kind in Canada, Heild Bros., textiles, Dye and Chemical Co., two large machine shops, and of course, Canada Bread and Westons.

Hospitals: Kingston General, a class A-1 hospital where the Ontario Cancer Clinic is housed, supported by the Ontario Government; the Hotel Dieu, a class A-1 hospital; St. Marys, a hospital for incurables and old people; the Ontario Hospital, for mental cases, and the D.V.A. Hospital, negotiations being under way there for a tuberculosis sanatorium.

Churches: Anglican, the seat of the Bishop of Ontario; Roman Catholic, the seat of the Archbishop of the Kingston area; the United Church, Presbyterian, Baptist, Tabernacles and other sects.

Dairies, stores, apartments, utilities, the City Hall, Armouries, and all that go to make a large, thriving community. One can purchase anything from a grain of wheat to a large locomotive or steamship.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) said in his address that "Our interest in, and ownership of the Canadian part of the Great Lakes, Superior, Huron, Erie and Ontario, are among our richest possessions." Ontario is the leading industrial province of Canada. Many factors have contributed to this position—abundant natural resources, water power, transportation and strategic location in the North American Continent. The rapid development of railways and highways which now span the province provide efficient transportation. On every hand is expansion and development. One has only to look around to see this.

While as a province we have no coal resources, this deficiency is offset very considerably by vast water power resources which make possible the development of large amounts of electrical energy.

Let us remember that electrical power provides all manner of home conveniences, a better standard of living, work and wages for hundreds of thousands of workmen and is in large measure the life blood of the nation's economy. In Ontario power is cheap and freely used. We use four times as much power per capita in Ontario as in Great Britain and twice as much as in the United States. In the past eight years, the average domestic consumption has increased from 175 kilowatt hours monthly to 226 kilowatt hours. This indicates that we are all using more electrical energy for one purpose or another.

Note the words "The rapid development of railways and highways provides efficient transportation." There are two other methods of transportation, airways and waterways. Note also that the Great Lakes are among our richest possessions. Add to this the great and mighty St. Lawrence River.

Nothing but the highest praise can justly be directed to the Government and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for their efforts in seeking to provide more electrical power for the needs of all users of electrical energy in the years ahead. This Government, as has been repeatedly said by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), has the utmost faith in the future of the Province of Ontario, and will direct its efforts to furnish all requirements for the consumers of electrical power. Far better to have more than we need than not enough for our daily use.

Plants now in the course of construction will provide an additional 914,500 horsepower capacity. Surely no man will say that that is entirely sufficient for all time to come.

Here is the comparison of the kilowatt hours and the horsepower peak in the city of Kingston for the years 1943 to 1947. This is exclusive of the Aluminum Company and the nylon plant who receive their power directly from the source. Incidentally, each of these companies uses approximately the same amount of power as the city of Kingston. It can readily be seen that if these companies were hooked up with the Kingston power supply, our system would be overloaded.

In the month of December, 1947, the Kingston Public Utilities paid the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission $41,000 at the rate of $1.90 per horsepower.

Taking these figures as a sample increase of what might be expected throughout the province in 200 communities using electric power, their requirements would be approximately 4,400,000 horsepower.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) noted that the development of the St. Lawrence River is in prospect, where our share of the additional power to become available will be 1,100,000 horsepower, equal to 2,500,000 tons of coal, effecting a considerable saving here.

You will now realize that I am speaking of the St. Lawrence Waterway Development. This development will do more than any other project to develop Eastern Ontario, the neglect of which has always been a major complaint of those from the east.

May I read a letter written by the then hon. Prime Minister of Ontario to the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King) as follows. It is dated January 16, 1937.

"Dear Mr. King:

"In reply to your letter of January 8th with reference to the proposed St. Lawrence deep waterway, I have on various occasions made my position very clear in this regard.

"I do not believe that the project can be justified on economic grounds, inasmuch as we are neither in need of a new avenue of transportation, nor additional electrical power.

"The whole St. Lawrence project to my mind looks like another beautiful dream comparable to the Hudson Bay railway and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario railway extension to James Bay."

MR. GEORGE ANDERSON (Port Arthur): From what are you quoting?

MR. STEWART: Correspondence, and documents relating to the St.

Lawrence deep waterway, and extracts from "Electrical Power" from the library. A good many of these letters are marked "Confidential." That was one of them. I will leave it at that.

This development will do more than any other project to develop Eastern Ontario, the neglect of which has always been a major complaint of those from the east.

The first step to investigate the need for a deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic was the appointment by the United States Government of a Deep Waterways Commission in 1896. From the work of this body, an International Waterways Commission was set up in 1905, whose work culminated in the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909. The Treaty provided for the establishment of a permanent tribunal which superseded the international Waterways Commission and was known as the International Joint Commission.

In the years following 1918, the improvement of the St. Lawrence River became a matter of public interest, and in 1920 the International Joint Commission was instructed by the governments of Canada and the United States to investigate and report on the feasibility of developing the river between Lake Ontario and Montreal for navigation and power. A board of two engineers, one from each country, assisted this Commission. The Board submitted a report to the Joint Commission known as the Bowden-Wooten Report of 1921, in which they proposed the development of the river jointly for navigation and power.

In 1924 a "Joint Board of Engineers" was appointed to make further studies and report. The report was submitted in November, 1926, but the Board failed to make any recommendations.

In 1929, a Board of Engineers representing the Dominion and Ontario was formed to determine which scheme of development of the two proposals each recommended by different bodies at one time or other, viz., the Single Stage or the Two Stage Project, best suited Canadian interests in the International Rapids Section. They recommended the Two Stage Project.

In 1932 the Joint Board of Engineers was reconvened and they also recommended the Two Stage Project. As a result the Treaty of 1932 was negotiated on the basis of a Two Stage Scheme.

Between 1932 and 1941 there was a marked improvement in the power demand, both from the domestic and international standpoint. The recommendation for the Two Stage Scheme was reversed and the Single Stage Scheme was adopted. This formed the basis of the 1941 Agreement which was the outcome of the negotiations begun in 1938.

Many names have been associated with correspondence dealing with the St. Lawrence Waterways Development, among them being R. B. Bennett, W. L. M. King, G. H. Ferguson, M. F. Hepburn, H. C. Nixon, O. D. Skelton, T. Stewart Lyon and others.

The Canada - Ontario Agreement, 19th of March, 1941, was signed by W. L. M. King, C. D. Howe, M. F. Hepburn, and H. C. Nixon.

None of the International Agreements relating to the St. Lawrence Development have been ratified by the Government of the United States; the last attempt failed this year, 1948.

Of all the letters exchanged in this project, I should like to read the message of the late President F. D. Roosevelt of the United States:

Page 37, "U.S. Department of Commerce. St. Lawrence Survey." That is the reference, and I quote:

"To my friends of the Great Lakes Seaway and Power Conference:

As I said in a message to your last conference 4 years ago, this assemblage of leaders from many sections of the country for a most practical purpose is a welcome and significant event.

"I said then that 'an opportunity is presented to complete a seaway comparable in economic value to the Panama Canal,' a seaway to which 'the public development of St. Lawrence power is inseparably linked.'

"It was then an opportunity. It is now a vital necessity.

"The United States needs the St. Lawrence Seaway for defense. The United States needs this great land-locked sea as a secure haven in which it will always be able to build ships and more ships in order to protect our trade and our shores.

"The United States needs, tremendously needs, the power project which will form a link in the seaway in the International Rapids Section of the St. Lawrence River to produce aluminum and more aluminum for the airplane programme which will assure command of the air.

"Selfish interests will tell you that I am cloaking this great project in national defense in order to gain an objective which has always been dear to me. But I tell you that it has always been dear to me because I recognized its vital importance to the people in peace and in war.

"Let those who oppose the immediate undertaking of this project sit here at the center of the national defense effort in Washington and feel the pressure of the National Defense Commission calling for more and more power for our great aluminum plants and for other munitions industries requiring lots of cheap power. I am sure that they will know that the opposition which defeated the St. Lawrence Treaty in 1934 was a mistaken opposition, based on failure to appraise the full needs of their country in the world situation which was even then developing.

"What would we not give today, we who are responsible for the country's supreme defence effort, if the great St. Lawrence turbines were already in place, steadily revolving under the drive of St. Lawrence waters now running to waste, producing every hour of the day 1,000,000 horsepower to supply the expansion of our essential defence industries.

"Had this project been started in 1934, as we urged, it would now be complete and occupying a place with other great projects, such as the Tennessee Valley in the southeast, Boulder Dam in the southwest and the Columbia River projects in the northwest, among the great national defence assets of this continent.

"No one who has studied our national defence problems and the international situation can possibly fail to see the need for this project in the defense of the continent. The Congress of the United States, in providing funds for a two-ocean navy on a programme covering many years, has properly recognized the essential place of sea power in continental defence. The world's merchant tonnage is diminishing at the rate of tens of thousands of tons a month. The distances which may be effectively covered by bombing planes are rapidly increasing.

"Seacoast shipyards are already over-taxed with uncompleted construction. Shipyards on the Great Lakes with access to the ocean, yet close to the sources of supply of labour, raw and finished material, further removed from possible attack, may be a vital factor in successful defence of this continent. They will help to build the ships which will bring back commerce to the harbours of the Atlantic Coast ports.

"Opponents of the project have pointed out that it takes 4 years to build this seaway. They know, but fail to mention, that it takes at least that long to build a battleship. They also know that this project will cost the United States less than three battleships and that the power project will be entirely self-liquidating.

"We hope that the world situation may soon improve."

I can go on for a little while yet. I have lots of books here, and I can go on all night.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Does the hon. member (Mr. Stewart) want an encyclopedia?

MR. STEWART: I have some encyclopedias here too. I do not think the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) needs complain much about it, do you, Mr. Speaker?

MR. MACLEOD: I am not complaining, I am enjoying every word of it.

AN HON. MEMBER: We are all with you.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Carry on.

MR. STEWART: "We hope that the world situation may soon improve."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): We can all agree on that.

MR. STEWART (reading):

"But we are bound to be prepared for a long period of possible danger. Who can say, with assurance, that we shall not need for our defence or peaceful pursuits every possible ship-building resource, particularly those that exist and may be developed in the interior of our country? Only one who can say that we do not need the battleships that we are now building will dare to say that we do not need the essential Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway.

"The need for the seaway is coupled with an increasing demand for the power. Already our defence industries in the northeast have been required to import huge blocks of electric power from Canada. They are asking greater imports, and Canada can agree to supply this power only temporarily. A new source of cheap power for national defence must be developed immediately.

"Along with its benefits to national defence, this project will contribute to the peace-time welfare of a multitude of labourers, small business men, home owners, and farmers. I said in 1936 and I say now, 'such a development as we propose to carry out in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin unquestionably will result in greater activity for all ports and transportation agencies. This has been the history of all new navigation projects and improvements directed to better commercial communication in this country and throughout the world. The fear that the seaway will result in injury on the lower Mississippi or to our Atlantic ports is groundless.'

"What this project means to the ordinary man and woman cannot be too highly stressed. It means a more secure nation. It means a continent protected and served by the additional shipping built in inland shipyards. It means more industries, both defence and domestic, thriving on the cheapest power in history. It means more comforts in the homes of many cities and rural areas. It means more work for the ordinary citizen in shipyards, factories, and other transportation services connecting the centre of this continent with this great highway to and from our national and international markets.

"I am preparing to press for the immediate construction of this project. Because of its vital defence character, I have allocated $1,000,000 of the defence funds made available by the Congress to make the necessary engineering surveys and to prepare the preliminary plans and specifications so that no time may be lost in starting the undertaking.

"I am conducting conversations with our neighbour Canada to work out the international aspects of the development of this great common asset. I shall propose to the Congress of the United States, which will assemble in January, that it take the necessary steps toward completion of this St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Project, on which so much of our national safety and welfare depend."

That was Mr. F. D. Roosevelt.

It is apparent that failure to obtain the necessary approval of the United States Congress is due to fear of a diversion of water traffic from the United States Atlantic harbours.

In any event, the Province of Ontario and the State of New York appear to be in agreement as to the necessity of increased power development on the St. Lawrence. My whole purpose in speaking on this subject is to urge the Government to continue negotiations till the power development at least becomes a reality for the benefit of Eastern Ontario and eventually the whole province and the Dominion of Canada.

I should like now to express my appreciation of the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) for many considerations. This one he probably does not expect from me. I refer to the completion of the divided highway between Toronto and Oshawa.

MR. SPEAKER: May I interrupt the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Stewart) and draw attention to the fact that it is nearly 6 o'clock?

MR. STEWART: Could I finish this, Mr. Speaker?

MR. MACLEOD: Finish it later.

MR. ANDERSON: Afterwards will be all right.

MR. SPEAKER: I will bear with the hon. member (Mr. Stewart) if he wishes to continue.

MR. STEWART: Mr. Speaker, it will take only a minute if I may continue.

This is a road of which we are all proud. One can maintain the speed limit without interruption, and for that part of the journey arrive in Oshawa without jagged nerves. Then from Oshawa, eastward to Kingston, and beyond on No. 2, don't be impatient, you will arrive sometime.

Many people ask me when the four lane highway will be started. I know highways cost money, but from a safety standpoint, give me the four lane road.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. STEWART: It will take years to build, but could a start be made in our area so that eventually, before some of us are too old to enjoy it, a through highway will at least connect the Thousand Island bridge with Toronto?

I mention these things because they are not specified in the budget and, to connect them with a budget speech, it would be gratifying indeed to learn that the Government, of which I am an ardent supporter, will at least take them under advisement.

Again, hearty congratulations to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and his Government, and on this occasion particularly, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

At 6 o'clock the House took recess.

8 O'CLOCK P.M.

After recess.

MR. E. A. MACGILLIVRAY (Glen-garry): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak for the first time this session, may I first extend to you my personal good wishes for your continued good health and compliment you upon the able manner in which you have presided over the deliberations of this Legislature. It gives me, sir, an especial pleasure to greet you as an old colleague in this House. We came into this House in 1937, and to many of the hon. members who joined us at that time, I also extend my heartiest congratulations and good wishes for their good work.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): What about 1943?

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: We will omit that. I do not see why that should be brought up at this time.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: While you were thrust into your present office on the shortest of notice, your demeanour and tactics make it appear as if you were born to the position. Above all, your geniality and your affability have served to create a most pleasant atmosphere in this chamber.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: As evidence of this, is the almost negligible quantity of any semblance of rancour which might have crept into the discussions.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to convey my sympathy to the hon. members who have been prevented from attending the session because of illness. It was at the opening of the session I suffered a sudden attack of pneumonia, the effects of which I have not entirely overcome. It is because of my own personal experience, you will understand, I am making particular reference to the hon. members who are undergoing the pain and discomfort of ill-health. Through you, sir, I want to express the hope that the hon. members to whom my remarks apply will speedily regain their health and take an active part once more in the affairs of Government.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to turn my attention now for a few moments to the particular topic of this debate, the budget. I recognize that my hon. friend the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) is another colleague, as far as I can recollect. I think he entered this chamber in 1937, and is today without doubt one of our most outstanding young Canadians.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: I was somewhat intrigued by the spoken words of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), particularly the glowing account of the great development which faces our province. In justice to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) I must admit it was a plausible picture which he drew for the hon. members, of the tremendous things which are in store for Ontario. Whilst his manner of presenting his budget address was modest, the content of his remarks could be termed anything but "modest." An analysis of his printed speech shows that it was dotted throughout with the terms "millions of dollars"; "millions of dollars of a surplus"; "millions of dollars of revenue"; "millions of dollars of expenditures"; and "millions of dollars of expansion." But what was said regarding relief for the poor tax payers who provide all these millions?

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) made a great gesture when he announced there would be no increased taxation, that the Government once again would forego a levy on personal income. Mr. Speaker, in view of this startling surplus—and I use the word "startling" advisedly, because the surplus was in that category, in view of the small one which was anticipated—I doubt whether the Government would be foolish enough—in fact I insist it would not dare to impose new taxes at this time.

While the Government may take credit for this unprecedented surplus, surely it does so with its tongue in its cheek. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) speaks of "buoyant revenue" as being responsible for the surplus. "Buoyant revenue" in what? Corporation taxes? Is this Government assuming all the credit for a business boom which is nation-wide? I suggest if they happened into prosperous times, it was mainly because of the policies of the Federal Government of this country.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: I ask the hon. members to bear with me patiently. I am just out of a sick bed, and these words I am giving to you are not very well typed, which is why I am forced to bend over them, to try and convey to you what is in my mind.

It is only elementary when there is a depression in Canada, the blame is fixed on Ottawa, and the Dominion Government is expected to take steps to correct it. Thus, is it not only fair, when there is prosperity across the nation, the major share of the credit should go to the central government at Ottawa.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: May I, Mr. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) challenge you to deny that statement.

Mr. Speaker, I submit if the revenue from the "buoyant taxes" is greater than ever before, credit for that is due to the administration, whose policies, economic and otherwise, are primarily responsible for good times today, the central Government at Ottawa.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: Mr. Speaker, we are told another factor in the surplus is a great increase in the revenue from liquor. Is the Government taking credit because people are drinking more whiskey?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: If it does, it is admitting, in effect, it has failed in its purpose to induce moderation in the consumption of alcoholic liquors.

Mr. Speaker, while I am on this subject, I would like to draw attention to something which is akin to "short changing" the public. Under the War-time Alcoholic Beverages Act, the strength of hard liquor was reduced by watering the liquor which they are selling.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Was it not your government which did that?

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: I am charging you with that. Do not try to throw that back on me. That is one of your faults.

Since the Act has been rescinded, there have been several conferences between the Liquor Commissioners of the various provinces regarding restoring liquor to its previous strength. As yet, this province, like the others, has not seen fit to act, but continues to sell the public so much water in a bottle of liquor.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: I can see by the happy expression on the face of my hon. friend, the Minister for Ottawa South (Mr. Dunbar) that he is casting an accusing eye upon me. How do you feel about it yourself, Mr. Minister? (Mr. Dunbar).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: I have not yet heard any responsible Government official state the liquor as it is received from the distilleries is of such strength. Do I happen to see the hon. Chairman of the Liquor Control Board here (Mr. Greisinger)? No. These boys have a great habit of vanishing and disappearing whenever you are making a charge of this kind.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: It would be injurious to consume, and therefore, to protect the people, the Government in its wisdom has decided to continue to dilute the liquor.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: Therefore, the only conclusion one can draw from the "de-watering"—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: Is that it is extremely profitable. Proof of this most surely can be found in the fact that the liquor profits were almost one third greater than estimated—through "de-watering."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: In its lust for revenue, has the Government given any thought to giving the public full value for its money? Apparently all such thought has been discarded. If a grocer is caught watering his milk—well, the government waters the liquor.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: It has a monopolistic right of purveying, but the poor grocer would be prosecuted. It reminds me of the old saying "Do not do as I do, do as I say."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: My thoughts in this respect lead me to another matter. This Government has made a great fuss about refusing to submit its taxing powers to Ottawa for fear of losing its autonomy. It has clamoured for the return of certain taxing fields such as gasoline and amusements.

Mr. Speaker, what has happened? A year ago the Dominion ceased taxing gas. Did the motorists benefit? No, the province snuffed up the 3 cent tax and comes up with the greatest yield from this field that it has ever experienced. And I say to you gentlemen here tonight that it is a downright shame that the ordinary man should be compelled to contribute towards that huge surplus which you are boasting of in your House today.

There is a possibility of the Federal Government relinquishing its revenue on amusements. Will the public benefit? No, the Government is on the mark ready to rush in the minute Ottawa withdraws. I am willing to grant that the hospitals are in need of greater financial assistance, but surely the man who carries the load is also entitled to some consideration.

Aside from its all-too-ready habit of stepping into a tax field, the minute the Dominion Government steps out, the attitude of this Government towards taxes is a negative one, Mr. Speaker.

As I have already stated, the Provincial Treasurer covers himself with a blanket of benevolence and announces there will be no new taxes. Why not? Why should there be? I ask him in all seriousness, if he thinks the public is fooled into thinking it is getting something by such an announcement? Does he think for one moment the taxpayer is going to swallow the news of the surprising $25,000,000 surplus and be content to learn that he does not have to contribute one more cent over and above what he is now paying?

And, Mr. hon. Minister—not Municipal Affairs—I am referring to the hon. Minister next to you—the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), I want to say to you, insofar as I am concerned, I think you are doing a pretty fair job. I want you to know that you have my fullest co-operation at all times, and also my heartiest congratulation for anything you want to do or intend to do.

HON. DANA PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Thank you, Eddie (Mr. MacGillivray).

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: No, Mr. Speaker, the average taxpayer, who bore the burden of financing a war and has continued to carry the load through the post-war period is demanding some relief, not only from the central Government but from this Government here in Ontario. He wants some positive—not negative—action. In view of the nearly $47,000,000 realized from gasoline taxes, he is justified in demanding that the 3 cent levy tacked on a year ago be dropped.

While he is willing to contribute something in the way of an amusement tax to aid hospitals, he does not feel that the tax should be 20 per cent. when he knows the return will be twice as much as the Government is going to give these institutions. I say that we asked the Government to reduce their amusement tax to 10 per cent. and they refused.

Cars and movies can no longer be considered luxuries. Both are essential to the health and wellbeing of the people.

When excessive taxation is levied—and I think even the Government will admit the gas tax and the proposed amusement tax approach the punitive stage—it hits at a majority of the people who are already struggling to make ends meet.

Mr. Speaker, there is another class of people, apart from the tax payers, who need help. I refer to the pensioners, the aged, the widows with children and the blind. Would it not have been more humane on the part of the Government, instead of amassing this huge surplus it boasts of, to have diverted just a few of the millions to make the lot of these people a more happy one?

All it proposes to do is to provide free dental care for children of women in receipt of mother's allowances. With a $25,000,000 surplus, all the Government can commit itself to doing for these fatherless children is to arrange for them to have their teeth extracted without charge.

If the matter was not so serious, one would be inclined to laugh at what must be a new low in munificence. At the most, this free dental care will cost only a few thousands of dollars. In many other municipalities where free dental care is provided in the schools, this grandiose offer of the Government will amount to absolutely nothing.

Typical of this Government's whole attitude towards those who cannot fend for themselves is its treatment of old-age pensioners. When the Dominion Government agreed to a basic pension of $30.00, this Government attempted to convey the impression that it would make the pension $40.00. As in many similar announcements, there was a proviso, and a stickler one at that, which nullified the whole effect of this pseudo-generosity. The pensioner had to prove need before qualifying for the $40.00. And I might say, Mr. Speaker, in the riding which I represent, I have failed to meet one old-age pensioner who is receiving $40.00 a month. Now, you may say "they are keeping quiet." If they are, there are a powerful lot who are not keeping quiet and I can speak for the rest of the hon. members who have similar situations.

So now we have the picture of these aged people being placed in the position of a supplicant to obtain a bare sufficiency to live on. They are reduced to the category of beggars, reaching for what is called a $10 bonus which is dangled before their eyes. In effect, this Government says to the pensioner, "Prove to us that you will suffer if you receive only $30.00, and we will make it $40.00." What an attitude to adopt towards these men and women, poor old souls who are struggling along the streets in tattered clothes and in very many cases, in the greatest of ill-health, having to try and get along on $30 a month, which we know perfectly well is nothing else but an allowance of destitution.

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): When your government was in power you only gave them $23.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: Yes, but an entirely different situation existed then. Do you mean to tell me the cost of living has not gone up in the last five years?

HON. MR. FROST: The maximum was $23; now it is $40.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: You know the ridiculousness of that reply.

HON. MR. FROST: No, I would say this—

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: You sit down. I have got the floor. If you want to make a speech you will have lots of chances to make one, and make all the foolish speeches you like after I sit down.

HON. MR. FROST: That does not alter the fact you only gave them $23.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: You keep your mouth shut. $30 to start with. What a noble gesture that was. Are you not proud of yourself? How can you go back to your own electors without a flushed face?

HON. W. GRIESINGER (Minister without portfolio): There is still not enough water in it for you.

MR. SPEAKER: Let us have no more interruptions, please.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: When did you come in? Would it not have been more noble for this wealthy Government, which speaks of spending millions on this and millions on that to have granted these pensioners $40 to start with and after the necessary investigation, if it was learned the pensioner had other means of income or assistance, to have made the necessary reductions to the basic pension of $30? But no, the Government is too busy accumulating its surplus of millions to be bothered with these folk, forgotten in the twilight of their lives.

I would like to refer to the Chairman of the Liquor Control Board (Mr. Griesinger)—what was that ugly charge you made against me a moment ago?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: I just said there was still not enough water in it for you.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: And there is still not enough water in it for you.

Now, my friends, I come possibly to the most serious part of my address, and that is touching upon Communism.

I see my old friend the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) sitting back there with a smug smile on his face. I doubt very much, if, by the time I have finished dealing with him, his smile will be as smug as it is now.

One of the more common subjects broached in the debates in this Chamber is that of Communism, and the menace that it is to our own way of life. I yield first place to no one in or out of this Parliament in my abhorrence of a vile system of government, which denies the existence of God, pits class against class, and even child against parent.

Any form of government which depends upon deceit and distrust cannot hope to succeed. Yet, in its machinations and operation there is bound to ensue murder and misery.

I am coming to you fellows, in the C.C.F. next.

When one sees the extremely able men who are attracted to Communism—as an example, the able hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and his colleague (Mr. Salsberg), who sits alongside of him—it makes one pause and ponder.

There is no doubt in my mind the proponents of this philosophy of hate, particularly the native-born of this country, must have at some time in their life experienced extreme hardship and suffering which has given a Machiavellian twist to their line of thinking.

The Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) I am willing to concede, has never left any doubt within the minds of those within the sound of his voice as to his contempt and loathing of Communism and all it stands for. And with that, I heartily am in accord. This same contempt and loathing is held by all freedom-loving Canadians. But his methods of combating the inroads of this despicable form of tyranny in my opinion, could be improved upon. The whole theme of his approach to the subject is based on enunciation, as far as I can ascertain.

Denouncing Communists alone will not ward off their insidious invasion of our beloved country. When the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) resorts to name-calling such as we in this Legislature, have heard, he is only playing into the hands of these masters of invective.

Nor, Mr. Speaker, will repression alone provide the answer. The Prime Minister has called upon the Dominion Government to outlaw the Communist Party. That is only a half-measure. It will only serve to drive them underground where they seem to thrive.

In a recent article in Colliers, Walter Reuther, head of the United Automobile Workers Union, pointed to the dangers of handling Communism in this manner. And from the success he has had in meeting the professional "Red" agitators on one of their common stamping grounds—the labour unions—I am sure he is in a position to speak with authority.

No, Mr. Speaker; we must bring the Communists out into the light and expose them and all their nefarious undertakings. Make them walk the broad avenues of public opinion so they can be subjected to the scrutiny of the people at large. Don't drive them below the surface. That will give them the opportunity of claiming they are being persecuted and denied their democratic rights. If there is any one thing that a Communist thrives on, it is the thought that he is a martyr to the cause.

I want to declare here and now my abhorrence of this most devilish party, the Communists, and to declare that I am unalterably opposed to them in every respect in which they show their ugly heads in the country.

Communists for the most part are fanatics. Their form of totalitarian government is a sort of religion with them. If they are put in a position where they are to suffer by being deprived of certain rights, they believe they are undergoing martyrdom.

A person as well-read and informed as the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) must realize by now that the communistic propaganda in democratic countries is aimed principally at the people in the lower income brackets.

Moving among these people with satanic suavity, they attempt to promote strife and discontent. That is the core of their attack—strife and discontent. They thrive in the bed of our mal-adjusted economy under which so many people live from one pay day to another, barely able to eke out a proper living.

It is to this field, Mr. Speaker, that I claim the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew)—and all of us for that matter—should concentrate our efforts.

Let us adopt measures which will serve to remove the threat of insecurity in old age and sickness which is the bogey that confronts the majority of our wage earners. That is why I claim pensions for the aged, the widowed mothers and the blind should be increased.

That is why this Government is to be criticized for failing despite all your grandiose claims of a $25,000,000 surplus—you ought to be ashamed, you ought to hang your heads in shame when you make that claim and still have these people suffering on $30 a month—for failing to reach an agreement with the Dominion which would provide our people with a hospitalization plan which would remove the worry of an unexpected but costly illness.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, I say the Government of this province should be more concerned with obtaining for the people such essentials for a proper living, than with building up huge surpluses.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I do not think I would be doing my duty—

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): No.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY:—to the people I am speaking to—and that is the whole Province of Ontario, were I to leave out you boys, the C.C.F.-ers.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): We would rather you did.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: The C.C.F. in particular should clean house. There are too many Red-tinged members of the C.C.F. They should be made to declare themselves for what they are instead of masquerading as Socialists.

I have yet to hear the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) definitely refute the charge that he is a party-line follower of the "Reds." He claims he is content to leave it to the members of his union to pass judgment on him in this respect.

That will not suffice for the general public. He sits in this House as a member of the C.C.F., and when I say that, I challenge him to get up and prove that they have not got more pseudo-Communists in their ranks than the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin). And remember this, I am not challenging the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) with being one, but he has not concretely denied that charge to my satisfaction, Mr. Speaker, and not, I believe, to your complete satisfaction.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to interrupt the hon. member (Mr. MacGillivray)—

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: I will be through in a moment. You can sit down, and make a big speech afterwards.

That will not suffice for the general public. The hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) sits in this House as a member of the C.C.F. Yet prominent members of his union are known to be carrying on the subversive doctrines of Soviet Russia. The hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin), if he is true to the party to which he claims allegiance, should leave no doubt in the minds of all of us as to his stand on this menacing movement.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. V. C. KNOWLES (Hamilton Centre): Mr. Speaker, first, I would like to congratulate you on the excellent manner with which you have conducted the affairs of this House since your elevation to the high office of Speaker, and I feel sure every member of this Legislature will concur with me in that respect.

Secondly, I want to pay my respects to the late member for Huron, Dr. Hobbs Taylor. Hobbs was respected and loved by all who knew him, and his untimely decease came as a great shock to me. My sympathies go out to Mrs. Taylor and her family in their bereavement.

Thirdly, I want to congratulate our newest member of the House, the hon. member for Huron, Tom Pryde, who is carrying on in the manner Hobbs would wish, and in moving the adoption of the Speech from the Throne, the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) did an excellent job, and was very ably followed by the hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) who seconded the motion. My congratulations to both for a job well done.

And now, I want to congratulate our cabinet and our hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) for his very commendable budget.

Ontario need never fear for the future with men of their vision and ability at the head of our Government, regardless of what the Star might print.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, I represent a riding in the centre of Hamilton, Ontario—the greatest industrial city in the Dominion of Canada, with more American capital invested in Hamilton than in any other city in the Dominion, and that has often been referred to as the Pittsburgh of Canada, but since Hamilton is so highly industrialized and many of my constituents work in these industries, I am very much concerned with management and labour relations. My sympathies have always been with labour, and will continue so. Nevertheless, labour and management is a partnership, and must work together to solve their mutual problems for the benefit of both.

In the change-over from an agricultural nation to an industrial nation, many Canadian industries have become so large that management has lost that sympathetic understanding of the average working man's problem. The worker feels he is just a cog in the wheel, and has become envious and jealous of management. "Man does not work for bread alone"—or for wages. He must be made to feel that he is wanted and needed. On the other hand, management has grown suspicious and frightened of labour through their high-handed and dictatorial attitude. Neither feeling is conducive to harmony or understanding, and both will suffer if they continue to grow apart.

Inflation is an enemy of both industry and labour, and could very easily cost them the gains that both have made in the past decade, and if we are to defeat the inflationary threat of today, labour and management must work together in a stabilization of both prices and wages. Management must take off its coat, roll up its sleeves and get closer to labour, and convince labour of its sincerity and integrity, by deeds, not words.

Labour must bargain intelligently, and show that she is a partner and willing to co-operate. Management cannot do it alone—labour cannot do it alone—but management and labour working together can do a lot, to control costs and wages, and I believe labour would be well advised to take stock and try to consolidate their increases of the past, and management, like labour, must also exercise moderation and not seek higher prices every time they give a wage increase. If every time wages go up, prices go up, we will build an inflationary spiral that will one day come tumbling down and engulf us all. Therefore, I feel both management and labour must act in their own self-interests and with sympathetic understanding and co-operation between labour and management, Canada can go far in the years ahead.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to make some observations on hydro and their proposed cycle change. The cost is estimated to be around $190,000,000, and will require upwards of 10 years or more. The reasons and benefits from cycle change are many, and I would like to enlarge on a few.

Reasons and benefits from cycle change:

1. 60-cycle power takes the flicker out of electric lighting. This flicker is readily noticeable by those entering a 25-cycle area but who ordinarily live in a 60-cycle area. Removal of flicker relieves eye strain and is a health benefit. The flicker is particularly noticeable with the new type fluorescent lighting.

2. Southwestern Ontario is a 25-cycle "island" in a 60-cycle continent. People moving to or from southwestern Ontario are put to much expense changing over electrical equipment as refrigerators, washing machines and vacuum cleaners. (Most radios are made with a universal transformer.)

3. Electrical manufacturers will undoubtedly receive enormous orders for revision of equipment and building new equipment. Their expenditures will go mostly for (a) wages and (b) materials. For example, Hamilton manufacturers of electrical goods might reasonably look for capacity business for some years to come, with full pay envelopes for all their employees. The benefits of the programme to the wage earner extend far beyond the man who works for an electrical goods manufacturer. An impetus is given to the metal trades; steel, iron, copper and brass. The same applies as to insulating materials, many of them of a textile nature. In turn, the benefits are passed on to the mining industry, and there is also a great benefit to agriculture. Regular, full pay envelopes means steady markets for farm and garden products. Carry the thought through and even the income tax division of the Dominion Government gets its share.

4. The change in installations, generators, motors and transformers means unbounded prosperity for the electrical trades. Even the man who works with the shovel will find his work cut out for him.

5. Machine tools are mostly made for 60-cycle use; they are chiefly made in the U.S.A.; with 25-cycle current they have to have special motors, a huge extra cost to the Canadian user who presents a relatively small market as compared with the whole U.S.A. market.

6. Television will become a reality in Ontario only when 60-cycle current is available.

7. In case of war, Canada may well be a battle-ground. If a big generating plant is wrecked in Ontario or in the U.S.A., the generating capacity of another plant in either country will be available to plug the gap. The use of a universal cycle might well spell the difference between defeat and victory—and indeed there may well be a war at almost any time. The universal cycle available on the British “grid” was one of the factors that saved Britain in World War II.

8. 60-cycle power means that the benefits of bulk manufacturing will be available to Ontario hydro users, with immense savings in cost of equipment.

9. Ontario's Government policy is, generally, to buy first, Ontario-made goods, second, goods of Canadian manufacture, third, goods of Empire (British) manufacture, and fourth, foreign goods. It may well be that British manufacturers can supply some of the materials needed for the change-over. This would help Britain's trade balance and would help her in paying for her enormous purchases of food and other materials required from Canada.

10. The time for the change-over is now. With enormous power developments coming into production Ontario will shortly be the most highly electrified area in the world. Probably 95 per cent. of Ontario's farms will use electricity. If the change is delayed to the time when Ontario's power production is doubled, as it will be, the cost would be almost prohibitive.

11. As the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) has explained, the change-over will be by districts where a small army of men will make the necessary changes of equipment with a minimum of interruption.

I realize, Mr. Speaker, that my next subject has nothing to do with provincial legislation, since it is purely a federal matter, but, being a member of the Provincial Legislature, I would like to ask the Government at Ottawa why Canada is the only country of the world that prohibits the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine. In my opinion, Ottawa is creating a monopoly for the butter interests by refusing to allow the manufacture and sale of a nutritious and palatable substitute, namely, margarine. Butter will still have its market among those who are able and willing to pay the price, but those who are unable, or unwilling to pay the price asked for butter, should not be denied a substitute, which is both palatable and nutritious. Creamery butter production suffered a reduction in 1946 over 1945, of over 22,000,000 pounds, with declines occurring in every province. That is nearly 2 pounds for every man, woman and child living in the Dominion of Canada, so I contend, Mr. Speaker, that with our increase in population each year, in the face of butter production down, it is not unreasonable to ask for the sale and manufacture of oleomargarine.

I believe control of this kind is causing a hardship on the working man's family, and is an unwarranted interference in the private lives of our citizens. I also realize much pressure is put on both the Federal and Provincial Legislature by certain groups seeking legislation of benefit for themselves alone, without regard to the general welfare of the average citizen, but in a democracy we should be very careful in putting any legislation on to the Statutes that limits competition or hinders private enterprise.

I will venture to say that if, in 1880 or 1890, the horse-breeders of America or the carriage manufacturers of America, could have exercised the same influence on the government of their day as some groups apparently are able to do today, the automotive industry would never have gotten a start. It would have died in its infancy, or at least have been retarded for many years.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask another question on subsidies. I have sat in this House and listened to estimates and bills being passed that pay a subsidy on hogs and cheese, etc. I will enumerate just two. On page 8, of the 1948-49 estimates, for instance, there is a subsidy for cheddar cheese amounting to $1,275,000, and a subsidy for premiums on swine of $950,000. Those two items alone amount to nearly $2,225,000. That is a lot of money, but who receives it, the producer or the consumer? I know the producer actually receives the money, but I contend, Mr. Speaker, that it is the consumer who eventually benefits through larger production and lower costs, for without the subsidy, the farmer could not and would not produce the same quantity which would mean higher prices to the consumer.

So, why not subsidies on coal for the working man? Canada is a cold country, and in the winter time one has to keep warm, as well as eat, and with coal around $20 a ton, I know most Hamilton residents will welcome a subsidy on coal.

MR. S. J. HUNT (Renfrew): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

HON. MR. LESLIE M. FROST (Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair and the House resolves itself into committee of supply.

Motion approved; House in committee of supply, Mr. H. A. Stewart in the chair.

HON. MR. FROST (Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, there are one or two remarks I might address to the House in connection with the Treasury Department.

As I said in the budget address the other day, and as the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) remarked this afternoon, the Treasury Department has a very fine organization and some very fine officials. We have the Treasury Department proper and the bureau of research, the motion picture branch and the department of the provincial auditor which, in fact, is really not part of the Treasury Department but comes under the treasurer for administration.

I would like to say in connection with the estimates of this department and the very fine officials we have, I think that we have in Ontario as fine and well-equipped officials, to deal with matters and problems of finance as any Government in Canada, not excepting the Dominion Government.

I have noticed in various conferences we have had relating to official matters or matters relating to any of the departments of Government, that our information here in Ontario is always up-to-date and I know my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Nixon) will be glad to know this—that in the Provincial Conferences that we have had, and the meetings we have had at the last Provincial Conference, the information available for the people of Ontario and the Government of Ontario has always been reliable and, in many instances, it has been available before similar information would be available from the Dominion officials.

I think I should say this to the hon. members of the House. Some mention has been made in the budget debate concerning estimates of revenue. That, in itself, is a very difficult matter to estimate in these days. We know there are things that may affect revenue. For instance, there is always the possibility that a shortage of oil or gasoline may affect revenues very importantly. In other departments we find other conditions apply which may overnight affect conditions very radically.

In regard to the estimates; do not think that the officials of the Treasury Department, who have given these estimates very painstaking care and have applied to it all of the information which can be applied to these things, are simply grasping figures out of the air. I know the hon. members of this House will realize in our sister Province of Quebec their actual receipts this year over-ran their estimates by about $20,000,000. That was true in the Province of Saskatchewan. It was true in the Province of British Columbia. My recollection is, in Ottawa, actually the figures so far indicate a surplus at Ottawa of $800,000,000 and will probably run a $1,000,000,000. In the old country the receipts of the government will over-run the estimates by at least two-fold, and they have a similar condition in Washington.

I think the problem the treasury officials have is this: they have to advise in the over-run of revenue, which are extremely buoyant, and to use them wisely and soundly in the interests of the people of Ontario.

Another thing I think I should mention to the House. As the hon. members opposite, who have sat in the Government, know, taxes are not imposed rashly or without a great deal of thought and a very great deal of consideration. In Ontario actually we are very, very fortunate. We have in Ontario the lowest provincial taxes in Canada. We have no sales tax, we have no provincial income tax, we have no tobacco tax, we have no meal tax; we have the lowest mining tax in Canada. That matter will come up in the mines estimates, if not in the treasury estimates. We have the lowest license fees in Canada. It is true our succession duty set-up is not entirely satisfactory but that is due to the Dominion Government. We have in Ontario the lowest per capita provincial tax in all of Canada.

I would say this to you as regards debt-service situation. You will notice in the estimates a very, very large sum of money, $23,000,000 for debt-service but the debt-service charges are not only falling rapidly but in comparison to the revenues raised the amount of debt-service charges is diminishing. I do not know actually whether that is a point of merit or not but I should say this; some five years ago the debt-service charges in Ontario equalled about one-fifth of our expenditure. I think I am not incorrect in stating this. At one time in the low point of the depression it is probable our debt-service charges approached one-third of the expenditure. Five years after, one-fifth of our expenditures and at the present time the debt-charges will be something less than one-seventh of our expenditures.

I might mention, in connection with our Ontario financing, that we have been able to finance Ontario at the lowest rate of interest of any province in Canada and the fact is our rates are comparable with, and in some cases have slightly shaded the Dominion rates.

The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), this afternoon in the budget address mentioned about the rates at which the various provinces are financing or refinancing their loans. I would say to the hon. members it is not possible to make a comparison. For instance, newspapers advertise rates of interest at which other provinces are obtaining money, and for this reason the length of the loan comes into the picture. There is a very great deal of difference—as my hon. friend from Fort William (Mr. Anderson) learned—between a serial loan for a period of 7 or 10 years and a straight loan for, say 20 years.

Our financing in the last year has all been long-term loans. We have put our financing as far into the future as possible. The loans recently negotiated on the part of hydro, last February, and then in March on the part of ourselves—some \$40,000,000—were all loans for as long a period as we could get them. We have run into increasing rates, for this reason; as you know, the Dominion Government and the Bank of Canada have artificially-supported Victory bonds, with the result that bonds were selling at about 5 points above the parity value. That actually meant the interest rate for purchasers of Victory bonds on the open market would probably run around $2\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. or perhaps a little lower. The Dominion Government or the Bank of Canada in the latter part of February, progressively withdrew that peg in Victory bonds, with the result that Victory bonds fell in value in January about $2\frac{1}{2}$ points, roughly speaking, to about $102\frac{1}{2}$, and again fell in the latter part of February to about par, where they are at the present time. That automatically increased the interest rates which are paid generally for obtaining private and public money.

The result was we refunded in the fall of 1947 at $2\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. My recollection is that the actual yield rate was around 2.81. We were faced with a similar charge last March of about 3.09. That can be attributed wholly and solely to the fact that the Dominion Government has in fact increased interest rates by reason of the effect of withdrawing the peg in regard to bonds. If the Dominion Government is doing any borrowing, which appears to be doubtful at the present time, it is doubtful whether they could borrow money at 3 per cent. unless they introduced certain artificial features into the market, which are not there at the present time.

One of our great problems is the amount of money which we have to borrow over the next four or five years. As outlined in the budget, the amount of money which we will require will be something in the neighbourhood, I believe, of $220,000,000 for our own refunding, and something in the neighbourhood of $350,000,000 of new money by our subsidiaries, such as hydro, for the purpose of the great capital works which we have projected at the present time. This is a staggering amount of money and the province's credit is something which is very, very important to the people of Ontario. I know you will be interested in knowing that for the last money we borrowed for refunding purposes, some $40,000,000, just two or three weeks ago, the actual cost to us was something over 3 per cent., some place around 3.12 or 3.15 per cent. That was for paying off money we had borrowed a number of years ago under totally different conditions at 5 per cent., and, actually speaking, the people of Ontario are actually saving something in the neighbourhood of $800,000 annually on that money. So we are still borrowing money at extremely low rates.

Another item in the estimate, of course, covers the matter of hydro finance, and the amount far topped anything that has been done in the past.

I think some of the hon. members yesterday mentioned what this Government is doing for agriculture. I will not elaborate on that at the moment, other than to say that of our budget this year of $177,000,000, approximately $40,000,000 is going back to municipalities in subsidies and payments which were not in existence a few years ago.

As far as the rural people are concerned, the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) in his estimates will deal with the gasoline tax and I know the members of this House will be amazed at the figures he will give relative to the expenditure on rural roads, plowed roads, and conditions which were not thought possible a few years ago.

As far as the $10,800,000 to hydro is concerned, it means additional benefits to users which are tremendous, if you consider that, in the past four years, in the extension of hydro lines there has been an addition of around about 60,000 customers. This year we are planning on going ahead with serving some 30,000 additional rural people. I think that is a tremendous thing to achieve, and the effect on the standard of living of our rural people is enormous.

Mr. Chairman, that is all I have to say. The first item is number 144.

On item 144.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, on vote 144; there are two items there which I would like to query. Perhaps I shall mention them both, and then the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) can give his answers.

I notice that there is $5,000 for the Dominion-Provincial Conference, and I am just wondering just what that is intended to cover. Is it based upon the assumption that there will be—

HON. MR. FROST: No, that is just routine.

MR. MACLEOD: I was wondering if it was intended to cover a conference, or whether it was intended to cover the barrage of telegrams which pass between the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe from minute to minute and hour to hour, or whether it was something of which we had no knowledge. I take it from the answer, there are conferences going on constantly.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. MACLEOD: You are getting together on minor matters. There is a meeting of minds up to a point, but you cannot agree on anything that will really benefit the great majority of the people of Ontario.

The other thing which interests me is an item of $10,000 for historical sites, monuments and records. I do not have the figures of other years before me, and I am not able to say whether it has been the practice in days of previous governments to actually spend money from year to year on historical sites and monuments.

If you are at a loss to find ways of spending that money, I would suggest the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) take a car down to Bond Street some time soon and look at the disgraceful sight there of the home of the first mayor of the city of Toronto, a former member of this assembly, and the father of representative government in Canada, the grandfather of the present Rt. Hon. Minister of Canada (Mr. King). We see his residence falling apart, surrounded by all kinds of debris, the windows boarded up, and a beautiful bronze plaque on the front of it pointing out this home was presented to him by the citizens of Toronto.

The Province of Ontario spent some money erecting a bird bath at the side of this building in honour of Mackenzie, and it seems to me it would be a good idea if the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was to get together with the city council down on Queen Street and see if they cannot work out some plan to preserve the home of William Lyon Mackenzie, and turn it into a museum of some kind, so that future generations will be able to visit the place and see the records of that important part of Canada's history.

Frankly, I cannot think of any better thing that a Tory could do than to perpetuate the memory of the man who was the first to deal a death blow to the first Tories who tried to keep this country as a colony of Britain, over 100 years ago.

Would you consider doing something about that?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, we are very interested in marking sites of historical interest. I must admit my hon. friend's (Mr. MacLeod) ideas of what should be marked, and his ideas of early history of this province are so grotesque it is hardly necessary for me to reply to him. I do not think anybody would say that William Lyon Mackenzie was the father of responsible government in Canada. He was an incident, but not the father of it.

The site of his home was marked by private subscription—and not by the public—and if my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) wants to bask in the memory of William Lyon Mackenzie, I imagine if he went out to the west side of this building, and looked at the monument there, which looks across to the University of Toronto, which in the old days was run by Bishop John Strachan, he would find sufficient markings for any individual.

As regards the $10,000; that was a new item last year. Actually we only spent about $500 of that item. These things take time, and often more time than some of us who are interested have to give to it. We are hopeful of getting an organization of historical societies of Ontario to advise us in connection with the markings of actual historic sites, not local sites, but sites of historic interest to the province generally. I think there is one in the riding of my young friend from Port Arthur (Mr. Anderson) in connection with the Gamouraska River, which used to be one of the great avenues into the Northwest hundreds of years ago. There are many places like that, and we are hopeful of getting together with the University people, the Department of Education, and the historical societies, and using the money for that purpose.

My friend from Glengarry (Mr. MacGillivray) is from a riding that is full of places where the Macdonalds and others came from.

MR. E. A. MACGILLIVRAY: And the McGillivray's.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, and the McGillivray's, and others who are deserving of consideration.

MR. MACLEOD: There are no MacLeods there?

HON. MR. FROST: They are all down in Nova Scotia, I think.

With regard to the other item mentioned; that is, the $5,000 for the Dominion-Provincial Conference. These conditions are developing all the time. We are conferring with the Dominion Government from time to time. We have not broken off diplomatic relations with them.

MR. H. A. NIXON (Brant): Will the Hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) tell us on what basis the Railway Tax is distributed. It does not seem like a very large amount, $10,000. The Railways must pay more than that in taxes. I presume that is paid back to the municipalities.

HON. MR. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): That is an amount which I think was distributed among certain hospitals on a basis which was arrived at very many years ago. It is a hold-over from past days which has no relationship to present-day conditions.

MR. NIXON: The railway aid certificates?

HON. MR. FROST: The railway aid certificates are repayments. The Sinking Fund instalments and the railway aids certificates; the railway aids certificates are amounts which are statutory payments on debts. Actually speaking, my recollection is, it would only amount to a few thousand dollars out of a sum of $5,600,000.

MR. NIXON: And the rest of it is sinking fund?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

Items 144 and 145 approved.

Item 146.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Port Arthur): Mr. Chairman, I am assuming this department is one under which the motion picture censorship comes.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. ANDERSON (Port Arthur): I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would consider being a little more strict in censoring crime and gangster pictures. Personally, I seldom go to a picture show. I went last summer to a picture show in Fort William, and I suppose I saw what might be termed an "average picture" of that type. There were a lot of scenes where shooting and stabbing was going on.

This picture house caters to children mostly. I was amazed. It was a very sordid picture to me. There were children all around, and sitting right beside me was a little girl about eight years of age, whom I knew well enough to know it was the practice for her parents to send her to the moving picture shows on Saturdays, and although I found it difficult to stand these killings, she was sitting on the very edge of her seat and was crying: "give it to him; give it to him; give it to him." Just like that. It seems the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) on the one hand, is trying to lessen crime in the province, and on the other hand, some of these pictures have a tendency to do just the opposite, to inculcate a spirit of indifference toward life—or death, as a matter of fact.

I must confess, I am not an authority. I feel the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) is a very kind-hearted man, and I would think, Mr. Chairman, this is something that is worth considering, and checking up on.

It seems to me there are many pictures which could be filmed of an educational and instructive nature, without having to show pictures of the type I have mentioned.

HON. MR. FROST: The problem my hon. friend from Port Arthur (Mr. Anderson) mentions is a very big one. The fact of the matter is, you cannot remove it from the responsibility of the parents. I would say that parents who send their children to motion pictures without some supervision, or some idea of the nature of the picture, and send them constantly, would not be doing a very good thing for their children. It is simply a total lack of parental control.

After all, as regards the children, it is almost impossible to secure a picture which satisfies everybody. You know that is true. We had some requests from some organizations to put a child psychologist on the Censor Board. When we looked into it, we found there were several hundred different types of child psychologists in Ontario, all with different ideas of what should be done and what is the proper thing for people, adults and children, to see. Mr. Chairman, when I say "several hundred" perhaps that was an exaggeration, but there are many child psychologists in Ontario and Quebec who have distinct ideas of what should be done for children, and some adults, and they nearly all differ. There is no standard by which you can go.

On the other hand, some parents have no hesitancy in letting their children see things involving liquor. They think it is a good thing for children not to be segregated from scenes involving drinking because in seeing them, they build up a resistance to it, and in connection with things of that sort are not marked for failure along that line.

On the other hand, some parents have the greatest objection to that. Other parents have objection to certain sex scenes and that sort of thing in pictures, while others take a totally different point of view.

The best we could do was take the pictures of the class which my hon. friend from Port Arthur (Mr. Anderson) was mentioning, and mark them "for adults only." After all, with adults we have to assume they have the judgment and wisdom to look at things and control themselves.

In that way we have felt we could safely mark pictures, not necessarily "for adults only" but they are recommended for adults and not for children.

In any case, we cannot stop parents from taking their children to see those pictures, because some parents want to do that, and are satisfied to have their children see pictures of that sort. If we warn them the picture is for adult viewing, and leave it to the common sense of the parents as to whether they wish to allow the children to see pictures of that kind, we feel it is about all we can do.

I would like, Mr. Chairman, to pay tribute to the motion picture industry, which has endeavoured, in Canada, in the United States and Great Britain to produce the very best type of pictures, and while we censor a great many things in pictures, in the main the pictures are satisfactory, and we think require comparatively little censoring.

I have given to the hon. members of the House, on previous occasions, experiences we have had in censoring pictures ourselves. For instance, our own Board released pictures after consultation and reports from other jurisdictions, cities of the United States, other provinces and even Great Britain. Our people would then release certain pictures, and immediately there was a protest. We have adopted a system of bringing in representatives of various societies and organizations, composed of various types of people, to look at these pictures, and almost invariably, by a very wide majority of opinion, they passed the pictures. I would say, if the hon. members of this House are interested in that feature, we could arrange a trip to the Censorship Branch and talk the matter over with the censors themselves. It would be as interesting a trip as the trip you took the other day to Brampton.

MR. ANDERSON: Or to the stock-yards.

HON. MR. FROST: Within the next few weeks we are moving the motion picture censors out of this building, where they have been for a great many years, out to Leaside, where we have new quarters.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, there is an item "Purchase of equipment, $7,500." That is item number 3. Last year that item was $2,500. I was wondering why the increase this year?

MR. H. A. NIXON (Brant): That is because you are moving?

HON. MR. FROST: It is new sound equipment and that sort of thing. We are moving the censorship branch out to Leaside, where the hon. minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) has provided a place for us.

I might give you a little experience of my own in this connection. The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) calls me "tough," but I am nothing, as compared to him.

The other day we sent a requisition down to the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) requisitioning certain furnishings for the new studio out there, and he returned it to me with such a blast about our extravagance I was nonplussed and I had to get my deputy to deal with him.

It is this careful administration which has resulted in a $25,000,000 surplus in the Province of Ontario.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I would like to return for a moment to the matter of pictures for children. I know we discussed this item more than once in this House, and I recall the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) speaking on this matter, usually with a great deal of interest and concern.

However, what is true is that many parents assume that the censoring of pictures in itself is a guarantee that their children will not be shown inappropriate pictures. That should not be sufficient. I agree with the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) that we should exercise discretion and choice and supervision, if at all possible.

I think I suggested this once before a few years back, but I was wondering whether this department could not assume the responsibility of calling together responsible bodies of parents organizations, teaching associations, psychologists, and others interested in the problem, to work out a programme for the Saturday afternoon shows, at least. It is common knowledge that most children in a neighbourhood go to the matinees on Saturday afternoon. You see them lined up by the hundreds waiting for the theatres to open. There is no special arrangement in most theatres. In some, I understand, there is an effort to provide special features for these Saturday afternoon shows.

I think this department has an income, which could be increased if necessary, to supervise and, to some extent co-ordinate the collective efforts of various interested organizations to provide a Saturday matinee performance for the children. That is when most children go to the theatres. Some will go on week-nights, some with their parents, and some alone, but the majority of the children go on Saturday afternoons.

I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would be performing a very useful service if he, with his special aptitude, which I am sure would help, would call in the voice of education, teachers-parents associations, home and school club representatives, and others at all interested, and begin to plan for the showing of specially-selected programmes for the Saturday afternoon shows for the thousands of Ontario children who go only on that occasion.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I will say to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that attempts of that sort have been made without a very great deal of success. The fact is, the young people are not interested in programmes of that kind. It has been attempted. I can give you a number of examples. We looked into them a year or two ago, and we found that where there were special programmes the children did not attend. They went somewhere else. After all, the young life of this province apparently has its own ideals, and it does not want to see the picture programmes which you think are good for the young people. In most cases they do not like them, and the attempt has not been successful from the point of view of attendance.

You might speak to Mr. Silverthorne about that, and he can give you a number of examples.

MR. SALSBERG: The matter is important enough to warrant another few words.

I do not question the hon. Minister's (Mr. Frost) statement that the children would prefer to see a wild west picture or one described by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) with all the shootings and murders going on.

It may require time to develop an appreciation and taste for such special programmes.

It may also be true that the initial steps were perhaps not the most successful ones and a new approach may be required, and a new programme planned, and new pictures gathered.

I know something of that sort was tried in England. I am sorry I have not details of it. When I was in London, I recall a discussion at a home where I was present, where they spoke about special programmes being prepared, and special movies created for them.

I suggest that if the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) agree to call a conference with all these interested organizations, lay the matter before them, and it may result in a long-range programme which may require a few years to fully develop and put into motion, but it would be worth while.

At this point, I think that it should be mentioned that some of the older countries of Europe are spending an awful lot of money on the cultural activities. They maintain operas, theatres, symphonic orchestras. We have not reached the stage where the Government is assuming full responsibility for that type of activity. An initial step has been taken. I think this Government has taken a short step, about which I will speak when we reach that item in the estimates.

I suggest it would not be harmful, and it would be money well spent if this department, under the present hon. Minister (Mr. Frost), would attempt again to call together all those interested, and suitable for participation and really begin planning something in a long-range category. I am sure the people of the province will appreciate it, and in the long run it will pay.

HON. MR. FROST: We will take that into consideration. We are meeting with them constantly.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, while we are on this item just a brief question I would like to direct to the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost).

Is it the practice of this department from time to time to express an opinion on the quality of pictures which emanate from Hollywood, apart from deletions or cuts which may be made when the film is screened in the studio of the censor?

The hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) said a few moments ago that he felt the motion picture industry was to be commended for the fine work it is doing. I do not know whether he is a movie addict or not. My opinion is that a very large percentage of the stuff which is coming into this country today from the United States, is pure junk—and trash, and is not going to be very helpful in enhancing the cultural and artistic appreciation of the people of Ontario.

On the other hand, I think the British motion picture industry is to be very highly complimented for elevating the quality of their pictures to a very large degree. Some of the recent pictures which have come here, based upon some of the English classics, Dickens, and so on and so forth, are a great step forward. I do not think that is true of the pictures which come here from the United States. I think it would be a very good thing if this department of the Ontario Government would from time to time express its opinion about the quality of these pictures to the motion picture industry in Hollywood, with a view to try and influence the type of picture which is produced.

I think, for instance, it would be a good idea if a committee of Canadian authors and artists were established, who, once a year would make their own evaluation of the pictures shown in Canadian theatres over a period of one year.

It is the custom now to award "Oscars" to the producer of the best picture and to the leading male star, and the leading female star, and so on, and so forth, and these awards are accepted by Canadians as the criteria for good pictures.

Well, the opinion which a group of Americans might have on what constitutes a good picture, might not be shared by a group of Canadian writers who have some regard for what will help to elevate the cultural level of the people of Canada.

My point is, that in so far as we can, we should try to exert such an influence as we can on the Hollywood producers to the end that they improve the quality of their products.

I do not think we need to do that as far as England is concerned. I think England is making great strides in the motion picture field, and I hope that more and more British pictures will come into Canada. I may say the same thing for Italy. There have been some marvellous pictures coming here recently from Italy.

Beyond that, Mr. Chairman, I hope the day is not far distant, when we in Canada will develop our own motion picture industry and make our own movies, which will be based upon the history and tradition of our own country, and use the medium of the movie to try and elevate the national consciousness of this country, which, after all, is nothing more nor less than the people's collective image of themselves. We need to get the collective image of ourselves, and the motion picture can be a great medium for assisting in that direction.

Item 147.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, Item No. 147 refers to a grant to the National Association of Tax Administrators. I was wondering if the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would explain just what that grant covers.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I am glad the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) has drawn that to my attention.

Our tax officials are members of and attend conferences of all tax associations as far as possible in Canada, and some of the principal ones in the United States.

We have endeavoured to examine into the tax situations of all the states and all the provinces to see what their problems are, and to see how those problems may reflect themselves into our province.

I know the hon. members want us to impose taxes as painlessly as possible, and taxes which are to the greatest benefit of our people. The hospital tax which was imposed by this Legislature, to which only two hon. members objected, I am satisfied is the most satisfactory under any conditions—

MR. MACLEOD: There are only two righteous men in Israel.

HON. MR. FROST: We had practically unanimity in regard to this—

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) will appreciate there are two members of the House who could not be tricked into voting.

HON. MR. FROST: I know it is very difficult to satisfy either of those two hon. members, but at the time the House voted practically unanimously with the Government in the imposition of that tax, which I think has been recognized by the people of Ontario as a very fine and proper tax.

These things are not arrived at without study. You do not pull out of the air matters relating to provincial problems of this sort. They come from the collective wisdom of people across the continent.

The National Association of Tax Administrators is going to meet in the City of Toronto on July 12, 13 and 14. It will be a huge convention, with tax administrators present from every province of Canada and every state of the United States. I think it will be the most representative gathering of officials that has ever been held in the history of Canada. It will be representative of the various governments of the whole North American continent. There will be several thousand delegates in attendance, mainly officials, and in many cases representatives of State and Federal Government meeting in this province.

The Province of Ontario is very proud indeed to be the host to such a gathering of people from all over this continent, and I want to compliment our own officials for having gone to the last convention and sold the Province of Ontario and this capital city of Toronto to the extent that this great convention is coming here next July.

Dr. Walters and his officials have attended various meetings, which have paid us the very great compliment of coming to the Province of Ontario for their convention in July.

MR. NIXON: I suppose the prophets are coming back to their own country.

Item 148.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: (St. Andrews): Mr. Chairman, on Item 148: I noticed a very large increase in the estimates for postage. The increase amounted to $330,000 over the figure of last year.

MR. MACLEOD: This is an election year.

MR. SALSBERG: That is an awful lot of money for extra postage. I would say this Government can send out an awful lot of mail for that amount of money and this being most likely an election year, we are very anxious that the amount of postage be kept down. Why is such an increase necessary?

HON. MR. FROST: The idea there is not in relation to any particular item. I can assure my hon. member friend (Mr. Salsberg) that it has not any relation to any activities other than purely government ones.

I may say that our postage charges are increasing yearly. I think I intimated to the House here in the budget a few days ago in connection with the number of old age pension cases, for instance, the number of such cases is constantly increasing. The charges we have, and the services we perform are constantly increasing, due simply to a normal increase of Government business, which is a reflection of the great services this great Government is performing for the people of Ontario.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: Just visualize I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, the number of letters that $30,000 could send out throughout this province.

AN HON. MEMBER: Away more than that.

MR. SALSBERG: I think you would get dizzy visualizing the number of letters that $30,000 would pay for. It is such an increase—

THE CHAIRMAN: They want to help the King Government.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, if that is your motive, if it is your desire to help the King Government, as the Chairman suggests, that would be appreciated by Rt. Hon. Mr. King, but I cannot credit it. There is no other answer, is there?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I mentioned, for instance, one item, that of old age pension cheques. Our old age pension cases have risen from some 55,000, I believe, up to 70,000.

MR. SALSBERG: No, it was 66,000 last year, I think.

HON. MR. FROST: For instance, there are the services given in connection with the Department of Health, such as bulletins and services. Then, the Department of Travel and Publicity has, I think, something in the neighbourhood of 10,000 letters on some days.

HON. G. A. WELSH (Minister of Travel and Publicity): That is higher than average.

HON. MR. FROST: They have a great many thousands of letters a day, which the hon. minister (Mr. Welsh) reads himself and signs and even puts on the postage stamps, I believe. Those things all run into greatly increased postage charges. It is a lot of money I know, but there it is.

Item 148 approved.

On Item 149.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): On 149, how many people are employed in the office of the Athletics Commissioner? What does the Commissioner receive, what part of the $10,000 does he get?

HON. MR. FROST: There are only two persons on that commission. There is Mr. Apps, popularly known as "Syl" Apps, who is Commissioner at a salary of $5,000 a year. Then there is Mr. Steele, the secretary of the old board, whose salary is $3,000. The balance is taken up with the other small staff concerned.

I may say this about Mr. Apps, I understand that his retirement from hockey, which we all regret, may be a forerunner of his retirement from Government service, which we would also very greatly regret. Mr. Apps is a type of young Canadian whom we like to have in the Government service. There would be no better Athletic Commissioner or there would be no better person in Ontario who could deal with that sort of thing, and I hope it may not be necessary for him to leave our service.

MR. SALSBERG: Why not ask him to go on full time?

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, before you get to 150, for my information, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) how many branches of these savings offices there are in the province?

HON. MR. FROST: 25.

MR. ANDERSON: Just what is done to let the children of the province know that you have such a thing? I often wonder just what is done towards acquainting our children with the service that is provided for them. Here you have a Provincial Savings Bank with 25 branches, I do not know just where they are all located, but that does not matter. Then we have, in the Post Office Department, another means of placing money on deposit.

It is very convenient, and it seems to me that there should be more education along this line. I know from my own experience—maybe it is because I did not get what some children did in that regard—but I must confess that I was through whatever schooling I got before I knew that we had the service that we have both in the Provincial Bank and the Post Offices of this country, and it seems to me, if it is a good thing, we should let the children know, and if it is a poor thing, let us stop it altogether.

HON. MR. FROST: I would say, Mr. Chairman, that my hon. friend (Mr. Anderson) cannot read the papers the way I thought he did. I thought he read all the papers he could lay his hands on. If there is any church paper or labour paper or paper relating to sport, young people, such as the programmes of the Orange Lodge and the Knights of Columbus and various church organizations in which we have not got an advertisement I would like to know about it, because I thought they had all caught up to me by this time.

In the Provincial Savings Offices we have continually-mounting deposits. In the 25 branches there is now approximately $65,000,000 on deposit in those savings offices. It has constantly gone up, and the level has been maintained. As far as the money is concerned, we only want the money insofar as it is profitable for us to accept it. You understand, you can open branches and lose money on them because of the overhead involved. If the rate of interest runs, say, much over 2 per cent. on that type of money, it is not profitable to them, but we are getting all the money we think we can reasonably use.

MR. ANDERSON: If the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would just permit me to add another word or two, I am quite confident of the fact you have them. I did not know just how many of course, but I had reference to the children. During the last year or two, the Federal Government had to deal with the Bank Act of this country and someone, I suppose possibly the people who are interested in the private banks, put on radio skits which went something like this; they wanted to know if you wanted a "snooping politician looking at your bank account"; that is the kind of advertising which was done in order to discredit in the minds of the children faith in their own democratic form of government. I think that is rather important. If these Savings Banks are a success—and I am sure they are or you would not continue to keep them open—

HON. MR. FROST: Surely that must be in the United States. I never heard about it.

MR. ANDERSON: No, it was here in Canada. This was an organized programme to scare the people of this country against any attempt to socialize the banks. They were scared of their life. Time after time, "spot" ads were placed over the radio—they were in Fort William, and I suppose it was province-wide — talking about the "greedy people, the politicians" who would "reach down and turn over the pages and see exactly what you had on deposit and all about it." As far as I was concerned, of course, I knew it was unadulterated nonsense, but as I say, it was to scare the people. Let me put it this way; if we destroy the faith of the children in their own democratic institutions, as we do sometimes—I do not mean you or I, but those vested interests which are determined they are going to continue their strangle-hold on the people of this country—then how can we expect these same children to want to go out and become good citizens, if already we have destroyed their faith in their own institutions by referring to every man in public life as "a grafting politician" and all that sort of thing?

For that reason, I think it would be time well spent, even if you have the ads, and I am quite familiar with the ads in the paper. You might talk it over with the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and have it added, should I say, to the curriculum, where the children of the country would know the service you are providing for the people in the Provincial Savings Banks.

You may think I am speaking a little harshly, but let me repeat, as I think I can from memory, what I heard Grattan O'Leary say over the radio way back in 1928. He said:

"The people of Canada follow parliament with great interest. The lightest words of Mackenzie King or R. B. Bennett are telegraphed across the continent. We follow their lives with almost pathetic interest. We look upon them as the arbitrators of our destiny, which is all a divorcement from the truth.

"In an unpretentious room in Montreal sits a man almost unknown who controls the greatest pageant of power this country has ever seen. He has more political power than both political parties put together. This man is Sir Herbert Holt."

AN HON. MEMBER: He is dead.

MR. ANDERSON: Poor Sir Herbert Holt has gone to his eternal rest, but the fact remains you have an outstanding Canadian who is so convinced the chartered banks of this country have a strangle-hold on the people and the Government that he makes a statement of that kind, and I submit, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) could do well, in order to offset that kind of thing and give the children more faith in our democratic institutions, to tell them the story of our Provincial Savings Banks.

HON. MR. FROST: I will speak to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) about that gladly.

MR. MACLEOD: I would like to ask the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) this question, Mr. Chairman, if I may have his ear for a moment, in view of what has been said, whether he regards Provincial Savings Banks as a socialist institution?

HON. MR. FROST: I will let my friend (Mr. Challies) here speak about hydro.

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Port-folio): Mr. Chairman, this is the largest amount ever voted for promotion of rural hydro. I think perhaps, as has been mentioned so many times in the House, and so many hon. members are interested in this subject, I should like to make just a few short comments on the growth of rural hydro, and its progress during the past four short years.

In refreshing the memories of hon. members, we should go back to the period of 1943 and review the conditions which existed at that time. There are over 100 separate and distinct rural power districts in the province, each one distinct from the other. As the local districts grew, they naturally grew towards each other. In these 100-and-some-odd rural power districts there were 13 at different rates at one stage, ranging all the way from about 2½ cents up to 6 cents a kilowatt hour with 11 different classifications, a condition which had grown over the years. The difficulties had accumulated and it was almost impossible to get any sort of order out of the chaos which existed at that time, so the Government inaugurated a new system of dealing with this vast problem, and in 1944, all these rural power districts were united into one and a uniform rate of 4 cents per kilowatt hour was adopted. This was radical, and quite unexpected, because during the terms in office of the government which this Government succeeded, the representative of that government on the Hydro Commission 6 months before we took over and inaugurated the uniform rate, amalgamating the districts, had said a uniform rate for rural hydro was in the far distant future.

However, in 1944, a uniform rate was inaugurated. The Government amended the Act, making them responsible for any loss there might be in the operation of rural hydro.

So successful was that new rate, that contracts began to pour into the Commission. The farmers consumed more energy, and at the end of the first year's experiment, it was so successful that the Commission, with the consent of the Government, decided to reduce the first rate to 3½ cents per kilowatt hour and in both cases to remove the service charge from the farmer and reduce the service charges to the hamlet users by 50 per cent.

The first reduction to 4 cents saved the consumers in the rural areas of the Province of Ontario an estimated amount of $525,000. The second reduction from 4 cents to 3½ cents, gave an added saving on the consumption of 1945 of some $250,000, therefore, these two moves in two years saved the consumers in the rural areas of the Province of Ontario, each and every year—because it was accumulative and as the consumption increased, naturally the saving increased—over $750,000 in the two years.

Mr. Speaker, that has created a problem, because with the low rate of 3½ cents per kilowatt hour and no service charge to the farmer, it is only natural that those who look with some degree of suspicion or doubt upon their ability to carry on under the old rates flocked to the offices of the rural superintendents and signed their applications. In fact, there was a complete reversion of the attitude of the farmers towards rural hydro.

Before 1943 the officials of the Commission had difficulty in getting farmers to sign for hydro. After 1943, under the new set-up, they flocked to the offices of the Commission and signed their contracts and from that time on, there has been no difficulty about getting the farmers to definitely sign applications for rural hydro.

I want to put on record just how this change was reflected in the consumption rate of the three classes in our rural organization. In farm service in 1934, the average revenue received per kilowatt hour was 3.96 cents. In 1944, that was reduced 2.211 cents. In 1946, the revenue was down to 1.74 cents per kilowatt hour, and with the consumption of last year, that is 1947, I can assure hon. members of the House that the average rate per kilowatt will again be greatly reduced, so that we have a reduction from 1934 to 1946 of from 3.96 cents per kilowatt hour to 1.74 cents.

The hamlet service in 1934 was 4.14 cents per kilowatt hour and in 1946, it was 1.98 cents per kilowatt hour.

The commercial service in 1934 was included in the farm service, therefore, statistics are not available as separate and distinct from the other. In 1944 the commercial service in the rural areas was 2.8 cents per kilowatt hour and in 1946, it was 1.87 cents, showing that in each year there was a gradual decrease in the revenue received per kilowatt hour from the three different classes of consumers in our rural areas, not only was the revenue decreased, but in each and every case, the amount of consumption increased very rapidly, and the average consumption per kilowatt hour, or per month also increased.

Mr. Speaker, that is the general picture, but I want to bring it a little closer home.

It is rather singular that out of 196,000 consumers, I should pick 1 or 2 bills and give them as a partial example, at least, of what happened in our rural areas to certain classes of consumers. I want to give 1 bill. It is for an average good farmer up in western Ontario, we will say in Grey County, just as a matter of record. In 1943, the average revenue per kilowatt hour on this bill was 4.59 cents.

In 1947 the average rate was 1.57 cents per kilowatt hour. Now, the hon. members will just follow this; in 1943, under the former administration, the average in that year per kilowatt hour was 4.5 cents per kilowatt hour. On the same farm in 1947 under the new set-up it was 1.574 cents per kilowatt hour. What does that mean on consumption? The consumption in this case in 1947 was 3,820 kilowatt hours in the year, the bill was $64.40. If that bill had been figured on the 1943 rate it would have been $175.34, or a saving to this one consumer of $110.94. Rather than a bill for $175.34, it was only $64.40. In other words, this Government gave to that consumer in those 4 short years, $10.00 cash per month or $110.90 a year. I have more here, but I will not take up the time of the House to give them.

I wonder what, in the name of common sense, this Government would have to do to satisfy some of the people in this House in regard to rural hydro? Every time they get on their feet it is hydro this and hydro that; why did you take a 250,000 horsepower diesel engine out of the plant, out of the river? Why did not the 250,000 diesel engine plant save the Province of Ontario in the shortage of power? These things are easily answered and can be answered, but that is individual.

We went a little further in these past 4 short years, and in order to equalize the rates in some of the towns—we hear so much about industry being de-centralized and going to the rural areas—this Government reduced the rate per horsepower in order to induce industry, if they wanted to go in the outlying areas.

Let me give you an example in Bothwell, in the Thamesville district, the rate in 1943, $42 reduced to $30. Harrison $50, reduced to $26. Lucan $45, reduced to $30 and here is Listowel $42, reduced to $33. That was what happened over the province in order that we might be able to help the larger consumers or those who wanted larger blocks of power outside of the towns in rural Ontario.

I want to also hurriedly give to the House what to me is the most favourable example of what can be done where you do a little planning and exercise a little faith and help a great many people or a great many communities.

In 1943 there were 63 municipalities in the Province of Ontario whose basic price of power to the local municipality was as high as $91 and some cents. They ranged from $39 up to $91. There were 63 municipalities having varied rates, Rosso $91.45, Holstein, I think that is in the riding of my good friend; he has never mentioned it in this House and thanked the Government for it, $17.14; Arthur $59.45. These 63 municipalities are all getting power under the movement of this Government for $39 per horsepower.

MR. J. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): That was in 4 short years.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: That is an example and there are other municipalities had $24 per horsepower over a period of 4 years. $24 leaves us a credit to the municipalities which was placed in a pool. The municipalities were billed with the actual costs and received a credit between the difference of the actual costs and $39 per horsepower. The rates were reduced to the consumers and in 4 short years what happened? Instead of having 63 on that rate, there are only 11 municipalities who have taken any credit and the amount last year was $23.30 and the same difference in 4 short years, where we have 35 municipalities paying their own way, having such a low rate they are able to raise their own revenue sufficient to actually have that, and not take anything from the pool. That is the best example of co-operation as between the larger and smaller municipalities. It was all done at the instigation of this Government and this Commission.

Now, something has been said about the progress made in the rural hydro. I want to emphasize what the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) so ably said in his budget speech 4 short years ago. Instead of taking 5 years to do what we promised we would do, we have done it in 4 short years, 58,000 new consumers in 4 years, and this Government, true to its promise, instead of taking 5 years carried it out in 4 years. Instead of 57,000, we will give you 87,000.

MR. SALSBERG: You are copying the Russians.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I would not copy the Russians.

MR. SALSBERG: You are; 5 years in 4.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Do not connect me with the Russians in any shape or form. In order to prove to the House this Government is doing things, to bring you up to date, in 4 winter months, because the hydro year starts the 1st of November—in the 4 winter months of this year, we have built 450 miles of new lines, we have added 6,553 new consumers and spent nearly $1,000,000—$964,000. And if labour conditions are such as we hope they will be, the 34,000 miles promised will be completed by the end of the hydro year.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do want to mention something which has been referred to in this House and on the hustings, and that is the question of summer cottages. There is much misunderstanding as regards that.

First, let me emphasize, we have not built a mile of primary line to serve summer cottages only. The summer cottage and tourist trade is at a time of the year when the Commission has a surplus of energy and we are pleased to have a load which will take the surplus energy in the summer. The revenue received from the summer services materially consists of consumers in the rural areas. The fact is that the average revenue received from the farmer is 1.4 cents per kilowatt hour, the average received from the summer cottage is 3.03 cents.

Therefore, the revenue received from the summer cottage in the summer-time when there is energy available, simply goes to help finance the extension of hydro to the farmers the year round.

I also wish to point out there are many homes in rural Ontario, if it were not for the summer cottages, there would not be sufficient units in order to make it legally possible to extend the line unless the farmer gave a guaranteed contract. I emphasize that because in some of the outlying areas extensions in summer cottages and farmers together, under which the summer cottage and tourist trade have a direct financial benefit to the farming area; 65 per cent. of the summer cottages services are too low and therefore the services of the summer cottages cannot conflict with the services given to the farms. I hope I have made that strong enough that we will not hear any more of the extension of rural lines to summer cottages. Before closing, I want to refer to the criticism offered by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) to last year's budget. Just rather hurriedly, on page 258 of the 1947 Hansard, you will find the following from the statement by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver):

"In the counties of central Ontario, Bruce, Grey, Huron, Simcoe and those counties, are hundreds of thousands of farmers who have not received hydro yet."

MR. F. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): "Hundreds of thousands?"

HON. MR. CHALLIES: "Thousands who have not received hydro yet," and I can say to the farmers in Grey County, you certainly are long-suffering. Your member has been here 25 years, 9 years in the Government. They have the fourth lowest saturation of any county of all the counties in the Province of Ontario. Place the blame where the blame belongs, it is not over here.

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): There is no politics in hydro.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No, there is not, because you are getting more than the average of extensions in your own Grey County this year. If Grey County has not their share and they are the fourth lowest saturation of any county in the Province of Ontario, there are only three others lower, surely there is some responsibility to the Government member who has represented them for 25 years and was 9 years in power. He says we should not give hydro to the summer cottages before the farmers, but I have explained that. Here is a humorous part:

"We should not change the cycle from 25 to 60 before the farmers have hydro."

What has the frequency change-over in southern Ontario got to do with the giving of rural hydro to the farmer? It will take 15 years, and the materials are altogether different and will not conflict, in any way, shape or form.

"So, I say to the Government that they have been delinquent in getting hydro out to the farmers in Ontario."

If this Government has been delinquent with the actual record of four short years of 58,000 and we are going to give over another 30,000 this year, I do not know what they can say about the Government previous to 1943, because this Government is extending rural hydro to the people of the province and there is nothing that will bring more happiness and prosperity to the rural people of the province than the hydro and this Government and Commission has every confidence in that fact.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): There are a few things, Mr. Chairman, I think should be said about this at this time; I might as well say it now. When the hon. member from Grenville Dundas (Mr. Challies) rises to make a speech on hydro, I do not know what ingredients are ingrained within that speech, but there seems to be something that calls for a reply on my part, particularly to some of the statements he has made and to some of the assertions he has tried to put across.

I want first of all to say that I was very interested in that fair-to-medium farmer in the County of Grey who had increased his consumption of hydro every year from 1943 to 1947 and 1948. I remember up in the Huron by-election, Mr. Chairman, somehow or another some of those snooping politicians we have heard about tonight managed to get my private hydro bill onto the hustings in Huron County and the statements made here tonight were made there, of course. We were talking a good deal at that time about the hydro shortage and trying to pin the responsibility for that shortage on some authority with shoulders broad enough to bear it, and so when my hon. friend, the Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow), spoke at Exeter, and told how we had increased on our farm the consumption of hydro in 4 or 5 short years, I realized then we need no longer look for the culprit, that we at least found out who was responsible for the hydro shortage, and I immediately 'phoned my wife on our farm and I said to her, "Tomorrow morning you will have to milk the cows by hand and you will have to turn off every light possible from now on." She said, "What is the matter?" and I said, "Inadvertently, and in a roundabout way, Mr. Challies has saddled me with the responsibility for the hydro shortage in Ontario," and I said, "as long as I am a member of the Provincial Parliament, we must try as we go to get out from under that terrific charge and that very heavy rate."

It is all right for my hon. friend to be facetious about this, but after all, I have no apologies in regard to having increased consumption of hydro on our farm and I hope he does not blame me for increasing it in those years, because it so happened we had to install labour-saving machinery which has become an integral part of the advance in rural hydro.

I am very glad, indeed, that I did not have to use as much power in 1929 and 1930, for instance, as I did in 1947 and 1948, because, if I had used as much power in those years as I use now, I would just be in poverty, that is all, because my hon. friend knows quite well that when we came into power in 1943 the service charge for rural hydro was $2.50 a month and it required three subscribers to the mile and my hon. friend has suggested inasmuch as I have been a member for Grey for some time, that I am therefore in a measure responsible for the small amount of hydro that is in Grey County. I think he and I will agree on this one thing, at least; he said before 1943—and I copied it down—that the Commission were having difficulty in getting subscribers to sign up for rural hydro, and that is quite true, the difficulty was, and I think my hon. friend is quite well aware, the difficulty was not the cost of the hydro after it was installed, the difficulty was the installation and the wiring of the homes and the farms and the barns and so on. I know this to be a fact because I can say to my hon. friend the line to which we are hitched for rural hydro in South Grey extends some 20 miles through the rural area in which I live and I canvassed that line from one end to the other and we had extreme difficulty in getting enough signers to go on that line in order that the line as a whole could be completed and these customers served. The reason these people would not sign was not the consumption cost, it was the initial cost of putting the hydro wires into the place and servicing and so on. My hon. friend and I will agree on this, that during the thirties we came through a serious depression. Men and women in the streets of the cities and on the farms of this province did not get over the depression until on in the forties; and in 1938 and 1939 when we sought to get this line through, these people were not sufficiently on their feet in order to finance the installation of hydro in their homes and barns. That is the reason there was difficulty in getting hydro customers on the lines. When the Liberal Government went out in 1943 we had reduced the service charge to $1.00 a month, and we had reduced the rural subscribers required from 3 to 2 to the mile, I say when we left office in 1943 there was no financial reason why a farmer, once having got the hydro installed in the farm buildings, could not pay the operating costs, because the service charge and costs of consumption were well within the means and well within the reach of the average farmer at that time. My hon. friend is quite aware of this when he says now they are going to serve some 30,000 extra customers. Sure they are, because now the people have the money.

The people who would not sign in 1938-39, have been clamouring ever since that time for the service they could not take in 1938-39. It is not because I happen to be the member for South Grey, it is because they had not money in their pockets to install hydro in their homes and barns.

My hon. friend (Mr. Challies) is quite aware of that, when from time to time he seeks to compare the number of people who are being served with hydro today as against the number were served prior to 1943.

That basis of comparison, of course, is wholly unfair, as my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) admitted tonight there was difficulty in getting people to sign for hydro before 1943. Certainly there was difficulty, because they could not afford to put hydro in. Then, during the war years, we were forbidden by the Rentals Controller and the installation of hydro fell off in the farm areas. To compare those years with the present years, when there are no restrictions of any account and the people have money in their pockets, is simply odious, to say the least. My hon. friend (Mr. Challies) can talk from now till morning if he likes, but he cannot convince me that when we left office in 1943 there was any definite barrier to a farmer putting in hydro after he got it in his buildings.

I may say to my hon. friend (Mr. Challies), he has suggested tonight there are going to be some 30,000 people or thereabouts, given hydro this year. I had hoped under the circumstances there would be many more than 30,000 because I think my friend (Mr. Challies) will agree with me there are many times that number who are waiting to get hydro. As I sit down, let me ask my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) how many unfilled applications he has for hydro service to the farmers of this province?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I am sorry I cannot give my friend (Mr. Oliver) the figures, but at the end of the hydro year, on October 31, 1947, a programme of 3,500 miles was over 75 per cent. of the number of miles that were on applications on hand at that time. They are still coming in, I grant you that they will come in, but that was 75 per cent. of the number.

MR. OLIVER: My hon. friend (Mr. Challies) should be able to furnish us with that figure. It would be a very interesting figure to have. My hon. friend (Mr. Challies) must have it. It should be easily obtained.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Here is the figure, the number of lines is 5,316.395 miles.

MR. OLIVER: Miles?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Miles of lines.

MR. OLIVER: But how many applications were there?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: That is 35,921. I want to be fair. There is a factor which is always hard to calculate and that is the number of new consumers who come on existing lines, but that is the figure as far as I can give it to my friend (Mr. Oliver), according to our schedule at the end of October. I do not want to be personal over it, but all I say is, when you talk about our being dilatory in getting our lines built, and about our giving it to summer cottages, let us be fair about it. I am giving the picture as it is.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): What is the word my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) read from Hansard? As I understood it, he said the Liberal Opposition said the Government was diligent, and he seemed to take exception to that.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Public Works): Dilatory.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Oh, well, he did not mean it. Is the item carried?

MR. NIXON: I was going to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies), what is the degree of saturation now as far as hydro is concerned?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: There are 196,000 users in the province, as at the end of 1947. I do not think anyone could give anything more than an estimate on that.

MR. NIXON: Has there been any estimate made?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes, because we were told before, when we reached the end of our five-year programme, we ought to have 85 per cent. of the possible farmers or rural consumers served, but there again, the outside line stretches further, so you will find what at one time was a possible stopping point of the line of encroachment has gone farther on, and you simply could not give any accurate figure. It would need to be an estimate only.

MR. NIXON: I recall on one occasion one of the hon. Minister's (Mr. Challies) predecessors stated in the House that at that time 80 per cent. of possible users had been serviced, and I thought at the time it was rather a strange statement to make.

HON. MR. FROST: That was a long time ago, was it not?

MR. NIXON: Yes.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Cook?

MR. NIXON: No.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: There was a time when it was necessary to have 3 to a mile, and then under that condition you could say probably 80 per cent. were served at that time, but when you take 2 to a mile, naturally that allows you to go further.

MR. OLIVER: Will my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) answer this question? Supposing subscribers to a new line were to make application to the Hydro Commission, what would my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) have to tell them as to the possibility of their getting hooked up and being serviced with hydro?

HON. MR. FROST: We take them in order.

MR. OLIVER: That is all right, but what time element would that entail?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I could not tell you what the time element would be, all I say is that the applications are being filled according to their date of receipt of application, and that is the rule of priority.

MR. OLIVER: I say this further, my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) knows quite well that applications which were signed 2 years ago last February and March, are being told that they cannot get hydro this coming year.

MR. McEWING: Mr. Chairman, I think the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) said these were taken in order. I think possibly that is not quite correct. I do not think the hon. Vice-Chairman of the Hydro (Mr. Challies) will say that either, because there are certain provisions which probably enter into it.

I know of a case where a line was built, and quite a number were given service on six months' notice, while others were compelled to wait for three or four years.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I think the answer to that is that these lines cannot be built on priority. If there is enough material to build a line for a mile, and there is a five-mile line under priority naturally the one-mile will be built first.

The trouble we are faced with at the present time all arises from other days. In 1943, if we had not been faced with the very large backlog of arrears which accumulated in other days, the job would have been well ahead now, but we had to catch up the great backlog from other times. The reason is apparent. In 1943 my hon. friends opposite put only 800 new customers on the lines. This year we put 15,000 customers on the lines. When my hon. friends opposite were over here, they quarrelled so much with the Dominion Government, they could not get anything done.

MR. NIXON: Not any more than you are quarrelling now.

HON. MR. FROST: We are a Tory Government, yet we get along well enough with the Ottawa Government. The very first thing we did was to have the farming industry declared a war-time occupation, and we got materials at once. It is very difficult for us to take care of arrears which accumulated during the time my hon. friends were quarrelling with the Dominion Government, and not getting the work done.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): My hon. friend (Mr. Frost) will probably agree with me, when I say when it comes to the question of getting a release from the order of the metal controller; it stands to reason, because that embargo was placed in the early part of the war. It is logical to assume the need for metals which were scarce at that time was increased because of the necessity for war machines, but that need would be to some extent alleviated by 1943, or the beginning of 1944.

HON. MR. FROST: That is true to a certain extent, but then again you have our powers of persuasion.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I am not persuaded you have sufficient powers of persuasion to do that. I think the question resolves itself into the fact that the time was ripe, and you just happened to be sitting alongside the fence when the opportunity came.

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Chairman, may I interject a remark here? I know the facts concerning this.

The Dominion Government was asking the farmers to produce and produce and produce, in order to help carry on the war effort. At the same time the inducements of the war industries caused the help to leave the farms, with the result the farmers were not in a position to even produce as much as they did previously to 1943. For that reason the metal controller said—and I am speaking now of cheese particularly—"Extend your lines to the cheese factories, because we want the cheese for overseas shipments." They were getting cheese of poor quality because of the lack of the required refrigeration equipment. That was the first move, and we put lines into eight factories in one year. It was not because metals were in more free supply; it was getting more scarce every year. The fact is, as the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) stated the other day, there is still a control on steel.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I notice on vote 150 an item, "Accountable funds for departments, $1,200,000." What does that cover?

HON. MR. FROST: That is only a cross entry. Various departments require funds for certain purposes, and the monies are advanced, and are repayable from their own estimates. It is only a cross entry, something like "Miscellaneous Items" to which we will come in a moment.

MR. GRUMMETT: I know it is statutory, and we do not have to vote on it, but I see "Municipal Sinking Fund, $5,000." In 1947 that amount was $5,900; in 1948 it is $20,000. To what does that refer?

HON. MR. FROST: Those are the amounts for which the municipalities have the power to meet certain maturities.

MR. H. A. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, regarding the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway, guaranteed debentures: as I recall, these debentures were issued by the municipality. They were guaranteed to a certain extent in the first instance by the hydro, and then the province gave a sort of blanket guarantee over the whole thing. Are the two not perfectly solvent? How is it the province is left "holding the bag."

HON. MR. FROST: Actually it is not "holding the bag." The municipalities are re-negotiating the matter, although there was an agreement under way. There have been two or three changes in the last four short years. The railway was totally insolvent, but is not now, due to prosperity and by way of good government, and it is accumulating large sums of money in reserves and what-not. I think the railway will very shortly be on its feet, and there will be a deal announced soon which will result in a considerable saving to the tax-payers.

MR. NIXON: It is all bus service now?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right; it is all bus service. No further railway service at all.

Vote 150, approved.

HON. MR. FROST: I wonder if we could deal with one or two short items. I would like to call Vote 172, the Lieutenant-Governor, Item 113.

MR. MACLEOD: Is there any change in that?

HON. MR. FROST: I don't think so. It is comparatively small in any event.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): They could not get along on less than that.

Vote 113 approved.

HON. MR. FROST: May we now turn to page 82, Office of the Provincial Auditor.

MR. MACLEOD: That is the same, too? Any change in that?

HON. MR. FROST: No, except for the normal increases in salaries.

MR. MACLEOD: Who got the increases?

HON. MR. FROST: The whole staff.

MR. MACLEOD: Is that going to be made general throughout the whole Civil Service?

HON. MR. FROST: It is general throughout the whole service, the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) will be giving a statement in connection with that. The provincial service is now on a very satisfactory footing, and I think it meets with the approval of those concerned.

MR. MACLEOD: Are you still paying 57 cents an hour to some of the people in the building here?

On Vote 130.

MR. NIXON: The work of the Audit Department has increased too? Were they not assigned the auditing of the railway?

HON. MR. FROST: The Audit Department is doing a good deal of additional work, taking over some of those things in which there used to be separate audit arrangements.

Now, Miscellaneous Items on page 110.

On Item 192.

MR. MACLEOD: What is that for?

HON. MR. FROST: Actually that is another item which is more or less of a token item. My recollection is it is simply a cross entry. Under "Miscellaneous Items" in the public accounts, there is a very great deal more money going out than that, but actually speaking it is not an item of expense. It is more or less of a cross entry. Last year through Miscellaneous Items there appeared the sum of $9,687,000 in revenue, and there was applicable for revenue in other years of $212,000. It is an item which is a matter of book-keeping.

MR. NIXON: Why do you carry the two votes, 191 and 192?

MR. GRUMMETT: The same amounts?

HON. MR. FROST: I presume one is capital and the other is ordinary.

MR. NIXON: It does not say so.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, it does.

MR. NIXON: Oh, yes. I beg my hon. friend's (Mr. Frost) pardon.

Item 192 approved.

HON. MR. FROST: My hon. friend, the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) would if possible like to take up the items relating to Public Works. They are comparatively short, and are shown on page 96. If this gets into a lengthy matter we can adjourn, but perhaps they can be cleaned up tonight.

On Vote 160:

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Grey, South): Will my hon. friend indicate what is responsible for the very large increase in the Main Office vote?

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Public Works): That is an increase of $55,000. The increase of this $55,000 of course covers increases in salaries and increases generally in the staff due to the increase of construction and building.

MR. OLIVER: By how many has the staff increased?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, I could not tell you the exact number of increases but there are probably 20. We have altogether 57 on the staff.

Item 160 approved.

Items 161 and 162 approved.

On Item 163.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on 163, I believe I can raise this question my colleague has mentioned before, and which has not been answered, namely, that the wages paid to the service employees is shamefully low. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the wages paid to the maintenance staff, cleaners and others in this building, does not provide them with enough to support their families in decency, and that is serious. Not only do married men receive as low as 57 cents an hour for work performed in this building, but many others are not able to feed their families satisfactorily. There are married men, with children to support, who receive $1,400 and $1,500 a year. That is a criminal wage to pay a married man in this day of high-living costs. That is true in a lot of other departments.

We are dealing now with the legislative and departmental building. This is the building the representatives of the people of this province come to. We see these people every day. We are responsible collectively for their welfare. I do not think there is any excuse or justification for the continuation of starvation wages, and that is what this department is paying to certain types of employees and I would like the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) to justify that, or give an assurance to the House they will get a living wage or the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) will step in and take out an injunction and compel him to increase the wages. Or maybe the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) will look into it because wages paid to certain sections of employees are not enough to keep them in good health.

While I am on my feet I want to say the employees of this province or, as they are often called, "civil servants"—I don't like the name "civil servants"—are men and women employed in useful tasks in various capacities, and I am sure they will never get justice insofar as wages and security of job is concerned, until they will form a trade union affiliated with one or the other of the major trade unions—either Trades and Labour Congress of Canada or the Canadian Congress of Labour.

The experience of the municipal employees in Toronto has shown that there is no alternative. They had no union and they formed themselves into a union, and they now have a closed shop and they are getting paid well, or at least reasonably well.

I might say that this denial of adequate compensation extends higher too. It extends even to the Deputy Ministers, and I suggest that there are Deputy Ministers employed in several departments who receive less salary than is paid by the City of Toronto to its commissioners, and the job is comparable. The commissioner in the City of Toronto gets a far higher salary than the Deputy Minister and his responsibility is not less here in the provincial service. It is often a greater responsibility, and so the policy of the Government of under-paying the employees goes all the way from the Deputy Minister down to the charwoman employed in the building, and the elevator drivers and the window cleaners and the sweepers, and when we are faced with the fact that a man is employed, who has a family to support and receives 50 cents an hour, I say this Government is guilty of starving that family, and as a member of this House I think all members should disapprove it. The Hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) is smiling.

HON. D. H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): I am not laughing at you.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know what you are smiling at. I think the matter I bring before the House is no smiling matter. You call them together and give them an assurance they will not be transferred to another building, which was the case of a woman a year ago, who told me she was called down to the office of the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett).

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I want to contradict that. It is an absolute falsehood, and well the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) knows it. You have time and again raised in this House a similar question as this one tonight, and made most ridiculous and false statements, and I say that is a false statement, because that woman on no occasion was called to my office nor do I know her. Now, for the benefit of the House, Mr. Chairman—

MR. SALSBERG: I am not finished. I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that what I said about that woman I believe to be the absolute truth. I knew the woman, she had the cleaning of the office which we occupy, and I found a note from her that she was transferred, after inquiries were made to Osgoode Hall. I hope she has a good job and is continuing to work. What I am trying to say is if we call together these employees and give them the assurance they could speak freely, they would tell us all a pretty story, I assure you, and certainly a government with the income this Government has, with millions of dollars they do not know what to do with, has no excuse in the world for paying a wage as low as 50 cents an hour to a married man and around $1,500 to quite a category of male employees.

I appeal to the Government that an increase be granted to the entire staff from top to bottom, to all of them, from the Deputy Ministers down. The ministers may also want an increase; I am not going to fight for them, if they want to fight for an increase, let them do it themselves.

I do suggest, however, in all seriousness, to the staff, that they get together and form a union and affiliate with one of the major labour bodies, and they will find the Government will deal with them in a manner that will result in better living standards and afford greater security on their jobs than they are now enjoying.

Item 163 approved.

On Item 164:

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Chairman, before closing that subject, just as a matter of information, I think the House is entitled to know something about the rate of pay. I would like to say in reply to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg), that I have been in this House now for a considerable time, with the Government and in opposition, and on no occasion have I ever known any civil servant who was refused an opportunity of discussing his problems with the department, either the Minister or the Deputy Minister.

MR. SALSBERG: May I give you an example?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, you may not. You just keep your seat now.

MR. SALSBERG: A man was fired in an institution in New Toronto last year because he . . .

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: He was fired.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Keep your place until I have finished.

MR. SALSBERG: I will give you his name if you want it.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I want to say I think any civil servant at the present time feels at liberty to intercede with either the Civil Service Commissioner, the minister in charge of a department, or the minister of his own department. I have received many of the members of the staff of the two departments which I have under my charge, and I want them to feel free at all times to come and discuss their problems with me.

As far as the workman is concerned, or what the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) says is an old record that I have heard now for a number of years—

MR. SALSBERG: Too true.

HON. MR. DOUCETT:—scratching away. However, it squeaks and always jumps a cog, seemingly, because he is always wrong to a certain extent.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, now.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: For the information of this House, Mr. Chairman, it is true we have different rates. There must be, surely, a scale of rates for the cleaners, for the technicians, for the Deputy Ministers, and so on. It may be that if the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) were in power he would increase all those, but if they have to wait until he is in power, it may be a long time, and I think we will have them on a satisfactory basis before he will have an opportunity.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): You do not have much time left, you had better increase them pretty fast.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Another door open. We will have to get them both in front of the one door, and we will get the same breeze.

The yearly salary for beginners is $1,440. That is for casual employees. Temporary employees are paid $1,540, and permanent employees $1,640. The hourly rate is 63 cents, 67 cents and 72 cents, for the same classifications, in the same order. Women employees mostly work at night; in fact, all the charwomen do, and their rates are 64 cents, 69 cents and 75 cents an hour, the 75 cents being the rate when they are on the permanent staff. Elevator men are paid $1,740. I think that answers the question.

MR. SALSBERG: It does not answer the question at all.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I could not satisfy you if I were to—

MR. SALSBERG: Satisfy the employees, and I will be very happy. Never mind satisfying me.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I have not had an employee come into my office to complain about it, and I do not think they need you to do it on their behalf.

MR. SALSBERG: They are scared to come in and complain, because they will be fired. You know that. They are scared.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I think it is possible to discuss this matter without getting angry. I want to say to my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) that only an hour ago I talked with a man in the corridor down the hall who is working for the hon. Minister's department today for 57 cents an hour.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Not today.

MR. MACLEOD: Today. That is what he is getting now, as a window cleaner.

MR. SALSBERG: Window cleaner? He should get a dollar an hour.

MR. MACLEOD: 57 cents an hour, and he has to do additional work in the building apart from his window-cleaning profession, in order to augment his earnings.

AN HON. MEMBER: Why not give him a job with you?

MR. MACLEOD: When a statement like that is made, I do not think in all fairness the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) should stand in this House and say that this is a falsehood. I do not think the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) should accuse any hon. member of this House of deliberately uttering a falsehood.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, when the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) mentioned that woman being moved to Osgoode Hall, that was a deliberate falsehood.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not a falsehood, it is the absolute truth. You sent that woman to Siberia, that's what you did.

AN HON. MEMBER: You should know.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) should be frank about it. This man who is cleaning windows in this building on this sixth day of April, 1948, in the year of the $25,000,000 surplus, is getting 57 cents an hour. Now, is that true or is it not true?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, I think you will find that on the sixth day of April, 1948, he will be receiving the rate which I quoted a few moments ago, and if it is not a fact, I will see that it is. But I know it is.

MR. MACLEOD: That is to say that in the estimates we are passing now, there is an increase for that man?

MR. DOUCETT: An increase, as the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) told you, for the staff.

MR. MACLEOD: Good.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: For the Civil Service.

MR. MACLEOD: That means, then, that you are satisfied with what I said, and I am satisfied with your reply, which shows that it is possible to discuss these things without your getting so angry.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I did not get angry at anything that the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) was saying.

MR. MACLEOD: You should not get angry.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: It was the statements of the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) beside you.

MR. MACLEOD: I would like to say this to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), to paraphrase William Hazlitt, the English essayist, who once said:

"Anger is but the outward expression of the inner disharmony of the soul."

The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) might remember that.

HON. MR. FROST: If everybody is satisfied, how about the next estimate?

MR. SALSBERG: I am not quite as satisfied with the explanation. Accepting the hon. Minister's (Mr. Doucett) figure that he gave of 64 cents an hour—

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Pardon me, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) should be a little careful there, 63 cents.

MR. SALSBERG: 63 cents, that means I will have to begin making my calculations all over again. At 64 cents, which was the figure I was using, it amounted to $29.26 a week. At 63 cents, he would be 44 cents short of that, which means less than $29.00 a week for a man with a family to support.

HON. MR. FROST: That is the lowest classification.

MR. SALSBERG: That is true, the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) said that man has a wife and children. He did not belong to a union, unfortunately, but he has a wife and children to keep in food and clothing. Certainly it is the lowest, but it is so low that he cannot possibly support his family, and those are the figures the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) boasts of, and I say the minimum is shamefully low, and if I could, I would move an increase in the amount for wages, but I cannot do that.

Item 165 approved.

On Item 166:

MR. McEWING: Mr. Chairman, on 166, I see an item there that this year is $93,000 and last year was $32,000. That seems to me to be a tremendous increase. I wonder where it all comes about?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Which item, please?

MR. McEWING: 166.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: What number?

MR. McEWING: 1 and 2, combined.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: $60,000?

MR. McEWING: The total of the two. One is $93,000, and for the previous year it was $32,000.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That provides for additional properties we have rented in the City of Toronto and elsewhere. An increase of $40,000; is that the item you mean, or the $16,000 one?

MR. McEWING: No, the one increased from $32,000 to $93,000.

MR. OLIVER: Case 98.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: You were talking about No. 1?

MR. McEWING: Nos. 1 and 2.

MR. DOUCETT: No. 1 is $33,000. Last year it was $16,400. That included the maintenance at Kingston, London, Matheson, New Liskeard and Swastika. They are divided into $16,600.

MR. McEWING: Then take Item No. 2.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No. 2 item is for the different purposes I have mentioned. That includes 455 Spadina Avenue, the Arcade at Ottawa, the Golf Club Building, the Lakehead Technical Institute, Police Headquarters, and sundries.

Item 166 approved.

On Item 167.

MR. McEWING: Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) tell me the amount paid for drainage last year? There is a statutory amount, but it does not mean anything.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: You mean in the legislative grant?

MR. McEWING: Yes.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I think it is around $10,000. That is increased a little this year. We have not got to that yet.

MR. McEWING: That is Item 167.

MR. M. T. ARMSTRONG (Parry Sound): On Item 167, under "Repairs to Locks, Dams, and so forth," $25,000. Is that enough to look after all those public bridges we are having so much trouble with, or are we going to have that in some other estimate? In my district there are a number which it will take more than that to fix.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That does not cover bridges. That is just for locks and dams.

MR. ARMSTRONG: It says "Maintenance of Locks, Bridges, Dams, and so forth."

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That would be in connection with the bridge at the lock, but not for stationary bridges.

MR. ARMSTRONG: You know the trouble we have had with the bridges built by public works. Have we anything in the estimates of public works for that, or will you have some new account in highways to look after that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: With the exception of a few bridges in municipalities which are incorporated as villages. The other bridges will come under "Highways," and you will remember legislation being passed within the last couple of years, whereby it is possible, in certain cases of urgent need, the Department of Highways can pay up to 80 per cent. or 100 per cent. That will be taken care of in that way.

MR. ARMSTRONG: In the municipalities where the bridges have been built by public works. There is nothing now in the highway estimates or in these estimates where you could keep these bridges in repair. They were originally built by public works.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We do not anticipate doing that under public works. We do most of it under highways.

Items 167 and 168 approved.

On Item 169.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) can give us any indication of when we can expect some real progress to be made on the mental hospital at the lakehead. We have waited patiently to see something done in that respect. We are a long way removed from the mental institutions, and we have a very undesirable situation. I hope we can expect to see a real start on the building this year, but nothing is in sight yet. When may we expect some progress?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: In reply to the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Robinson) it was our intention to get under way with some projects, such as that. I did mention it in my remarks last year. But due to the shortage of material and the technical help it was necessary to have to go on with that work, we found we had to forego some of the larger projects for the time being. There was also a great demand in the market for materials which we might be using for a housing programme. We still have it on our list, and I can assure you, when conditions permit, we will not forget you.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I think this is probably the item under which I should raise this question. Has it ever occurred to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) that he might be helping the cause of democracy in Ontario if he took those mourners' benches out of the galleries and put in proper seats, as an incentive for people to come here and listen to the debates.

Before I came into the House, I used to sit in the galleries on either side alternately. Sometimes I liked to listen to the present hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) when he was sitting on this side going after the Liberals; on other occasions I would be sitting on the other side listening to "Mich" (Mr. Hepburn).

Really, those seats up there are the worst to be found anywhere in the Dominion of Canada. It is torture to sit there very long. I do not see any reason why these old, antiquated benches should not be taken out and theatre seats put in. You could get just as many people in. It would only cost a few thousand dollars, and you really would encourage people to come down and listen to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett), the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and so on. It would not cost very much. These things must go back to 1837. That was Sir Francis Bondhead's idea of comfort.

HON. MR. FROST: No, it was Sir Oliver Mowat.

MR. MACLEOD: He ought to be ashamed of himself putting in seats like that. Really, Mr. Minister (Mr. Doucett) I think you should have an architect look at these galleries.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I had one of them sitting up there for two hours, and when he came down he made no complaint.

MR. MACLEOD: I notice when the Session begins in the afternoons, when we have these large delegations of high-school students coming in here, they do not stay very long.

HON. MR. PORTER: It is not the seats which drive them out.

MR. MACLEOD: It is not because I am speaking. Really, I do not think those benches belong to this modern day and age. I think if you got in touch with some theatre company you could pick up a few hundred seats which would be very comfortable, and then we would have the seating arrangements which belong in the era of the Progressive-Conservative Government.

HON. MR. FROST: We will look into that.

MR. MACLEOD: After the next election, a lot of you may have to sit up there.

HON. MR. FROST: We will be taking over all those seats you hon. members are in now.

MR. NIXON: That is a very large item, Mr. Chairman, I would be very much interested in knowing the programme of new construction the Government has in mind for the year.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: It is a reduction from last year.

MR. NIXON: Did you spend all of last year's vote?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, but this figure is a reduction.

MR. NIXON: That money was nearly all spent, and now you are on new construction. What buildings have you in mind to build this year?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We are doing some work for the Department of Agriculture, helping to finish some work which was started. That accounts for $1,600,000. A further programme of work was started amounting, roughly to $630,000. The Department of the Attorney-General requires several small buildings, lock-ups. A couple of buildings for the Treasury Department, and a Land Titles Office. It will cost to complete what we have started—oh, I think there are 13 radio stations we started which are practically completed, and to complete what is under way for the Department of the Attorney-General will cost about $56,000, and a further $297,000.

For the Department of Lands and Forests we have a hangar under way at the present time at the Sault Ste. Marie which will take a few hundred thousand dollars to complete, and some other buildings which altogether will cost, in round figures, about $1,750,000. Then we have a few small items in for Public Works. Some work we have started for the Department of Reform Institutions will take about $750,000 to complete, and an item of about $26,500, for Travel and Publicity.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, has consideration been given to the possibility of disposing of the building at 999 Queen Street and building a proper mental hospital somewhere in the vicinity of Toronto? I am told that building is 102 years old. It was the first and last mental institution built in the city of Toronto in 102 years. We were out there yesterday, and some of the hon. members will have something to say about it at a later stage.

Could you not get the city of Toronto to take it over as a community centre and build a proper mental hospital for those unfortunate people? It is a shocking place. It has no place in modern society. I understood the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) to say that "Bob" Saunders, before he was elevated to the episcopacy was interested in having that property taken over for some other purpose. At least the land could be used for a community centre. There are twenty acres of land there. Do you not agree that it is out of date and antiquated and should be disposed of? Why not spend a few million dollars building a proper mental hospital either in Toronto or somewhere in the environs? Have you thought of that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, as the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) said a while ago he considered me as a friend, may I in answer to his question that I understand the Government of Ontario have talked about disposing of that property before I was born. At this particular time I hope you will not encourage the hon. Minister of Health

(Mr. Kelley) to advocating the abandonment of that property, when building is so very difficult. The day will come when probably you will be able to persuade the city, or some person to utilize it to better advantage. At the present time I think we have our hands full without starting a project of that kind.

MR. MACLEOD: You mean because you do not have the money?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, I am not talking about money. I am talking about men and material at the present time, and other things which need doing.

MR. MACLEOD: There is absolutely no shortage of material for building those banks down there on King and Bay Streets, no shortage of material for building theatres which are unnecessary, and a lot of them will be out of business before very long. I am told most of these new theatres are losing money at a very great rate, which does not bode well for your 20 per cent. Amusement Tax. There is no shortage of material, provided we put first things first. I am quite confident if this Government undertook to give the Toronto area a mental hospital which would meet the requirements of the modern age, it could find ways and means of getting the necessary material.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) says they have been talking about disposing of this property since before he was born, but nothing has been done about it. That is understandable, because this province has been plagued with Tory Governments for such a long period of years, since before he was born, but the place is still there. After all, you have changed your name and now call yourselves the Progressive - Conservative Party. Why do you not try to be a little more progressive?

MR. G. CHAPLIN (Waterloo South): Who else changed their name?

HON. MR. FROST: My hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) knows that with the building of the new Hospital for Sick Children, the Mount Sinai Hospital, and other hospitals, it is out of the question to undertake the work he suggests, if these other hospitals are to be completed.

As all the hon. members know we in the Parliament Buildings are very short of space. There should be a Treasury Building to take care of the treasury services which would mean more room might be given in this building for members' rooms and that sort of thing which at the present time, as every hon. member knows, are totally inadequate. We have foregone those things because of the building situation. If we go into competing in regard to hospitals, the ones I have mentioned, will not be completed. We will postpone starting any more building of that nature at the present time.

Items 169 and 170 approved.

On item 171.

MR. NIXON: I see here "Grant to the Grand River Conservation Commission, $10,000." I have some interest in this particular scheme, as the river angles through Brant County from one corner to another and annually causes very great damage from floods. In the summer time there is very low water. As a matter of fact, the gallonage of sewage dumped into the river seems to be greater than the river flow. It seems to me this scheme has more or less failed in its objects. There were great hopes for it at the start, although it seemed to me more people were interested in getting a bird sanctuary at the lake at Shand Dam and having a beautiful summer resort there than in controlling the waters of the Grand River and preventing floods in the spring time.

It has not worked out that way, Mr. Chairman. A great deal of money has been spent, but we are getting worse floods than ever and they are doing more damage. It seems to me the Government having put so much money into this scheme should have some supervision over the way it is administered. Every season they go into the flood season with the lake brimming full and they begin to worry whether the dam will stand or not, and they open up the sluice gates and let a lot of surplus water into the river which causes infinitely worse floods than if there had never been a dam there at all. It seems to me with all the money spent by the Government they should exercise some sort of supervision over the way it is run.

MR. CHAPLIN: Mr. Chairman, I might say in that regard, as far as this year is concerned, I was talking recently to the mayor of Galt just after the period of the flood, and he told me he had gone up to the Shand Dam at the time the flood was coming through, and the gates were not open and he was able to walk across the river, at the bottom of this dam. There was not water coming through. At that particular time the water was not released from the lake at all until after the crest of the flood had gone, so it did not contribute to the damage which was done this year.

MR. McEWING: Mr. Chairman, in connection with Item 2; before I mention it I would like to make a reply to the hon. member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin). I do not know whether he has been up there or not. The valves at the bottom of the dam are open at all times, and when those are open, he could not walk across. It is absolutely ridiculous for him to say he could walk across, at the peak of the flood. I live within a few miles of there and it is utterly ridiculous for him to say he could walk across the river at the peak of the flood.

MR. CHAPLIN: There was no water going over the dam.

MR. McEWING: I will put $100 down that he could not do it.

HON. MR. FROST: If you do, I will put a tax on it.

MR. McEWING: The point I want to make is this; you have here an item of $10,000 toward the project on the Grand River. This project is just below my own farm a little piece, and many people are interested. Engineers have been in there and made their surveys and test and all that, and the opinion is that a dam is going to be built, while the opinion of others is it is not going to be.

In the recent flood two weeks ago it undermined a bridge about 2 miles above the site of the dam. I saw the bridge myself. It was a big and splendid bridge.

The point is this, the municipality does not know what to do about it. If the dam is going to be built this summer, they will let the bridge go and wreck it. If the dam is not going to be built for some years to come, it will be necessary to do something about it.

Now, is it the intention of the Government to proceed to build that? $10,000 is not going to build it. Of course, that is only 37½ per cent. of their portion, but it is quite apparent from that there is no intention of building the dam this next fiscal year. Is that right or wrong, Mr. Minister (Mr. Doucett)?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is up to the Commission.

MR. McEWING: But according to this estimate, there is nothing provided for it.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: In which?

MR. McEWING: You have $10,000 in here.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: The work that they intended to do was a matter of $35,000, and we agreed to pay 37½ per cent.

MR. McEWING: That will not build the dam at all.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, I do not know that it will.

MR. McEWING: Then, this means that there is no idea of building the dam this year, I would take it?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, not that I know of. However, the Grand River Conservation Commission has had extensions of their former agreement, and we would want to do it in that light, if it did build the dam.

HON. MR. FROST: It is a matter for the Commission.

MR. McEWING: I am not arguing that, I am not disputing that. I am not going into the point whether it has been as successful as they expected it to be, because in the case of the Shand Dam, I think they have destroyed the benefit of that by trying to make it into a summer resort. There are two branches.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I think they were talking about building the first dam on the Conestoga.

MR. McEWING: The first dam is built now, and the Conestoga is the second.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, I mean the one they have under way now.

MR. McEWING: The point I want to make is that they have attempted to make a summer resort and have built a lot of cottages around it, and they wanted to make sure they had water there. They held the water and along came the second flood, and the flood control was no good. About 2 or 3 weeks ago, the ice broke up on the Tuesday or Wednesday, and they held it above the dam, and it was then practically full, but the big rain came on Friday, and that is when the flood occurred, and the dam was full.

AN HON. MEMBER: The dam was not opened until after the flood was down.

MR. McEWING: The dam was opened on Sunday afternoon. I drove through Galt on Sunday, that same afternoon. If they had realized it immediately—I would not say in that short time they would have been able to accomplish anything about getting it down, because I do not think the consensus would be to let it all out—but they did not anticipate it. The same thing happened three years ago. The flood came, and they held it off and a big rain came about three days afterwards and the dam was full. When it came, they were afraid to let it go right to the crest, and they opened the gate and down she went, and in Beatty's factory in Fergus they had the biggest flood they ever had. The attempt to make a summer resort has destroyed the efficiency of that dam as a flood control. You cannot make a flood-control dam a summer resort. The two things will not work together.

In connection with No. 3 item, if I may while I am on my feet, discuss that matter, I see there is an estimate there for the river authorities. Evidently, some of the other river authorities feel the costs are not in the way, and they are going to proceed to build some projects. Can the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) tell us where these will be built and where that money will be spent?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, that is for the different conservation schemes. There is Etobicoke, Ganaraska, South Nation, Upper Thames, Napanee, Grand Valley—

MR. McEWING: Grand Valley?

HON. MR. DOUCETT:—and Ausable. Those are the conservation authorities that are authorized during the year 1946-47, and one in 1948. The Grand Valley was '46.

MR. McEWING: '46?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is right.

MR. McEWING: That would be the one at the head of the Grand River, I presume the Luther Martin?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is right.

MR. McEWING: Another point I would like to ask the hon. minister (Mr. Doucett) is this, the Grand river Conservation Commission have the plans and the first authority on that Grand Valley watershed, and I see here you have included the item in the Grand River authority for the construction of that work, and I am under the impression that it is that Grand River Conservation Commission that have all the plans and the arrangements made to spend that. Which one is going to do it?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Let me have that again, please?

MR. McEWING: You say $26,000 is it, for the Grand Valley?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: The Grand River Conservation Commission, that was the item set up there of $10,000.

MR. McEWING: $10,000?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes.

MR. McEWING: That is all right then, the next item—

HON. MR. DOUCETT: $300,000?

MR. McEWING: Yes, down in there, you said the Grand Valley—

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I was giving you the list of authorities established by Order-in-Council.

MR. McEWING: But was there not an amount there for the Grand Valley one?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, no amount.

MR. McEWING: Oh, I thought you had given one.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Authorized authorities. That is all. There is no amount set up.

MR. McEWING: Can the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) give me any information as to who will proceed, whether it will be the Grand River Commission or the Grand River Authority?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: A Grand Valley Conservation Authority has been set up.

MR. McEWING: Yes. Ahead of that there is a Grand River Conservation Commission over the same watershed.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is two different things.

MR. McEWING: But they are on the same watershed, I say.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, that is possible.

MR. McEWING: I am wondering who is going to—

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That will make it all the more complicated.

MR. McEWING: Yes, I was just wondering whether I could get some clarification.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: All I know is that when they apply for an authority under the Act, that it is granted.

MR. MacLEOD: What are you doing, if anything, about this recurring flood out at New Toronto?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Where?

MR. MacLEOD: Out in West York; what is the name of the town, I have forgotten it now.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Etobicoke?

AN HON. MEMBER: Long Branch?

MR. MacLEOD: Yes, Long Branch. Are you doing anything about that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, as I have mentioned, they have set up conservation commissions.

MR. MacLEOD: And are they getting some assistance?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Long Branch has the same authority.

MR. MacLEOD: Are they getting assistance?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, they will be assisted, as we have under the Grand River.

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Perhaps I can supplement what the hon.

Minister (Mr. Doucett) has said. I happen to know they applied for some assistance to the extent of 37½ per cent. of the cost of certain works they wanted to do at the mouth of the river, and this Government has agreed to pay them 37½ per cent. That is the way it is done.

MR. MacLEOD: Does that mean, then, that the municipality would have to carry the rest of it themselves, or can they get some assistance from the Dominion Government?

HON. MR. PORTER: I think they are applying for assistance to the Dominion Government, but I do not know the outcome.

MR. MacLEOD: Do you think the Dominion Government should give them assistance?

HON. MR. PORTER: They did on the Grand Valley, I do not know why they should not do it somewhere else.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, what department are we on?

HON. MR. FROST: The Department of Public Works.

HON. MR. PORTER: I was just giving a little free information.

MR. M. T. ARMSTRONG (Parry Sound): Under No. 5, I see a grant to the Government of Canada of 50 per cent. of the cost of dredging in the Muskoka Lakes district. Do you confine that to the Muskoka Lakes or will you do that in any other part of the country? Would you do it, for instance, in the district of Parry Sound?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: This is a separate agreement entered into between the Dominion of Canada and the Department of Public Works (Ontario).

MR. ARMSTRONG: Just for that particular lake?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes.
Item 171 approved.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise and report progress.

MR. OLIVER: I do not agree we made too much progress myself.

Motion approved.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 24th Order.

LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 24th Order, second reading of Bill No. 124, the Labour Relations Act, 1948. Mr. Daley.

HON. CHARLES H. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 124, the Labour Relations Act, 1948.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, is the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) not going to explain the bill?

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, on introducing this bill for first reading, I made quite a comprehensive statement on the basis of policy that bill was intended to inaugurate. Now, on second reading, I would like to go into a little more detail in explanation of the bill.

This bill which, when enacted, will replace the Labour Relations Board Act of 1944, the Labour Relations Board Amendment Act, 1946, and the Labour Relations Board Act of 1947, will have the effect of continuing the Ontario Labour Relations Board. The sections providing for the appointment and prescribing the composition and rules governing the operations of the board are similar to corresponding sections of the 1944 Act, but the board will, under this bill, consist of a chairman, an alternate chairman, and four members.

The bill provides for the enactment of regulations in the same form and to the same effect as in legislation which may be introduced at the current session of the Parliament of Canada, which, in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council is calculated to cover the same field as Part 1 of Bill 338 of the 1940 session of the Parliament of Canada.

The regulations made under the Act may depart in form and effect from the Dominion legislation only to the extent necessary to vest jurisdiction in the appropriate provincial authority to provide for a system of appeals from the Ontario Board to the Dominion Board, and to effect a working arrangement between the Dominion and provincial authorities. Provision is made for an agreement between the Minister of Labour (Ontario) and the Minister of Labour (Canada).

Section 2 provides for the appointment of a board and prescribes its powers and duties in a general way. This is similar to Section 4 of the 1944 Act.

Section 3 contains several provisions governing the manner in which the board shall discharge its functions. Each of the provisions is self-explanatory. This is similar to Section 5 of the 1944 Act, as amended in 1946.

Section 4 prescribes certain specific powers of the board which are set out in the various clauses. It is similar to sub-section 1 of Section 61 of Bill 338.

Section 5 is self-explanatory; this section is similar to Section II of the 1944 Act.

Section 6 is self-explanatory.

Section 7, sub-section 1, authorizes the making of regulations in the same form and to the same effect as Dominion legislation therein indicated, with only such variations as may, in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, be necessary for the purposes indicated in clauses A, B and C; sub-section 2 is a further but much more restricted form for the making of regulations. It is similar to sub-section 1 of Section 67 of Bill 338.

Section 8 is self-explanatory.

Section 9 is self-explanatory, with the exception of clause D, which is new. The section is similar to Section 10 of the 1944 Act.

Section 10 is self-explanatory.

Section 11 provides for the repeal of the Acts of 1944, 1946 and 1947, making all necessary provisions for continuing in force outstanding certifications. Sub-section 2 makes necessary provisions for continuing all pending proceedings.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in further explaining the reasons and purposes and the desirability of asking this House for approval of this piece of legislation, I think I should say at the outset I do not feel that I, as Minister of Labour in this province, represent any particular group. I am an impartial person in that office, endeavouring to accomplish for the people a basis for a better standard of living, and to protect their rights. That is the way the Department of Labour is operated in this province, and that is the way we propose to continue to operate it. I will say this, that I know of no place where legislation gives the working people greater opportunity to develop, to negotiate without discrimination, to protect them if they are discriminated against, and to further collective bargaining, than is to be found in this province.

There has been a persistent demand on the part of labour and on the part of management that there shall be uniformity in labour relations throughout this Dominion. To some extent it is wishful thinking that there can be absolute uniformity, but it is quite possible to bring about a semblance of uniformity, so that difficulties that arise shall be met in the same way throughout the province. I repeat again that, as has already been announced by this Government, we are endeavouring to accomplish that uniformity which is considered to be so desirable.

Along the same line, uniformity goes hand in hand with co-operation, and I can say that there has existed between the Federal Department of Labour and the Provincial Department of Labour, a spirit of co-operation that we have worked throughout the last five years endeavouring to eliminate disputes, conciliate them, and bring about better and more satisfactory labour relations in this province.

Our conciliation services have worked together, and I think that I should point out this to hon. members of this House. In my department I have five conciliation officers, men with long experience in that field. I wish to pay tribute to them here. These men have accomplished a great deal in the interests of labour and of management, and toward good relationship in this province. We, in this House, and people in this province, hear only of those cases that boil over, but I can say without fear of contradiction that about 80 per cent. of the cases that are brought to my attention, some small and some large, are brought to a successful conclusion, agreements arrived at and labour and management brought together. Therefore, the public never hears about 80 per cent. of the cases. This is going on day after day, and I feel that that is a job in which co-operation plays a great part, because some of these cases take place in the northern part of the province, some in the Ottawa area, and time being essential, it would be difficult for me to have men get there in time before the question had boiled over, and we have co-operated, I think, with very, very satisfactory results.

I am definitely of the opinion that the minimum amount of legislation is desirable rather than the maximum. I actually believe wholeheartedly in collective bargaining. I believe when you can get people to sit down around a table to deal with their dispute, that is where you can arrive at settlement, that is where you can get reasonable men together, and I am very happy to say that in my experience—and I have sat in on probably hundreds of groups—in most cases, we can bring about a reasonable settlement, because both parties, with few exceptions, take the attitude that they will be reasonable.

What has been the effect of this? There are many countries that have far more legislation than we have, and they also have far more difficulties. There are States in the Union of the United States that would have more trouble in one year, in one State, with all the legislation that they have, than we would have in the entire Dominion of Canada. So, what has been the effect of what I consider to be reasonable labour legislation?

I think if hon. members will look over the past, we have had some disturbances, it is true, but we were able to eliminate them and bring about settlement, so that we can say, I think, that we have had less disturbance here considering the activity of this province—because as has been pointed out, more than 50 per cent. of the industrial activity of the Dominion takes place in this province—I think that the small amount of trouble we have had, compared with the activity of the province is very creditable.

It would be possible to enact legislation granting everything that is requested by organized labour, to have legislation that would absolutely control industry, so that industry would actually be in the hands of labour. We could enact legislation that would eliminate the necessity for any such thing as collective bargaining or unions, which would, in my opinion, remove from industry initiative and the desire to expand and to create work and products for the people. Initiative under those circumstances, as far as employers are concerned, would be gone, and I must say that as far as I am concerned, while I hold this position I will not be a party to putting a ball and chain on industrial activity in this province so that there is no encouragement for it, or that it is curbed to such an extent that it would curb the development and the prosperity of this province.

I believe in collective bargaining; I believe in the right to organize without discrimination, and I believe in having laws so if there is discrimination, the guilty parties can be penalized.

I think under our present Act, under which we have operated for some considerable time, great benefits have been created to the general public, and to organized labour, and that great benefits have accrued to this country because of the saneness of it.

We have introduced during the sessions of Parliament an "Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act," not just in the interests of organized labour—because I appreciate the fact that organized labour is quite well prepared to take care of itself—but in the interests of the individual workman, who works as a single unit, or in very small places where organization is not possible.

People may say, "You have not got the best legislation; you have not got this; you have not got that; you have not done something else," but what are the facts? What is the position of industry in this province?

Mr. Speaker, industry is pouring into this province at a rate of about $57,000,000 last year, and that has been continuous for some years, and from expectations and from examinations of plans in my department, there is evidence of it exceeding that amount this coming year.

Is industry dissatisfied with our regulations? Is labour, which is pouring in here from other provinces which have some measure of labour legislation which, in their opinion, is superior to ours; is labour pouring into those provinces at an equal rate at which it is into Ontario? I say it is not. I think, with some basis of fact, that industry is coming here because our labour laws are fair, and because of that it is a desirable place to establish industry.

Mr. Speaker, I know it has been said that industry is prosperous; they are making too much money. I do not know that they are making "too much money," but I like to see industry prosper. I think that is very desirable, because prosperous industry means general prosperity, and it means improved standards of living.

We hear the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) say the other day that 50 per cent. of all Canadian industrial activity centres in this province. Much of this is basic, such as steel, lumber, and other things. Common sense, Mr. Speaker, demands we drive on in these basic industries; that we do not endeavour to restrict them to the extent of curbing those great industries, for it is solely on their ability to produce rests the ability of smaller industries who rely on these basic materials to supply our own people, and not only our own people, but people in all parts of the world, with the necessities of life.

So, Mr. Speaker, certainly we have not reached Utopia. There will always be a need for review, to march on with the times, to meet conditions as they come, and I say our labour relationship activities have proved effective, and we have established a basis on which organized labour, and those not organized, are assured of certain of the amenities of life, and that opportunity is here for those who wish to work and who have the initiative, courage and skill to go forward, and I believe our adoption of the bill which was introduced in the Parliament of Canada last night is a bill which, by following it, as I have pointed out, as closely as it will fit in with our activities, will bring us nearer to that uniformity of labour legislation, and will result in continued satisfactory relationships, and continue our industrial activities and prosperity.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this bill.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in speaking to the second reading of the bill introduced by my hon. friend (Mr. Daley) one's first reaction to this bill is that the age of miracles must have at last arrived, because the motivating spirit of the bill itself is legislative desire on the part of this Government to adopt a bill which was presented to the Dominion Parliament last night, and to incorporate that bill and the provisions thereof, into the labour laws of this province.

There are one or two general observations, Mr. Speaker, which I want to make at this time.

This bill is an unusual one in that the meat of the bill itself is not in the bill, nor is it as a schedule to the bill. I think it would have been very advisable, Mr. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) to have done one of two things; either to have attached Bill 338, the bill which has now started its course through the Dominion Parliament, as a schedule to this bill, or to have done as I understand they are doing in the Manitoba Legislature, actually putting Bill 338 as the measure to be decided upon in the Legislature of Manitoba.

I am not so sure in this particular bill there is a great deal of need for alarm, but I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) will agree with me that properly the hon. members of this Legislature, in dealing with an Act of this character, are entitled to have before them all the essential meat which will go to make up the completed legislative labour laws of the province. I want to say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) I think that deserves very serious consideration. Perhaps in some way it can be accomplished even at this late date.

I want to make it as strong as I can that while we on this side of the House favour the principle which the bill seeks to convey, we are, nevertheless, concerned with the fact that the bill itself does not contain, nor have we had collective access to the bill as it will finally be written, with the incorporation of the Dominion statutes therein.

The other point I want to make, Mr. Speaker, is this; as I recall the words of the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), if and when we adopt this Dominion legislation, Bill 338, we are restrained, as a province, from making alterations in that Act, once we have adopted it, beyond the power to make regulations as explained by the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) which are defined strictly in the bill. I want to be clear on that point, Mr. Speaker. I am only bringing this up because it seems to me this Legislature should have power, at any time, if it wants to add to this new labour law—if it feels there is something which could be added to the law which would make it more workable in the interests of labour and industry generally—we should have the power to make that addition.

On the opposite side of the ledger, if something in the bill itself becomes distasteful to us, and does not work out in harmony with our practices in this province, we should have the opportunity and the right to remove the objectionable sections, if objectionable sections there are.

I leave the matter there, Mr. Speaker, except to say, in general terms the Liberal Opposition in the Legislature have time and again expressed their confidence in and their desire to have uniform labour legislation throughout the Dominion of Canada. I think a good deal can be said for uniformity, not only in labour legislation, but in other fields of legislation. Certainly, if an opportunity presents itself now to move forward in harmony with other provinces to effect a Dominion-wide labour bill, which will build up the opportunities for labour and capital to get together, we would certainly be in support of such a measure.

I bring these two matters to the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) in order we may have clarification of them, and know exactly where we stand before we move forward in the adoption of this measure.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Speaker, the general purpose of this bill is to make it possible for the provisions of any Dominion Labour Act to be adopted in Ontario.

The bill reduces the membership of the Ontario Labour Relations Board from six plus a chairman to four plus a chairman. It does not carry forward the provision of Bill 338 (Section 58:1) that they must consist of an equal number of representatives of employers and employees.

The bill carries forward some other provisions of the Ontario Labour Relations Board Act, 1944. One of the most obnoxious and undemocratic of these provisions is that the Act is not to apply to any employees of a municipality, a school board or any municipal board or commission, unless the municipality, board or commission consents to it. In other words, municipal employees can enjoy collective bargaining rights only if their employer consents. This is not new, but it is highly undemocratic and thoroughly objectionable.

The real substance of the Act—that is, all the provisions for collective bargaining, definition of unfair labour practices, penalties for violation, etc., are left to be filled in by regulation. This is in principle bad. Such provisions should be seen by the House and passed by the House.

The bill provides that the regulations shall be “in the same form and to the same effect as that part of any Act that may be passed by the Parliament of Canada at the session currently in progress, which is designated by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council as being in his opinion legislation calculated to cover the same legislative field as Part 1 of Bill 338.”

Two points are to be noted here:

(1) Provincial legislation is to be adopted to cover the same field as Bill 338. If the Dominion Government, under pressure from organized labour, makes any improvements in Bill 338 the Ontario Government can express an opinion that they are not calculated to cover the same field, and leave them out of its regulations.

(2) The phrase “calculated to cover the same field” as Bill 338 does not mean that the legislation has to be the same as Bill 338. For example, the provisions of the Saskatchewan Labour Code and of Bill 338 both “cover the same legislative field” in that they both deal with the same subjects, but they do it in very different ways. Thus it would be possible for the Dominion Government to pass an Act far worse than Bill 338, and the Ontario Government could, if it wished, make it the law for Ontario also. The Canadian Manufacturers’ Association and some of the corporation lawyers in the Canadian Bar Association have been urging the Canadian Government to change Bill 338, and have been carefully studying the Taft-Hartley Act to that end.

The Legislature therefore is being asked to sign two blank cheques—one for the Ontario Government, and one for the Dominion Government.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): You wrote that too soon.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General) Can you not speak on the bill without reading it?

MR. GRUMMETT: There has been a lot of reading in this House. Very, very few have spoken without referring wholly to their texts.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I would like to think it was your speech.

MR. GRUMMETT: The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) himself when speaking before the Orders of the Day—

HON. MR. DREW: My comment referred to the fact that you wrote it too soon. The bill is now in; there will be amendments.

MR. GRUMMETT: It is before the House for consideration at Ottawa today.

If the Dominion Government makes Bill 338 worse than it is, the Ontario Government may accept those changes and the Legislature has nothing to say about it. If the Dominion Government improves Bill 338, the Ontario Government may refuse to accept those changes, and again the Legislature has nothing to say about it.

Detailed weaknesses of Bill 338 can be dealt with in committee. Briefly, some of the weaknesses in principle are:

1. It does not deal adequately with unfair labour practices. It will not effectively prevent employers from inducing employers setting up a labour spy system.

2. It does not effectively outlaw company unions. It does not prohibit their formation, or require them to be dis-established when proven.

3. Even after a union gets a majority the Board is not required to certify it, but merely “may” certify it.

4. The provision for industry-wide collective bargaining is meaningless, because any one employer who refuses can prevent it.

5. It permits employers to discriminate among unions by permitting one to solicit membership in working time, and not another.

6. Conciliation procedure is long and tedious—it may last for three or four months and still produce no results.

7. There is no provision for strike action if an employer refuses to bargain with a certified union.

8. The penalties for violation could bear very heavily on a union or individual worker, but would mean very little to a big corporation. For example, the maximum fine for cutting wages during negotiations is only $250 a day. For a company with 2,500 workers that is 10 cents per worker per day, which might be far less than the wage cut. Other penalties are in the same proportion.

9. Enforcement of the Act is left to the police courts where magistrates are often unfamiliar with industrial relations. It should be enforced by the Board.

10. The bill does not provide for union security of any sort.

11. The bill does not provide for grievance procedure through the union. Instead, it seems to encourage individual presentation of grievances, which gives the employer power to discriminate between union and non-union members in settling grievances.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: What do you mean "union security." It is a slogan, and I would like to know what you mean by it.

MR. GRUMMETT: I am making a speech, Mr. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), and I have the floor.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Then, Mr. Speaker, may I through you ask the member a question.

MR. GRUMMETT: I have the floor.

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) may ask the question, and it is for the hon. member for Cochrane, South (Mr. Grummett) to decide whether he will answer.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I thought somebody wrote it for him.

MR. GRUMMETT: I have the floor, Mr. Speaker.

No. 12: Bill 338 is not a genuine national labour code. We will not have a national labour code till the B.N.A. Act has been amended to permit the Dominion at least to set minimum standards of labour legislation right across the country. There is no assurance that other provinces will adopt this Act—some of them, like Prince Edward Island, have made it clear that they won't, by adopting different Acts already.

Mr. Speaker, this Act is before the Federal Government, and we are asked today to adopt Bill 338, to make it part of our legislation. We are giving to our Legislature the power to adopt into a covering Act something that is not yet decided by the Federal Government. I think we should wait until we know what the final provisions of the Federal Act are. It will be decided within a few days, undoubtedly, and to that end, I would move, seconded by Mr. Taylor, that the motion that "Bill No. 124, the Labour Relations Act, 1948, be now read a second time," be amended to read, "that Bill No. 124, the Labour Relations Act, 1948, be not now read a second time, but be read a second time this day one week hence."

Mr. Speaker, there is nothing wrong with the suggestion. We can lay this bill over for one week.

HON. MR. DREW: Would you like to make it three weeks?

MR. GRUMMETT: It is immaterial to me, if the rest of the hon. members are agreeable.

Mr. Speaker, one week's time will give us an idea of what is going to happen in the Federal House, and we will know then what we are accepting, and not just "buying a pig in a poke."

MR. MACLEOD: Does not the amendment have to be put to the House.

MR. SPEAKER: Yes, before there is any debate on it.

I wonder if the hon. member for Cochrane, South (Mr. Grummett) would not like to change this. There is no necessity for the first part of this amendment, that is, the words "that Bill No. 124, the Labour Relations Act, 1948, be now read a second time," and simply leave in the amendment, so it will read:

"That Bill No. 124, the Labour Relations Act, 1948, be not now read a second time, but be read a second time this day one week hence."

MR. GRUMMETT: That is quite all right, Mr. Speaker. The reason I put the first part in was the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) has already moved the motion, and I was referring to the motion made by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), to tie the whole thing in together. This is an amendment, Mr. Speaker, to the hon. Minister's (Mr. Daley) motion. That is the way I look at it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, the first thing I would like to express is my amazement regarding the impact and impression of this bill on the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). He intimated that this very praiseworthy co-operation on a Dominion - provincial level by this Government was something in the way of a miracle. I wonder where he has been since 1944, because what is proposed now is to follow the very same course of action which was followed by this Government in 1944, relative to P. C. 1003.

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) stressed that attitude so praiseworthy and miraculous, I might refresh his mind, and the minds of some of the other hon. members of the Legislature as to precisely what happened at that time.

In the fall of 1943, a Dominion-provincial labour relations conference was called by the hon. Minister of Labour at Ottawa. At that time the Department of Labour at Ottawa felt it would be desirable to enact a labour code in relation to war industries. The position taken by the representatives of this Government at that conference was that in war-time all industry would be war industry by reason of the impact on all industry of all sorts of control measures in effect during war-time, and it was indicated by this Government, and the Government at Ottawa—and argued—that legislation enacted by Order-in-Council by the Dominion Government at that time should cover the whole field of industry so that neither management nor labour would be bedevilled by the problem of determining in relation to any particular labour dispute whether the industry was a war industry, or one not so classified. That was one course we urged.

The other course we urged was that the administration of that national war-time legislation should be delegated back to a well-established and very experienced department of labour found in the different provinces; in other words, there should be a uniform national law, and a decentralized administration of that law.

We did not quite attain that objective, because, despite the fact the Government of Ontario indicated its willingness to forego and constitutional objections, and to subscribe to that degree of co-operation, the Dominion Government at that time, was not prepared to go that far in its legislation, by reason of objections they felt might be taken in some parts of the country.

They, therefore, enacted by Order-in-Council a code, later known as P. C. 1003, which applied to war industries, and in order to achieve the uniformity at that time desired, by the very same devices as contained in the present bill before this Legislature, the province applied the war-measure code for provincial legislation, to that part of industry not covered by the Dominion measure.

There the matter has stood ever since. P. C. 1003 was enacted in order that the revocation of the war measures would not leave us without legislation, because P. C. 1003 then became the legislation of the Province of Ontario, and is the legislation of the Province of Ontario today.

Mr. Speaker, I would remind the hon. members of the Legislature that the area of difficulty in relation to P. C. 1003 in war-time was the division of industry between war industry and ordinary industry, not so classified.

The new Dominion legislation, it should be borne in mind, each of the hon. members who are interested have been able to examine ever since last year, that is, Bill 338, which was introduced but not proceeded with. That bill, to describe it quickly, is a revision of the Order-in-Council 1003, but not a very major revision. I would say the relations of P. C. 1003 found in this bill are not of a major nature, and there are no great alterations in principle. There are minor amendments.

The difficulty which arises now is this; although the war measure applied to that segment of industry designed as a "war industry," and although this proposed legislation is a revision of it, it must be borne in mind by the Legislature that the new Dominion Act, although a revision of a war-time order will, in fact, if enacted by the Dominion Government, apply to a very, very narrow segment of industry, namely, that small segment of industry which comes within the legislative jurisdiction of the Dominion of Canada.

Therefore, instead of a great and vast part of the industry of the Province of Ontario being covered, as it was in war-time by a war measure, it will be a very small part, and the vast part of the industry of this province will be covered by Ontario legislation. That Ontario legislation will either be 1003, which is our present legislation, or this legislation now proposed to the House, or some entirely different Act that may be enacted by this Legislature, but which ever of those emerges at the present time is what will cover the great part of industry in this province under our present constitutional set-up.

There is, however, a vague field in relation to what the Dominion can cover and the province can cover. There are those of us who feel that the public interest in this respect is paramount and far more important than the question of any difference of opinion about legislative jurisdiction.

What uniformity will permit here under the design of the Ontario bill is for the Ministers of Labour to get together and quite apart from all the constitutional jurisdiction made, say under the B.N.A. Act, these Ministers will be in a position to recommend to their respective governments what part of that administration should be carried on by the other.

And with uniformity legislation it is open to the Government of Canada to appoint an administrative agency in Ontario as its agency to administer both in all respects and in respect to conciliation under the legislation, and vice versa; the Province of Ontario is in a position to appoint a Dominion agency set-up under this Act to administer what is the law of the province applicable to the industry in this province.

And so I hope that bringing the discussion to this point, Mr. Speaker, this bill does not represent a new idea of Dominion-provincial co-operation by this Government, but is a continuing attitude of co-operation by the province to the Dominion and by the Dominion with the province in this extremely important field commenced in 1943 and continued to the present time, and now projected into a future field of co-operative effort to keep labour relations, affecting not only industry and labour, but also the general public, free of entirely unnecessary jurisdictional and other disputes, and so that we may continue to go forward with our board in Ontario and the board at Ottawa; if they will accept our appeal proposals developed in relation to this body of labour legislation, developed jurisprudence, that is something that both industry and labour could depend on so that labour relations will go smoothly.

Although the Dominion Act was introduced last night by the hon. Minister of Labour at Ottawa, the Parliament itself introduced it, no doubt, it will no doubt go through the course of consideration in committee before that Parliament. When our Act was introduced here, we had no knowledge as to when the Dominion Act might be introduced.

The provisions of the Ontario bill carry with them the plain intentions that if the enacted legislation as it develops at Ottawa represents, as it appears to represent, a revision of our present legislation, 1003, and nothing develops in the course of that consideration, that would appear to be a hopelessly unacceptable principle that would be accepted by this Government responsible to this legislation, then it would be adopted and P. C. 1003 would then disappear as the legislation of the province, and the adopted bill would then become legislation of the province. On the other hand, if it is not adopted, we are not without legislation until this legislation meets again, we still have P.C. 1003 as our legislation and our administration can go forward. In that respect, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) raised a question whether the adoption of this legislation in any way ultimately implies the end of this Legislature. Mr. Speaker, I wish to assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and all the hon. members of this Legislature, that our Act is simply the same as any other Act of this Legislature, it provides for the adoption by Order-in-Council, which is true of the Dominion Act, and that is just the same as if we had passed an Act in this Legislature and it can later be revoked or can be revised. But may I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that substantial revision of the proposed Dominion legislation in the enactment into legislation would only destroy the object we are seeking to obtain.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I did not say anything about a substantial revision.

MR. BLACKWELL: May I put it that way. I am sure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will agree with this, if a case of departure from the uniformity were to develop in any material degree, then there would be a case for change of policy to be put forward by this Government, there would be a case to put forward our own legislation with regard to the legislation of the Dominion. The case here is one of a policy in the public interest that if there is not a case of sufficient importance to justify the departure from the uniformity, then what we would stick to and what we propose to stick to is the uniformity so that there will be no obstacle placed in the way of one government delegating an administrative agency of the other administration in matters that appear in public interest.

Now, I would emphasize that, not only to the extent of delegating administration of the whole of the legislation in a certain field, but it also involves the question of delegating administration in the way of conciliation back and forth on a basis where the officials are dealing with exactly the same law of administering it in exactly the same manner.

Mr. Speaker, with that explanation of the broad purposes and objects behind this bill, I want to express my support of the motion as initially made, and would say that the amendment to the motion will not be acceptable to the Government.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): May I ask my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) one question? It arises out of his remarks. He made some reference to an appeal, the suggestion of an appeal which the Dominion Government accepted. To what had you reference there? Is there anything contained in the bill?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: There is a provision in the bill whereby if an agreement cannot be reached, the national board at Ottawa can be used as an appellate tribunal from the Ontario board.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrews): Mr. Speaker, having listened to the lengthy explanation of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and his attempt at defence of this bill that is before us, I am more than ever inclined to oppose Bill 124, which is before us now, and to favour the amendment, that is, to hoist it. Although I should add I would favour total defeat of the bill, but there is an amendment for hoisting.

Now, Mr. Speaker, my opposition is based on two major considerations. First, that while it may be legal, it is a most unusual procedure to follow in the Legislature. It is most unusual that a Legislature should adopt legislation that is not actually before it, to endorse legislation from another house which is not legislated in that House. To vote for a bill which will be the basis of labour relations in the most industrial province of the Dominion, which is not before us, on which we cannot study and cannot express an opinion, and to say the least, it is unusual, it is irregular, it is wrong, and should not be applied nor supported in this House. My colleague (Mr. MacLeod) says it is not constitutional, but I do not want to get into constitutional discussions, particularly in the absence of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), who left after he said his piece.

But I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Attorney-General's (Mr. Blackwell) attempt at drawing a parallel between what is being attempted now and what was done in 1944 is not in accord with the facts. In 1944 this Legislature did not adopt legislation which was not yet enacted elsewhere. It decided to apply the regulations which had already been adopted by the Federal Government under the War Measures Act to cover specific industries in our province, regardless of what we had to say about it, to apply these regulations to all industries. That was the issue in 1944. It was not a case of asking this Legislature to adopt something that was going to be adopted, we were asked to extend the application of something that Ottawa had adopted and was applying already.

I submit there is no comparison between the two bills.

And, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) says having already applied the regulations known as P.C. 1003, what we are asked to do now is to adopt something which is similar to that, but contains minor amendments. I submit, Mr. Speaker, it is nothing of the sort. The legislation which we have not before us, which we are asked to adopt beforehand, is not one that contains minor amendments of P.C. 1003. There is a very profound difference between the two measures.

The first point I want to make, though, is there is no comparison between what we are asked to do now and what we were asked to do in 1944. This, to my knowledge, is the first time where such important legislation as that governing labour relations is to be adopted, if the Government has its way, without the actual legislation being before us.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I submit that the action of the Government in presenting Bill 124 is, in reality, an evasion of its responsibility, it is an attempt to hide behind the skirt of Ottawa.

It sounds almost fantastic to hear spokesmen of a Government that is almost always opposed to uniformity in social legislation, such as family allowances and other such items, suddenly blossoming forth as champions of uniformity. I say that something is "rotten in Denmark," when you become the champions of uniformity.

You promised the province and the working people of Ontario the best labour legislation in the world.

AN HON. MEMBER: They have got it.

MR. SALSBERG: I say without any fear of contradiction that this Government has not introduced a collective bargaining legislation.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I ask the hon. member for St. Andrews (Mr. Salsberg) to please stick to the question before the House, and not start wandering.

MR. SALSBERG: I am sticking to what is before the House, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: I will tell the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) whether or not he is sticking to it. At the present time he is not.

MR. SALSBERG: I submit that I am. The record will show that—

MR. SPEAKER: If the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) starts to talk that way, I must remind him that while I do not want any trouble, I must insist that he respect the chair in any case.

MR. SALSBERG: I submit, Mr. Speaker, that this Government has not introduced a single bit of collective bargaining legislation.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I say to the hon. member for St. Andrews (Mr. Salsberg) that he is out of order. I do not want to report him to the House, but if he continues I certainly will do so.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, will you please tell me why—

MR. SPEAKER: When I am on my feet, I must insist that the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: I am.

MR. SPEAKER: You are now.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, —

MR. SPEAKER: I am telling the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that is my ruling.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, may I ask for an explanation why I am out of order, and wherein my observation is out of order? I think I am entitled to know that.

MR. SPEAKER: In not sticking to the question before the House, which is Bill No. 124.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I submit to you that I am speaking on collective bargaining legislation which is contained in this bill, and I submit to you most respectfully—

MR. SPEAKER: Might I point out to the hon. member for St. Andrews (Mr. Salsberg) that he is beginning to criticize the Government not on Bill 124. Stick to the bill and I will be glad to give you all the leeway necessary on that, but do not start getting away from it.

MR. SALSBERG: I did not think I was getting away. However, I say that the collective bargaining legislation that was on the statute books of the province so far—and remember I emphasize collective bargaining legislation—is entirely the legislation which was adopted in Ottawa, known as P.C. 1003.

Today we are asked to again adopt legislation which has not yet passed but which Ottawa is preparing. I say this is not fulfilling the promise that has been given, and I say further that this haste on the part of the Government to incorporate legislation that has not yet been adopted in Ottawa is in order to be able to say in time of election: "We have adopted Ottawa legislation because we want uniformity, and labour always wanted uniformity, and if the bill is not good enough, gentlemen, blame Ottawa, do not blame us."

I suggest that is not going to satisfy the working people, and I do not think the Government should seek to apply Ottawa legislation at this stage.

Insofar as uniformity of labour legislation is concerned, it is true that labour has always asked for uniform national labour legislation. That is true, and labour welcomes any attempt at uniformity in labour legislation, but I think it is also common sense to expect that any type of national legislation at this time governing labour relations will not be the best possible kind of legislation. I imagine that the Federal Government would have to take into account positions such as that taken by the Prince Edward Island Government which is wholly reactionary, and that taken by the Saskatchewan Government on labour legislation. Ottawa will attempt to find some middle of the road legislation. That does not make it the best, and Ontario certainly should not try to hide behind that legislation, but should bring in improved legislation, better legislation than this average sort is bound to be.

I think it is correct to say that this bill will constitute a backward step in collective bargaining legislation in this province. I say without fear of contradiction that 1003 was in some ways a retrogression from the collective bargaining legislation that existed before 1944. At that time, both the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) stated in this House that they were not very happy with P.C. 1003, that they attempted to influence Ottawa at the time to improve upon it, and I know they did, but they applied it because that was the regulation and they wanted to make it universal in the province.

I might also remind the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) that I moved an amendment at the time to incorporate some of the better features of the old provincial law into 1003. The government rejected it. 1003 was in some ways a step backward, it lacked enforcement instruments and now we are given a new bill, a bill which is not even before us, and which I submit is worse than 1003.

HON. MR. DALEY: How do you know that, if you have not seen it?

MR. SALSBERG: I have seen it.

HON. MR. DALEY: I know you have.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Minister, I have got it right here, and so have you.

HON. MR. DALEY: Certainly.

MR. SALSBERG: You know it, and I know it. I submit the new bill 338 is worse in many respects than 1003, unsatisfactory though 1003 is. It is a serious step backward, it does not constitute only a few amendments as the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) said, it constitutes a revision on some points that are decisive.

I have before me, not only 338, minus the final amendments, the content of which I do not know, but I have before me an extract from the official Labour Gazette issued by the Dominion Government, in which they point out the major differences between the provisions of the bill and the provisions of P.C. 1003. I call, Mr. Speaker, to the attention of hon. members of this House, that I am quoting the official journal of the Federal Department of Labour, and that I shall quote their own emphasis of the differences and leave it to hon. members to judge whether they are minor or not. For the record, I am quoting from page 927 of the Labour Gazette for July, 1947, commencing at the third paragraph, which says:

"The basic requirement of the legislation for the certification of a trade union as the exclusive bargaining agent for a unit of employees is that the majority of employees in the unit are members in good standing of the union.

"In P.C. 1003 written authorization given by employees in favour of a union were accorded recognition as the equivalent of actual union membership for the purpose of certification."

That is the end of paragraph 3. Now, Mr. Speaker, this is obviously a step backward. It makes it extremely more difficult, as the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) knows so well, to secure certification under this change. The law is not required for the good employer, as the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) and all hon. members know, the law is required for the employer who refuses to go along, is that not right? Now, such employers in the past have practised the firing of employees, discriminating before a vote could be taken. A terrific turnover of employees takes place, and the result is that you can almost never have a majority.

HON. MR. DALEY: Oh, yes, you can.

MR. SALSBERG: I submit that is a very serious retrogression, which I do not think we should endorse.

Then I would like to read paragraph 4 of the Government's own statement, that is the Federal Government. That paragraph says:

"There is provision giving the board discretion to revoke certification granted to a union if it is satisfied that the union no longer represents the majority of employees.

"In P.C. 1003, when once certified, there was no provision for revocation of certification except when displaced by the bargaining representative selected by another union organization."

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that this clause provides an opening—again I emphasize for the employer that does not want a union—to keep the union in continuous turmoil, to allow it no peace.

HON. MR. DALEY: That will not affect the good union.

MR. SALSBERG: I suggest it will always affect a bad employer, Mr. Minister, and many a good union has had that experience, you know that. At any rate, I submit it is a serious step backward which we should not approve. I submit further that it is not a minor amendment.

Paragraph 10 of that same statement says:

"The provision providing that for the purpose of prosecution under the Act a trade union or employees' organization is deemed to be a person is new."

That is a most serious innovation. It will, if enacted, make a trade union suable in the courts, Mr. Speaker, and that is not at this moment, and never has been, permitted because of the very character of trade unionism, and this has come down from British practice. I submit this is a very serious, profound change. It is not an amendment, it is a retrogressive step, which we should not approve. Even if Ottawa adopts it, this Government should not. There are many other sections in this statement of the Ottawa Government itself, in its official publication, which show the serious step backward being taken through this Bill 338.

Mr. Speaker, I followed the attitude of labour and other groups towards Bill 338 since it was first introduced in Ottawa, and I can say that there is not a single group in the Labour movement that is enthusiastic for Bill 338. No one is enthusiastic about it.

HON. MR. DALEY: Oh, yes there are.

MR. SALSBERG: The difference in the approach within the labour ranks differs from mild opposition to strenuous opposition. There are union leaders who argue that it might have been worse, and that we should, therefore, give it a try. That is the best that any labour man says about Bill 338. On the other hand, the vast majority are opposed to Bill 338. The entire Canadian Congress of Labour and its leadership—that is not Red, Mr. Speaker—is unalterably opposed to 338. They look upon it as a dangerous step, and I think that they are right, I think they are correct. It is a bad bill, which is going to be hard on labour. It is not going to improve relationships, it will endanger them. The whole C.C.F. is opposed to it, and I might say, of course, that our group is opposed to it for the same reasons that all others are. They are opposed to this bill because it does not provide the best labour legislation, it is a step back from 1003, and the Canadian Congress of Labour went to the extent of preparing a bill of their own called a "National Labour Code," which they presented to Ottawa, and which I would respectfully submit to the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) for study and consideration through the period when the bill will be hoisted. It contains at least the essence of what is required for satisfactory labour relations. From every point of view I think that the legislation before us should not be acceptable, first, because it is a wrong way to enact legislation—we are asked to vote for something which is not before us and which has not yet even been adopted in Ottawa—second, even if such were the case, even if Ottawa had adopted it and even if the bill had been before us an appendix to the bill, I would oppose it for the reasons I have advanced, and I would urge the Government not to rely upon that bill only because Ottawa had adopted it, but for the reasons I pointed out and for many others, to improve upon it to give Ontario better legislation than the Ottawa bill while we could at the same time, to feel that the Ottawa bill at any rate will establish a minimum level for Ontario labour and Ontario industry, to know that no one in the country will come below that level.

That would be a proper step, but as it is, I agree that we are asked to buy a pig in a poke, and I submit that the pig, 338, has a very, very, dangerous grunt coming out of that bag. I do not think we should buy it. I do not think the Government should want it. I do not think they should ask hon. members to adopt it. It is a wrong method, and wrong legislation—it should be completely defeated, a proper bill introduced and, failing that, it certainly should be hoisted.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I rise at this moment not so much to debate the merits or demerits of the bill. I think a very reasonable request has been made of hon. members of this legislature, that request being that the bill be hoisted for a week.

I have had an opportunity of looking over Bill 338, and in my humble opinion, I just want to make the observation that it is totally inadequate, and I think it is very unfair for the Government to take the position that we should pass the legislation which we do not have before us. I admit I had an opportunity of studying that bill, but how many hon. members of the Legislature have had that opportunity?

I appeal to the Government's own common sense that it give all hon. members here in this Legislature an opportunity of examining Bill 338. Let the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) tonight, or at this moment, wire the Government at Ottawa and have copies sent here so that tomorrow on our desks we may have copies of this bill. Is that not a reasonable request?

HON. MR. DALEY: You have had that for a year, it has been published for a year.

MR. CARLIN: It has never been on our desks, to the best of my knowledge. If it was, it must have been while we were prorogued. I think it is a very reasonable request, and I reiterate that I hope the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) will reconsider the statement that he made a few moments ago, and accord hon. members of this Legislature an opportunity of studying that bill here in this Legislature before we adopt it.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): As a matter of fact, your leader made a prepared statement about it.

MR. CARLIN: I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I say the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) read a prepared statement about it. He has been over it, or somebody has been over it for him.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, I want to register my support of the amendment to hoist this bill, for one very important reason, and that is a sound principle I have always followed throughout my life—I am never disposed to buy grab-bags, and that goes for legislative grab-bags.

Hon. members will remember that when legislation to implement P.C. 1003 was presented to this House, this group voted solidly against it for certain reasons. The big reason was that we did not know what was in the Federal Order in Council. We, in this group, and I myself especially, would like to know what we are voting for. And we in this group most especially would like to know what we are voting for. Some have had an opportunity of reviewing 338. Myself, I have not seen it. I do understand that after it was presented in the Federal House last year that some groups have had the opportunity of suggesting several amendments. Whether these amendments have been included in the new presentation or not I do not know, but I do know this that it is possible, if the same spirit of lack of co-operation exists between the Federal Government and this Government, it is possible that the Federal Government, if it might show a man the present bill, that it would be unacceptable to this Government and then we would have committed the Government, if we voted for that, committed the Government to administer this Act. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that all labour will resent any elected members in this Chamber voting on a bill that they have never seen. The bill before us is implementing legislation but the important thing is the bill that is before the Federal House at the present time. That we do not know anything about. A lot of it is hearsay. The Leader of this group has presented several reasons why we should oppose it. We do not know whether those clauses are in the bill or not. I think the thing to do is vote against it or hoist it for a week so that we might have an opportunity to peruse the bill.

However, there is still this important thing, that even after we pass this enabling legislation the bill might be so altered in the Federal House that it would not be acceptable even to members sitting here. I am not going to vote for a grab-bag; I want to see what is inside that grab-bag even though it could be acceptable to the present Government.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Possibly the hon. member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Harvey) would permit me to correct him. If I understood him correctly he stated the reason why that group voted against the adoption of 1003 in 94 was because it was not before them and they did not know what was in it. May I take this opportunity of correcting the hon. member? 1003 was introduced as Schedule A in the Legislature.

MR. F. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Speaking on the amendment moved by my hon. friend from South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett). The amendment suggests that the bill be not now read the second time but be read the second time one week hence. Now, if I thought the bill in the Dominion Parliament would be revealed with any more clarity in a week from now than it is now I think, perhaps, I would support the amendment, but there is no assurance that it will even have reached the stage of second reading in a week. I think it would not serve any useful purpose to support an amendment of that character and then find, when the week has elapsed, that we are in precisely the same position, insofar as information concerning Bill 338 is concerned.

While I am on my feet, if the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) will permit me, when we move into the committee stage on this bill, I have an idea that perhaps the Government majority, with some assistance that it might pick up, will carry the second reading of the bill. Then going into the committee stage I think it would be advantageous to the members and helpful to them in a proper assessment of the bill, if we could have copies of 338 distributed to the members prior to the committee stage of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that suggestion is not an unreasonable one.

I would, of course, point out that this bill has been available to every member of this Legislature since June 17 of last year by the ordinary channels, and I must confess I am a little surprised at some of the statements which have been made to the effect that certain members, who are interested in labour matters, did not know the contents of this bill, because my understanding is that copies of this bill were sent to every union organization throughout the country after June of last year for their consideration, as it was sent to other organizations who might be interested in it. It has had extremely wide distribution.

Insofar as that suggestion is concerned I am sure the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) will be agreeable to seeing what can be done to obtain adequate copies of the new bill.

The fact is the amendments are not very extensive. There are a number of minor and a few major amendments, but as we are today only dealing with the principle and not with the contents we can discuss the effect more fully when we are in committee. I would point out the principle really at issue on second reading is whether we are in fact prepared to approve the principle of uniformity of labour legislation.

When this bill was originally introduced the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) pointed out that the Act before the Parliament of Canada, if and when it becomes law, will apply to certain industries which might be regarded as national corporations such as railways, etc., but that there is bound to be a border area in which it would be most likely that jurisdictional disputes might arise, and it is very greatly in the interest of organized labour in this Province that disputes of that nature—which produce very little in the way of satisfactory results—should not be invited by having that very doubtful area which would lie in between these national corporations and the ordinary employers within the provincial law.

That was exactly the principle which led the Government to introduce and the Legislature to pass the earlier legislation which made P.C. 1003 applicable to all industry in Ontario and in that case applied particularly to any industry and meant there was a possibility of jurisdictional dispute, and for the purpose of establishing a uniform basis, it was made applicable to any industry. We are simply carrying forward the same principle set forth at that time and which met with the approval of this Legislature.

The Government will oppose the amendment for the reason we are dealing with the principle now and not with the bill.

MR. HARVEY: We do not want uniformity of bad legislation, and that is what we are concerned with. If we do not see this bill we cannot tell.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): I have a very vivid recollection this legislation was before the House in 1943, and that, I might say, was before the boys behind me changed their line. They were with the Government at that time; they have made a couple of flops since.

HON. MR. DREW: You cannot wish them on us.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): This, for the information of the speaker, the only amendment made to the bill in 1944 was made by my colleague and I.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): How did you vote on second reading?

MR. SALSBERG: We did not agree—

MR. NIXON: How did you vote?

MR. SALSBERG: We did not—

MR. NIXON: How did you vote?

MR. SALSBERG: I do not recall how we voted. Yes, we may have voted for it finally. We did not think it was Fascist legislation although we did not think it was good legislation. I think that was the correct and sane approach toward the question at that time.

HON. MR. DREW: We still do not know how you voted.

MR. TAYLOR: Now, the hon. member from St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has finished his speech. At that time, as I said, the hue and cry of this group was: we must not do anything to offend these Tories, but since then they have changed their line.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I want—

MR. TAYLOR: Mr. Speaker, may I have a little order. We got rid of one of the rabble-rousers. He went over to the Tories last week and we just want to keep this place quiet. At that time I recall that was the case. Since then, this group have been backing the Ottawa Government that put through this legislation. Now, they have had another flop and they are allegedly behind us, but the bill that is before us—and I hope, Mr. Speaker, you won't rule me out of order because the bill that is before us is actually not before us because it is before the House in Ottawa. I feel that our amendment is quite a reasonable one. Let us have a copy of this bill and let us see what is in it and let us study the bill that you propose to make legislation of the Province of Ontario.

I also remember well the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) at that time saying that he had a bill that covered the best legislation in the world and, if I remember correctly, one of our members challenged him he did not have it, and he had to withdraw his statement. Now, that bill has not come to light yet, that best legislation in the world, and apparently it is non-existent as yet. We are still prepared to rely on the Federal Government at Ottawa for our gas tax legislation. We rely on them for amusement tax, but we cannot go along with them on immigration or Dominion-provincial relations, and so we just take what legislation suits us and leave the rest. I think this government has hewn to its own line pretty well. They have told the Federal Government they are not going to be dictated to by them in anything, but this is quite obvious and I am all for uniformity and all for a national labour code, but I would like to see the national labour code before I vote for it.

HON. L. M. FROST (Treasurer): Have not you seen the bill since June 17th, a year ago?

MR. HARVEY: We have to rely on the press—

HON. MR. FROST: You are fighting technicalities.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): I was disposed a few moments ago to let the thing take its course and say nothing, but now that the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) has plunged into the dark and dismal past I feel that I perhaps should say a few words.

I was interested to notice that what was said by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. Leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) was really an extension of a brief observation I made myself when this bill was given first reading three days ago. As I followed the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) on that occasion I felt that we were really being called upon to take an unprecedented step. We were being called upon to delegate the authority of this Legislature to this government, to make applicable in the Province of Ontario certain legislation which was not then before the Federal Parliament and which only came before the Federal Parliament in its amended form last night. Now, I do not think that there are any precedents for what this bill calls upon the Legislature to do. I am not going to take up any great amount of time quoting authorities on this question. I happen to have before me the March issue of the Canadian Bar Review, which contains a very interesting article on the Delegation of Legislative Power to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, and the general conclusions of this article, written by a very learned man, are very much at variance with what the law officers of the Crown are calling upon the members of this Legislature to do. We are asked to give the government the power to make the law in the Province of Ontario, a piece of legislation which no jurisdiction has yet had an opportunity to fully consider or dispose of, and I want to say very frankly that it is not the sort of thing which will enhance the reputation of the members of this Assembly to so lightly delegate their powers to the executive. We are being twitted from the other side of the House—"Well, this bill has been available through normal channels since last June to anyone who wanted to read it." That may be so, but I would like to ask the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth)—who will undoubtedly vote for this bill—if he has read Bill 338 and is prepared to stand up now and give us a brief résumé of Bill 338?

MR. W. E. DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, I have not got the bill before me now, but I read the bill and have been assured by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) it is a proper bill, and that is the reason why the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is bringing down this bill today.

Now, you fellows have all had a copy of the bill. What you want to do, to my mind, is to disturb labour and keep it disturbed all the time. You have seen a copy of the bill? Admit it.

HON. MR. PORTER: He knows it by heart.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Yes, he knows it by heart.

HON. MR. DREW: He has made speeches about it.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Why disturb something that is going to be a great benefit to the labouring people of this province?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, that is just about what I expected.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Will the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) explain what he did expect.

MR. MACLEOD: I remember when the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) sat over on this side of the House, in the decimated ranks of the then Tory Party, in 1943, he made a speech against the collective-bargaining legislation brought in by the government in 1943, and he contended that its provisions were in line with the Wagner Act. I remember "Mitch" (Mr. Hepburn) jumping up and saying, "The hon. member has mentioned the Wagner Act. I suggest he give the House a brief résumé of the Wagner Act," and my hon. friend (Mr. Duckworth) did not come off very well at that time, and I wondered if he had read Bill No. 338, and whether he is in a position to give an intelligent vote.

What the hon. member (Mr. Duckworth) has just said indicates very clearly he has not read the bill, but because the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) said it was a good bill, he will vote for it.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Mr. Speaker, I resent that. I did not say I had not read the bill. I have seen the bill and read it, and I am quite satisfied. I think it will be of great assistance to labour, and I think you should adopt the same attitude.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. May I say to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) he asked the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) a question, and the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) answered his question, and I think the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) should be gracious enough to accept the answer, because he "asked for it."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I must say, with all respect, the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) did not answer my question. He made a speech.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh no, he did not.

MR. MACLEOD: I think we would be in a much better position if, instead of having a vote on the amendment, the government would recognize the action it is proposed to take is not satisfactory, and the public at large are not likely to think highly of a group of representatives who without the text of a bill before them, give a blank cheque to the executive to make the bill the law of the Province of Ontario.

I think this whole question could be very easily disposed of at this stage, if the government, recognizing the House will be in session a week from now, would agree to let second reading stand over, and let the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) order 90 copies of the bill, and let the hon. member for West York (Mr. Allan) and the other hon. members who have not seen it or read it, have an opportunity to stand up and cast an intelligent vote in support of the motion. I think that is the course to follow. Any other course is beneath the dignity of the House.

The House divided.

AYES: 59

The amendment negatived on division.

MR. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): I do not want to quarrel with your ruling, Mr. Speaker, but I think if you vote not to do something, the thing is automatically done.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh no, that came up the other day.

HON. MR. DREW: It is not so convenient as that.

The House divided on the motion.

Motion approved on division; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 25th Order.

AN ACT RESPECTING HOUSING ACCOMMODATION

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 25th Order, second reading of Bill No. 125, An Act to assist the Development of Housing Accommodation, Mr. Porter.

HON. DANA PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 125.

In rising to move second reading of this bill, it will not be necessary for me to outline at length the intentions of the government which were placed before this House on first reading.

I may remind the hon. members of the House, however, that this bill is couched in general terms so as to enable the government to deal with situations as they may arise, and to allow considerable flexibility in approaching the various problems which may come forward, and thus enable us to deal with those matters most fully and effectively from time to time.

The general intention of the government, as outlined on first reading of the bill, is to attack the whole problem of housing shortage as it exists at the present time, in four different ways.

As you will recall, in the first instance, we propose to provide for a decrease in the down payment of newly-built houses with the object of stimulating the building of a greater quantity of houses for people who at the present time are denied them, due to the size of the down payment required, and thus to take care, in some measure, of those people between the class of people who have $2,000 or $3,000 in cash to put up on a house, and those people who cannot afford to buy houses at all, but must rent in order to have housing accommodation.

In the second place, we intend to encourage new types of production and new methods of construction, where they appear to have the very definite result of reducing costs of construction. In many of these cases there is some hesitancy on the part of builders to engage in this type of building, because of the novelty of many new, very sound forms of construction, and they are not so certain of making sales. There may be cases—and we know of a number coming forward at the present time—where some assistance might result in a new type of construction being proven, with very beneficial results, in the long run.

In the third place, I mentioned we would be substantially interested in the redevelopment of obsolescent areas in the municipalities and would participate with municipalities with a view to redeveloping areas with a result of enhanced assessment, and making the best use of the services and amenities which exist in the central areas of many of our municipalities.

In the fourth place, in order to ease the burden upon the municipalities which have expressed a desire—or who may still do so—of entering into the Federal Government's low rental housing programme, we are prepared to offer to municipalities to pay half the costs of the land and services which they are required to provide under that programme, and in this way, we expect the burden of low rental housing will be, to that extent, reduced and taken from the shoulders of the municipal ratepayers.

So, in these four ways, we expect we could bring about the building of increased accommodation for the home owner.

We also hope by experimenting in the new methods we might also be able eventually to bring about a reduction in costs of construction, in many instances, and we also expect that by our developing some of the central areas of municipalities that are ripe for that, that increased accommodation under better conditions will be provided in those places where a great many of the urban population desire to live and live as a tenant at a place that is close to their work and close to their various activities that they wish to engage in.

In the fourth place, by easing the cost of low rental housing as it now bears upon the municipalities, they might be able to increase their programmes if they so desire. In other words, with the same amount of money they may be able to get twice as many houses, or if they find they do not want as many houses as applied for, they will be able to get the same amount of houses for half the amount of money.

So, from those four aspects we hope to assist in the provision of houses for the home owner and for those people who, for other reasons, desire and require to be tenants, and on the whole, to increase and improve living conditions by stimulating and encouraging the building of housing accommodation so we will have more and better and cheaper houses in the long run for a greater number of people.

I might conclude my remarks in outlining the general purposes of this bill, in general terms, so we might not be tied down and prevented from entering into some arrangement which may become necessary if we wish to accomplish the objectives which have been outlined.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): I want to say a few words, Mr. Speaker.

I think the House will generally agree the objectives set out in this bill and given voice to by the hon. minister (Mr. Porter) are very laudible ones; insofar as it will provide extra housing units to the people of this province. I think one of the particular objections to make to the bill—and to me this objection strikes right at the very root of our procedure in the legislation itself. My hon. friend (Mr. Porter) has spoken of the general terms that could be applied to this bill, and as to the flexibility with which it is surrounded. While I find myself in complete agreement with my hon. friend (Mr. Porter), in this regard, the terms are certainly very broad and the flexibility is there for all to see. There is no question about that.

I think in the House we should carefully consider whether we are going to surrender, as a Legislature, to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council the power to make regulations that could be embodied in the legislation itself when it is being considered by the House.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): That is what you just did.

MR. OLIVER: I will argue that with you at some time, but not just now.

In my opinion, after reading this bill, you could drive a team and wagon right down the centre without touching anything but the broad authority contained in the bill itself.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is no justifiable reason that comes to my mind why we need to have these powers so broad and why they need to be so flexible to achieve the ends my hon. friend (Mr. Porter) has in mind. Surely, we can set out in this bill, make it more full of the meat of legislation than it is at the moment. I think we are all familiar with the Erection of Houses Act passed in 1919. In that Act the powers were of a similar character, but they went on to set up in the statute itself, the composition of the local authority, and to say that money could be loaned on this or that project, the interest rate, the time element involved; there is nothing of that at all in this bill, and the hon. members of this House—and I say this seriously—are entitled to know how the Government intends to proceed under the legislation now before the House. I would urge the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) even at this time to set out in the bill many of the things which should properly be in the bill, but which, under these provisions, we are delegating to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, the hon. minister (Mr. Porter) in outlining the general principles of this bill has given us 4 principles around which he hangs the general application of the whole Act. First, the first is by guaranteeing loans made by loaning companies to individuals so as to lower the required down-payment. Now, I do not see how that does anything of the kind. You might be guaranteeing the amount required to be made by the loan company lower than the loan company might otherwise require from the applicant, but at the same time, you increase the mortgage he has got to carry, you increase the carrying charges. There is very little assistance to the home owner in that clause.

The second one referred to by the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) for guaranteeing loans for building developments using new and cheaper construction methods; in this case, the Government could have loaned to the person constructing his home a direct sum of money. We have at the disposal of this department of the Government a considerable sum. We have a $25,000,000 surplus. Why not use a little bit of that surplus to lend direct at low rates of interest, sums of money to persons who want to build their own homes. Why give the benefit to big loan corporations or financial institutions by guaranteeing money that they are going to finance for the construction of a home of this kind.

The third point raised by the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) by guaranteeing loans to municipalities for slum clearance. Here is another place, Mr. Speaker, where the Government could have used direct loans to a great advantage. We know that in some of our larger cities there are extensive areas that should be cleared; slum clearance is one project that should be now undertaken in several of our larger cities. By using provincial funds, we could clear away these slums and assist the municipalities in providing better homes in these areas. That will never be done until some body such as a government body assists in doing it. It is far too big a problem, in the City of Toronto especially, for the municipality to undertake. If the Government will assist, then you might see something done.

In number 4, by paying grants of $300 per house to assist municipalities for their share of Dominion low-cost housing projects. That is the first place we find the Government willing to provide money, money to assist in the down payment required by the Dominion Government. I am in full accord, and that is the first time I have found the government willing to help out. Of the $30,000,000 which you set aside, only $3,000,000 may be used and that comes in that provision; the other $27,000,000 may never be called upon, you are only guaranteeing loans made by the loaning institutions. It may never cost you $1. Therefore, talking of setting aside $30,000,000 for housing projects is erroneous. You are setting aside $3,000,000, and the remainder $27,000,000 may never be called.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is far below what was expected in Point No. 8 of the now famous 22 Points. If the hon. Attorney - General (Mr. Blackwell) were in his seat, I might be inclined to read Point No. 8 to him, but I am not going to do so at this time.

As I said before, Mr. Speaker, I would like to see the Government take some more positive steps, spend some money, not cover it up by guaranteeing loaning institutions money that they may spend, but our Government should go ahead the same as the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) does in his Department of Highways, and the Public Works; he spends money. Let the Government go ahead in the Department of Planning and Development and spend a little more money and make this department what it should be, one of the outstanding departments.

I believe if the hon. Minister's (Mr. Porter) hands were not tied it could be made the outstanding department in the Government. There is great scope for this department, and with a little encouragement, I know that the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) can build it up to a much higher standard than it now possesses.

MR. M. T. ARMSTRONG (Parry Sound): Mr. Speaker, I am in favour of this bill, but I am wondering about Section 5 where it says:

"Notwithstanding any other Act heretofore passed, any municipality, with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, may advance moneys or guarantee moneys to be advanced to any building development corporation undertaking a building development, and may issue debentures therefor."

As the case is now, in any municipality where they are spending money, the taxpayer has the say and that is subject, of course, to the Municipal Board. Does this legislation take all that away?

HON. MR. PORTER: It can always be referred to the ratepayers, as I understand it.

MR. ARMSTRONG: I beg your pardon.

HON. MR. PORTER: My understanding is, Mr. Speaker, that these matters can be referred to the ratepayers or to the Municipal Board.

MR. ARMSTRONG: That is fine; I was just wondering.

HON. MR. PORTER: It is my understanding that can always be done.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I have made a few notes on the bill which are based not on the bill itself but on the speech that the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) made when he introduced it for first reading.

I dropped down to the House on Saturday to get a copy of the bill, intending to make some annotations that might serve as a basis for any remarks that might be made on second reading. I was rather astounded to find when I picked the bill up that there was absolutely nothing in it about the plans of the Government. Therefore, I had to come back again and get the speech of the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) to find out what the bill was all about, just as I would have to take the night train to Ottawa to find out what the bill that was passed a little while ago was about. However, there are a few things I would like to say about the bill.

I would say that it should, first of all, be noted that the bill is entirely and exclusively in the nature of minor supplemental assistance to federal and municipal housing undertakings or schemes already in effect. It does not in any sense of the word constitute new housing legislation or a new housing scheme. I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) will agree with that.

HON. MR. PORTER: Oh, no, I do not agree with that at all.

MR. MACLEOD: No Ontario Housing Authority is established.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, may I just say, so that my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) will not assume that I agree with anything he has said so far, that I definitely do not agree with that last statement.

MR. MACLEOD: I thought perhaps we were getting together. Now, you drive my spirits down. No Ontario Housing Authority is established, as was suggested in the 22 Points Programme of 1943, nor by the same token, is any Ontario housing scheme projected. In other words, there is nothing, Mr. Speaker, in the bill which in any sense fulfils Point No. 8 of the 22 Points. Since the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) was too modest to read it, I am going to read it now, and I hope I will have better luck than you had when you were reading it. Point No. 8 says:

"An Ontario Housing Commission will be created to plan a great housing programme throughout the whole province for the purpose of creating employment in the period of readjustment, and at the same time, bring to an end the unsatisfactory housing conditions in many parts of Ontario."

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: That is the end of the quotation.

HON. MR. FROST: That is O.K. We have gone further than that.

AN HON. MEMBER: What an optimist.

MR. MACLEOD: "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

This point, Mr. Speaker, definitely implied to people with ordinary common sense there was going to be an Ontario Housing Commission of some kind or another, and at the time, as I have frequently pointed out in the House, the deputy to my hon. friend (Mr. Porter) went up and down this province, talking about the necessity of building 10,000 homes a year for 10 years, and that this would be necessary to even catch up on our housing needs, and it would be a good idea to spend $100,000,000 for awhile to bring our present buildings up-to-date, and raise our standard of living to what it should be in the 20th century. Those were the words of Dr. Langford, the very able deputy you had working for awhile. Why you ever parted with him, I do not know, unless it was just because he was saying things of this kind which constituted a fulfilment of the pledge the Government made.

I repeat, Mr. Speaker, the pledge made in 1943 could mean only one thing, namely, an independent Ontario scheme for large scale production of houses for sale, built in self-contained projects, or it meant what all housing movements in the modern world asked for, a low-rental, subsidized housing scheme. Neither of these is provided in the present bill.

The most pressing housing matter is the Dominion Government emergency housing, being constructed for rent, which was cancelled a few days ago because of legislation passed by this Government, but which has now been given the green light since this Government of Ontario has seen the light and withdrawn its legislation. These federal projects are not low-rental, but medium-rental housing projects. The rent ceiling has been set at $37.50 per month. In other words, the cost plus operating expenses, all of which are unspecified, must be completely covered by this rent.

Mr. Speaker, there is a difficulty which holds up in practice the construction of these Federal Government houses; for example, in the City of Toronto—and I would like the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) to note this—the thing that holds up this construction is not the $600 which the municipality is required to guarantee per house to pay for services; which has never been complained about by the municipalities as being too onerous. In the case of the 600 homes built by Toronto as the first project under this type of scheme, the city paid for the pavements, the sidewalks, the water mains, the storm sewers and the sanitary sewers at a cost of approximately $1,400 per house. To pay $600 as a contribution to such service is therefore a very small amount and the municipalities are not complaining about it. The complaint arises with respect to the cost of schools, and it is specifically the new schools which are made necessary by these housing projects, which now stand as the direct obstacle to the agreement of suburban municipalities that such housing projects be built within their boundaries.

In providing legislation to grant up to $300 from the province to cover half of the $600 required from the municipality is an attempt by the Provincial Government, in my humble opinion, to evade the real problem which has been presented to the many towns, namely, the problem of provincial grants to finance the required new schools. The inadequacy of this legislation consists in the fact that it actually brings not a single additional dollar to the task of getting these houses built, but assists the municipality by cutting in half the amount of its contribution.

Unfortunately, this will not solve the problem in any way in the Toronto area, where it is most acute. The City of Toronto can easily afford the $600, but has no authority, and could not afford, to build new schools which the suburban municipalities demand before they will agree to such housing projects being constructed within their boundaries.

Second, with respect to the $1,000 down payment for the individual who is planning to buy a private home from a speculative builder, this undoubtedly will appeal to real estate interests who are finding it increasingly difficult to convince people to over-extend themselves by purchasing one of the highly-over-priced houses available today. This cannot be considered in any sense progressive housing legislation. Its only consequence can be a greater number of housing foreclosures in the coming crisis.

Third, as to the grants to building developments and building development corporations. While Clause 5 provides that municipalities may advance moneys to developments, I am, by the way, very doubtful if there is any legislation anywhere giving municipalities outside of Toronto authority to undertake building developments or to set up housing authorities. The main point here, however, is that the $15,000,000 allegedly allotted to this aspect of the Act is meaningless until we know what regulations will be set up under Section 9. If under Section 9 a system of regular annual subsidy is established in addition to construction grants, then this legislation will be a real advance. The only slum clearance programme under way in Ontario is the Regent Park project.

It appears now this project will be a high-rent project. Alderman Shannon, a member of the Housing Board mentioned $39 per month the other day, as quoted in the press. This is high rent, not low rent. Very substantial building grants will have to be received to bring this "cost rent" down to something reasonable, say around $30 per month, and the province, or the Dominion, or both, will have to provide annual rental subsidies to bring the rents down to an average of less than $25 per month. Without this, the Regent Park scheme must fail, and obviously nothing will be done to commence new slum clearance projects.

Modern thought on housing does not advocate slum clearance as the starting point for low rent public housing projects. Legislation today of this kind to support so-called slum clearance projects is necessarily always suspect. It is to be noted that the definition of building development in the Act embraces the word re-development, and therefore might be interpreted to be applicable only to slum clearance. If so, I would immediately suspect the grants to be made by the Provincial Government under this legislation would have to do with the payment of the enormously excessive costs of slum real estate at present-day prices. If this is not so, and these grants will be made to development projects on raw land then it is progressive housing legislation.

I will be through in a moment, Mr. Speaker. I know you are worried about the clock, but I will be "right on the ball."

What is required today is not slum clearance but the building of low-rent public housing projects on raw land, to provide many tens of thousands of units so as to ease the shortage and provide alternative accommodation for the tens of thousands of families in emergency shelters, slums, stores, and other unfit places.

Mr. Speaker, there are 2,000 people living in miserable quarters, such as Little Norway, Stanley Barracks, Malton, and other emergency shelters in the City of Toronto, and I want to say to the hon. members of this House there is not one of you in this Assembly who would want to have your children raised in the kind of accommodations provided by these emergency shelters, where people are forced to live in these rat-infested quarters, and they are not going to be assisted in anyway by this legislation, to get away from that miserable existence.

Such schemes would not be burdened with the excessive costs of slum real estate, and require only a modest subsidy too ensure their complete success. Any legislation that would open the way for such housing schemes would be going a big step beyond the present Federal Emergency Housing schemes which are of frame construction, and which are not subsidized and would be opening the way for construction of masonry-row houses and three storey walk-ups in integrated projects with proper recreational facilities, public buildings, and space for commercial buildings, mentioned in the definition in the Act. If the word "re-development" does not limit this whole aspect of the Act to slum clearance, but would open the way for public low-rent housing projects on raw land, or could and would be interpreted in that light by the Government, then certainly there would be necessity for the Act to be extended to include the setting up of a proper Ontario Housing Board to administer that feature of the Act.

Mr. Speaker, before I sit down I just want to remind my hon. friend, the Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) of a prospectus which was unfolded by this Government in tens of thousands of pamphlets which were circulated throughout the length and breadth of Europe.

HON. MR. FROST: Europe?

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, Europe. And you, Mr. Minister (Mr. Frost) are the man responsible for sending them over there. I was there when you launched the project.

The prospective immigrants were told, and I am quoting:

"This is what the average Canadian workman can expect to get for his outlay: a five-room bungalow of brick or frame construction standing on its own grounds, with a lawn in front and a garden in the rear. There will be central heating and a three-piece bathroom. A telephone and an electric refrigerator can be put in at a small added cost. A garage in the rear will house his car and there will be municipal transportation within easy reach."

Now, listen:

"The cost will be approximately $3,000 payable at 10 per cent. down and the balance over a period of twenty years. This will amount to a total of about $25 per month, a sum easily within the means of the average mechanic, artisan or office worker."

Now, Mr. Speaker and hon. members, listen to this:

"This is not merely a hope or a tentative proposal. It is an actuality that has been amply proved by the many thousands of Ontario citizens who are already living in such homes. Ontario has a generous share of houses built on a more ambitious scale, and these beautiful homes are a source of pride to their owners, and to the province."

And the booklet is illustrated by photographs of some homes, one of which looks very much like the home of George McCullagh.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: That is the way you were talking in 1943, and now, in this year of grace 1948, you bring down a piece of legislation which in no sense of the word touches even the fringe of the housing crisis in Ontario, and although I do think this is a pitiable performance, although I think this Act should be called the "Hoaxing Act," instead of the "Housing Act," I have no other alternative if a vote is called on the bill but to vote for it.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It took some time to persuade you, but you have come to it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) will vote for the bill, I have very little to say in reply. And in view of the fact the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. MacGillivray) has rejoined our ranks, I am sure there will be no opposition from that quarter.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to point out very briefly one or two matters—

MR. E. A. MACGILLIVRAY (Glengarry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to know what the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) meant in saying I had "joined his ranks."

HON. MR. PORTER: I said "joined the ranks of the members of the Legislature"; "our ranks" in a broad sense; in other words, there are no restrictive items about the bill.

MR. MACLEOD: You were very "cagey" last year.

HON. MR. PORTER: I would not hold you to that. I take it as being a very straightforward expression of the generous feeling you show, and I am sure you will not oppose me on this bill.

The hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. MacGillivray) is at liberty to oppose me on some other bill, but not on this one.

MR. MACGILLIVRAY: Oh no—not on this one.

HON. MR. PORTER: It is true, as I have said, this is an unusual bill in that it is couched in very general terms. After all, what do we wish to accomplish? I know the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) is always roasting the chestnuts and re-roasting them, and it gets quite tiresome.

MR. MACLEOD: They are your chestnuts, not mine.

HON. MR. PORTER: I know, but they are old. After all, we did not do so badly in 1945. In 1945, the people did not think we had done too badly on these classic 22 points, but the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and some of the other hon. members, are taking them up all over again. We have gone so much farther than we ever intimated we would with these 22 points, but, of course, the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) has nothing else to talk about. He has to go back to ancient history, and revert to these old chestnuts which are roasted so much they have been charred by the fire.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: 25 points next time, and 75 seats.

HON. MR. PORTER: After all, when we had no points, we got 66 seats.

MR. MACLEOD: You had no principles then.

SOME HON. MEMBER: Oh, oh.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): You still have no points, but you have got 67.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. Would the hon. members kindly let the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) complete his remarks? It is nearing 6 o'clock.

HON. MR. PORTER: I will be very brief, Mr. Speaker, if I may complete this before the adjournment.

It is true this bill is in general terms, and the reason is we want to have our hands free and be untrammelled to do what may be possible in the power of the Government to increase the building of houses, so we will have the maximum number of houses in the shortest possible time.

It is possible to set down a great many restrictive regulations and to tie our hands, and prevent us—when we find conditions change somewhat, when dealing with various loaning institutions, when rates of interest change, and conditions generally change—from meeting those changes. We wish to be free to carry out our guarantees in such a way that we will be able to accomplish the building of houses for the people who may wish to buy them. It seems to me that is the main objective. I know my friend, the hon. Leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) is always very much concerned because we talk about guaranteeing money which we might not lose—

MR. GRUMMETT: Which you might not spend, is what I said.

HON. MR. PORTER: To him, nothing is meritorious unless you end it with a deficit, and this Government is not meritorious, because we have a surplus.

MR. GRUMMETT: Spend a little of the surplus.

HON. MR. PORTER: If we guarantee some millions of dollars, under this bill, the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) will say "Have you got it all back? Is it all liquidated?", and if it turns out to be a good, sound development, then, according to him, there is something wrong with it. He seems to think there is merit in a Government handing out money where it does not come back. In some cases that may be so, but as far as encouraging the building of houses is concerned, if we can do it in a way which creates assistance to the fullest extent, of course, we are accomplishing our object, and getting the houses built.

MR. GRUMMETT: Good, old free enterprise.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is not too bad. In the first place, it is good, and in the second place, it is free. That is about 100 per cent.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: How many houses are required?

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not prepared to answer that question. It depends on many factors—

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) care to have the figures—

MR. SPEAKER: I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) should go on.

HON. MR. PORTER: I have answered your question. I said I was not prepared to answer your question.

MR. SALSBERG: I was going to give you the information.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not want the information.

MR. SALSBERG: You do not want the information?

HON. MR. PORTER: I have the information.

MR. SALSBERG: You have the information? Is that it?

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I will ask the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) to please keep quiet. I do not know why he thinks he has to jump up on every occasion.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) mentioned something, but I do not know what he means when he talks about some "provincial agreement." He seems to think there is some merit in the Government becoming involved in a lot of little organizations they will set up, and sending out the carpenters and bricklayers on its payrolls.

MR. MACLEOD: I did not say that at all.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is what he is talking about, and what the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) is talking about. There is no merit in encouraging the building of houses if the Government steps in and actually employs the people to build them. I say quite frankly we have no interest in doing anything of the kind.

The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) says what is holding up the building of these rental houses which have been offered by the Federal Government is not the $600 per house, which is to be put up by the municipality, but it is the schools. Of course, as usual, he is beating around the bush, because, after all, what is preventing some of these municipalities from entering into transactions of that kind is the financial position in which they find themselves, but if they receive some financial assistance which puts them in a position where they might consider it to be in their own interests, it seems to me it makes not the slightest difference whether the money is paid as a grant to schools, or a grant for services, or in some other way.

Supposing, for instance, these municipalities decided they wanted 1,000 of these houses. If they wanted 1,000 of these houses at the present time, they would have to put up $600 for the land and the services, and in addition to that they might have to have a school.

Supposing the school costs $1,000,000 today. Of course, the Provincial Government pays toward the cost of the school, at any rate, and there will be a substantial grant from us, depending on the size of the municipality. It might be one-half, and if it was, there is $500,000 already provided.

Then the municipality gets $300,000 on account of lands and services from the government. So that you can apply that to the schools, or to the lands and services; it does not matter. It is $300,000, and all the municipality then has to put up is the balance, and the balance of the cost of the school, whatever that may be.

After all, it gets payments in lieu of taxes for these houses, and it brings down the municipal participation, and the municipal burden to a very workable and very moderate degree, in most cases.

After all, if the municipality requires the houses, they should have some stock in the enterprise.

MR. SALSBERG: That is not the case in Toronto.

HON. MR. PORTER: Of course, my friend (Mr. Salsberg) is such an authority on Toronto.

MR. SALSBERG: I wish you had attended a meeting—

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. PORTER: Well, one has a theory of one kind on a question, and another has a different theory.

This bill attacks it in various ways; it assists the home owner; it assists the man who wants one of these rental houses out on the "raw land," as the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) described it; it assists the man who wants some place in the redeveloped area in a more central part of the city. Every power required to enter into negotiations and agreement with this objective in view is given by this bill, and with this bill, "give us the tools, we will finish the job."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Speaker, there is just one question I would like to ask, and I hope I am not out of order. I am quite anxious for the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) to get the tools and do the job, but I am wondering whether this $3,000,000 is in the estimates, or will come down as a supplementary estimate.

The House divided on the motion.

AYES: 64

NAYS: Nil

Motion approved on division; second reading of the bill.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, that is better than nothing.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, I may say to the hon. members we will be sitting tomorrow night, and will proceed tomorrow with the debate on the budget. I think it would be wise before proceeding with the debate to take up the estimates of one department, and perhaps two.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Will my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) indicate what departments will be taken up tomorrow?

HON. MR. DREW: The Department of Municipal Affairs, and the Department of Health. I do not want to break into the debate, and if it takes any extended period of time to cover the estimates of the Department of Municipal Affairs, I will not call the second estimates. If we cover the first one in a reasonably short time, then I will call the second department.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 6.12 of the clock p.m.

CROWN TIMBER ACT

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Daley, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Crown Timber Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I feel I should clarify one particular point in regard to the reports which have appeared in the press, and particularly, certain reports which have been given over the radio in regard to the immigration activities of the Ontario Government.

There has been some suggestion in the news reports that the Ontario Government is discontinuing its immigration activities. I wish to emphasize to the hon. members of this Legislature, and through this Legislature, to our own people here, and perhaps, equally important, to the people of Britain and elsewhere, that the Ontario Government has no such thought nor has suggested at any time that we are discontinuing our immigration activities.

The reason I regard it as advisable to deal with this right away is that in the nature of the rapid transmission of news, it is quite possible the reports to the effect that we were discontinuing our immigration activities might be republished in Britain and elsewhere.

I explained in this Legislature on two occasions the air transportation which we have provided under the Ontario Air Immigration Plan is being discontinued with the termination by the Dominion Government, or their agents, of our existing contracts. That does not mean we are terminating any of our activities in regard to immigration either by sea or by air insofar as immigration activities are concerned.

I sought to make that clear in my earlier statement, and I repeat now what the Ontario Government did was to provide a means of transportation which did not exist. Our immigration activities apply to all methods of transportation and by all lines, either sea or air. At the time we announced our own particular programme last June, we explained we were providing our own special transportation facilities and those special transportation facilities have continued under charter arrangement until this month and flights are still continuing and will continue during April.

In that case, we simply took the necessary steps to arrange by charter for low-cost air flight to Ontario. That transportation did facilitate the movement of more than 7,000 people to this Province by that special transportation arrangement. It is only that transportation arrangement which comes to an end this month. There are other means of transportation by air of regular routes and, of course, there is increasing accommodation all the time at sea.

The hon. Minister of the Dominion Government responsible for this particular activity has indicated the Dominion agency now has plenty of aircraft available to bring immigrants to Canada, and there is no reason for the Ontario Government to continue its charter arrangement any longer to provide that means of transportation.

I want to assure hon. members of this Legislature and those outside, that our immigration activities will continue in London, in Glasgow, in Birmingham and elsewhere, and that we will continue the streamlined immigration procedure which we have inaugurated overseas for the purpose of facilitating the movement to Ontario of those who wish to come and settle here.

I said in my earlier statement, and I repeat, it is for the immigrants themselves to choose the means of transportation, and our immigration offices are available to them no matter what kind of transportation they choose.

Perhaps the hon. members have not been sufficiently impressed with the fact, in addition to the more than 7,000 who have come to Ontario by special transportation provided by the Ontario Government, a great many more have also come to Ontario by air with the assistance and advice of our immigration offices overseas, by regular commercial airlines.

And, of course, many thousands of people have come here by sea whose accommodation and whose immigration arrangements have all been carried out in the Ontario offices.

I might explain, just as an example, in addition to our activities in Britain, we are at the present time carrying on discussions in regard to the movement to Canada this year of 8,000 Dutch immigrants, and we are taking the appropriate steps to assure that as many of those immigrants as possible come to Ontario, and we are making our services available for that purpose. I might also remind the hon. members our immigration facilities have resulted in the settlement in this province of a larger number of immigrants from other European countries, and Ontario has received more than 50 per cent. of the Polish immigrants whose transportation to Canada was arranged by the Dominion Government.

I think all the hon. members of this Legislature will recognize there must be some reason for the fact that more than half of all the immigrants who came to Canada last year from every country, came to the Province of Ontario. That was very largely a result of the immigration facilities we have arranged and the constant efforts we have made to impress upon those who are prospective immigrants that Ontario is a good place in which to live.

I can merely sum up these remarks by saying in view of the assurance by the Dominion Government that they now have all the aircraft that are needed to bring immigrants by air to Canada, there is no necessity for the Ontario Government any longer to provide special air transportation. We are continuing our immigration activities, as distinguished from transportation activities, on an increased rather than a decreased level and we are sure as a result of those activities a larger number of immigrants will come into Ontario this year than at any time since the end of the war.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 1st Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 1st Order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion, that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair and that the House resolve itself into the Committee of Supply.

MR. S. J. HUNT (Renfrew, North): Mr. Speaker, rising to take a small part in the debate, I can assure you it is not my intention to take a lot of your time. I listened to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) the other day state that at this time of year it is only natural for the farmers to have the urge to get back on the land. I can only say that I am wholly in agreement with what he had to say in that respect. Also, I agree with him that to those of us who are farmers, I think it would be more satisfactory if our sessions were called at an earlier day. At this time of the year, we commence to think of what we should be doing back on the farms.

I think I might emulate a good many of the hon. members who have spoken previously, and bring to the attention of the Legislature some of what we consider are problems in our county and also tell you what we have to offer in Renfrew county.

First of all, I would like to congratulate our hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost), who is in the House at the present time, on the very excellent presentation of the very excellent financial statement. As I listened to a good many of the previous speakers since the opening of session, I was almost convinced by the remarks which were made that our Government in Ontario had been remiss in carrying out their duties and somewhat negligent in the discharge of the business of this province.

I recall some of the criticisms which were offered, and some of the suggestions which were made. One in particular was the need for the cataloguing of all crippled children in the Province of Ontario and suggestions of what might be done for their care and treatment. Another criticism which was offered was on the assistance which had been given through the Department of Health for hospitals and for the improvement of health conditions of the people of this province.

Another was the criticism offered over lack of any housing schemes to relieve the shortage of low-cost houses in Ontario. As I said before, I was pretty well convinced that perhaps our Government had fallen down, but as our legislative programme unfolded since the 2nd day of April, I have come to realize that what was suggested earlier in the session has already been taken care of.

The crippled children of this province have already been catalogued, and provision made for a centre here in this province where they might be treated and given training that would be very beneficial to them.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) introduced a bill a short time ago to impose, if and when the opportune time comes, an amusement tax to raise a very considerable amount of money, all of which is to be held in trust and paid over to the hospitals, or for the improvement of health conditions throughout the Province of Ontario.

On top of that, we had the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) present a very comprehensive scheme to assist in building low-cost houses throughout the province, so I think, all in all, we can go right down the line and take one department after another, and I would be quite justified in congratulating our Government on the very wise, successful and economical way they have handled the affairs of this Province during the last year, so that today we are enabled to write off a very large amount of our provincial debt.

Having sat a number of years as a member of a county council, I have always felt if we could end up our year with a balance on the right side of the ledger, we were quite safe in going back to our townships and being commended for the way in which we carried on the affairs of the county, and I feel quite sure the people of this province will feel that way when they realize the affairs of the province have been conducted in an economical way without neglecting any of the services after which they are looking, and were able to reduce our provincial debt by an amount of some $27,000,000.

To get back to my own county of Renfrew, it is a little off the beaten track, although a good many hon. members sitting here today have had occasion to pass that way. We have been fortunate in having a good many of our Cabinet Ministers come down to see what things are all about, but we feel that we have a good deal to tell you about in Renfrew county and a good deal to offer to some of the new immigrants and the new industries which are coming into this province.

Last year I took up a little of your time in telling you something about how we farm in Renfrew county. Farming today is the foremost industry, although as I said last year, at one time lumbering was—and still is—a very important industry with us. I may say there is a good deal that we might wish for in the way of better farming in Renfrew county and a good deal we might wish our hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) to do for us in an advisory capacity, and enable us to improve our methods, the quality of our stock and in a good many other ways, but we do appreciate what has been done.

A new breeding station was opened at the town of Kemptville last year to take care of the Ottawa Valley generally, and this is going to bring about a very marked improvement in the quality of our dairy herds in the Ottawa Valley. I think that is something which has been really worth while and in the interests of our farmers in that section of the province.

I listened with some interest to some of the remarks which were made the other day. I heard the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) remark that the farmers of this province had just passed through an unprecedented period of prosperity. Well, I would like to assure the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) that very few of the farmers of this province have amassed fortunes in the last few years. I thought too that he was inconsistent when he came back—I believe it was on the same day—and bewailed the fact that the farmers of this province were labouring under very great difficulties in spite of the fact, I suppose, that they had just passed through this wonderful period of prosperity. He outlined how many of them were without automobiles, without running water in their homes and referred to a great many other points. I thought the two remarks, coming so close together, were, to say the least, rather inconsistent.

I will agree with him there is a great deal that can be done in the interests of the farmers, and we are looking to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) to do a great deal for us. We believe he will, and in the introduction of this new milk bill, we believe he has accomplished a good deal in the interests of the dairymen of this province. It represents a lot of study, a lot of effort on the part of the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) and his officials, and we believe it will really be beneficial for the milk producers of this province.

I think one of the greatest handicaps that the farmers were labouring under during the last few months was due to the fact of the high prices they have had to pay for their feed. Last fall, if hon. members recall, the controls were taken off coarse grain and the price allowed to soar to such a point, the farmers have had to operate at a loss, to produce at a loss, or to curtail their output.

I think both these statements are more or less true. The farmers, in spite of the fact they do get a little more for their whole milk, are, in a great many cases throughout the province, operating at a loss. A great many have curtailed the output of their farms. During the war years we were fortunate in this country in capturing a goodly portion of the bacon market in Britain, and I think it is very desirable, and indeed essential, we try to hold that market and improve the quality of our product. However, owing to the high price of feed last fall, a great many of the hog producers of the province sent their breeding stock to the market. Later on in the winter, when negotiations were reopened with Britain and arrangements made, a great many of those breeding stock had gone off the market, and I think it is regrettable that next year there will be a great deal less bacon produced in the Province of Ontario and there will be a shortage not only for export but I believe for domestic use as well. I think in spite of the fact that the Federation of Agriculture and other bodies representing the farmers of this province made representations to Ottawa, that a very grave mistake was made; if it had been the intent of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa to injure the hog-raising industry of this province, it could not have been more effectively done.

Now, to get back to our own county, I will tell you a little of what we have there. On the south-easterly end of my riding—I am not going to touch on South Renfrew, because I see the hon. member for South Renfrew (Mr. Dempsey) is here and will be very glad to tell you about that himself—we have a great magnesium plant at Haley's Station where a great part of the magnesium required during the war years was turned out under Government supervision. Since that time, this plant has been turned over to private ownership and is today employing between 400 and 500 men.

Then we get a little farther up the river and come to the town of Pembroke where we have our sawmills, there being 3 large mills sawing altogether in the neighbourhood of 12,000,000 board feet, not all of it coming off Ontario land, as we get a good deal of that from the Quebec side of the river.

We have the Eddy Match Company in Pembroke, and two companies sawing a good deal of lumber and turning out the finished product. Then we have the Steel Equipment, quite a large plant turning out office equipment. We have the Superior Electric, turning out electrical equipment, and a goodly number of other smaller industries.

As we move a little farther up the river, we come to our fish hatchery at Petawawa Point.

Just in passing, I would like to draw to the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) that we are expecting something to be done there this year. We have assurance that it will be taken care of, that it is being considered at the present time.

We realize that due to the shortage of material and labour in that part of the province it has been rather difficult to keep up some of these plants to their full capacity, but this one at Petawawa Point is in very great need of repair at the present time. On that property as well, we have I think the only herd of elk in captivity in the Province of Ontario, and perhaps in the Dominion; I do not know whether they have any in the other provinces or not. We are shipping them out year after year, truckloads of them to be released in different parts of the province. The hon. member for Bruce (Mr. Johnstone), I believe may have run across some of them up there in the Bruce Peninsula. This is all in connection with the fish hatchery there. They have, I believe, in all some 200 or 300 acres fenced in where these elk are kept in captivity and are thriving, and as the herd increases, are being shipped out to other parts of the province.

Then, as we go a little farther west we come to the atomic energy site at Deep River. Three or 4 years ago this was just a solid jackpine forest. During the war years the townsite was cut out there and I am sure you have all heard a good deal of what has been accomplished there. The plant is not open to inspection by tourists going through, but anyone who happens to be going down that way is quite at liberty to go in the townsite and see what they have there. They have 6 new hotels there, they have their own water system, they provide all their own services, and it is quite a complete community in itself.

Then hon. members will all have heard a good deal about the power developments on the Ottawa River. If we go a little farther west we come to the Des Joachim's development, of which a great deal has been heard since the opening of this session. These places are all in North Renfrew, and a great deal has been accomplished there. At that site they have started pouring cement and this project, when completed, will consist of four separate dams, one of the largest power developments in Ontario. In addition, we have the other one being commenced at Chenaux Falls, down at the other end of the riding at Portage De Fort, and it will be of a considerable size.

I am sure hon. members have all heard of the development in South Renfrew at Stewartville that will come into production this year. So, all in all, we think we have a good deal to offer in Renfrew county, North Renfrew particularly, and we will be very pleased to have any hon. member of this Legislature, on either side of the House, visit us at any time. We feel we have something really worthwhile to show you and we will extend you every courtesy. I hope some time during the year it may be possible to arrange for some hon. members to make a tour of that part of the province. It is a little off the beaten track, but by going up No. 11 to North Bay and back down No. 17 to Ottawa, you have a very good road and a very pleasant route to drive on.

To go back to what we consider something more or less in the way of local problems, the riding I represent is a very long riding, extending some 90 or 95 miles along Portage De Fort on the Ottawa River up almost to Mattawa. The Ottawa River forms the inter-provincial boundary there, and between Portage De Fort and Des Joachim we need a bridge over the river. People of Renfrew have been agitating for a new bridge for some time. We realize this should be a federal matter, with a portion, perhaps, assessed to the two provinces.

We have been successful insofar as it has been recognized as a necessity at Ottawa. A survey has been made, and estimates drawn up and we are in hopes that in due time this bridge will be constructed. We hope that the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) will look favourably upon it, and that the Province of Ontario will assume their share of its cost. I think it is very desirable that we should have this bridge at Pembroke. We are living so close to the Province of Quebec, that we have come to appreciate the best in our French-Canadian neighbours. They have a lot of good qualities, make good citizens, and we like to do business with them. Until we have some interprovincial means of access, this business is greatly curtailed, and, as I said before, our mills derive a good deal of their raw material from the Quebec side of the river. I think it would link up as well our highway systems in Ontario and Quebec. On the Quebec side we have Highway No. 8 coming from Ottawa and Hull, terminating right opposite Pembroke on the Quebec side, coming to a dead end. I think it would encourage our tourist traffic and bring about a greater volume of business inter-provincially and be of great benefit to our industries in Pembroke and to the people on the Quebec side who look on Pembroke as their logical market place.

Four years ago when I came here first, I tried to draw to the attention of hon. members of this Legislature the fact that very few of our people in Renfrew county had hydro facilities. We at that time had several new incorporated villages which were still dependent on kerosene lamps for lighting. I am certainly glad to be able to tell you today that a great deal has been done to provide hydro facilities for these places.

A number of these incorporated villages have been taken care of, lines are in process of being built, and while we have a great many people in our rural section still demanding Hydro service, we realize that due to the shortage of material, the shortage of energy and other causes, that it has been impossible to extend our hydro lines where it was considered desirable by the Hydro Commission. However, we feel reasonably sure that with all this development on the Ottawa River we will in due time receive our fair share for the rest of the county and that provision will be made to supply industry wishing to locate in the Ottawa Valley.

We have a great many sites for new industries between Hambourg and Mat-tawa, cheap sites, a lot of labour available—we have never had labour problems up to the present time—and cheap power should be available there. We hope that the Hydro Commission will take whatever steps it thinks advisable to give us a good rate, since we are so close to the power site. Not being an electrical engineer I do not know and I would not like to go into the matter of whether or not it would be good business, but I certainly think that something could be arranged whereby power could be supplied at a lower rate for power in locations close to sites where power is developed, providing the industries are there to need this energy when it is readily available.

There are only a couple more minor points I would like to bring up.

I would like to ask hon. members of the Legislature to refer to a highway map at some convenient time and look at the number of highways we have in Renfrew County. Go down to western Ontario and you will see a criss-cross of red lines, which indicate first-class highways, and when you get up into Haliburton and North Hastings and Renfrew Counties, there are vast stretches where there are no highways at the present time. I will admit that a good deal of this is Crown land that will never be opened for agricultural purposes, but it is not wasteland by any means. This land has been producing crops for the last number of years. A good deal of it has been logged over 2 or 3 times and a good deal could be done in the way of reforestation.

This country should be a real Mecca for tourists but in order to open it up it will be necessary to build some new arteries to allow traffic to penetrate to these hidden treasures, and while it may not be the best in the way of agricultural land, it will I think be the means of producing a great deal of revenue for the province through people coming in from other parts of the province and outside of the Dominion. When they come here to spend a holiday, these places should be more accessible. I know that I have had some people from western Ontario go back into Algonquin Park in the wilderness when it was very difficult to get in—you have to take the midnight train from Pembroke and North Bay and arrive there in the middle of the night, and then look up accommodations. Something has been done to open up this, but a great deal more could be done, and I am only suggesting that the Department of Highways, or possibly the Department of Lands and Forests should do something. I think they have something in mind at the present time to provide a means of fire protection and save what we have left there. They may be in a position to do something in the way of opening up that part of the province.

There is only one other point I want to say anything about, and that is in connection with the Department of Lands and Forests. Two years ago I believe it was, there was a bill passed in this House vesting in our county councils the right to regulate the cutting on patent lands. I would like the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) to correct me on this if I am not quite correct, but I think this is the substance of the bill, that all county councils were vested with the right to regulate the cutting on patented lands.

If timber is cut on Crown lands, the Department of Lands and Forests sees to it that nothing is cut below a 15-inch stump, but a great many of our patented lands throughout Ontario have been stripped by companies coming in from outside. I could mention one company in particular which has come into my county. They buy the land with the wood on it, they strip everything, perhaps down to 3 or 4 inches, anything that would make a handle for a fork or shovel. A lot of this is rocky land that will take possibly 50 or 75 years in which to grow a new crop, and I think it is unfortunate that so much of this land that is not fit for agriculture should be stripped.

I know that the county council have the right to deal with it, but to date very few of them seem to know they have that right and very little has been done.

I am not asking the department, or the Government, to rescind that bill, I think perhaps they could do something to encourage the county councils to be a little more active and see if something cannot be done to limit the cutting of these privately owned lots. I think the time will come sooner or later when something will need to be done in this province or we are going to have an awful lot of what may then quite truly be called "wasteland."

I think too, in our county we have a lot of good agricultural land, but we have also a lot of light, sandy or gravelly land, some of it owned by the Crown, and a good deal privately owned. I think something more should be done in the way of reforesting some of this partial wasteland. I think some encouragement should be given to property owners who own the land, in the way of supplying them with trees or making young seedlings available and giving them more encouragement to plant them. It will be a great many years before any revenue will be derived, and there is not very much incentive for the private owners to put a great deal of money into this, but a good many of them would be prepared to do so if they were given a little more encouragement and young trees were more readily available.

I think with those few remarks, Mr. Speaker, I will bring my address to a close. We are not altogether satisfied with things as they are in Renfrew county, but we do feel like paying tribute where tribute is due. I think the Government of this province has done a real good job. We expect them to do a great deal more for us in Renfrew county and we feel sure that they will.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate, I want to first assure you that I will make my remarks fairly brief, and while I had the opportunity earlier in the session to congratulate you, I would like to do so again. I would like to congratulate you for the second time, and to offer my best wishes for the very efficient manner in which you carry out your duties, and the very friendly attitude which you evince toward all the hon. members in the House.

Last Friday the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) brought down his budget. He delivered his address in his usual very capable manner, and boasted of having a surplus of $25,000,000. During his entire address he endeavoured to impress upon the hon. members of the House that the policies of the present Government were responsible for the prosperity which the country now enjoys. With this assumption I cannot agree. If you turn to page 12 of his budget address you will find these words:

"We were told in 1940 the gross national product amounted to $6,708,000,000. We are now advised the gross national product has risen to at least $13,050,000,000; in other words, the value of the national product has more than doubled since 1940."

There, Mr. Speaker, you have the reason for the prosperous times being enjoyed not only in Ontario but throughout the entire country. This increase in the wealth production in this country has been brought about mainly because of the war and improved conditions. The improved economy would have developed, had the previous Government, the Liberals, remained in office.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Oh, no, I do not think the public would have had the same confidence.

MR. ANDERSON: The improved economy has enabled a number of Governments to increase social services, and undertake building projects which were considered impossible prior to the outbreak of war.

Sometimes I think our memories are very, very short. This great province, with all its natural resources, is the same province as it was when the Conservatives were in office prior to their defeat in 1934. From 1930, when the Liberals at Ottawa were defeated because they refused to give "a 5c. piece" for keeping the unemployed, the Dominion had a Conservative Government at Ottawa, and yet we experienced a condition of mass unemployment. At that time we had an annual income of less than half of what it is today. Full employment was only made possible after this country went to war.

From 1929 to 1934, out of a total of 26,530 persons deported from Canada, 16,765 were deported for no other reason than they had become public charges. In other words, they had no work, and had to accept relief.

This afternoon we listened to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), and heard him say that more than 7,000 immigrants came out with special assistance from the Province of Ontario. So here you have, in those earlier years, 16,765 persons being forced to leave this country because they were public charges, because this country was unable to or refused to try and provide constructive employment for them. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that knowing these things, we should be planning to prevent a recurrence of the economic conditions such as we had in the "hungry 30's."

Mr. Speaker, may I quote an article from the Toronto Daily Star, dated January 23rd, 1939. At that time I presume the hon. members of the present Government would not feel the way they do now toward the Toronto Star, as the Liberals were in office at that time.

MR. C. D. HANNIWELL (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question?

MR. ANDERSON: Have you a point of order?

MR. HANNIWELL: I have a question to ask, and I think it is pertinent.

MR. ANDERSON: Very well.

MR. HANNIWELL: The 16,765 to whom you referred; did they leave the country because they could not make a living or of their own volition?

MR. ANDERSON: I am telling you they were being charged with being unemployed.

MR. HANNIWELL: They were?

MR. ANDERSON: Yes. The heading, Mr. Speaker, of the article to which I referred is as follows:

"'JOBLESS' PLIGHT SADDEN-ING' SAYS SIR WILLIAM MULOCK

"Unspeakable Citizens Should Be Out in Snow Homeless

"'It startled me when I came to this country to find that the one place where a man could be sure of food and lodgings was in jail,' Rev. J. R. P. Sclater declared in a sermon devoted to the problems of the single unemployed. Forty of them attended Old St. Andrew's United church last night.

"Sir William Mulock, who attended, he said, as a result of his interest in the unemployed, listened attentively from a seat near the front.

"Sir William told the gathering: 'I do not know the solution to the problem, but what an unspeakable condition it is when our fellow citizens must go out into the ice and cold tonight with no homes and through no fault of their own.'

"The thought filled him with 'unspeakable sadness,' he said."

Just as true as we are in this House, when the very, very large loans which are being extended by both this country and the United States to the south of us are discontinued, as they assuredly will be some time, and when the countries of Europe get on their feet, as we hope they will some day, the people of this country will be faced with the same economic condition which prevailed during the "hungry 30's."

Today we have hard times, in many cases, because of the shortage of consumer goods, but in those days there certainly was no shortage, Mr. Speaker—no shortage.

I live, as you know, in the city of Fort William. I have seen returned soldiers from the first World War condemned to a life of poverty, forced to go into little dirty restaurants and damp cellars to get the meagre allowance, which would give them about $2.10 per week, and that at a time when we had some 96,000,000 bushels of wheat and other grains stored in the elevators right beside where these men were living. It is because of that I hope I can interest the hon. members of this Government and of all parties to do what we can to prevent such economic conditions returning to this country.

I will now quote another brief article from the same paper, on the same day:

“HANDLING OF JOBLESS ‘COURTING BULLETS’

“Rev. Gordon Domm Charges Administration Provides Grist for the Communist Mill

“‘Let’s hope Hitler doesn’t learn about Ontario—he might get the idea that everything is in perfect shape for him to step in,’ remarked Rev. Gordon Domm last night. He preached in Bathurst Street United church on ‘Ontario’s Shameful Treatment of Our Transients.’

“‘Let not another week go by without you and me and thousands like us getting so hot and bothered about this sorry plight that Governments must take note,’ he said. ‘Let us tell them we shall register our protest by ballots on the first occasion available. Let us realize that this is a desperately serious situation, and that ballots, perhaps for a party we have hitherto never voted for are better than bullets courted by such maladministration as this.’

“‘Are you afraid of Communism?’ he asked. ‘You’d better be, if this thing goes on another week. All the propaganda of pulpit and press cannot keep step with grist for Communist mills which our faulty democratic machine is furnishing. Fascism? You didn’t imagine anything like this could happen outside a Nazi concentration camp?’

“‘Here are hungry men who know not where to lay their heads,’ said Mr. Domm. ‘Ontario has not used, and refuses to use, help offered by Ottawa, dollar for dollar,’ said Mr. Domm. ‘What alternative confronts the homeless jobless army in Toronto? This question I have been asking legal minds this week. They admit there are but two possibilities: either they must steal or they must beg.’”

HON. MR. DUNBAR: What date is that?

MR. ANDERSON: January 23rd, 1939. We had the depression almost up to the time they started shooting one another in Europe. It took a war to bring us out of it; it was not due to the policy of the present Government.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Have there been no nice things done in this country, with the highest living standards in the world?

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, and you can thank Ottawa for that. In the time of which I am speaking things were so bad in this country that over a period of just a few years, the Federal Government spent $1,000,000,000 on unemployment, and a few very minor bits of unemployment work.

In my own city—and I suppose it was no different from other parts of the country—I have seen full-grown men carrying snow from this side of the street over to the other, and the next day going over to the other side and carrying it back again. And they were and still are respectable citizens.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Were you the mayor then?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. ANDERSON: No, I was not the mayor. If I had been, I do not think, my good friend (Mr. Scott) that the mayor of a municipality can do the work the Provincial and Federal Governments should do. I blame that predominantly on our national Government, and I also credit the national Government with the prosperity we have today.

Sometimes I am asked just why I am a member of the C.C.F. Well, Mr. Speaker, I joined the C.C.F. when I became thoroughly convinced that the policies of the two old political parties of this country had failed to meet the new situations that resulted from monopolistic capitalism, and, Mr. Speaker, I am not alone in my thoughts regarding this important problem.

Do not laugh, just listen.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Public Works): What is the date of that?

MR. ANDERSON: Our party was formed in 1933, and I think I was one of the first to get in at that time.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: You are right there. I wanted to know if you are a charter member.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You were not really C.C.F.; they were Communists then.

MR. ANDERSON: Just wait, and try to keep this debate in some kind of order. I am not trying to make a "mulligan," I am trying to make an address.

The Church's attitude is somewhat similar. If you will be patient, Mr. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), I will quote from three of the main Churches in this country, and naturally I must go back a few years.

The first statement is from the Toronto conference of the United Church of Canada, 1933. It is as follows:

"We hold the capitalistic system to be unchristian on the following grounds:

"1. It is organized about and continually incites to action the motives that Jesus condemned;

"2. It destroys the initiative, freedom and security of vast multitudes of people;

"3. It falsifies the Christian scale of values, putting the money interest above the human interest;

"4. It is unjust and inhuman in its distribution of the burdens and benefits of economic effort;

"5. It continually frustrates the will of individuals to practise and put into effect what Jesus taught."

Now, I want to quote from the Lambeth Council of Anglican Bishops. Bishops of the Anglican Church from all over the world meet in conference every 10 years. This was passed in 1920 and ratified in 1930, and it says:

"An outstanding and pressing duty of the Church is to convince its members of the necessity of nothing less than a fundamental change in the spirit and working of our economic life. This change can only be effected by accepting as the basis of industrial relations the principle of co-operation in service for the common good in place of unrestricted competition for private or sectional advantage."

Now, Mr. Speaker, another from the Papal Encyclical, of 1931, as follows:

"You assuredly know and lament the ultimate consequence of this individualist spirit in economic affairs. Free competition is dead; economic dictatorship has taken its place. Unbridled ambition for domination has succeeded the desire for gain; the whole economic life has become hard, cruel and relentless in a ghastly measure . . . It is rightly contended that certain forms of property must be reserved to the State, since they carry with them an opportunity of domination too great to be left to private individuals without injury to the community at large."

Of course, I suppose the author of that was not aware we were going to have another world war and be given a "shot in the arm" for awhile.

The last quotation is from the Catholic Hierarchy of Saskatchewan, 1934. It says:

"It is abundantly clear why the Church condemns and abhors the abuses of the materialistic capitalism of our industrial age with its consequent unemployment and misery for the masses, and huge fortunes for the few. These evils are so well known that we are saved the trouble of listing them here. Suffice it to say that materialistic capitalism is so unchristian in its philosophy and evil consequences that it must give way to a reconstructed social order based on Christian principles."

MR. HANNIWELL: Your party changed all of that.

MR. ANDERSON: When you get up, say what you like. In the meantime, let me carry on, unless you have a question to ask, or wish to raise a point of order.

If the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), Mr. Speaker, was imbued with these viewpoints, I feel sure he would not have piled up a surplus of $25,000,000 at the expense of the people of this province. He could have been more generous with the hospitals, the old age pensioners, and many of the mothers and children who are receiving mothers' allowances.

Mr. Speaker, I will now say a few words about the Official Opposition in this House. The hon. Leader (Mr. Oliver) can wait.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): How do you know I can?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. ANDERSON: The Official Opposition in this House has a very difficult task. The hon. Leader (Mr. Oliver) and his group are tied to the old views that we can solve our economic problems within the present system. As long as there were only two parties, the role of the Opposition was not difficult, but today the situation is entirely changed.

The C.C.F. has become a national party, and has gained sufficient strength since it was formed in 1933 to force the Liberals and Conservatives into coalition in two of the provinces. This places the Liberals in this House in an impossible position.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, we are the Official Opposition. It is not an impossible position.

MR. ANDERSON: You are in name only.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I think it is you who are in an impossible position.

MR. ANDERSON: No longer is there room in this country for two political parties representing the same thing, the same views politically. One or the other has to go, and it looks as if the hon. gentlemen on that side of the House "have the ball."

We have been told time and time again that a C.C.F. Government if elected would take away the freedom of the people.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Don't drop the ball. I have seen that done.

MR. ANDERSON: They say a C.C.F. Government would be inexperienced, and would therefore be unable to give good government. Well, in 1944, the voters in Saskatchewan who are largely represented in rural areas, elected a C.C.F. Government with a very large majority, and I propose to deal with some of the achievements of that Government.

Saskatchewan's co-operative movement, apart from credit unions, now has 944 separate organizations established in the province. A total membership of 447,220 was reported for the 1946-1947 fiscal year.

These members have a total equity in their co-operative enterprises representing excess of assets over liabilities of almost $40,000,000, averaging almost $90 per member.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Is the boot and shoe factory included?

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, I am coming to that. Now, coming to credit unions, the first year I was down here, Mr. Speaker, I was in on one of the committees and they were discussing credit unions and I heard one of the new members say: "Are there not enough unions in this country? Why do they want any more?" He was confusing credit unions with the trade unions.

The number of credit unions in Saskatchewan has increased from 128 in 1943 to 189 in June, 1947. Credit union membership has more than doubled in the same period, rising from 14,539 in 1943 to 32,412 in June, 1947. Their total assets have increased more than 7 times from $797,000 in 1943 to $5,721,000 in 1947.

Now then, this may come to the factory you are talking about. Government activities. The net operating surplus of 13 enterprises established by the present Saskatchewan Government for the six-month period from April 1st to September 30th, 1946, was $282,000, and the net profit after depreciation was $190,000, or 13 per cent. per annum on money advanced by the Provincial Treasurer. These figures do not include operations of the Power Commission or the telephone system. For 1947 to 1948, the estimated profits of crown corporations is $600,000. Now, quotations from the budget—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Have you got the figures for the telephones?

MR. ANDERSON: No, but I could get them for you.

MR. C. D. HANNIWELL (Niagara Falls): Is this the Saskatchewan budget we are discussing?

MR. ANDERSON: No, but I am attempting to prove to you that the C.C.F. Government in office is making a very good job and I think if we are democrats in this country we should be interested in what is being done in other places.

MR. HANNIWELL: I asked you about 16,000 people who left Canada. I was wondering how many left Saskatchewan.

MR. ANDERSON: I could not tell you.

MR. HANNIWELL: According to this clipping that I have, it was more from Saskatchewan than anywhere else.

MR. ANDERSON: They would have their share; they had very difficult times out there.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Thousands left there last year.

MR. ANDERSON: Thousands left Ontario last year.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Our population is on the increase.

MR. ANDERSON: Mr. Speaker, you might assist me if I might have fewer interruptions.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): That 13 per cent.; you did not mention what taxes they paid or what are the exemptions from taxation.

MR. ANDERSON: They may be like Ontario with hydro, maybe they do not pay taxes. I hope this committee you are going to set up will deal with municipalities, I think that is one of the things you should discuss.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Everything exempt?

MR. ANDERSON: Not at all. You cannot expect them to do something out there, they are not doing in other parts of the country.

This is a quotation from the budget speech of the hon. Clarence Fines, the Provincial Treasurer, February 26th, 1948. Speaking of Crown corporations, Mr. Fines said:

"The fact that the overall financial results have been successful is a source of keen gratification. And yet it will be obvious to thousands of our people today that it is not possible to measure the results only in terms of dollars and cents. I noted here last year how the Timber Board had deliberately maintained its prices for lumber below the ceilings, and had refrained from exporting its whole quota out of the country in order to make available to our own people supplies of desperately needed lumber."

They had control, and in that way they were able to plan for the needs of the province. We are not in that happy position.

"This is the same approach which looms large in every commercial enterprise of the Government, and it is the approach which I know would be approved by the people of the province who own these enterprises."

Now I am going to talk about free enterprise, private enterprise. Private enterprise has been flourishing in Saskatchewan. Capitalization in the province in 1946 was eight times that of 1944. In 1944, 74 new companies with an aggregate capitalization of $3,000,000 were incorporated in Saskatchewan, while in 1946 there were 182 new companies incorporated, with an aggregate capitalization of $24,250,000.

In 1944, there were 201 new partnerships registered and in 1946 this number jumped to 754.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: So that Terrace Bay would have a greater amount of money spent on it than all Saskatchewan.

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, but you must remember in this Dominion, all the provinces are not in the fortunate position of Ontario.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It is only one little municipality.

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, but remember this, if you want to speak about Terrace Bay, I am quite familiar with these enterprises. We had two large pulp and paper Mills in Fort William and one was completely shut down for a number of years and the other one 2 and 3 days a week.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We are talking about 1944 and 1946.

MR. ANDERSON: I am talking about what could happen to this great enterprise you have up at Terrace Bay.

In 1944, there were 201 new partnerships registered, and in 1946 this number jumped to 754.

Between July, 1944 and January, 1947, 400 provincial and extra provincial companies have been established with a capital of $104,000,000, and 1,307 partnerships have been formed. These figures include 335 provincial companies with a capital of $34,000,000, and 65 extraprovincial companies with a capital of $70,000,000.

Now, a word about farm debt. In July, 1944, the farm debt of Saskatchewan stood at $232,109,656. This was reduced 25 per cent. in the following 6 months, a further 30 per cent. during 1945 and 20 per cent. during 1946, leaving the total at $97,486,052 at the end of 1946.

The Bill of Rights, re-affirming fundamental freedoms and rights to all and prohibiting discrimination on racial and religious grounds, the Saskatchewan Bill of Rights, 1947, is the first of its kind passed by a Canadian Parliament.

Now, a word about the right of civil servants. In Ontario, provincial civil servants are not even allowed to run for municipal office. In Saskatchewan, civil servants have full political rights. Civil servants desiring to run for public office must be given up to 30 days leave of absence for campaign purposes.

A new and uniform classification system for the public service has been introduced, and a new pay plan based on this classification to eliminate any inequalities in pay for similar jobs.

Civil servants are allowed to form their own union with no strings attached, and the Government bargains collectively with them. In addition to pay increases, the Government has granted a cost of living bonus amounting to $1 per month for each point above 140 in the cost of living index. Already, they are benefiting from this to the extent of $10 per month. The public service commission has introduced competitive entrance examinations, and is instituting in-service training programmes to increase the efficiency of Government employees and give ambitious employees the fullest opportunity of advancement.

Employee relations. In 1945, the Saskatchewan Government signed collective bargaining agreements with the United Civil Servants of Canada (C.C.L.) representing employees in the mental hospitals and with the Saskatchewan Civil Service Association (T.L.C.C.) representing the balance of the public service. These agreements provide for equal pay for equal work, seniority recognition, position and union security, annual holidays with pay, cumulative sick leave, veteran preference and other mutually beneficial measures.

These provisions are also included in a new agreement with the United Telephone Workers of Canada, covering employees in Saskatchewan Government telephones.

Collective bargaining agreements have been signed with certified trade unions in all government crown corporations.

MR. HANNIWELL: For the information of the Mayor of Fort William (Mr. Anderson) there are still civil servants in this province holding public office in municipal offices.

MR. ANDERSON: They are certainly not encouraged to run for public office.

MR. HANNIWELL: They hold office.

MR. ANDERSON: You may have the odd case. There are departments where they cannot run.

The voting rights extended from 21 to 18 years. Now, that is that.

Before I close, I want to deal with the question of old-age pensions and compare the treatment of the pensioners in Ontario with those of Saskatchewan. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr.

Frost) tells us there are 70,859 old-age pensioners in Ontario. In his estimates, he is allowing the sum of $1,333,655 to pay the special provincial bonus to these pensioners. Even if there is no increase in the number of pensioners during the year, that will mean an average payment per pension of $18.82 for the entire year, an average of $1.57 per month.

A year ago when we had a $28 pension, the province was paying $6.25 a month as its share of the Dominion pension, plus a bonus of $3 a month, or a total of $9.25.

Next year the province will pay $7.50 as its share of the $30 Dominion pension, plus a bonus averaging $1.57 or a total of $9.07 per month for each old-age pensioner. The overall estimate to be voted is larger because there are more old-age pensioners, but the province right now is paying a smaller amount to every old-age pensioner.

For medical services—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You are only figuring that on $30, you did not figure on $40.

MR. ANDERSON: Who can figure on $40 at the present time? For medical services the estimate is $720,000, which equals $10.16 a year or 84 cents a month for each old-age pensioner. Saskatchewan is paying $5.08 to give complete health services to its pensioners. Here is the comparison:

Provincial share of basic pension, Ontario $7.50, Saskatchewan $7.50. That is the case of 50-50. Special provincial bonus Ontario $1.57, Saskatchewan $5; medical services, Ontario 84 cents, Saskatchewan $5.08. The total provincial payment Ontario $9.91, Saskatchewan $17.58; plus Dominion payment of $22.50 for Ontario and $22.50 for Saskatchewan. The total received by each pensioner including value of health services, Ontario $32.41, and Saskatchewan $40.08.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that concludes my remarks. I want to thank you for the courtesy you have shown me.

MR. A. H. ACRES (Carleton): Mr. Deputy Speaker, rising to express myself I wish to say how happy and pleased I am to see you sitting there as assistant to the Speaker. The Speaker of the Legislature has certainly shown justice to the hon. members of this House by the careful attention he has given, and his courtesy, and I want to congratulate particularly the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in the very able manner in which he presented the budget and in which the budget was introduced. When we realize the great position we are in in the Province of Ontario, with this surplus, that shows the good work of this Government.

I listened very attentively to the hon. member who just sat down (Mr. Anderson), and he just gave us a great lecture on the Province of Saskatchewan. I want to say this, he never offered one suggestion as to betterment for the Province of Ontario. When we come to realize the Province of Ontario and its basic industry, which is agriculture, of which I am keenly interested, I want at this time to say the Government is doing a great deal for agriculture.

In the first place, the Government stepped in and the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew), backed up by his members, gave 50 per cent. to the cause of education which, after all, assists the farmers very materially as well as the city people. These are some of the things we appreciate as farmers. And also, the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) introduced a bill that is going to maintain the bonus on bacon and cheese. By giving that bonus, it helps the consumer as well as the producer.

We, as farmers today, have been coming through a very hard time with the increased cost of living. You will notice the cost of labour; and agriculture has been placed in a position where we have to look after it in a different manner. There is no question the high cost of living is not to be blamed on agriculture altogether. A year ago, I stated here in this House that the new Department of Planning and Development and the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) should have a large amount of money placed at his disposal to assist in building. I am glad to congratulate the Government for doing something to assist the returned man in the housing problem in this province.

Surely we have in the Province of Ontario several fine young men who were brought up and educated along the agricultural line, who have been overseas and returned. We have hundreds of farms today in the Province of Ontario which are vacant, the people who own them have left or retired or gone elsewhere on account of the scarcity of labour. Why should those farms be left practically uncultivated? A lot of other farms they have rented for the grass. I would say to the Government: I will endorse you 100 per cent. if you will assist those returned men to try and start some that have had agricultural experience to farm. You place them on those farms which are vacant. Some people will say: "Yes, that is going to cost a lot of money." Do you know, there are thousands of farms in the Province of Ontario that you can buy from $4,000 to $8,000. Would not our young men be better engaged to go on to them and suppose the Government gives an extra $1,000, and the finance companies would then carry the balance of the mortgage and pay money to help buy stock and machinery, etc., to start in a small way and in a very few years a man who understands farming at all and is willing to learn, is pretty well set with sufficient capital and machinery to carry him on.

Also we have today our agricultural colleges where our young farmers are graduating with information about the farm. Our college representatives could go and call on these young returned men who have just returned from the war and assist them and advise them what to do, and it would go a long way to getting them away from these centres of population.

I am going to go back some 25 years, when I used to rise to say a few things in this House, and I was the first member who advocated to the Ontario Government to establish what they call London House. I remember as well as yesterday, talking to the late hon. Howard Ferguson and the late J. S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, and going down to London House to see the way the immigrants were coming in. There was no selection, there was no inspection, but they were taken in. I came back and I want to say this; the late Howard Ferguson and his Government started London House, and it was in a position to do very good work in advertising the natural production of this province in all lines. Unfortunately when the Hepburn Government came in the first thing the late Douglas Marshall did was to close that place, and I want to say the Prime Minister did well to open it up again. Some have criticized it, the bringing in of thousands of immigrants, but it is nice to bring in these Scotch, English and Irish people to this country. I look forward to this Government creating a market place where all our different lines of production—cheese, apples, fruits—of all kinds will be on the British market for exhibit and will create a better market continuously.

I remember being in Denmark and driving with Dr. Neilson for four days and he told me at that particular time that the Danish Government had paid the farmers a bonus to send their bacon and their cheese and butter, etc., in order to get the British market, which we, as Canadians were losing—no matter what party the Government was—the exportation of Canadian produce. We have now got that market and it is up to the people of Canada to stand solidly united and see if we can continue on with the good work and the opening up of London House is one of the best things this province has done.

We listen a good deal to what has been done along the line of education, and they are now going to collect a 20 per cent. amusement tax. I might say to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) it is all of 20 years ago since I spoke in this House on hospitalization. I had been in Ireland and had seen what they had accomplished with their sweepstakes there. I advocated 20 years ago to allow sweepstakes, and now the Government put a tax of 20 per cent. on amusements for hospitalization. With the high costs of today the people as individuals cannot take care themselves and the Government are curtailed on what they are doing. I would go even further—I would put on sweepstakes to raise money. People may criticize me for advocating this. It is not compulsory. They do not need to spend money if they do not want to, and we have hundreds of thousands of dollars of Ontario money going to buy Irish Sweepstake tickets. It is not compulsory. That is the very thing that will take care of the needy of this country and assist very materially in hospitalization.

I listened very attentively to some of the members for northern Ontario asking for more money to be spent in northern Ontario. I remember well coming up on the train some 23 years ago, when hon. George Henry was Minister of Highways and hon. Howard Ferguson, and I had been on a trip through the States, and I said “the American people have put a tax on gasoline.” I said to Mr. Ferguson “Suppose you put a tax on gasoline.” “Well,” he said, “something has to be done, people are asking for greater grants, have taken over more provincial highways, have given greater assistance to county roads and something has to be done.”

The Government of the day introduced legislation to put a three cent tax on gasoline. That is a large item, and as the cost went up, the larger companies absorbed that, for there was a surplus of gasoline all over the United States and everywhere else. The people who buy gasoline today are paying it, but are not paying as much as I did when I got my first automobile in 1913. These are some of the things I wish to show you. Just consider the amount of revenue from gasoline, and from liquor.

Speaking about spending this money in the surplus; I want to tell the hon. members from northern Ontario you have not used the Conservative Party right up there, you have not used the Liberal Party right. I remember well in every constituency in northern Ontario, the Government of the late hon. Howard Ferguson was endorsed. Now, what have you done? The late hon. William Finlayson was a minister under whose jurisdiction the northern development was proceeded with. He was up there on two or three trips, when the people were asking for extensions. The hon. Charles McCrea was Minister of Mines, and no one knew the northern country better, far better than do the men who represent those ridings today, and he worked harder for the development of the north.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, I was the member who started the Provincial Government into improving this northern country. The late hon. Howard Ferguson gave hon. Mr. Finlayson $5,000,000 for roads. The people up there were very pleased, and appreciated it very much. The next year he spent $10,000,000 up there and do not forget, Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of this House, that at that time there was not one cent of revenue coming in from the gasoline or liquor business.

Hon. Howard Ferguson, and hon. Charles McCrea, and the supporters of their Government believed in that great northern country. Then, what did they do during the third year? They built the Ferguson Highway, many miles of it. The following year hon. Howard Ferguson contracted for the extension of the T. and N. O. Railway up to James Bay, and opened up that very beautiful country. As the years went by, every assistance was given to northern Ontario it was possible to give.

Then there was a change. I do not want to say very much about this. but the hon. "Mitch" Hepburn came up there in the election of 1934, full of glowing promises, and I am frank to admit the Conservative Party lost a great number of seats to the Liberal Party, and I congratulate the Liberal Party for what they have done for the north. Then what happened? We find now labour agitators interfering with the labouring people up in the northern section of the country, and it is a crime. Then they send one man down here to represent them, but not a representative of either of the two old parties.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear. hear.

MR. ACRES: And what is happening today, not only to this province, but all over Canada, indeed all over the world? These third and fourth parties have been getting in some of their work up there. Just look at the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), going around, talking to the youth of this province, and they are listening to him, and think they are on the right track. I say to the hon. members of the third and fourth parties, if you have anything worthwhile and intelligent, why not join the two old parties.

As I listened to the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) this afternoon, he never offered one suggestion for the betterment of this province, but spent all his time telling us what the C.C.F. Government has done in Saskatchewan.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. ACRES: In this House, we find the two Labour-Progressive members taking up about 65 per cent. or 75 per cent. of the time of this Legislature, delaying progress, delaying the bringing down of legislation, and then look what happened. When it comes to recording a vote, they vote with the Government. After the whole afternoon was taken up on two bills, talking nothing but a bunch of nonsense, they vote with us afterwards.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. ACRES: There is another thing I want to say, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) and my hon. friend on my right (Mr. Duckworth) will bear me out when I say I was the first member of this Legislature who advocated a flat rate for hydro. The present Government, under the leadership of hon. George Drew, is the first Government which has tried to get back to a flat rate. I remember speaking in this House 21 years ago, and said the credit of the province was behind the debentures issued to make possible the development of the water powers.

I remember sitting in this House with the late Sir Adam Beck, and I said "If you take away the interests of the agricultural people of this province, you could not sell the debentures of the Province of Ontario for 50 cents. on the dollar." I said, "Because they live in the rural sections, why should they not have power and light as cheaply as they do in the centres of the population?" That has been the reason for the great depression which we had in Ontario.

The larger industries come to the large centres, where they are provided with cheap electrical power, and the young men from the rural sections go to these industries and endeavour to obtain employment, and when they see the lights in all the little houses and the electric attachments in the houses, they will not return to the rural centres. That has been going on for the past number of years. I hope this Government will, in another year, introduce legislation that no matter where industry is located, that the same charge per horse power or electric energy will apply all over the province, whether in industry or in the rural communities right down to the little villages. I do not see any reason for trying to encourage people, particularly the young people, to come into the large centres of population.

Those are some of the things we have to face, and they are very essential, and every hon. member in this House should be looking after matters of this kind.

I am very glad, as I said before, the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) re-presented the Milk Bill. That caused a great deal of discord all over the province, and even the consumers were wondering what was going to happen. Under the present set-up, the consumers, the producers and the distributors are not getting a share of the increase.

I endorse this bill completely, and I compliment the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) for re-introducing it. It provides that there shall be no increase in the price of milk to the consumer without the approval of the Milk Board, endorsed by the Government, and will not be done unless there is a real necessity where the price of the commodities which go into the production of milk are increased too much.

I advocated years ago—and I have not changed my mind—the creation of a Milk Board, and I was instrumental in the creation of the first Milk Board in the province. I will take credit for that. I was the first member of this House who advocated there should be a Milk Board, and at the time I thought the Milk Board would be in control over all the dairy products such as whole milk, milk for cheese, condensed, powdered and milk for the creamery.

In the City of Toronto, which requires a lot of milk, why should the larger dairies be allowed to go out 75 miles or a 100 or a 125 miles into a good cheese country and take a large proportion of the product there and bring it into the city. This results in some of the cheese factories having to close up, and the smaller farmers who are not producing a lot of milk are in a position where they are left out. If not, they have to get the cream separated, and many of them do not know how to use them. I think, Mr. Speaker, in regard to milk, every city should be zoned, and the whole milk situation of Ontario should be under one milk board, and the large dairies should not be allowed to go out a 100 miles or so taking it from the cheese factories, and breaking up the operations of those cheese factories.

In Carleton County, which I have had the honour to represent for 14 years, we had 8 cheese factories out there and the majority of them had to close. Speaking of the prices the dairy men get, there is a great deal of agitation going on. I want to say, Mr. Speaker, I was president of a cheese factory for 11 years, and we found it very difficult to get sufficient whole milk to produce the cheese required.

There is another thing in connection with this. If a man wants to milk 20 cows a day, he has to keep 30 cows on hand all the time, that is, 10 extra cows, to produce milk 365 days a year. If he wants to milk 40 cows, he will have to keep 60 cows in order to keep this production going. On the other hand, a man selling milk to cheese factories, knows you only milk cows for eight months of the year, they are lying down the rest of the time resting, and this means that the machinery of the cheese factories is also resting, and if a cow freshens up in the Spring and comes in, it will give more milk from feeding off the fresh grass in the pastures than if you feed it with a lot of food, and try to produce milk the year round.

Those are some of the things the Milk Board should take into consideration, and not allow men to go back hundreds of miles and break up our cheese factories. That is one thought I had pertaining to milk.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrews): Would that not interfere with private initiative?

MR. ACRES: No, not at all. It would be of great assistance to it.

I congratulated the U.F.O. Government, when in office, for passing legislation along this line, but while they passed the legislation, they did not proclaim it. It was hon. Howard Ferguson who proclaimed that legislation. I am behind this Government, and I hope they will see fit in the very near future to give increases in the old-age pensions. These things have to be considered very carefully, and those people require a great deal more than they are getting.

Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to take up a great deal of time today. I have listened very attentively to the different speakers, and I know there are a lot of hon. members yet to speak. I did not intend to speak on this, but I thought I should express myself a little.

I want to congratulate the Government for the budget it brought down. It is one of the best budgets ever delivered in this Legislature.

Speaking of depression; I want to say there should never be a depression in this Province of Ontario or the Dominion of Canada.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear! hear!

MR. ACRES: I remember very well when hon. George Henry was Prime Minister of this province, the late hon. Mr. Dunlop introduced his bill to set aside $5,000,000 for direct relief. After he finished speaking, a most unusual thing occurred. I got up, as a supporter of the party at that time, and opposed $5,000,000 for direct relief. I spoke for about 20 minutes on it, and when I sat down the late hon. Mr. Sinclair, the then leader of the Liberal Party, arose and asked if the hon. member for Carleton was sincere, and I said, "Yes, and when it came to a vote I would register my vote against it."

I have been in England on a couple of occasions, and saw what they did. They went off the dole, and made it compulsory for labour to go to the positions open for it. France went on the dole, and went off again in 10 months. Here we have old-age pensions, mothers' allowances, and homes for incurables, why give assistance to able-bodied men and women. It is a disgrace. I said, "Let them go to work." The hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) can bear me out, that I said, "Why do not we develop more water power and put electricity in every home in Ontario. If we have to advance the money, the province can stand behind it. It is all right, and will make people happy." I said, "Why not extend our highway system, build better roads to increase the tourist traffic and give people better means of transportation." There is another thing I said we could do, and that was to commence reforestation in this country, which would employ hundreds of men. My good gracious, Mr. Speaker, with the natural resources we have in this province, and I say any man who votes for direct relief should be disqualified for the position he holds. In this great country there should never have been any relief required at all.

Mr. Speaker, if we look over at the hon. members of the third and fourth parties, let me ask them, "Why do you sit there?" "What have you got to offer the people?" "All you do is to create disturbances and discords between management and labour, talking this and that." The Conservative Party and the Liberal Party have done everything they could for the northern country, and they are the friends of labour, and yet you people send agitators up there to dissatisfy our good union labour men and disturb the friendly feeling between the employers and labour. I employ men on my own farm, and I certainly would not want any agitator coming in there amongst my men, such as the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin). Mr. Speaker, I think I would feel like shooting him right there, before he could get in any of his work.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. ACRES: I want to say the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin), has done more harm to create unrest in northern Ontario than any other 500 men who ever went up there. I want to say to the two Labour-Progressive members that in this wonderful city you, who are brilliant speakers, are going out and speaking to the youth of our country, and they are listening to your stuff, and think you are right. You are spreading a complete story of disloyalty to Canada, and to the British Empire, and to those young people who believe in freedom. I say today it is not too late to make a change. All of you in the next election line up with the Conservative or Liberal Party and get out of the group you are in, which is creating discord; let us be one united people and stand together for the benefit of this province, and march forward trying to make this province the best one there is. I thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. WILLIAM DOCKER (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in the budget debate I wish to congratulate the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) on the picture he portrayed to us in his budget address.

Figures are a dry subject to most of us. A good accountant can manipulate figures which can be very impressive to the novice. However, Mr. Speaker, I will not dispute the fact that the Government has shown a large surplus; but I am rather at a loss and dismayed at how that large surplus has been created. A Government's duty is to give the best possible service at the least possible cost to the taxpayer. It is not the duty of a Government to have surpluses at the expense of social services.

Let us look at the picture before us from a humanitarian point of view. On the one hand the Government shows a $25,000,000 surplus; on the other hand we have destitution among a great number of our people—the aged, the sick, the blind, and those who have no decent housing accommodation. Take the case of the old-age pensioner; here is a quotation from the budget address:

"It is hardly conceivable that an old-age pension can be arrived at which will be equitable in all cases. Much of course depends upon the basis of payment. If for instance the basic payment were $30 per month, it is apparent that public assistance would have to be given to some pensioners from some source. We believe that it should be from the Dominion Government. Failing that, however, this Government is prepared, within its means, to supplement the basic amount in cases of need."

Mr. Speaker, I repeat this Government is prepared within its means to supplement the basic amount in case of need. That, Mr. Speaker, should mean that every old age pensioner can expect an increase in their pension because you must agree with the increased cost of living there are cases of need. Why wait for the Dominion Government to act. Shame them into action. You have the money. As time goes on the problems of looking after the aged will be many. We must give more thought to this. I think it is about time we recognized this fact. Old age cases are increasing every year and the Department of Welfare is in a quandary as how to surmount the difficulties ahead. The time has arrived for some planning in this regard, and I think it is the Government's duty to take the leadership.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that every old age pensioner does not want to live in an old folks' home. However, I know there are thousands of old folk who would welcome an opportunity to go into a home, provided they will have decent accommodation, good food and decent surroundings. We can't say that those who are living on $30 a month today in private homes are very happy and contented, especially a man and his wife.

It is time the Government did a little experimenting in building a few modern old folks' homes, homes which will be a credit to this province, and where staffs can be trained to look after our aged. It will be a good investment and will pay big dividends in the future.

In my district we have the machinery ready to go ahead with the building of a home for the aged. I hope we will be able to do a worthy job; but I am afraid the Government grant is not large enough to do the job that should be done. I think with a little extra help from the Government we might be able to relieve the Welfare Department of a lot of future headaches in building a model home for the aged that could be used as a measuring stick for the province.

Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity of visiting 2 of our mental hospitals within the last 2 or 3 weeks, and I must give credit where credit is due.

First of all, great credit is due the staffs of these institutions for the great sacrifice that they are making in caring for the mentally sick. It is not a pleasant job and they are not highly paid. These hospitals are handicapped for the lack of help, and proper accommodation. I am not blaming the department for this state of affairs; but I would say to the Government that they should give every encouragement to those who are willing to give their services to this kind of work; also give them the tools and facilities to do a better job, which they are willing to do.

Mr. Speaker, my next few remarks will be in connection with the financial difficulties of our hospitals. Every one of them are in financial difficulties. What is the solution? Larger government grants, or a socialized medical service and a hospital plan—a plan that will spread the cost so that no one individual or family is required to assume an intolerable burden due to illness; a plan that gives equal opportunity to all. That's good business. You will agree it is practicable. I believe that the Federal Government should do this nationally. Again I say, why wait until they do it? Shame them into it. Take the leadership in this respect.

Most of our sickness can be greatly reduced through education and preventive measures. In the past we have been using hit-and-miss methods. The time has arrived for provincial governments and municipalities to co-ordinate their action and thinking in establishing better health and hospital services for all. When I am on the subject of health—I wonder if we will ever get on the right track when you see a province showing $34,000,000 profit on liquor.

Mr. Speaker, I am not a temperance crank; but if we expect to drink our way into health and prosperity, we are greatly mistaken. The situation looks bad. It looks as if we can't drink in moderation. It seems the more outlets, the more drinking. Maybe we need an educational course in our schools and colleges to teach us how to drink in moderation, and show us the danger of excessive drinking.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): You cannot get it free that way.

MR. DOCKER: No. Mr. Speaker, education is very important in our way of life. We spend millions of dollars on education. Sometimes I wonder if we are concentrating too much on preparing students for a higher education which they will never be able to undertake, and neglecting the practical education. It is not every student who can absorb a higher education. Yet we seem to concentrate most of our energy and money training secondary school students as though they were going into the professions, and neglecting the vocational training. We need to spend more money on vocational training if we expect to have a well-balanced society. These days we must be well balanced in our thinking and teaching.

With world conditions so unsettled, the people are looking for leadership to take us along the road of progress, peace, and a full life. We must forget our selfish interests and co-operate more with one another. That applies to capital, labour, governments and the people. Don't let us think too much on profits and our selfish interest. I realize that profits are necessary in business, but I am afraid in the last few years we have gone over the deep end. Being in business myself, I have a good idea what profits have been made. I will grant that most of the profits have been made on turnover; nevertheless profits have been made, and they should be more generously spread among the workers. I know that is what I have done in my business.

If we are to avoid another depression we must see that our wealth is distributed generously among all our people and that way is through paying the highest standard of wages that the trade will allow.

The income of the majority of our people is not high when you take into consideration the cost of living. $35 a week now is in comparison to $20 a week in 1939, and you will agree that $20 a week in 1939 barely kept body and soul together then.

To create business and keep it healthy we must have a healthy purchasing power and that comes from the income of labour generally; and, when I say labour, that covers a very large field, Mr. Speaker.

I think we were too hasty in withdrawing ceiling prices. Going from a war economy to a peace economy is a far slower process, and I might say just as dangerous, as going from a peace economy to a war economy. Time has proven this to be right. Let us go forward keeping in mind that we have a far bigger job to do than we had during the war.

The press can do a great deal in moulding public opinion. They, too, must be tolerant and honest in their expression of opinions. I am of the belief that a great deal of our trouble is caused through egotistical radio commentators and editorial writers. I think the press has a big job to do in reporting the news honestly and intelligently. The radio and press should not be a medium of expressing one man's opinions. I think if the press would pay more attention to publishing the news as it is reported, then the public in general can do their own thinking and act accordingly. That is democracy in action. With the help of a free and honest press to enlighten the public in reporting our major problems truthfully and consistently, there will be no danger of our democracy cracking up.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion approved.

House in Committee of Supply, Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Item 121, page 76, Department of Municipal Affairs.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Chairman, before going ahead with the Department of Municipal Affairs estimates, I would like to give you some idea of what we are endeavouring to do in that department, and have done during the past year or so, by extending some of our branches, opening up new branches, bringing in new personnel and, we think, improving the department in general.

Mr. Speaker, assessment is the foundation upon which municipal taxes are levied, therefore it is the foundation of a municipality. In recent years people interested in municipal government have been giving a great deal of attention to the question of equalized assessment, not only in a municipality, but between different municipalities in the county.

Assessment Branch—In August, 1947, experienced urban and rural assessors were added to the staff to make a study and report on the best method to insure the municipalities would have a proper equalized assessment so that the burden of taxation would be levied in just proportion on all taxpayers in the municipality. The advice and assistance of these assessors have been made available to different municipalities in all parts of the province. It is anticipated that their services will be in greater demand during the coming year.

County Assessors—Where levies for county purposes are distributed over all the municipalities in the county, in order to have equitable taxation it is necessary to have an equitable assessment between all municipalities in the county. For this purpose provision was made for the appointment of county assessors. To date the following counties have appointed county assessors, and at the present time three other counties (Bruce, Lambton and Peterborough) are giving serious consideration to the appointment of county assessors: Brant, Essex, Grey, Halton, Huron, Middlesex, Norfolk, Ontario, Peel, Renfrew, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, Simcoe, Waterloo.

Soil—I would like to mention that the department has received a very fine offer of co-operation from the Department of Agriculture through the Soil Survey Branch of The Ontario Agricultural College. They have offered to work in the field with the county assessors in three counties to interpret the soil conditions of the rural areas from the productivity standpoint, so that a fair valuation for assessment purposes may be placed on farm lands. If this experiment is successful and beneficial in arriving at an equitable valuation of farm lands for assessment purposes, it is expected that the project will be extended to cover other counties that have enjoyed the benefits of soil surveys and that have appointed county assessors for equalization purposes.

Municipal Audit Branch—Standard Municipal Audit Reports—For the use of auditors making their reports covering municipal activities for the year ending December 31, 1947, the department prepared and printed standard audit report forms covering all phases of municipal finance, including all local boards and commissions. The audit reports prepared on these new forms give a much clearer picture of the financial position of the municipality, and make it possible to compare the operations of one municipality with other municipalities in the province. It is expected that in a few years Ontario municipalities will be able to compare their financial position with other municipalities all over the Dominion. The new reports will enable ratepayers to secure an accurate picture of the financial position of their municipality, and from now on to compare one year's activities with another year's activities, as the audit reports will be prepared on the same basis, year after year.

Licensing of Municipal Auditors—In order to make certain that ratepayers of a municipality secure an accurate statement covering the financial activities of their municipality, the department requires that all persons auditing municipal accounts must have a licence from the department. During the year ending December 31, 1947, there were 304 municipal auditors licensed by the department.

Assistance Rendered Auditors—The officials of the department have in the past year, where necessary, assisted municipal auditors to enable them to prepare reports that present a correct financial picture to the ratepayers of the municipality, and this assistance is available to any municipal auditor desiring same. The officials of the department have attended meetings of auditors in order to assist them in preparing their auditor reports, and when requested, will continue to give this service.

Municipal Schools—The department has continued its policy of assisting and encouraging municipal officials in the efficient administration of the affairs of their respective municipalities. During the past year two municipal schools were held; one in the City of Port Arthur, the other in the Town of Fort Frances. These were held during the latter part of December, 1947.

Lectures were given by the officials of this department on assessment, general administration, accounting and auditing. Some 60 elected and appointed officials attended the school held at Port Arthur and some 40, the school at Fort Frances. These lectures were well received and the interest taken in them was amply demonstrated by the many questions put to the departmental officials during the course of the lectures.

Pensions—A standard pension plan for adoption by municipal councils and local boards to provide pensions for their employees has been made available for distribution to all municipalities.

36 municipalities have approved pension plans in effect, and 4 applications are pending.

10 municipalities are preparing plans and have written in for information and assistance in arranging plans.

An official of the department has visited a number of municipalities at their request, to discuss plans with the local council, boards and associations.

Municipal Directors—The Statistical Branch of the Department this year prepared and published a Municipal Directory.

The directory contains a list of all municipalities by counties. It lists the name and address of the county warden, the mayor or reeve, and the clerk of each municipality for 1948. It also sets out the assessed population, the assessed acreage and total acreage. It gives the preliminary assessment figures upon which taxes will be levied in 1948. It also gives the number of miles of streets and roads, and the mileage of sewers and watermains in each municipality. It sets out whether or not the municipal council is elected annually or bi-annually.

The favourable comments received in connection with this publication demonstrates clearly that it fills a long outstanding demand for information of this nature.

I would like to take this opportunity of thanking the clerks of the municipalities in Ontario who co-operated in furnishing the information that enabled the department to publish this directory by the end of February of this year.

Statistical Branch—Annual Report on Municipal Statistics—The Annual Report for the year 1946 was presented to the members on the opening of this Legislature, and copies were distributed throughout the province the following week. The form of the report is the same as that of preceding years.

Returns from Municipal Officials—The compilation of the Statistical Report will, commencing in 1948, be changed to conform with the new standard audit reports. The use of the standard audit report has relieved municipal treasurers of the onerous duty of preparing a treasurer's return covering statistical information in reference to their municipality, from which the department in previous years compiled the Statistical Report.

Debenture Debt—The Statistical Report shows that the gross debenture debt of the Province of Ontario at the close of 1946 was $214,648,074—$58.12 per capita—or 6.8 per cent. of the assessment. This is a reduction in the gross debenture debt of $16,236,338 over the preceding year. The gross debenture debt of the province at the end of 1946 is the lowest since 1919.

Tax Levies—The tax levies of all municipalities for 1946 amounted to $117,629,000, an increase of $9,466,000 over the previous year.

Tax Collections—The total taxes collected for 1946, current and arrears, amounted to $117,925,000. This is an increase of $7,922,000 over the previous year, with the result that all the uncollected taxes carried as an asset on the books of the municipalities have been reduced by $607,000 to a total of $11,115,000.

Assessed Values—The assessed values for 1946 of property in all municipalities in Ontario have increased by $64,392,000, to $3,173,454,000.

Improvement Districts—There are 14 Improvement Districts under supervision, as follows: Atikokan, Beardmore, Cameron, Gauthier, Kingham, Kingsford, Marathon—effective Jan. 1, 1947, Mountjoy, McGarry, Renabie—effective Sept. 1, 1947, Red Rock, Sioux Narrows, Terrace Bay—effective Sept. 1, 1947, Wasaga Beach.

The three new Improvement Districts above noted were erected in 1947, and as in those Improvement Districts erected in prior years, the department ensured that at the commencement of their municipal existence, correct procedure was installed in the holding of meetings of the Board of Trustees, in the passing of by-laws and resolutions and the preparation and adoption of minutes.

The department supervised the installation of proper budgeting and accounting systems and continues to give instruction on the methods of adherence to them. Considerable advice in reference to the manner of the making of an assessment and the levying and collection of taxes were afforded. A degree of guidance was given as to the type and cost of proper municipal services, the method of financing same, and the procedure to effect the regulating of the use of land and construction of buildings.

Supervision—The main and important functions of the department when it was created in 1935 was to supervise the affairs of 34 municipalities which had defaulted in their debenture and other obligations. The debt of such municipalities have been refunded with the exception of the Roman Catholic Separate School Boards of the Town of Blind River, Town of Haileybury, Town of Tecumseh, and the Town of Sturgeon Falls.

Refunding—During the past year the department assisted the following Roman Catholic Separate School Sections in refinancing their defaulted debenture debt. In most cases there had been no payment made in the debt since 1932. As the settlements effected were approved of by all the holders of the debentures in question, there was no need for a hearing before The Ontario Municipal Board.

1. Roman Catholic Separate School Section No. 3 for the Township of Sandwich East.

2. Roman Catholic Separate School Section No. 8 for the Township of Sandwich West.

3. Roman Catholic Separate School for the Town of La Salle.

Defaulting Municipalities Still Under Supervision—There are thirteen municipalities still under supervision, as follows: Blind River, Essex, Haileybury, Hawkesbury, LaSalle, Rainy River, Riverside, Rockland, Sandwich E. Twp., Sandwich W. Twp., Sturgeon Falls, Teck Township, Tecumseh.

General Assistance—In addition to the above activities a large portion of the time of departmental officials is devoted to answering all enquiries of municipal officials made by mail or by personal attendance at the office in reference to every and all kinds of municipal activities; assisting and advising municipal officials as to the proper method of preparing budgets, all kinds of by-laws, especially debenture by-laws, and advising the municipality as to the current rates of interest for municipal borrowings, and putting the municipalities in touch with various bond dealers so that they can secure competitive bids when disposing of their debentures.

Municipal Subsidy—A municipal subsidy equal to 1 mill on the local assessment on which the general tax rate is levied, was distributed in 1947 as follows:

	1947	1946
Cities.....	1,916,140.02	1,871,633.95
Separated Towns	25,328.52	24,648.90
Towns.....	297,774.53	274,102.98
Villages.....	98,902.81	93,702.68
Townships.....	934,893.12	901,210.86
Improvement Districts.....	9,117.09	4,167.08
Total.....	$3,282,156.09	$3,169,466.45

The above figures show that the subsidy paid in 1947 was a $112,689.64 increase over that paid in 1946.

Below is a list of the municipalities who have not made application for payment of the municipal subsidy for 1947, notwithstanding repeated reminders from the department that they have not made application. Also shown below is the estimated amount of subsidy for each of the municipalities in question:

Town of Nesterville.....	$33.88
Township of Eastnor.....	503.30
Township of Head, Clara and Maria	75.78

ONTARIO MUNICIPAL BOARD

Increased Membership—The personnel of The Ontario Municipal Board was increased from 3 to 5 members in May, 1947. This increase in personnel was necessitated by the increased activities of the board.

Increased Activities — There were 4,822 applications, including Public Vehicle and Public Commercial Vehicle applications, made to The Ontario Municipal Board during 1947. This is an increase of 735 over 1946. The board held 494 public hearings, other than 1,734 Public Vehicle and Public Commercial Vehicle License applications.

Revenue—The revenue of the board during 1947 amounted to $103,798.38, an increase over the previous year of $27,983.57.

General—For further particulars of the activities of the board may I refer you to the Annual Report of The Ontario Municipal Board covering year ending December 31, 1947, tabled with this Legislature.

Vital Statistics Branch—A new Vital Statistics Act has been passed at the present session of the Legislature, which gives Ontario one of the most up-to-date systems of registration to be found in any province in Canada, and a model for other provinces to follow.

Regulations in respect to The Vital Statistics Act, 1948, are being prepared, and it is hoped to have the new Act proclaimed by July 1, 1948.

Below is a Summary of Registrations received during the year 1947:

Births.....	105,916
Marriages.....	43,572
Deaths.....	41,558
Stillbirths.....	2,126
Total Registrations.....	193,172

Now, I would like to go over those figures again. The births in 1947 were 105,916, as against deaths of only 41,558.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant):
Are you taking credit for that?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is not a bad immigration scheme in itself.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): I think it is good.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Marriages 43,572, so that you can see, no matter what we hear from our friend from Kitchener (Mr. Meinzinger) who arrived too late to hear the sermon we got this afternoon—

MR. MEINZINGER: There is no reason to vote against the present Government, and I have been here 15 years.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: There is not a man sitting here who would like to give up his privilege of living in this province.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): What privilege?

MR. MEINZINGER: Of being a Progressive Conservative. Go ahead, Mr. Minister.

THE CHAIRMAN: Order.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): He is one of yours.

On Vote 121:

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, on Item 121, may I ask a very brief question of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar)? I know you want to finish before 6.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Go ahead, no hurry.

MR. MACLEOD: My question is on Item 2 on Vote 121. I see you have an estimate there of $13,000 for travelling expenses.

MR. MEINZINGER: Why not?

MR. MACLEOD: Now, last year the appropriations for your department for travelling expenses was $8,000, of which you only spent $3,121. Now, just where are you planning to go this year that is going to cost you all that money?

AN HON. MEMBER: Saskatchewan.

MR. MACLEOD: Saskatchewan, or down to Termiti?

MR. MEINZINGER: May I answer that, Mr. Chairman?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I told you we were going to cover the province with municipal schools. If you look for the grant on municipal schools, you will see there is $3,000 less. We placed that with more money for travelling expenses. I explained to you about the testing of the soil. We cannot ask these men to bring a sandwich in their pocket, at least we will have to buy them meals and pay for their transportation. If they are going to give their services free, that is the least we can do. Therefore, I think you will find that we will require this amount of money.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, on Vote 121, Item 10, reads as follows:

“To provide for payment of a subsidy to certain mining municipalities as may be directed by the Minister of Municipal Affairs.”
In 1947, this subsidy amounted to $100,000.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: $150,000.

MR. GRUMMETT: No, in 1947. I am talking about 1947.

MR. MEINZINGER: You said 1946.

MR. GRUMMETT: In 1947, the grant was $100,000. In 1948, it was $150,000. You have now increased it to $180,000, Mr. Minister. Is that increase for the purpose of giving grants to other mines, or is it to increase the grants that were given to certain mines last year—when I say “mines” I am referring to mining municipalities.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I would say off hand that that is intended to give it to other municipalities. We found municipalities this year that had never received any grant before. It will go to a few. We guaranteed to these mining municipalities that there would be a floor that it would not go below, but if the profits from the mines were to improve greatly, then they would receive that benefit. I might be asked by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) to take some out of this $30,000, or something, to help some of these who have not received any, in order to raise theirs, but I do not believe that is the way it will be handled. But when you ask me that question, I understand that the $30,000 is a separate offer to municipalities.

MR. GRUMMETT: New municipalities?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes.

MR. GRUMMETT: On that same point, Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) what is the basis on which he distributes this amount among the municipalities. Have you got a scale bearing on their assessment, or on what basis is it distributed?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Some of it was in case of need. Of course, in the case of the larger municipalities, it was on the basis of assessment, and the assessment on the mining profits. Take for instance, Kirkland Lake, they were entitled according to the Statutes Act to 15 mills, but we gave them another 15 mills, out of the $150,000. In the case of Timmins we felt that Timmins was more deserving than Teck township, and we gave Timmins another 15 mills bringing them up to 30 mills.

It must be understood that when I am talking about 15 mills in this connection, I am talking about the profits tax on the mines. Thus, the 30 mills is equal to 10 mills on their assessment.

The 15 mills that we added to their other 15 mills which they had received from the Mines Branch was equal to 10 mills, therefore, the 10 mills that we gave them and the 10 they received from the hon. Provincial Treasury (Mr. Frost) made 20 mills, with the Township of Whitney 10 mills.

MR. MEINZINGER: The assessment was lowered, though, of course.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: In speaking of that 10 mills, I would like to give hon.

members exactly what it is in mill rate. For instance the town of Cobalt—the hon. member who comes from Cobalt (Mr. Taylor) seemed almost to have forgotten that I was ever there when he was thanking the ministers for going there. That is rather strange, when one comes to think of it, that he should have forgotten that I was there.

MR. TAYLOR: I did not forget you.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I went there in 1944, and what did I do? The town of Charlton, for the date I was using, showed a figure of $1,135.19. The town of Haileybury, $204,312.48; the township of Buck $63,697.26, making a total of $269,114.92. And still they say this Government is doing nothing for that constituency. What other constituency in the Province of Ontario was treated more liberally?

MR. MEINZINGER: No appreciation.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That was not all. Last year I was surprised when the hon. member was speaking on that subject as he did not thank me for sending $5,000, because they were not entitled to any of it, but they had a fire, I believe they were wanting to buy fire equipment, so I had $5,000 less to be given to municipalities in case of need, that is, mining municipalities. I talked the matter over with the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and we agreed on that. Of course, the people themselves were pleased, but the hon. member seems to have looked on it in a political way because he did not say anything about it when he was speaking of the tough times they were having up there.

MR. ROBINSON: Holding out on us too, Mr. Minister?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: He did not say anything in 1946 about $29,548.40 being written for the high school there. I ask hon. members here, if you had $29,000—some odd dollars written for your high school now—this is the part of the country that we are doing nothing for.

Here is $269,000 in one place and then $29,000 in another; why, I am surprised. I am never looking for Christmas boxes or anything like that, but instead of criticism, a man would expect a Christmas card anyway. They only cost a few cents.

MR. MEINZINGER: I thought the C.C.F. was—

THE CHAIRMAN: Order.

MR. MEINZINGER: They are spellbound because the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) is telling the truth.

MR. TAYLOR: I will leave a piece of Christmas cake for the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) when he comes down the chimney next year.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): May I suggest, Mr. Minister, that the Chairman should notice that it is 6.00 o'clock.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Did you want me to finish that or not?

MR. MACLEOD: In deference to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), would it not be better to report progress on these estimates, and let Mr. Speaker return to the chair so that we can resume the debate on the budget at 8.00 o'clock?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I want to thank the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) for that, because there are a lot of things I will think of between now and 8.00 o'clock.

MR. MEINZINGER: Hear, hear.

It being 6.00 o'clock, the Committee recessed.

After recess.

8 O'CLOCK P.M.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, I was speaking on Vote 121, Item 10, regarding payments made to municipalities during the fiscal year 1947-1948. That is, from the $150,000 which was placed in the estimates of the Department of Municipal Affairs distributed to certain mining municipalities. Here is how it is distributed; Cobalt, $5,000, that is 10 mills, approximately the mill level of the realty assessment; the town of Geraldton $10,000, that is 10 mills on the assessment; the town of Timmins 15 mills on the mines profit tax which is equal to two mills on the general assessment for the town of Timmins; the township of Larder Lake, $6,000, that is equal to 6 mills on their assessment; and the township of Matachewan $3,720, that is equal to 10 mills on their assessment; the township of Teck, they have 15 mills in mines profit tax, that is $61,556.73, which is equal to 7½ mills on their regular assessment for the town of Teck; 5 mills to the township of Tisdale, $29,508.58, equal to 4½ mills on their regular assessment; 10 mills for the township of Whitney, $11,870, equal to 10 mills on their assessment. That totals $149,816.97. You see I had a small balance $100 some odd left over there, and the very gratifying part of the whole thing is there has never been one complaint from one municipality of how that $150,000 was divided. They may have said to some people, "we expected more," but that was all that was placed on the estimates, $150,000. Now, it is $180,000. Some of those were municipalities in need, and I hope we will be as successful this year because it was very successfully handled, as far as we know. The mining municipalities came down and had a meeting with us and we had the leader of the C.C.F. group, the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett).

You remember we sent assessors up to these municipalities in order to get an idea whether it would be better for the municipalities whether they were paid the assessment of the mines on the mills. We talked it over and they decided they would accept for five years with a floor on what they received last year, but the mines profit tax was greater to get that amount, and we agreed with them we will go up with our assessor during the summer months and go with their assessor and check over what we gave them to see if they agree with the manner in which our special assessors assessed the property. So, it was quite agreeable to the different municipalities to carry on in that way. That is all I can say to Item No. 10 on Vote 121.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): I do not want the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) to take offence at this; I know he will not, but I have noticed on a number of occasions when these payments were being made to the municipalities, it has been the practice for the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), when visiting the municipality in question, to take the cheque along with him and the presentation of the cheque has taken on the character of a political demonstration. It is inevitable that a Minister of any Government going on a visit like that—the Liberals would do the same thing—undertakes to do a bit of political “fence repairing.” My feeling is that since this money is being paid out of revenues contributed by the taxpayers of Ontario and since the money itself is appropriated and authorized by the Legislature that no hon. Minister of the Government should make a partisan political demonstration out of turning over a sum of money to a municipality. Do not you agree it is bad practice, unethical and unprincipled?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I wish you would withdraw that last remark, I do not think you meant to say that—

MR. MacLEOD: I will withdraw that. Strike it from the record.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I was making a trip to a municipality which was not entitled to a grant, but we checked the budget and found they were doing a good job, a very difficult task they had to make ends meet, and there was about $10,000 deficit for the year prior, and I was making a trip to all those municipalities, and I decided right there that I would take a $10,000 cheque to Charlton, and I did. I came down Saturday afternoon, there was no great fanfare, there was no banquet. I will admit they were glad to see me and I was glad to see them. I had been there before, and there was no person asked to vote for the Government.

MR. MacLEOD: Just the subtle suggestion.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: If that were so, what would you say of the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) when in his campaign the ex-Reeve made a statement at a political meeting about this $40,000 I wrote off, that it was a promise of the Drew Government. If I have been a partisan politician as you say, that could have been cancelled right there by Mr. Fenton and he could have refused it. I often think if the ex-Premier, Mr. Mitchell Hepburn had been in our place he would have said, “It is cancelled if you think our word is not good.” And it would not have been said and he would have been justified, because I think that is cheap politics, when a Minister goes to municipalities and offers to write off $46,000, and then the Reeve of that town—I do not know his politics, and I do not care whether he agrees with me or not; I prefer now he does not—but he made the statement and he has nothing to do with the municipality. That is all forgotten. I did not expect you were going to ask this question because the hon. member from North Cochrane (Mr. Habel) told me at the beginning of the session he was going to have some fun with me over a cheque I delivered.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): I want to tell you I was not going to worry about it.

MR. MacLEOD: I did not get my question from him.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is that. It is all done. I had a very enjoyable afternoon. I enjoyed it very much, and I am going back, if I am living and well, to see the people and congratulate them on the way they have been carrying on because they have a tough job with all the mines around there and no real revenue in industry. There is nothing coming in and they have a tough job, and we are going to try and help them out.

MR. MACLEOD: I do not want to pursue this, but I really think, just between you and I, the answer you gave gives additional point to my question because you chose to put on what I call a "political demonstration" in a municipality that had not been provided for in the money appropriated by this assembly and therefore your action in giving them money that had not been provided for them and which they did not expect, was bound to make them feel under obligation to the party you represent.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You do not need to forget when the $150,000 was voted to the Department of Municipal Affairs, every man in this House voted for it because they had the confidence in the Minister.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrews): Before we proceed, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) a couple of questions that concern the general policy of the Department and especially that of the hon. Minister himself. The city of Toronto asked the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) for an amendment to the Assessment Act that would enable them to properly assess and tax the Royal York Hotel and other properties which are not properly part of the railway but which are not now paying tax, that other comparable companies pay. It is most unusual for me to agree with the Telegram, but I am obliged on this occasion to read an extract of the Toronto Evening Telegram from an editorial in its issue of March 31, which places the question very simply and very correctly.

"The Canadian Pacific Railway and more particularly the Royal York Hotel, which it owns and operates, owe a debt of gratitude to the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature and more particularly to the Minister of Municipal Affairs, who opposed the city of Toronto's application for legislation to amend sections of the Assessment Act pertaining to railways which has been shelved.

"This means that the Royal York Hotel will continue to enjoy exemption from business taxes which other hotels in the city are paying, and will continue to enjoy the advantages of being assessed for general taxes once every five years while other taxpayers are assessed annually."

This one item alone means a loss to the city of Toronto of about $45,000 or $46,000 a year on the basis of the present assessment, and it is not only a hotel which competes with other hotels and does not pay the tax which other hotels pay, but the C.P.R. is operating a heating plant that sells heat to the Post Office, and so on, and it does not pay the regular taxes because it is railway property.

Now, when the city of Toronto asks for such legislation, it certainly is a sign of a rather unhappy approach,—and I am very mild to the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar)—when the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) refuses to grant that modest and legitimate request and offers protection to the Royal York Hotel and not to the taxpayers of the city of Toronto.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Speaker, I ask the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) to withdraw the statement that I am offering special protection to that hotel or any other hotel in this province.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not think I said you did.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is exactly what you said, and there is no mistake about it.

MR. SALSBERG: What I meant to say was your refusal to grant the request of the municipality amounts to a refusal to give protection to the taxpayers, the property owners, who will have to pay the $46,000 through their property tax, which otherwise, if you had granted the request, would have come from the Royal York Hotel and from some other property that the railway owns and does not pay taxes on.

This is a matter of general policy, and I think it is time the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) gave a very detailed report of the operations of his department. I give the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) credit for knowing his department and municipal affairs and I am shocked and surprised to find he takes a stand such as this on the matter, so that even the Telegram, which is generally very favourable to this Government, finds it necessary to come out editorially against the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) and singles out the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), if you please because he is the one who asked no action be taken. That is question number one.

Question number two is another one which concerns the policy of the department, and particularly the Minister, and also the city of Toronto. Sometime back, the city of Toronto evidently wanted to secure the experience and advice of a member of the Municipal Affairs Department. That desire was not fulfilled; they could not get the person. What makes matters worse is, according to the statement of a controller of the city of Toronto, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) refused to allow the Deputy-Minister of Municipal Affairs to serve the city because a member of this House, whom the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) does not like—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Now, just a minute.

THE CHAIRMAN: You have to stick to this Item 121.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Just a minute Mr. Chairman. What reason has the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) for suggesting I do not like any member of this House? Come clean on this. You are not talking to Communists here. Nothing but the dirt which was born in you is coming out now.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) when he gets hot and bitter—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am not hot and bitter.

THE CHAIRMAN: Order, please, we are not discussing these things. You stick to 121.

MR. SALSBERG: It is customary I think.

THE CHAIRMAN: I don't care what you think, you discuss this item.

MR. SALSBERG: If the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) does not want me to read the statement of Controller Innes I will not read it.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) does not run this committee. That is my job.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, would you let him read that. It is right down my alley, and I want to reply.

THE CHAIRMAN: Well, that is the last; read it.

MR. SALSBERG: I have not gone around seeking information on the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar).

I am quoting the Toronto Daily Star, the other evening paper, of February 28, 1948.

“Controller Innes said when Mr. Farley put in his resignation last June it was to take effect in three months. ‘It was then Bob Saunders, as mayor suggested a board of assessors,’ he continued. ‘He said he had W. J. Stewart in mind as Stewart had shortly before resigned in a huff as Speaker of the House. I objected even then to Mr. Stewart, but the mayor persisted. The mayor also wanted to borrow Mr. Gray, who was then Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, to act as the third member of the new board of assessors along with Mr. Stewart and Mr. Farley.

“‘He went up to Queen’s Park to ask permission from hon. George Dunbar, Minister of Municipal Affairs. He told him what he wanted, but when Mr. Dunbar heard Stewart was to be on the board also, he refused to let Gray go,' the controller related. 'The mayor came back and told us he couldn't get Gray because Dunbar didn't like the fact Stewart was on the board.' Nothing was done for a while, and then Mr. Gray resigned as deputy minister."

That ends the quotation and I submit with all respect that I am in possession of unusual information; I have no ulterior motive.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, no, oh, no.

MR. SALSBERG: I am reading what was published in the largest daily newspaper of the city, and I think it is a matter of public interest and should be dealt with on this occasion.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: All right, question number one—that I favoured the Royal York Hotel. This assessment has just gone into effect this year. You admit the assessment was to be considered every five years. Have I been Minister of Municipal Affairs ever since the Royal York was built?

MR. SALSBERG: No.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You listen to me. On March 16 I received a letter from the solicitor or assistant solicitor, who stated that on March 23rd or 22nd—one of those dates—the council was going to meet and decide what action they would take regarding asking amendment to the assessment, but the date the city council was meeting to decide, was the one day our meeting was deciding on amendments to the Assessment Act.

The thing that you mentioned regarding coming to my office, I think is quite right. My advice was it would be impossible for us to get in touch with all of the municipalities now. This will not only affect the Royal York Hotel, but other hotels in the Province of Ontario. Do you think it would be fair for me to change an Act which had been in vogue for a number of years, just to suit the city of Toronto? Why did not you place it in your private bills? You know they have a legislative committee which meets and decides what legislation they would ask for. Did they ask for that? No, not until the 22nd or 23rd of March—after our meeting. My advice to your friend the city solicitor was: "It is too late this session to get the municipalities together to find out how many hotels would be affected. Do you not think, when you have waited so long, you can wait until this summer when the province and municipalities are coming together and then decide what should be done, when all the municipalities will be represented at that meeting."

That was the advice I gave him, and I still say it is sound advice, instead of putting through amendments to the Assessment Act not knowing how many hotels were affected.

Now, I come to number 2. You read Controller Innes' statement. Mayor Saunders at that time came to my office and asked if Mr. Gray would be permitted to act on an assessment commission for the city of Toronto. You mentioned Mr. Stewart's name. His name was never mentioned. I did not know anything about it. I said that it would be impossible for the Deputy-Minister to act on a commission which would be making recommendations which would come before this House to receive their o.k. Is not that common sense? The Deputy-Minister would sit on committee and make recommendations, and we would have to say to the Deputy-Minister "No, you are wrong."

I am in charge of that department, I might tell you, and there is no Deputy-Minister of mine going to act on any commission which is going to make recommendations to the Government. I know that men who have had a lot more experience than I have had in this Government will agree I am right.

I read what Controller Innes said. He said the mayor was down in Ottawa and was told by some important individual connected with the Federal Government, that Mr. Gray had resigned and he immediately got on the long-distance telephone and said to Mr. Gray, "Don't do anything. You want to . . ."

MR. SALSBERG: I accept your explanation.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I was the man who got Gray his job. The day of the ball game, I said to Mayor Saunders, "You remember you asked for Gray. Now he is yours for the asking." And he said, "Fine, I will get in touch with him." Mr. Gray came into my office and said, "Have you seen Mayor Saunders?" He says, "Salsberg is bothering me on the telephone wanting to know if I am quitting the Government." That is what Mr. Gray said, "Salsberg is telephoning me and is getting on my nerves." I lifted the telephone, and called "Bob" Saunders and told him he could have Gray. He said, "All right, send him down." Did he get his job the way Controller Innes said or did I get him the job? That should be satisfactory to you. Mr. Stewart's name was never mentioned.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, I am speaking on 121, Item 10. Perhaps my hon. friend (Mr. Dunbar) would advise the House why Sudbury was excluded from this subsidy. I am certain he must feel that Sudbury is entitled to any financial assistance that this or any other government could give them, and may I assure you, if assistance is forthcoming we will see to it that you will get a banquet, if you did not get one in Geraldton.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I must say I am not settling the policy of the Government.

MR. NIXON (Brant): You said there was still $100 there.

Vote 121 approved.

On Vote 122.

MR. NIXON: Who are the members of this Board now?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The Municipal Board?

MR. NIXON: Yes, on 122.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Coulter is the Chairman, Mr. Near is the Deputy-Chairman. Mr. Moore is on the Board. He is an engineer who came here from Pembroke, and had been County Engineer for a number of years. Mr. Yates, a lawyer from Hamilton, and Mr. Rowland, who was Deputy Reeve of Forest Hill Village. That is the personnel of the Board.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I am one who believes a word of appreciation should be given where it is due, and in this case I wish to express my appreciation of the work done by the Ontario Municipal Board. I have had occasion several times within the past two or three years to appear before this Board, and I can realize what they have before them and the amount of work they have carried on, and I wish to say that your expenditure here of $67,010.00 is money well spent, and we owe a debt of gratitude to this branch of your department.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Before you pass on, I would like to concur in the words which have been expressed by our worthy leader (Mr. Grummett). During the past number of years I have had occasion to bring matters to the attention of the Ontario Municipal Board many times, and I have always received the greatest co-operation.

Mr. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister (hon. Mr. Dunbar) have any objection if we made it unanimous?

Votes 122 and 123 approved.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT: On Vote 123 there was one question I wished to ask, under item number 3 there is equipment rental $11,000.00. I was just wondering what that covered.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Those are key-punching machines, and we are really being reimbursed by the Federal Government. We are making records of births and deaths and supplying the Federal Government with them, and if there happened to be a fire in Ottawa there would be a record here, and if a fire here, there would be a record in Ottawa. We are reimbursed for that.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 53rd Order, page 44, Department of Health.

On Item 63.

HON. RUSSELL T. KELLEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Chairman, before asking the members to consider the items of the Department of Health, there are just a few things I would like to say. I will say them very briefly.

Our budget for last year as approved was $18,500,000; our expenses were about $1,700,000 more than that amount and was spent in this way: the representatives of the various sanatoria came down to see us and explained their financial position and having in mind there was no way in which they could get any private funds, the Government was the only place they could go. We gave them an extra $1,050,000. In our budget we had $400,000 for rent for hospitals and spent slightly in excess of $1,000,000. So we had to have an overdraft there from extra spending of $600,000.

The Government decided to be on the British Food Relief Commission, and I was asked to accept the Chairmanship, and the Government pays the entire cost of carrying on this Commission. We sent over to Great Britain 1,600,000 pounds of clothing, 550,000 pounds of canned goods, 247,000 pairs of shoes, $160,000 worth of furs. We received in addition about $100,000 in money, and this money was spent for canned meat, canned milk and other canned goods. We have a very small amount left and we have thousands of letters from Great Britain expressing the greatest appreciation for the Government in carrying on this work. The cost to us was approximately $120,000.

Our budget statement for the coming year amounts to just slightly under $22,000,000, about $1,100,000 more than we spent last year. This is made up in this way. As the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) and the hon.

member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) know, these two gentlemen and a number of us went on Monday of this week and spent about three hours in one mental hospital. We found it generally in very good condition, but we were all impressed with the fact of the great shortage of staff. We have put additional money in our budget this year for extra staff and for extra pay and maintenance, hence the extra $1,000,000. That will be spent in a way I think is very worthy indeed.

We have quite a number of other items in which we will have increases in our expenses, and as we go over these figures you will see what they cover.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to mention one or two things we have in view, which we would like to do. As the hon. members know, we have been considering for some time X-raying all the nurses who go into the various hospitals. For two reasons it was not possible to do that this past year. The first reason was that not many machines have been available, but they are coming into greater supply at the present time. The second reason is it has been most difficult to go to the hospital boards—and there are about 160 in the province, nearly all of which have overdrafts, one of them as high as $300,000, and many of them $10,000, $20,000, $30,000, and $40,000—and ask them to go to the increased expense, and provide the increased staff for this work, when they have these deficits. With the new income which this department expects to have, we will be in a position to help those hospitals, as machines become available, and I am hoping this year something will be done along this line. At the present time, there are 8 hospitals which have the machines, or have them ordered, and we are getting under way.

On the order paper there was a question as to how many nurses have contracted tuberculosis since 1939. It is hard to say how many nurses received their R. N. in that time, but it would probably be in the neighbourhood of 9,000 or 10,000. The total number of nurses, registered and undergraduates, in all the hospitals in the province, including our Ontario hospitals, contracting tuberculosis, is 467 during that time. It does not seem perhaps a large number, but if one of them happened to be your daughter or your sister or one of your friends, it seems like the whole world, and we are definitely of the idea of establishing these units in the hospitals as soon as possible.

Mr. Chairman, I would like also to say something about polio. Not many people realize the Government pays the entire cost of those who have contracted polio. There were not many deaths fortunately; last year, 17; the year before, 18; but again if it happened to be your boy or your girl, or one of your loved ones, it seems like the whole world is gone. So we have been trying to find out the cause. It is most difficult.

After the polio season was over last year I went to three homes where they had the disease, and there was not one idea I could gather as to why these children had this trouble. However, we believe with research work surely the medical men will find what causes polio.

I was going to say a word about the cancer foundation. You will be very happy to know the hospitals are becoming more interested in this. Our Polyclinic Hospital at Kingston is doing a good work, and the one established yesterday at the Women's College Hospital will be a great factor in assisting the number of people who are dying from this dreadful disease.

We are happy to report that the year 1947-1948 had the lowest record in the province in connection with venereal diseases. I would like to pay tribute tonight to those who have been interested in that work, especially the Junior Chambers of Commerce across the province, who from time to time have put on campaigns, and have done a great deal of work in connection with this subject.

With these explanations, Mr. Chairman, in closing I would like to pay my own personal thanks to the members of our staff for the work they are doing, and also to the hon. members of this House. We are your servants. We want to help you in any possible way. If you went into a room tonight where a man who had $1,000,000 was ill, he would give you most of that $1,000,000 if you could make him well, so without health we are not very rich. I think today health is one of the greatest assets we have, and work in connection with health is one of the greatest works we can carry on, and I trust the estimates you will be shown here will meet with your approval.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, I would like to have your instructions on this. I would like to make a few brief remarks on some of the things touched upon by the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley). I can either make them now before we proceed dealing with the items, or wait until we reach a particular item.

HON. WILLIAM G. WEBSTER (Minister without Portfolio): Put it off as long as you can.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MacLEOD: I did not hear you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Go ahead.

HON. MR. WEBSTER: I said put it off as long as you can.

MR. MacLEOD: If it will relieve the hon. Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Webster) he is perfectly free to go out for a couple of minutes while I raise the question now. I do not think that sort of thing helps very much. The hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) has just finished making a statement on his department, and I am sure, being the gentleman he is, he would welcome comment on what he has said from any hon. member of this House, without offering any gratuitous insults.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say at the outset I appreciate very much the hon. Minister's (Mr. Kelley) acceptance of a suggestion I put forward last session, that he make it possible for a number of hon. members of the House to visit some of the mental hospitals in Toronto and the surrounding area, and the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) was good enough several days ago to take a group of half dozen hon. members out to 999 Queen St.

Personally I welcomed the opportunity, because, as the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) and the hon. members know, there have been some rather alarming statements made as to conditions in the mental hospitals in Ontario, not only in the daily press, but in a leading publication which until recently was published weekly, now a monthly publication, the New Liberty magazine. This magazine carried a series of articles which were bound to disturb the public in general, but particularly those people who may have members of their families confined to these hospitals.

May I refer to one news story which appeared in an evening paper, under the heading, "Charge Broken Jaws and Bruised Faces Seen in Mental Hospitals." Then, another headline in the Globe and Mail of March 1st, "Cruelty Said Common in Mental Hospitals."

Statements of that kind have a very disturbing effect on the public, and, as I said a moment ago, particularly on those people who have their relatives in these institutions.

For that reason, it was a relief to go into the hospital at 999 Queen Street, to meet the director, and to see the staff at work and the general conditions in the hospital, and I want to on this occasion pay the highest tribute to Dr. Montgomery, the superintendent at 999 Queen Street, and who is a man of outstanding ability, with great human sympathy, and who is making every effort, under rather difficult conditions, to treat the inmates of that hospital in a kindly and humane fashion.

We discovered, however, there is a great shortage of attendants there, a shortage of people to give the necessary services to the 1,100 or 1,200 inmates in the hospital. The hon. Minister (Mr.

Kelley) admits there is a shortage of help, and he says in his estimates special provision is being made to secure additional help, and to pay them better wages as an encouragement to take that kind of employment.

I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) and the Government are to be commended for doing that, because I am satisfied there is a very close relationship between the shortage of staff and the lowness of pay. I do not think you can expect people to work in an institution like that at the prevailing wage rates, and the only possible way you can get people to take that kind of employment is to offer them a wage commensurate with the difficult tasks they have to perform.

I want to add, in my judgment, the building at 999 Queen Street is not fit for a mental hospital. It is obsolete, miserable, a dingy building which ought not to be in use in this day and age, and while every effort is made to keep it clean and attractive—I was particularly impressed with the cleanliness of the place—there are physical conditions there which cannot be overcome by the superintendent and his staff. I think this Government should move as quickly as possible to find other accommodation for those people, especially the scores of aged people who are in there merely because they are too old, and because it is difficult for their families to take care of them. They go there, and remain there until they die. I say these aged people should be taken out of 999 Queen Street, and we should find homes for them in the country, and, if necessary, erect a number of inexpensive buildings in which these people could be placed, in charge of a sympathetic and understanding woman who knows how to handle elderly people, and to treat them sympathetically. You do not even need to have a doctor or a psychiatrist on the staff.

I think it would be true to say that one of the reasons why 999 Queen Street is crowded today with these old people is because of the housing shortage. There are a great many people today who would be perfectly willing to take care of their grandmother, or their elderly aunt, or what have you, if they had homes of their own in which to take care of them.

I think the increase in the number of elderly people going to these institutions will continue until such time as the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) gets around to solving the housing problem.

May I say a word now on the compulsory X-raying of patients entering public hospitals. I think it is a year and a half ago since the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) gave an undertaking in a public address that legislation would be passed in this Legislature making it compulsory for all hospitals to take such X-rays of all patients entering those institutions. After a couple of months, he was quoted in the press as saying that public opinion did not seem to support his proposition, and the legislation would not be passed. In the month of February, the Toronto Daily Star carried a number of articles, in which it was pointed out that, on the basis of a statement made by people in the electrical business, within 15 months at a cost of $1,000,000 every one of Ontario's 160 hospitals could be supplied by Ferranti Electric Company of Weston with machines for chest X-ray. What I just read from the Star is based upon a declaration by Mr. A. W. Anderson, manager of the X-ray department of the Ferranti Electric Company of Weston—

HON. MR. KELLEY: Mr. Chairman, I think I should really correct that statement. It is not correct. I had a telephone message, and also a visit from Mr. Anderson in which he stated it was not correct, and it would not be humanly possible for them to supply the machines in that time.

MR. MACLEOD: I do not question what the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) said. But I would think if Mr. Anderson, after having been quoted in a paper like the Star, would have made certain any remarks attributed to him which were erroneous would be corrected. I never saw any correction in the paper.

I say, Mr. Chairman, that even though the majority of the hospitals are not equipped with these X-ray machines now, we should have on the statute books of the Province of Ontario today legislation which would make it compulsory for every hospital so equipped to take fleuroscopes of all patients entering these hospitals.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) has said that over a period of years, 467 nurses contracted tuberculosis, but that does not tell the whole story, because the figures only cover nurses. I believe if the investigation were carried forward, probably we would find other classifications of hospital employees have also contracted tuberculosis. To my knowledge, tuberculosis is not a compensable disease. So we have permitted a state of affairs in the Province of Ontario where nurses and other hospital employees who are willing to devote their lives to the care of the sick are exposed to a disease which will undermine their health and usefulness for the rest of their lives. I cannot believe it has not been possible in the five years this Government has been in power to do something to remove conditions of that sort.

We have been told in the Legislature that every immigrant who has come here from England in the past year has been given an X-ray before being permitted to fly to Toronto. That is wonderful. That is splendid. But I say we should be prepared to give the same protection to our own nurses in the public hospitals as has been given to the immigrants.

MR. J. D. MCPHEE (Simcoe East): Mr. Chairman, may I add a comment here?

MR. MACLEOD: I am just about through. Will you wait a minute, and then you can say what is on your mind. I know, as physician, you are an expert.

I say, Mr. Chairman, if we take the precaution of making certain that immigrants who come to Canada are not tubercular, then we should certainly be consistent in that policy and make sure that anyone who is prepared to serve as a nurse in a public hospital, or in any other capacity in a public hospital, is not exposed to this most deadly of all diseases.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) is not a doctor. You do not need to be a doctor to be a good Minister of Health—

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: The requirement for a minister of Health is to be a fighter for public health, and I think in a number of things the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) has done, he has proven himself to be a fighter for public health in the province. I hope he will keep on fighting until such time as he can persuade the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) to give him money to do the things that—

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Do you not think I have done pretty well with $22,000,000?

MR. MACLEOD: It is not bad, but do a little better.

On Vote 53:

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): On Vote 53, Mr. Chairman, Item No. 10 referred to the "costs and expenses in training certified nursing assistants in conjunction with the Department of Education"; in 1948 that sum was $32,500. Your estimates this year call for an expenditure of $80,000. I was wondering if you have been able to increase the number of applicants for nursing assistants.

HON. MR. KELLEY: We have graduated, up to the present time, 170 and we have 174 in the classes now. We have been conducting 3 schools, 1 at Kingston, 1 at Toronto and 1 at Hamilton. We may possibly have to close the 1 at Hamilton as we are located there in part of the building that is owned by the Dominion Government and they may want to use it for some other purpose.

We have been somewhat disappointed in the number we have had as students, but I am happy to say that our classes look very well for next season, and I am very glad to say that up to the present time we have never received a single complaint regarding any of the girls who have graduated as certified nursing assistants. We are hoping this work will continue, and the registered nurses, whom we had together this week, are most anxious we should enlarge this, if possible.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): In Item 26 of Vote 53, "Commissioners' Honoraria," is the cancer commission still functioning?

HON. MR. KELLEY: Yes, it is.

MR. NIXON: How many members constitute that commission?

HON. MR. KELLEY: 5, and they have just recently been investigating in connection with a proposed remedy for cancer. There are not many of these cures put forward, but there is the odd one, and they do the work and I think they do it very well.

MR. NIXON: How many members are there on the commission, may I ask?

HON. MR. KELLEY: 5.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, before you pass on to Vote 54, may I just refer back for a moment to Item 5 of Vote 53? I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) regarding this item, whether it does not seem a very small amount, $10,000 for public health education. Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) like to make a comment on that?

HON. MR. KELLEY: Mr. Chairman, I agree with the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) in his comment that it seems a small amount, but we are getting a lot of publicity without having to spend a great deal of money. I have been in this work for 35 years and have some idea how we can get it without spending a great deal of money. We think we are getting people of this province much more conscious on the subject of health than they have ever been in the past. There is one thing; you have public opinion behind you that health is a great thing, and we should all be interested in it.

Vote 53 approved.

On Vote 54:

MR. GRUMMETT: In 54, Item 4, there is an expenditure provided for in the sum of $520,000. The information there is very indefinite. I was wondering if the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) would elaborate a little, and let us know just what this large expenditure covers.

HON. MR. KELLEY: Item No. 4 covers the health units?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, that $520,000, "special health services."

HON. MR. KELLEY: That is really covering expenses of the health units. You see we have 20 of them now. The Government pays half of that now, and the county councils pay the other half. There are 3 more units which we hope to get established just as soon as the necessary doctors and nurses can be secured. Out of 38 counties in the province, we have 20 now and we will soon have 23. In fact, we cover more than 23, because you will notice in some cases there are two counties in one, and these nurses go into homes and schools.

I believe this also answers the question of the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) to some extent, because it brings right into the homes and schools the question of health.

Votes 54 and 55 approved.

On Vote 56:

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In connection with Vote 56, Mr. Chairman, Item 4, I notice the estimates provide for the expenditure of $250,000, whereas in 1948 the amount provided for was $350,000. Did you find that the number of applications had decreased, or what is the reason for lowering your estimates?

HON. MR. KELLEY: We are lowering our estimates. We really spent last year only $216,000. There are a number of other examples—$42,000 last year, but for January, February and March this year we have averaged about $4,000 each month. That is the reason the amount is up a little bit for last year. We spent $216,000 last year.

Vote 56 approved.

On Vote 57:

MR. V. MARTIN (Nipissing): On Vote 57, Item 3, "operation of traveling dental clinic," does this reduction mean they are going to curtail the traveling dental clinic? I believe it would be a great move if the Department of Health was to go to greater expense in dental clinics for rural people of the north, including my own riding of Nipissing, who are as far away from dentists as they are from doctors, some 30 to 35 miles away from dentists. We should realize the necessity of expanding these dental clinics in order to improve the health of our rural school children.

HON. MR. KELLEY: The Item is up slightly for last year, maybe not so much as we would like to have it. I agree with the hon. member's (Mr. Martin) idea and I think the care of teeth is one of the most important things we can undertake. I went down to the health unit at Welland the other day and attended one of the classes and saw the mouths of several children examined. These children were between the ages of 9 and 13, and every one of those children had from 3 to 5 of their second teeth out. Why? Simply because their parents had not realized the importance of following out the suggestion made at one time: "Clean your teeth twice a day; see your dentist twice a year." We are spending a little more.

MR. NIXON: I think it is a reduction.

HON. MR. KELLEY: In which item?

MR. T. H. LEWIS (Welland): I would like to say a word, Mr. Chairman, in connection with health. As mayor of the city of Welland for 6 years, I think probably if you go back to the records you will find I was one who more or less fostered and advocated it and I can assure hon. members here tonight that it has done a grand job in our locality and in my riding, and, as far as I know, in all the districts there. I can assure hon. members that mothers and fathers there are very, very happy the health unit was established. I just wanted to inject that into the discussion at this time.

HON. MR. KELLEY: In answering the question about the reduction, we purchased a dental car last year and we do not have to purchase one this year.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington, North): Back in 1945 it was $4,800; last year it was $3,000; this year it is $2,750.

HON. MR. KELLEY: Item No. 5?

MR. ANDERSON: Item 3 of Vote 57.

HON. MR. KELLEY: That is what I was just saying; last year it was $3,000, and this year it is $2,750, the reason being we purchased a car last year and we do not have to purchase one this year.

MR. McEWING: In 1945 you had $4,800. That is a reduction since then.

HON. MR. KELLEY: We only spent $3,000 on it last year.

MR. McEWING: That year?

MR. ANDERSON: Mr. Chairman, might I again ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) a question?

I notice under Vote 57, Item 4, there is an amount of $16,000 for "school dental services." Just to what extent are these services given in the schools?

HON. MR. KELLEY: That item refers only to the northern part of the province. That amount is spent entirely in the northern part of the province.

Votes 57 to 59 inclusive approved.

On Vote 60:

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, Vote 60, Item 3, I am not sure whether I heard the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) correctly, but I believe I understood him to say the incidence of venereal disease is on the decrease in the province. This vote of $148,300 is greater than the vote of last year, $143,300. If the incidence of venereal disease is decreasing, why have you increased the vote?

HON. MR. KELLEY: We want to carry on all the present clinics we have and we want to establish one or two more.

MR. LEWIS: Mr. Chairman, may I say in regard to that, this is a very serious situation as the people take and accept it. May I add this, that Dr. Colbeck, who was past president of the Medical Association, was a very good friend of mine and he informs me—and I can assure hon. members when I mention names this is very sincere and true—that most of our trouble today comes from people who are coming in from other provinces, and that is the reason I believe the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) has to increase his budget in regard to this situation.

Vote 60 approved.

On Vote 61:

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): On Vote 61, Mr. Chairman, I would like to raise a point at this time.

I am not too sure if I am raising it at the proper place. I looked over the estimates of this department and I did not find a heading specifically designated which would convince me this was the place I should bring this matter up. May I present it this way: In the mining industries, particularly quartz mining, there are a lot of people affected with tuberculosis. I believe the tuberculosis rating is the highest in the Dominion of Canada. There are a lot of people suffering from lung trouble who eventually end up in sanatoria.

I know a great many cases, and I am wondering if any provisions are made for special attention to be given these people, since the tuberculosis rating is so high.

I have had a number of letters from people and even certain doctors, and many verbal statements have been made to me by competent physicians in the north country, stating that in their opinion the patients had "dusted lungs," that is a mining term, but were at that moment suffering from tuberculosis.

I am wondering, apart from this aluminum spray treatment which they give the miners, and which is now being questioned by medical authorities I understand, as to whether it is a proper treatment to give or not, if any thought has been given to the possibility of reducing tuberculosis in the mining industry.

Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) tell us something about that?

HON. MR. KELLEY: Up to the present time there has not been, but I would be glad indeed to have a talk with the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) and discuss this with him. We are enlarging our X-ray work this year to quite an extent, and I would be very glad to have an opportunity to discuss that with him.

MR. CARLIN: Thank you.

MR. GRUMMETT: On Vote 61, Items 15 and 18, Mr. Minister, the North Bay clinic rent and fuel is given at $250 in Item 15; I was wondering how you were able to get rent and fuel for the clinic at that rate.

Also in Item 18, rent and fuel for Timmins clinic is $1,000 and I was wondering about the difference.

HON. MR. KELLEY: The one is a Government-owned building and the other one we have to rent.

Votes 61 to 74 inclusive approved.

On Vote 75:

MR. NIXON: May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) with respect to Langstaff; is it the policy to carry this institution as a health hospital indefinitely?

HON. MR. KELLEY: Answering that question; what we are doing at the present time is, our engineers are now making a survey of Langstaff. We have certain ideas. The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) mentioned that 999 Queen Street West was not suitable for a mental hospital, and I think we would agree, as the building has been there I think for 102 years, and there should be changes made there.

We have not discussed any new set-up with the present mayor of Toronto, but we were in touch with ex-mayor Saunders on the subject, and it is quite possible something may be done whereby we will make a deal and we may have a very fine, up-to-date hospital at Langstaff. We are not certain about the water supply.

Votes 75 to 77 inclusive approved.

On Vote 78:

MR. GRUMMETT: On Vote 78, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) tell us the number of cases in New Toronto?

HON. MR. KELLEY: New Toronto? There are 1,177.

MR. GRUMMETT: No, I think that is 999 Queen Street West.

HON. MR. KELLEY: New Toronto? I am sorry; approximately 1,400 to 1,600.

MR. GRUMMETT: And Whitby?

HON. MR. KELLEY: Whitby, just a little more than that at Whitby.

Votes 78 to 80 inclusive approved.

On Vote 81:

MR. NIXON: How many does St. Thomas accommodate?

HON. MR. KELLEY: St. Thomas has about 1,200 at the present time. It is the only place where we have any room at all and we have been trying to get into St. Thomas the type of people who can get better. It is a very great source of satisfaction to know that mental illness is just another form of illness, and in at least 10 of our hospitals from 40 to 50 per cent. of the people get better each year. I think that all in this country who have friends in mental hospitals should realize it should not by any means be considered any disgrace to be in a mental hospital. It is just another form of illness, and I am satisfied that with maybe one or two exceptions every one of our superintendents are just like Dr. Montgomery who was referred to in the House. They are trying everything they can to get these people better and back to their homes.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we might refer back to Vote 79, "Ontario hospital school, Orillia." Orillia is a little different type of hospital. Approximately how many patients are there there?

HON. MR. KELLY: There are approximately 2,100 there today. There is more than there should be. We are hoping that possibly by the end of this year we shall have our new hospital at Smith Falls completed, which will relieve the situation.

We are taking into Orillia every urgent case brought to our attention. Some of them of course you feel you would like to take, but you cannot do so, and many of them are being kept, of course, in private homes. As I say, as soon as Smith Falls is completed, the situation will be very much better, and I hope that will be some time during this present year.

Votes 81 to 85 inclusive approved.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Mr. Speaker; congratulations to you, Sir, for the impartiality with which you are presiding over the deliberations of this Assembly.

It is always disarming for us when, with a broad smile on your face, you call an hon. member to order.

Of course, you no doubt understand and appreciate how hard it is for us in the Opposition, at times, to take scoldings from the Government side, without reacting to it.

We do appreciate your tolerance, and hope you will continue in your office as Speaker as long as the actual Government will be in power, this we hope not being too long.

Of course, I may add that of all hon. members sitting in the Opposition, in a new Parliament, your presence would always be welcome, as we do know you, as a perfect gentleman, typical of a generation of a very high character and kindness.

Now, Mr. Speaker, through you may I also congratulate the hon. Provincial Treasurer for the good mood with which he delivered his budget address. He painted so beautiful a picture of the past year, and of the new financial term, that one wonders if the Government now in power in this province has not achieved complete perfection?

I may say they have succeeded in speaking of increases in expenditures but not so well of increases in services. Had the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) announced certain tax reductions, instead of telling us that there would be no new taxation, the picture would have been brighter for the people of this province. Had the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) candidly admitted that his Government had in two short years imposed two new taxes, namely; the Corporation tax and the Gasoline tax, and had he also said that just a few days ago they had made provision to take over the amusement tax, which as the 3c. a gallon on gasoline was a wartime tax, his $25,000,000 sunshine surplus would have looked quite different.

But the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) once more managed to use enough bright colours to make a very attractive spot in the picture, overshadowing everything else in the picture which should not have been there and trying to overcome what should have been in which was missing.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will quote from the Prime Minister's most friendly newspaper the reaction to the Budget address, from an editorial of the Toronto Star of April 3rd:

"A Tremendous Surplus. Ontario in the fiscal year ended with March collected from the public more than $25,000,000 more than it needed to collect in order to strike an even balance. It is announced that there will be no new taxes. One would think not! It is also announced that Ontario is getting along splendidly without any Dominion - provincial agreement. On the other hand, Ontario lacks the social security benefits (state health insurance, etc.) which were at the very core of the original Dominion - provincial programme. Moreover, that programme was designed as an assistance by the "have" provinces to the "have not" provinces. And Ontario is essentially a "have" province.

"The increase of nearly $32,500,000 in current receipts in the year just ended over the forecast made a year ago is largely attributable to five sources of revenue. These accounted in the fiscal year 1947-8 for $161,300,000 out of total receipts of $199,353,000. And the increase in receipts from these five sources over the estimate accounted for $28,650,000 of the $32,416,000 increase in total revenues over the estimates. The five sources are as follows:

	Revenue Received	Increase over Estimate
Gas Tax.....	$46,800,000	$ 2,800,000
Motor Vehicles..	13,000,000	1,000,000
Liquor.....	34,000,000	7,600,000
Death Duties...	17,500,000	5,750,000
Corporation Tax	50,000,000	11,500,000
	$161,300,000	$28,650,000

"With provincial revenues in this condition, and no very substantial tax reductions in sight, why should almost every municipality in the province be struggling with an increased tax rate? It is true that the Government is estimating once more for only a small surplus in the year to come, but that trick no longer deceives the public. The Government could well afford to give the municipalities a greater share of the gasoline tax."

Of course, the Prime Minister may not agree that this quotation is from one of a friendly newspaper. So to bring him to a better mood, I shall quote a few extracts from a newspaper which does not always see eye to eye with the Premier. This is the Globe and Mail of April 3, 1948, an editorial entitled, "Not Without Blemish." I quote:

"As a fiscal document, the budget which Provincial Treasurer (Leslie Frost) presented to the Ontario Legislature yesterday fully warrants his elation with it. In many respects it is a most creditable document; in others almost astounding. In essence he reported:

"An actual surplus of $25,039,000 for the financial year just ended as against an anticipated surplus of $367,143—a questionable virtue; net ordinary revenues of $190,850,000 compared with ordinary expenditures of $165,811,000; a further increase in those expenditures for the current year of an estimated $11,702,000 and an anticipated surplus of $263,000 without any increase in taxation and only minor, if practical gestures, in the direction of reductions.

"It would be regarded as bad budgetting to have an unanticipated deficit of $25,000,000. An unexpected surplus of similar proportions is no more praiseworthy. Budgets are supposed to be an estimation and allocation of taxation to meet the requirements of specified expenditures. While Mr. Frost stated 'we have striven to accumulate (the surplus) with increased revenues over estimates,' that surplus was undeclared, and, in fact, would have been larger, had last year's estimated expenditures of $159,322,000 been adhered to."

We could very well say that this Government will be known as the auto-spending government of this province. The cost of administration is rising so fast that one is bewildered with increases in most of the departments.

Through you, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the patience of the House for few minutes, even if I have to bore the hon. members with a few figures. I have said that this government could be known as the auto-spending government and intend to prove it.

Mr. Speaker, I want to remind the hon. members that in most cases these figures are for administrative purposes only. Now, I may very well end this part of my remarks, by quoting from a Conservative critic, made in the House seven years ago, in 1941 by the then member for South York—Mr. Macaulay—from the Evening Telegram of March 18, 1941, headed "Not Economies, but taxes achieved Budget Surplus Macaulay tells Legislature."

"Conservative Critics says Hepburn Did 'Corrigan' on Promises to Cut Costs. Instead of reducing taxes and cutting cost of Government, as he promised, Premier Hepburn has done a 'Corrigan' Leopold Macaulay, member for South York, charged in the Ontario Legislature today, opening the Opposition's criticism of the budget. Corrigan started from New York for California, ending up in Ireland, and Premier Hepburn's policies have also got turned around, Mr. Macaulay said."

"Mr. Hepburn's surplus came from tax receipts in excess of estimates and not from Governmental economies, Mr. Macaulay insisted. No evidence existed of reduced cost of operations or economies. Only limit to a surplus would be the capacity of the people to pay more taxes. People were already taxed to the limit of endurance and coupled with Dominion taxes, he said, the province was being taxed beyond proper provincial limits."

This, Mr. Speaker, applies more this year than ever before and could be construed as follows—

"Corrigan started from New York for California, ending up in Ireland, and Premier Drew's policies have also got turned around."

Now, Mr. Speaker, we hear from time to time the Prime Minister of this province suggesting that Ottawa should lower the income tax. You know, Mr. Speaker, some men in public life seem to have very short memories and the Hon. the Prime Minister is very likely suffering from that. He who was clamoring for 6 long years that the Government in Ottawa was not doing its full share to help win the war. Now, this country is faced with a national debt of over $15,000,000,000, owing to the aid given in all forms to win the war and who will ever pay that back, if not by taxes.

Can you imagine a Conservative leader in the federal or provincial field, ever worrying about the low wage earner, paying a tax? This can only happen when it serves an immediate political purpose, and even at that they soon forget about it.

Why would the Prime Minister of this province not lower the gasoline tax? Why a 20 per cent. tax on amusement, if a $25,000,000 surplus really exists?

Why not put a stop to extravagance of all kinds in the administration, and why not give more to needy people?

These are questions they will not answer.

They will, of course, repeat that we have voted for the amusements tax bill. Yes we have, Mr. Speaker because we understand the need of assistance to hospitals and also the need for additional ones to be built, but even the Globe and Mail, the hon. Prime Minister's (Mr. Drew) pet feels the same way we did when an amendment was proposed by our leader on third reading:

"HOSPITAL TAX TOO HIGH

"The Ontario Government's bill to aid hospitals by allocating the proceeds of a 20 per cent. amusement tax was passed by the Legislature on Wednesday, with the support of both Liberals and C.C.F. The tax will not come into effect, however, until the Dominion Government vacates the field, which is expected to be in the near future. With the revenue from the tax, and an additional contribution from consolidated revenue, the Government proposes to establish a Hospital Aid Fund, from which will be drawn higher subsidies for public wards, and the capital grants for building hospitals.

"The measure of public support for the principle of larger public assistance to hospitals is revealed by the fact that though the Opposition failed in an effort to reduce the tax, it then voted with the Government on the third reading. We believe the Opposition's intent was well founded, if not wisely presented to the Government. Though it is essential that hospitals be given increased assistance, and that the load borne by municipalities be substantially lightened, the Government should also bear in mind the burdens of the taxpayer."

With this, the Government cannot blame us, for having for once at least met the Globe and Mail's viewpoint. Mr. Speaker, the House will notice that I am not criticizing the amounts in the estimates, for services; it is the ever-growing administrative costs that I have pointed to.

As I have stated last year, this administration is not only duplicating but triplicating offices and employees. It may very well be that friends of the Government want to find a haven in case of a defeat at the next election. But in the meantime, who is paying the bills, if not the taxpayers, and the day of reckoning will come.

I would now like to deal with another waste of money, which to my mind will have to be answered some time. This is the amount spent and to be spent on immigration or London House, for the 1948-49 fiscal year, over half a million dollars on that alone. This is from the Globe and Mail of April 3: "$503,760 Set Aside For Government's Immigration Plan." Not that I would be opposed to immigration, for people who willingly want to immigrate here. But to spend that much money in luring people to come here, when we ourselves have unemployment in our country is not a sound policy, and especially from a country where the Government is in dire need of every labour hand to cope with recovery not only economically, but even as a nation.

The whole Drew immigration scheme is becoming more and more a grandiose farce, when one considers the shortage of housing accommodation and also the fact that it was intended to bring in farm hands, and now those coming are skilled labourers, and others of the white collar type.

Let alone criticizing the expenditure of money, I quote from the Toronto Star of February 4:

"WHY EVICT LOCAL FOLK TO HOUSE NEWCOMERS? BLACKWELL IS ASKED.

"Are Torontonians being turned out of their homes to make room for people who come here from England?" Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell was asked last night by Mrs. Ena McKeown at a meeting of the Eglington Riding Women's Progressive Conservative Association. 'Where does the Government get homes for these people?' 'They find accommodation in the open market,' Mr. Blackwell replied.

"Practically all questions in the question and answer period of the attorney-general's address, as guest speaker for the women of his riding, concerned the Drew Government's air immigration scheme.

"Mrs. McKeown emphasized that there was no animus in her questions. She herself had come originally from the Old Country, she said, and liked Toronto, and she had been a Conservative all her life.

"When the Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) explained that the air immigrants are told exactly about the housing shortage before they come, Mrs. McKeown still asked: 'But where are they getting houses. Where does the Government expect people to get houses, and yet they are bringing other people in.'

"She said some of these people are experiencing real hardships. 'I had one of the boys in my own home. He and three others came out in November and he told me that the four boys at Christmas time were having only one meal a day and one had to sell his coat for $5 in order to get enough to live. But they did get work later on.'

"You cannot expect from now on that you will be able to get many people from Great Britain who will work on Ontario or western farms. What you can expect to get from Britain are skilled artisans whose qualifications will make an immediate contribution with their skills.

"The people who are brought over here by the air immigration scheme are highly selected people with certain skills which will make such a contribution. I know our own department of agriculture believes that the best type of immigrant for establishment on the land is the immigrant from Holland."

I have another quotation from a weekly bulletin:

"Welcome to Ontario. In a few hours you will be in your new home, Ontario. I want to say a sincere word of welcome, and then tell you briefly what you may expect when you land at Malton Airport, Ontario. First of all, your application forms have arrived ahead of you. The Immigration Branch knows all about you and is waiting to help you. The Ontario Government Air Plan is designed to give you every assistance. I do hope you have a really pleasant time on this journey which is $\frac{1}{8}$ around the world. Happy travelling! Evelyn Brownell. (Mrs. E. W. Brownell). Director."

"The relax. You will go into a waiting room where a representative of the Ontario Government will give you a few helpful hints on your establishment as a citizen of Ontario. He will listen to any inquiries, and guarantees to answer them all. You'll enjoy talking to him while you smoke one of his cigarettes and eat some of his fruit. Yes, it's true, he supplies you with both. So relax and enjoy yourself."

Here is another one, Mr. Speaker, which I was very much surprised to read. It is in relation to "customs" and it says:

"Luggage checked here. You will like our Canadian customs men. That ought to make everybody feel better."

I am surprised at that, because I would have thought the Provincial Government would have said the customs men are federal employees, and they should not trust them.

MR. MEINZINGER: They are accustomed to that.

MR. HABEL: There are a number of these, but I will not weary the House by reading any more. However, they are very interesting.

MR. MEINZINGER: Yes, it is.

MR. HABEL: Here is another one:

"Drew tells them to leave, Churchill tells them to stay—"

MR. MEINZINGER: Gesundheit.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. HABEL:

"How's a Briton to know
The true Tory way?"

Mr. Speaker, there are one or two departments I want to dwell on a bit. My riding being half urban and half rural, different problems present themselves. One in particular interests the whole of my riding, and that is highways.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) may say, "Hold on, we have spent a lot of money in your riding since two years." Yes, you have, Mr. Minister (Mr. Doucett) spent quite a bit on No. 11 King's Highway, but what a mess it was in. I did warn the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) about it last year, and I remember him saying, "We have saved a lot of money in doing that work in the winter."

I have here the Public Accounts ending March, 1947, and here is the amount paid to that date—$554,131.82—and if the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) had even tried to come in the Kapuskasing and Hearst areas last year from April to August, he would have been mobbed; for the mess the road was in can only be best described by the following articles appearing in the Northern Citizen of July 18, 1947:

"TOURIST HITS ROCK NEAR KAP" and a further article in the same paper:

"BREWERY TRUCK BURNS ON ROAD

"The Elliott Cartage truck which transports beer between Kapuskasing and Hearst turned on its side and was almost completely destroyed by fire Tuesday evening while returning loaded with empties from Hearst.

"Edward Anderson, driver, said that the vehicle overturned when he tried to pull out of loose sand at the edge of the road. The driver's shoulder was wrenched as he leaped from the truck to safety."

The funniest spectacles could be seen on that road for many months.

First of all, the department had to hire bulldozers to clear the middle of the road of that 12-inch layer of sand put on during the winter. Most of that sand was thus banked along the highway and quite often one would have thought he was driving through a snow-plowed road. A great deal of that sand had been pushed to the ditch and water was running in the middle of the road instead of following the ditch.

Mr. Speaker, enough money was spent above and over what I have already mentioned, to build a paved highway. And yet, what condition will it be in, in a week or so, and maybe, by now? No one would dare say. That road from Cochrane to Hearst suffered lack of upkeep from 1943 to 1946, three long years. It was a good road, gravel road if you want. But until 1944 that stretch from Cochrane to Hearst was always considered as the best gravel road of all gravel roads up north. Now, the department is paying a dear price for its negligence from the fall of 1943 to the late date in December, 1946, and, of course, the travelling public is suffering more than the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) because of this situation. I may not be an engineer, but this is the first time I have ever heard of raising an existing road before ditching. The whole matter, in fact, is that this road needs ditching and needs it badly. Mr. hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), this is what ought to be done first of all if you want the traffic to go over that road this summer.

There will be very dangerous bridges, also, which need repairs.

Another matter which pertains to the district I represent, is the settler's roads and secondary roads or development roads as they are now called.

I may say also that the statute labour does not work very advantageously in a district like North Cochrane, where settlers are rather widely scattered. Ways and means should be found to help those located in areas that are thinly populated. After all, the settlers are the backbone of a country, and it was the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) who said in his address the other day, and I quote:

"The resounding blows of pioneer axes are not too far removed from any of us. We are still one with our pioneer forefathers. We are a very young country with a fine record of achievement, and with very brilliant prospects."

So, Mr. Speaker, I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) to hear, with larger generosity, the request for assistance for that district for development roads and settlers' roads.

There is also—I was informed just a few days ago—a bad situation developing east of Cochrane, on the Abitibi River, where, for two years already a gang has been working to build a scow to replace the old one. The old one, I understand, is not of use any more, and the new one is not ready, so all those living east of that river, settlers from Kennedy-Brower, Dunning and Norembega, cannot travel to Cochrane. It would be well for your department to see about it.

I might say, at this time, to my hon. friend, the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), who was saying a few weeks ago that the Liberals had not done much in road work up north, that it was a Liberal government that improved the North Bay-Temagami road. It was the Liberal Government which paved the road from New Liskeard to Swastika. It was the same Government that built concrete bridges between Cochrane and Hearst and also one of the finest steel bridges of the whole province on the Ground Hog River at Fauquier on No. 11 highway. After all, I will admit they did not do everything but certainly my hon. friend for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) will admit that great progress had been made, and it was only on account of the war that such progress slowed down.

I was forgetting about the Hearst-Long Lac link on No. 11 highway, the last stretch which opened a real Trans-Canada highway. That, too, was done by the Liberal administration.

Mr. Speaker, there was also the Department of Lands and Forests. I do not want to be harsh with the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott), but I do think that more consideration should be given to the enforcement of the Pulpwood Settlers' Act enacted in 1937 as to the price paid to settlers for pulpwood and scaling. I am telling this House that circumstances such as those prevailing in the Haggart, Alexandria, Shackleton and Machin Townships are detrimental to settlers and to the Crown. In 1942 I had succeeded in obtaining for the settlers in these townships certain rights for cutting on Crown lots. This has been taken away from them and those lots given back to the Abitibi Pulp and Paper Company Limited. This was very unfair and detrimental to those settlers. The same thing prevailed in Williamson Township; there, the lots were licensed to political friends; this was in 1943 and 1944. I honestly believe that the department could very well be more lenient in regard to clearances. After all, when a farmer or settler is handicapped by sickness or other misfortune, the officers should use more discretion and the officials in the department here at Toronto should be more willing to accept recommendations put forth by lot inspectors or scalers.

As to welfare, may I once more ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) to see that proper fuel cheques or vouchers be issued on time for mother's allowance recipients. One must understand the hardship in certain cases when cold weather arrives. The fall and winter are long seasons up north and due consideration should be given for earlier issuances of cheques or vouchers for fuel needs.

I might also stress once more my viewpoint that local boards could well be dispensed with. After all, you have inspectors and should rely on them. These local boards are just a very unnecessary delay for applicants. I hope that the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) will understand my feelings on that matter. Then, for anyone who knows the conditions under which recipients of mothers' allowances and old age pensions have to get along in a district like ours, I hope that the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) will see fit to give the full increase in most cases.

Now, before concluding, may I say, Mr. Speaker, as one who truly believes in democracy, I am often worried about the Communist ideology, and everyone in this House should know by now where I stand. I will continue as best I can to oppose their philosophy anywhere and everywhere. As to the C.C.F., at least a few of them know that I am not one who would lose faith in private initiative and private enterprise. I am for proper reforms at proper times, step by step, so as not to upset the economy of the country. I do not like the way these gentlemen would cure all ills by putting all citizens of this province in the straightjacket of Socialism; but one thing that does worry me Mr. Speaker, is the politicians who, for personal gain, are always ready to use anything and everything to keep public opinion away from passing judgment on their own acts and omissions.

I honestly believe, Mr. Speaker, that such politicians are doing more for the disappearance of true democracy than all the "isms" together. I want to illustrate a few things which will prove my submissions. Is there anything worse to undermine the people's confidence towards constitutional authorities than a suspicious mind which is always finding fault with others and never ready to compromise? This is exactly what is taking place in Ontario and Quebec today.

The hon. Prime Minister of this province (Mr. Drew) has taken to task the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, and the hon. Prime Minister of Quebec (Mr.

Duplessis) has taken to task the Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent, two leading men in the public life of this country and I venture to say that they are doing it just for personal political gains. They themselves do not even believe all they are saying about these men.

MR. MACLEOD: You are not attacking the Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent?

MR. HABEL: No, I say Mr. Duplessis is. I will read that paragraph over again.

The hon. Prime Minister of this province (Mr. Drew) has taken to task the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, and the hon. Prime Minister of Quebec (Mr. Duplessis) has taken to task the Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent, two leading men in the public life of this country and I venture to say that they are doing it just for personal political gains. They themselves do not even believe all they are saying about these men.

Just a few more words; we find in the Hansard of this House references in regard to men who do not share the hon. Prime Minister's (Mr. Drew) political views:

Classic utterances from the lips of Ontario's Premier during the past few weeks:

1. Referring to the publisher of Canada's most successful daily paper—"His dishonesty is only equalled by his hypocrisy; he is an evil old man."
2. Referring to Canada's Minister of Finance—"He talks utter tripe."
3. Referring to Canada's Prime Minister—"What he says is perfect nonsense."
4. Again referring to the Prime Minister—"Prime Minister King is simply piling falsehood on falsehood."
5. Referring to the Secretary of State for External Affairs—"We can't rely on any statement even in writing."
6. Referring to a statement by the Minister of Trade and Commerce—"Dishonest and hypocritical."

These are all words used by the hon. Prime Minister of this province (Mr. Drew). Does such an attitude inspire confidence in men in public life? I doubt it very much.

Then hon. Mr. Duplessis in Quebec is accusing the Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent of being a Communist. Both are using language far worse than that used by preachers of Communism or Socialism, and I will show how low such selfish politicians can stoop.

I hold in my hand ads published by hon. Mr. Duplessis' political organization. These clippings are published by the Union Nationale, which is the party of hon. Mr. Duplessis with whom our hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is walking arm in arm.

MR. MEINZINGER: I would not say that. I object.

MR. HABEL: Here is the heading, and, Mr. Speaker, may I ask you to request the hon. member for North Waterloo (Mr. Meinzinger) to be quiet?

MR. MEINZINGER: You made a mis-statement. I object.

MR. HABEL: Mr. Speaker,—

MR. MEINZINGER: He said the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is walking arm in arm with hon. Mr. Duplessis. He is not. The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is right here in the building. He is not arm in arm with hon. Mr. Duplessis. I know what I am talking about.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I say to the hon. member for Cochrane North (Mr. Habel) that one of the rules of the House is that he should not read his speech. If he continues to read clippings we will be here a long time. However, go ahead.

MR. HABEL: Here is a heading, and this is an advertisement paid for by the Union Nationale of Quebec:

"The Liberals are giving to foreigners. Duplessis is giving to his province. Duplessis has given to municipalities $500,000 in three years."

It goes on as follows:

"While Duplessis is giving to his province, the Liberals are giving gifts by the billion to foreigners."

I wonder if the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) liked that kind of statement?

AN HON. MEMBER: What has that to do with Ontario?

MR. MEINZINGER: That is right.

MR. HABEL: There is another one here, there are some 50 of them.

AN HON. MEMBER: Read all of them.

MR. HABEL: That is the way, Mr. Speaker, they are using their offices to undermine confidence in the Federal Government.

AN HON. MEMBER: You are talking about your friends. Why not talk about Ontario?

MR. HABEL: Now, both are playing on provincial autonomy, claiming that Ottawa wants to centralize. Is it not rather funny that only yesterday, this House accepted a labour code to be enacted by Ottawa? And what an about face the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has done since 1941. I remember when he used to get up here and say, "we are overgoverned" and "we should stop duplicating Ottawa" and what not. Let us see what he thought of centralization in 1941.

I will read now from a clipping from the Halifax Herald, dated April 25, 1941. Here are Mr. Drew's own words:

"Remedying Canada's system of 'overgovernment' by more centralization of authority and attention to post-war employment problems were urged by Lieut. Col. George A. Drew, K.C., soldier, writer and Leader of the Ontario Opposition, in an address to the Commercial Club at Halifax yesterday.

"Describing Canada's 'overgovernment' as the 'most colossal and incompetent system in the world,' Colonel Drew said: 'I defy anyone that has any personal contact with our system of government in Canada to say that it is not impeding us from doing many things that should be done to increase Canada's strength in her war effort.'"

"He declared his consciousness of local rights of provinces, but held that preservation of such traditions did not justify the maintenance of 10 separate governments in the nation.

"Colonel Drew related what he termed some of the disadvantages of the present system, recounting duplication of services and other features he said were detrimental to efficient national administration.

"What we need greatly is to look at government from a business viewpoint,' he said, paralleling methods that a private business with a head office and 9 branch plants would employ to promote more efficiency.

"He said, rights and privileges of provinces must be preserved by 'some measure of local autonomy' but sound business principles could be applied to solve the question of 'overgovernment.'

"Nations could become economically and spiritually bankrupt unless a solution could be found to essentially national problems, the speaker went on. Preservation of a nation's integrity must come from a strong centralization feeling, Colonel Drew continued.

"Canada's main problem was its decentralized governmental system, and the speaker declared, solution to that problem would insure continuance of the national structure."

MR. MEINZINGER: Did you ever read history?

MR. HABEL: I would say, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger) would read history a little more he would have sounder judgment than he has now.

MR. MEINZINGER: Don't bring me into this.

MR. HABEL: If more powers are good to win a war, surely it should be as good as to give that new order the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) was so often talking about, and greater co-operation instead of personal bickering should prevail. That would help the fight against ideologies such as Socialism and Communism—

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): And rheumatism.

MR. HABEL: Yes, rheumatism as well. Let us be honest. Repeating my belief, I say if we want democracy and Christianity to survive, let us act as Christians and democrats.

Now, Mr. Speaker, whoever dares warn the Government about such growing expenditures is rebuked by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew): "He who has faith in this great province need not be afraid of the future."

Mr. Speaker, I would like to end my speech by quoting the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett). I am quoting from the Financial Post.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): What is the name of the paper?

MR. HABEL:

"Road Subsidies at Peak: Road subsidies had practically reached saturation point, Highways Minister George Doucett warned municipalities, counselling a programme of 'economy and belt-tightening'. The 1947 subsidy figure of $15.7 millions was almost double that of the year before; more than four times the 1942 total: 'that is about as far as we are prepared to go. Manufacturing activities, commercial transactions, agricultural prosperity, full employment and ample governmental revenue attain their peaks, but experience shows there are always valleys intervening. We should be giving serious thought to ensure that these valleys do not become too deep. I am not a pessimist. But until the international skies brighten, until the post-war problems of the world have come much closer to solution, the watchword should be caution.’”

And I would tell hon. members their watchword should be “caution.”

Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. J. F. EDWARDS (Perth): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege on this 8th day of April to rise and deliver what will be designated my maiden speech in this Chamber. I would first like to extend my best wishes to you in your honoured position as Speaker of this House. As you have been told before, your cheery countenance and fairness have more than once quieted frayed tempers and restored dignity to the Legislature.

I would further like to extend my best wishes to all hon. members of this House, elected representatives of their respective ridings. Association with each and every hon. member has been a great experience and pleasure.

Being my initial speech in the House, Mr. Speaker, I trust I may have the indulgence of the House while I speak for a short time about the grand old county I represent; Perth County of Western Ontario. I deem it a duty thus to do.

Perth County has both rural and urban population, its county city being Stratford—approximately one-third of the county electorate. Its citizens—good people—are from pioneer families and settlers under the old Canada Company, originating from England, Ireland, Scotland, supplemented by good German and Dutch stock—hardy people—thrifty, industrious, honest and a will to work. Many of its farm homes have been in the family for over a century.

Those in Stratford and the towns play their part in many and varied industries—own their own homes in the majority of cases. Factories manufacture furniture, textiles, cement, flour, and numerous other items.

Railways play an important place in the county. Large repair shops of the Canadian National Railways are situated in Stratford as well as it being a divisional point. Palmerston, my home town, is another railway terminal.

In World Wars I and II the Perth Regiment, headquarters at Stratford, left its mark honourably on the pages of history in the service of the King and Country as well as many serving with distinction in the air and on the seas.

The county consists of 10 townships; three towns, Mitchell, Milverton, Listowel; one separated town, St. Marys; and the City of Stratford, and for provincial electoral purposes, the Town of Palmerston.

In 1941 the urban population was 27,114 and the rural population was 22,580, of which the farm population was 19,013, a total county population of 49,694.

A few facts regarding agriculture in Perth County would be very enlightening to this House.

According to the Decennial Census of 1941, Perth County had 4,900 farms, being exceeded in this respect by 10 other counties out of a total of 54 counties and districts.

The area in farms is 515,465 acres, of which 450,540 acres are improved land. Prospect Hill to Teviotdale is approximately 70 miles.

The total value of farm lands, buildings, livestock, implements and machinery in Perth County in 1941 was $38,856,600. Our county ranked seventh in this respect. I would and could name them but will refrain and go on with some figures to demonstrate where the county stands in agricultural production. In 1947 the county produced 5,319,012 pounds of creamery butter and was only exceeded by the county represented by the hon. member for Bruce (Mr. Johnstone) who only recently in this House in his own interesting manner gave the story of their accomplishments.

The same year 3,198,900 pounds of cheese were produced, the county being the third largest producing in South Western Ontario. In 1946 the championship for the world in quality was taken by a cheesemaker from the county.

In 1947 Perth had 321,200 acres of field crops and was exceeded by only 4 other counties; Grey, Kent, Huron and Bruce. The value of the field crop production in this same year was $9,510,000, and again was only exceeded by 4 other counties, viz., Kent, Simcoe, Grey and Bruce.

At June 1, 1947, Perth County had 41,674 milk cows on farms and was exceeded by only 6 counties, namely, Oxford, Middlesex, Grey, Hastings, Simcoe and Carleton, in the order named.

At the same date Perth had 16,000 horses ranking seventh among the counties and districts of the province. Each year a horse show—one of the best—is held in Stratford in June, and a similar event in Listowel in the fall. Entries from all over the province compete at both these centres.

At this same date, June 1, 1947, Perth had 126,873 swine on land, ranking first in the province.

Perth County ranked first in the number of hog carcasses graded in the year 1946 with a total of 134,907, of which 58,309 graded A and 65,000 graded B. In 1947 Perth had 136,330 hog carcasses graded B—the percentage grading both A and B was 90 per cent.

Perth County farmers had 1,070,100 hens and chickens on hand at June 1, 1947 and was exceeded only by Lambton, Huron, Kent, Lincoln, Wellington and Essex, as named.

We have in the Township of Elma in the Village of Atwood the Roe Poultry Farms and Mill which has practically made the poultry business what it is today through the resourcefulness and scientific approach to the whole industry by Dr. Elwood Roe who rates as a leading authority in all America.

Eggs from this farm and poultry from Perth County supply the largest hotels and restaurants in this province.

The county placed eighth in marketings in 1946, the total being 21,174 in number.

I would also like to mention that agriculture in the County of Perth has been recognized years ago in the fact that the first Minister of Agriculture in this province was a former member of the county, in the person of Hon. Nelson Monteith who assumed that office in 1905. Reforestation started then as his promotion and possibly had it been proceeded with sooner and at an increased pace since, some of the disastrous flood damage incurred this year in the County of Perth would have been lessened, if not prevented entirely.

Also, it is interesting and pleasing to note that the present Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Clifford D. Graham, while he may at one time have served in the County of Peel in the representative office, was the efficient agricultural representative in Perth County from 1929 to 1936. When his ability and qualifications were recognized by the hon. Minister of Agriculture of the government of the day, Hon. Duncan Marshall, he was transferred to the department here, at that time.

Prior to 1936 Junior Clubs were successfully formed and have been in operation in our county ever since; being not only the most concentrated but completely organized county in the province.

The County of Perth is now served by Mr. R. E. White most effectively. Up till last year he was ably assisted by Mr. George McLaughlin of Oshawa, who, unfortunately, had to resign owing to the sudden death of his father and return home to manage the McLaughlin farms.

I expect the estimates presented by the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) will allow the appointment of an assistant in Perth County to carry on and keep up the good work.

Calf clubs, potato and grain clubs also play an educational part in the life of the agriculturist of our county.

A leadership training school for Juniors was held last year in Palmerston under the leadership of Mr. Hilliard of the Junior Extension Branch and Miss Eadie of the Women's Institute Branch.

It is pleasing to note that a baby beef raised by a Junior Farmer from Hibbert Township in Perth County was the first winner at the Royal Winter Fair of the King's Guinea Prize in 1946.

The Champion Holstein Cow for production in pounds of milk for 1947 came to Perth County and is owned by Mr. Dave Stevens of St. Marys.

No doubt surprising to many, within fifteen miles of Stratford one can see over 40 mink farms—some pelting as many as 1,500 in a year—just imagine the value of this branch of farming alone.

The people and the farmers of Ontario have real confidence in the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) and those in charge of the various departments.

Before I go any longer, I submit not only is it pleasing in view of past performance of the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) to speak on this budget, but most acceptable to the electors of this province. I would like to deal with some other departments and possibly follow through in order.

Department of the Attorney-General; we applaud the high standard and increased efficiency of the law enforcement branch—the Provincial Police and their new two-way radio communication hook-up. Perth County centre will be set up in Stratford, assuring the county and the district of adequate police protection.

Department of Education; the estimates of this department under the responsible Minister (Mr. Drew) surely demonstrate the sincerity and honest endeavour of the Government to relieve the taxpayer of the increasing cost of an improved educational system.

I would like to put on the records the following to demonstrate more clearly the assistance given as promised. Grants were as follows:

Public	1944	1947
Stratford.....	$7,716.58	$48,319.55

Separate	1944	1947

St. Marys	3,023.57	48,838.19
Totals, including Townships.....	$68,112.25	$427,786.16

The services extended by the department in all its branches, including musical festivals under the leadership of Mr. Roy Fenwick, are most valuable to those availing themselves of the services.

There is also situated in Stratford, so as to serve the western peninsula, the Stratford Normal School, under the principalship of Dr. H. Bowers, which has made a great contribution to the development of education in this province.

Department of Health; the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) is to be congratulated on the policy and plans for assistance and erection of more hospitals in the province. It is my humble opinion that not only should each county have its medical centre and large unit as planned for the city of Stratford, but each urban municipality should have at least a 30-bed hospital to serve itself and neighbouring vicinity. Necessity and modern treatment demand it and, sooner or later, the various health plans—Blue Cross, Mutual Health, etc., require the same. In fact, every hospital in the county right now is overcrowded, even to using the halls in some instances.

I would also urge the department to ever promote the cancer research and follow through with full support of the endeavour to relieve sufferers from arthritis and rheumatism.

Regarding polio; there are 3 or 4 polio treatment centres which operate in association with the Provincial Department of Health. It has been suggested before today by many that centres should be added and staffs improved by addition of full-time doctors, physiotherapists and nurses specially trained. I would like to read into the minutes the following which appeared in the Globe and Mail and was reprinted in the Stratford Beacon Herald, February 16, 1948:

“At the time of year when polio is most prevalent and particularly the years when polio patients reach epidemic numbers, the general public becomes acutely conscious of this disease.

“Patients are rushed to general hospitals, where emergency wards are set up. Nurses are called in to “pack,” and harried doctors and physiotherapists give the treatments which endeavour to restore normal function to these patients. The treatments are long and require expensive equipment and patience, and in most hospitals the personnel do this work in addition to their regular duties.

“We have sanitariums where tuberculosis, mental cases, nervous disorders are treated. Cancer clinics are set up throughout Canada, but as yet no centre has been established where poliomyelitis is treated, although each year it takes its toll of our young people.

“The late President Roosevelt made the United States polio-conscious. The Warm Springs Foundation was erected at his instigation, and polio research is aided by the ‘March of Dimes.’ The Kenny Institute has also played its part in the betterment of treatments used.

“If we of Ontario would realize that we need a polio centre and the Government, service clubs and individuals unite in the effort to obtain one, an institution could be founded where patients could be treated in the initial stages with facilities also to aid the long period of recuperation. Each case is different, individual groups of muscles are affected and the treatment is difficult and complicated.

“In an institution where doctors, nurses and physiotherapists specialized only in polio, all that is best of the known treatments could be assimilated and used, whereas at the present, patients in the majority of cases are treated in overcrowded institutions by overworked people who give treatments, not as a specialized vocation, but in addition to the work which already makes a full day.”

Any relief to those who have to be hospitalized for any reason at any place must be assured and with the best treatment. The Government are to be definitely praised for their announcement of increased aid for hospitals.

Department of highways and Public Works; Perth county is served by provincial highways Nos. 7, 19, 23, and 86. Much resurfacing, which we trust will be taken care of in due time, is required to put parts of each in condition for travel. The department as well as the county officials deserve great credit for the splendid conditions of the roads during the snow period. The value of improved equipment purchased by the department definitely demonstrates the foresight and businesslike management of the department under the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett).

However, if I may, I would like to plead for more assistance to be made available for separated towns and cities in respect to the cost of upkeep and repairs of highways in their limits.

St. Marys is one of the separated towns, and I believe there is one in your riding, Smiths Falls. Others are Brockville, Gananoque, Ingersoll, Prescott and Trenton.

In the case of St. Marys, they have built during the past 70 and plus years, three miles of highway on No. 7, right through the town. They have paid and maintained it themselves. I am sure they would gladly donate it to this or any other government if they would accept and, on the other hand, I do not feel they are expecting too much when they ask for more assistance than would be forthcoming under the 1947 Highway Improvement Act.

The city of Stratford has over five miles of main highway within its limits. Particularly the approaches any way you want to drive into the city of Stratford, are in need of widening, and many parts complete renewal. Last year the 50 per cent. subsidy to the city of Stratford amounted to $14,008.97. Ten times this amount would even be peanuts to the sum essential to bring these main arteries to reasonable condition.

I submit, Mr. Minister, the appeal to your associates in the Cabinet to further consider a different break in sharing costs in view of sums paid in these points and the vicinity they serve in the form of licences and gasoline tax.

In your capacity as Minister of Public Works, I would submit the advisability in the not too distant future of securing or building provincial building in the city of Stratford to house the various branches of Government serving the county. It would facilitate greater convenience to all concerned, and as to the cost, would eventually prove its merit as a saving.

Department of Lands and Forests: Perth County is ably served by two game overseers who are doing a particularly good job. I believe they are getting exceptionally satisfactory results through their publicity efforts in connection with schools and clubs interested in hunting and fishing as well as service clubs.

Department of Labour: While our county holds high place in the agriculture field, I would like to say on behalf of those belonging to organized labour in our midst, for the past 15 years both on the part of employee and employer there has been very little trouble. In other words, labour and employers in the city of Stratford and our towns of the county have the common sense and ability to go along doing a job and securing reasonable reward for their services.

The province should be grateful to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) for his able administration and application of the labour laws with the conciliation services available to be used for and in the interest of the workers of this province.

Other items in the budget I would like to touch on include the Welfare Department—who, I am sure, are endeavouring to do a real service to those who require assistance in their later years (capable inspectors, etc.). We would hope that the time might soon be at hand to increase the amount due, forget the means test and, if necessary, take the lead of the provinces in setting up a contributory pension plan for each and every person from 16 up or when they become self-supporting. Thus take any sting out of the pension and assurance they should get a full pension.

Reform Institutions: The genial Minister, hon. Mr. Dunbar, is striving to make for the reclamation of numbers of the younger, might I say, victims, who, during the busy years of war and post-war, were denied an opportunity and training to fit themselves to respectively take their place in society.

In closing, and I trust I haven't bored the House to date in my contributions to the budget remarks, I would like to congratulate this Government and its responsible Ministers on their universally approved hydro conversion and expansion programme. I do hope the farmers of Perth County—some of them having filed applications over two years ago, will soon be able to be supplied and equipped to maintain and increase their production so as to enable this democratic province to play her full part in helping to feed and reclaim so many disillusioned in other lands beyond the seas.

The Government's announcement of its programme of assisting expansion in the line of crippled children's camps such as was opened my Premier Drew at Woodeden some time ago is very commendable as well as the efforts of those fine citizens throughout the province who back and support the Crippled Children's Society, not only directly but through service clubs to which they are affiliated.

My final remarks have to do with housing and cost of living which apparently are a problem wherever you go. The legislation on the Municipal Department enabling utilities to provide increased services is commendable, and the Act, No. 125, assisting the financing of new projects through corporations introduced by the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) should be conducive to increased housing being made available. Only Tuesday of this week the council of the city of Stratford approved passage of a by-law enabling the construction of 100 houses through Central Mortgage and Housing Corporations. Other houses are in varying degrees of completion under Wartime Housing in Palmerston and Listowel.

As to prices, I submit there would be less cause for kicks if each and every one of us were in full agreement with the old-time fair trade practices. There must still be such a thing as a fair profit and a reasonable return for services. They are essential.

I wish Government policy, federally and provincially, would, as a safeguard, set a floor price for primary and agriculture products as, regardless of where we, the people, live, or how, our future is contingent on the success of each other.

Our firm resolve should be to protect against any recurrence of the days of the thirties.

Our province in this fair Dominion is the best spot in the world. Let us work in harmony to build it up—by our policies and our living conditions prove to the world that our system—the Democratic system—can best serve the needs of all mankind.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): I presume, Mr. Speaker, it is the intention to go on, although it is 11 o'clock?

MR. SPEAKER: As far as I know.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, as it is well known to all the hon. members of the House, the rules under which we operate designate the budget as one of the subjects on which we are afforded very wide latitude. If I were a clergyman I would probably choose as a title of what I am about to say "The world the flesh, and the desert." But since the hour is so late I think I had probably better eliminate the world and confine myself to the latter two.

First of all, I want to compliment the chief financial critic of the Opposition, my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Nixon) on the very able criticism put forward by him a few days ago. I have known my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) only since 1944. I have heard him on many occasions during that period, and I must say that I felt it was the ablest effort he has made during the period that I have been in the House. I thought that he had his finger on most of the main weaknesses in the budget, and I noted that, on several occasions, his chief adversary squirmed a bit as he unfolded his case.

I should like to, even in his absence, compliment the chief financial critic of the C.C.F., the hon. member from Temiskaming (Mr. C. H. Taylor) and to include also the hon. member from Kingston (Mr. Stewart), who is not in the House tonight, who has made very few speeches in the House. I believe he has the record of having made the shortest speech that was made in the House up until the time he spoke a few days ago, and all of us who heard him then were glad that we had an opportunity to hear him make more extended remarks. Now, my Highland friend from Glengarry (Mr. MacGillivray), is unfortunately absent from the House. I had some things to say to him in reply to what he had to say in his speech the other night. Since he is not in his seat, I will refer to only one thing. He confessed in the middle of his speech that the speech was rather badly typed and that he had to stay pretty close to his manuscript in order to follow it. Then when he got just about towards the end, he referred to myself as an example of what he called "satanic suavity." Well, I am quite sure having regard to the difficulty that he had in following the manuscript, that the line must have been somehow transposed and that the term "satanic suavity" was really intended for the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Hon. Mr. Frost) and not for me, because I do not think it could have been in my direction.

While I am on preliminaries, I had intended to say something about the great event of some 10 days ago which recalled the great event of some 2,000 years ago on the road to Damascus, when a spectacular conversion took place and a man decided that he was going to move in another direction. Well, apparently the hon. member from Waterloo (Mr. Meinzinger) had a spectacular conversion. He walked the modern Damascus Road with all its attendant temptations, and reached a state of mind where he mistook darkness for the light and decided to cast his line in the direction of the Government benches. But what he had to say seemed to fall on deaf ears, the welcome sign was not out. He stood up a few days later and, like a good prodigal son, begged the father of the group on the other side to give him his blessing, but the blessing was not forthcoming. After these many days, the hon. member from North Waterloo (Mr. Meinzinger) is still on this side of the House and he must be content to say in the words of a current Broadway popular song, "If I can't be near the girl I love, I'll love the girl I'm near." He is still with us—with us but not of us. Let us hope that the day is not far distant when the fatted calf will be killed and the Tory robes are on his shoulders, and he becomes a full-fledged hon. member of the company across the way.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in the course of his remarks in the House a few days ago, the hon. Minister for Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Kennedy) said a very interesting thing. He said "nothing is impossible," and he went on to make the observation that when the first settlers in this province saw Niagara Falls, it never dawned on them that the power from those falls would one day drive mighty engines in the Province of Ontario and that that power would illuminate the thoroughfares of great modern cities. When the Hon. Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Kennedy) spoke that way I could not help but recall an experience I had about 30 years ago down in Nova Scotia when the first radio set came in and we put those ear-phones on and were amazed when we heard sounds. When some of the farmers in the part of Cape Breton Island, where I was born, heard about this new gadget they, of course, expressed amazement, and they went to extremes in prophesying what this might lead to. My old uncle said: "You know, if this keeps on, it won't be very long before we will be able to sit in our barns at Blackbrook, and milk cows in the City of Jerusalem.

MR. J. MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): You were left holding the bag.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, that did sound a bit fantastic and yet I lived to see the day. . . .

MR. MEINZINGER: You see the light.

MR. MACLEOD: I lived to see the day when it is possible to sit in an office suite in a skyscraper building on Bay and King Streets in Toronto and milk the people of Northern Ontario, or any other part of Canada.

MR. MEINZINGER: That is not North Waterloo.

MR. MACLEOD: And the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Hon. Mr. Frost) is able to sit in his office down the hall and, under legislation passed a few days ago, literally milk everybody that goes to a movie-show or dance or hockey game in the Province of Ontario to the tune of 20 per cent. The old uncle really was pretty much "on the beam" in forecasting the great events which would occur in the future. I may say, since I am referring to the amusement tax, that unlike my hon. friends to my right and in front of me—

MR. MEINZINGER: Do not include me, sir.

MR. MACLEOD: We are not "taken in" by the ingenuity of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost); my colleague and I have enough discernment to be able to distinguish between a pick-pocket and Florence Nightingale.

MR. MEINZINGER: That did not get a laugh, did it?

MR. MACLEOD: When the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) began his speech in the House last week, he sent me a note on which there appeared a scriptural reference, which I mentioned the other day, but which is worth repeating. I found, when I checked the New Testament, that the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was saying to me:

"Hearken to my words and may the Lord give you understanding in all things."

The funny thing about that is I was trying to do that for him a year ago. If he had taken my advice, when I spoke on the budget a year ago, he would not have been so surprised when he announced the $25,000,000 surplus, because I told him he was going to have it.

HON. MR. FROST: I did not get it the way you figured it, though.

MR. MACLEOD: No, but my idea was sounder than yours. Since the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) gave me a scriptural reference and since a few moments ago I announced the subject of this address, I think it is about time I gave my text. That is the custom in the pulpit. You announce the subject in the columns of the daily papers, and when you get the congregation in front of you, you give them the text.

MR. MEINZINGER: Yes, father.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: I took my text from the book of Proverbs, and it is:

"Answer a knave according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit."

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I toned it down a bit in order to make it parliamentary, but the essence of the Proverb is clear, and I commend it to my friend, the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

First of all, I want to say that instead of feeling surprised by producing what I would call an "accounting surplus"—because that is all it is—the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) should expect strong criticism, first, for deliberately understating the expected revenue in last year's budget estimates, and, secondly, for not using this increased revenue for the people of the Province of Ontario.

I want to say to my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) I hope he is going to close the debate on the budget. I do not think he should leave it to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), and I do not think you should make it a practice to heckle the people who criticize you, as you did last year. I am glad to see you so relaxed tonight, and listening to what I have to say. So I repeat, listen to what I have to say, and to what my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Nixon) said the other day, and then next Tuesday stand up in your place and offer your defence, and as far as I am concerned, I will do my best to leave you without a feather to fly with, but you can try.

Let me continue, Mr. Speaker, by saying that the buoyant revenues of this province, as the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) well knows, is a reflection of the general inflationary "boom" conditions. Anybody, any provincial treasurer in any of the nine provinces, can produce a budget surplus in the year 1948. Even the Dominion Government, which this Government does not regard as a model of financial virtue, is reported in the hon. Treasurer's (Mr. Frost) own words to be running at surplus of some $750,000,000, if not $1,000,000,000.

All you had to do in 1947-8 was to sit back and let the revenue roll in, and hold down your expenditures. Does my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) think he could have "gotten away" with last year's low level expenditures for welfare and social security benefits, if he had been sufficiently frank in discussing the high levels of his anticipated revenues.

MR. MEINZINGER: Yes.

MR. MACLEOD: That is the first question.

MR. MEINZINGER: You got the answer.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: The three broad items of revenue wherein the Government received much more than forecast—$25,000,000 more—were the Liquor Control Board's profits, corporation taxes and succession duties, and both of those latter items were specifically queried in last year's budget. In fact, in relation to the Liquor Control Board's profits, I asked, "how much of a cushion of understatement has the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) received in this item," and apparently the answer to my question, although I did not get it, was $7,600,000. What little faith you had in the capacity of E. P. Taylor to guzzle the people of Ontario with liquor, to produce those profits for you.

MR. MEINZINGER: It kept him in good spirits, anyway.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: The announced $50,000,000 revenue from the 7 per cent. corporation tax shows clearly now where to go when real money is required. On the basis of the yield to Ontario on this item, it appears the taxable corporations profits for all Canada last year must have been over $1,500,000,000, and I would estimate the corporation profits in the Province of Ontario must have been in excess of $750,000,000. So the big fellows are really pulling it in, in a big way. This is a tidy sum on which to get a reasonable tax, and could support a very real contribution in the way of social security benefits for all Canadians.

It is true that the health department expenditures run about $1,750,000 over the budget forecast.

MR. MEINZINGER: That is a healthy budget.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: But what is that in comparison with a surplus of $25,000,000?

Mr. Speaker, I do not mind the interruptions, but they are simply slowing down the adjournment.

To be sure, highway expenditures, both current and capital, were about $9,000,000 higher than forecast, but this is the accepted method—where is the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett).

MR. MEINZINGER: Oh, he is around.

MR. MACLEOD: But this is the accepted method of "winning friends and influencing people" in advance of an election. Of course, that did not start with your dispensation; the people to my right can tell you something about that, too. If we are going to have an election around June 26, of course they had to make friends and influence people well in advance.

MR. HOWARD SALE (York, South): Where is the crystal ball.

MR. MACLEOD: Just common sense, my friend (Mr. Sale), and we have a mortgage on that over here.

Again, Mr. Speaker, quoting my words of a year ago, would the Government have dared to neglect the people's interest on the expenditure side if this huge pool of revenue had been public knowledge? How much more striking is that remark this year, with the huge pool of additional revenue amounting to $25,000,000, the Government could have doubled last year's expenditures on this whole list of social benefits, for the people of Ontario, public health administration, nursing,

maternal and child hygiene,
dental services,
venereal disease control,
tuberculosis prevention,
industrial hygiene,
sanitary engineering, laboratory and health research activities,
day nurseries,
children's aid,
youth and child welfare,
mothers' allowances,
old-age and blind pensions, refugees,
welfare units,

and in addition given one half pint of milk daily to every school-child in the Province of Ontario, and still would have had quite a bit of money to spend. It would be a good thing for you to dig in to the records of the Henry and Ferguson governments, and some of the Tory governments preceding them. They did not believe in much of an expanding economy.

My hon. friend (Mr. Frost) emphasized—and I agree rightly so—that our plans must be based on the concept of an expanding economy. The restrictive concepts of a scarcity economy, beliefs of which the party my honourable friend (Mr. Frost) represents was not the least vocal exponent, must be relegated to the dead past.

It would be a good thing if my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) would dig into the records of the Henry and Ferguson governments, and some of the Tory governments which preceded them. They did not much believe in an expanding economy. Any expansion which took place, took place despite them and not because of them.

As applied to debt management, if the expanding economy approach means anything, it means that under such conditions an expanding debt can be carried without increasing the burden on the people. As the interest rate goes down obviously an increasing total of debt can be carried with the same annual amount of interest charge. Under such conditions, I was a little puzzled at my hon. friend's (Mr. Frost's) apparent pre-occupation with what he calls the credit standing of Ontario.

I was looking at this beautiful half-bound volume which contains the four budget speeches. I will get my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) to autograph that.

HON. MR. FROST: You should read it. It would do you good.

MR. MACLEOD: It gives a schedule of the growth of the provincial debt of the Province of Ontario. One time it was around $2 per capita; now it is up around $214 per capita.

MR. MEINZINGER: So what?

MR. MACLEOD: Surely the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) would agree with me that the credit of Ontario stands far higher at a time when we have a per capita debt of $214, than when it is down to around $2. I do not see why you make a "fetish" of debt reduction. It belongs to the country store economics and should not occupy any place in the thinking of an upstanding, far-seeing man like the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) of Ontario.

In his budget address, he stressed the reduction in provincial debt, both gross and net. When I began to dig into his figures, I found that although strictly Province of Ontario funded debt had decreased during the past year by some $19,000,000, the hydro debt (guaranteed by the province) had increased a net $65,000,000. Thus a consolidation of these debt figures shows that the real increase in funded debt for which the province is ultimately responsible was some $46,000,000.

If you do not like those figures, you can answer them when your turn comes.

I am not bringing up this matter because I am against increasing the debt of the province, but simply to clear up the record as presented by my hon. friend (Mr. Frost). Of course you cannot embark on large scale development projects without either borrowing some money or raising taxes. Even my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) is no magician, so why try to mislead us?

HON. MR. FROST: We are going to borrow $350,000,000.

MR. MACLEOD: That is all right. Your budget speeches are not always consistent.

HON. MR. FROST: That is the net debt.

MR. MACLEOD: Sometimes you put emphasis in the wrong place, and on other occasions the Conservative in you gains the ascendancy over the Progressive.

HON. MR. FROST: If my friend will go back and read the 1944 speech, and look at the explanation of "Net Debt" he will see the real picture. At the present time he does not see it at all. He is away up in the clouds.

MR. MACLEOD: You are a little tired, Mr. Minister (Mr. Frost).

HON. MR. FROST: You read that speech.

MR. MEINZINGER: Never mind about him. The Frost is just coming out. He will answer you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: It was interesting to hear my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) state that some economic planning is in order, at least on large scale development projects. Although I do not suspect that he has accepted the basic philosophy of the five-year plans, it was interesting to hear that he has a four-year plan for hydro.

Maybe that is the reason he has a four-year plan, because if he made it a "five-year plan," somebody might accuse him of being a Communist. It was because of that that he has the four-year plan for hydro.

A good deal of attention was devoted to these hydro plans in the budget address. Well might my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) do so under the present shortage conditions for which his Government is responsible. Why was something not done sooner?

As a matter of fact, I thought you were stealing some of the thunder of the querulous-voiced Minister of Hydro (Mr. Challies), who ought to be able to speak for himself, but you seem to, somehow or other, dip into the preserves of other people, and were trying to pose as the father of the new hydro plan.

I will say that you might well have devoted time to hydro, because of the present shortage conditions, for which your Government must bear some responsibility. You have been here for five years, and now you are just getting around to a four-year plan, which begins in the beginning of the fifth year of your dispensation. Why did it not begin in the first year?

It would be well too, if we had been given sufficient details to look into some of these plans carefully when they were being formulated. The 914,500 horsepower of additional planned capacity are estimated to cost over $300,000,000—or $300 per installed horsepower capacity. More power than this is available in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence, right on the doorstep of the industrialized part of the province where power is badly needed, and the initial cost would be about half that of the planned developments. Why can't we get on with the job on the St. Lawrence?

We do not have to wait for Ottawa on this. There can be partial development which will add to our power reserves, which has been mentioned by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) himself. That is the largest source of power in the Province of Ontario; it is the source of the cheapest power, and I wonder why this Government is so reluctant to take some positive steps in the direction of adding that great power resource to what we now have.

What about all the other public investment projects that must be substituted for the lack of a comprehensive Dominion-Provincial agreement on anti-depression measures? If the hon. Minister's (Mr. Frost's) remarks on public finance mean anything they mean that a Government with the will to raise money where it can be found can undertake anything required to better the condition of the people.

You asked me last year that if I seriously believed the dominion's public-investment programme would stall off, or mitigate the effect of a crisis. I told you then that I did not think your public-investment programme was adequate, but this Government has a responsibility, in the absence of an agreement with the Dominion Government, to be thinking about tomorrow because there is a rather ugly past to warn us of what can happen to a country when it is plunged into an economic crisis and it is unprepared.

If the hon. Minister's (Mr. Frost) remarks on public finance mean anything, they mean that a government that had a will to raise money where it can be found, can undertake anything required to better the conditions of the people. Now I am forced to say that when my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) presented his comparison of Ontario's present position relative to that under the proposed tax agreement with the Dominion, he grossly distorted the situation. I can only conclude that he resorted to such a use of statistics in an attempt to cover up the untenable position in which this Government now finds itself. First, however, let me clarify the comparison of Ontario's position with that under the proposed tax agreement.

I think my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) will have to admit that the only basis of comparison is between the amount the province actually received from the taxes it refused to relinquish with what it would have received from the Dominion; that is a fair basis of comparison.

HON. MR. FROST: They are about the same.

MR. MACLEOD: You agree, then? We are getting along famously. On the basis of his own figures—

HON. MR. FROST: I might point out this difference to you. You were mentioning a moment ago the value of corporation taxes; but you wanted us to let it go for next door to nothing.

MR. MACLEOD: My hon. friend (Mr. Frost) will be surprised before I get finished.

HON. MR. FROST: Of course you talk always in circles you see.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, sometimes in dealing with a reactionary government you have to be dialectical in your approach, and not follow a straight line.

You people dodge the issue so much we cannot get at you straight on, and we have to find ways of surrounding you.

HON. MR. FROST: You have got the most progressive government in the history of Ontario.

MR. MEINZINGER: There you are.

MR. MACLEOD: On the basis of the hon. Provincial Treasurer's (Mr. Frost) figures, the comparison I have just referred to is a comparison of $72,000,000 with $74,000,000 for last year. To raise the $72,000,000, the Province of Ontario imposed 2 per cent. more corporate income tax than would have been the case under a tax agreement; is that not right?

HON. MR. FROST: That is correct.

MR. MACLEOD: Good.

HON. MR. FROST: We did not impose any income tax.

MR. MACLEOD: This additional tax brought in roughly $14,000,000 in round figures. In other words, my hon. friend's (Mr Frost) phoney comparison really discloses that the Dominion proposal was too easy on the corporations of this province. I should point out in passing, perhaps, that the Dominion's formula for computing the annual payment to the province is based on the experience of the preceding three years, consequently, in periods of rising population and national income, the Dominion payments will lag behind the comparable amount derived from current year's tax, but in periods of declining national income, the reverse will hold true. Do you agree with that?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, let me pursue it further. In other words, the higher Dominion payments will be received in years of declining prosperity, when they are most needed.

HON. MR. FROST: No, no. That is not true.

MR. MACLEOD: But the fact remains it is fallacious to compare the actual Dominion payment in any given year with the estimated tax yield of that year because of the averaging process. Let me illustrate: for 1948, on the basis of 1947 population and gross national product, the Dominion payment to Ontario would amount to $77,361,000.

HON. MR. FROST: That is for next year.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes. We are forgetting those things that are past and pressing towards those that lie ahead. We never look at the past. "Let the dead past bury its dead and look toward the future." $77,361,000—on the basis of the budget forecast for next year, the comparable yield from the retained tax field plus statutory subsidy would be $68,226,000. This is a difference in favour of the Dominion proposal of $9,135,000.

HON. MR. FROST: No, you are very much wrong. You are away out. $77,000,000 would be on the basis of national income or gross product of this year. If we have that next year, we have it on the same basis, whether we will or not, but if we do, remember that our corporation tax is only on the basis of part of a year.

MR. MACLEOD: Let us not get into an argument. I want you to be clear on what I said. I said on the basis of the formula and the gross national product of last year, Ontario would receive $77,361,000 had you signed an agreement. On the basis of the budget forecast for next year—that is all I am going by the budget forecast for next year—the comparable yield from retained tax field, plus the statutory subsidy would be $68,226,000—I am taking your own figures.

MR. H. J. SALE (York South): How about additional taxes in case of an agreement?

MR. MACLEOD: Hold your horses. This is a difference of $9,135,000 in favour of the Dominion proposal.

HON. MR. FROST: Would you like to add in our potential of income tax?

MR. MACLEOD: I am coming to that.

HON. MR. FROST: That is a real thing too.

MR. MACLEOD: I have so much here that you will be flabbergasted by the time I have finished. By my criticism of this Government on this issue, I do not for one moment imply tacit approval of all that the Dominion Government has done—now you will like this—or, more importantly, has not done. I do not stand here as an apologist for those people on Parliament Hill. If the Dominion Government had its tongue in its cheek—and I am repeating now what I said last year—if the Dominion Government had its tongue in its cheek when proposing some needed social security benefits and public investment policies in conjunction with Dominion-Provincial tax agreements, this is not an excuse for any province to take an independent, not to say an intransigent stand, and then do nothing to provide its own people with the benefit promised under a general Dominion-Provincial agreement. The legitimate demands of the people for economic security measures must be met whether the public forces the demands, wrings them out of the provincial or Dominion Government, or both of them, is not the important issue. However, since this Government has dug its heels in on the issue of a tax agreement with Ottawa, and all that goes with it, then I say, let the republic of Ontario provide the benefits to which our people have a right.

HON. MR. FROST: Let me ask my friend (Mr. MacLeod) this question: is there anything to prevent the Dominion Government going ahead with their social security?

MR. MACLEOD: Well, now—

HON. MR. FROST: Let me ask you that question.

MR. MACLEOD: Here again, you see if you would keep quiet for a minute, I am going to deal with all these questions that you are raising, so why interrupt me?

HON. MR. FROST: Let me ask you that.

MR. SALE: Answer a correct question.

MR. MACLEOD: Who is that barking over there? After all, South York is a long way off, I cannot tell what you are talking about.

Let me say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost), he should be fair—we are the only group in this House that kept 100 per cent. of its members in the House all the time he was delivering his budget speech. The rest of the Opposition folded their tents like Arabs and silently stole away, while we stayed here all the time and did not interrupt him once.

MR. E. A. MACGILLIVRAY (Glen-garry): There are only the 2 of you there.

MR. MACLEOD: That is right.

AN HON. MEMBER: Two too many.

MR. MACLEOD: On the question of personal income tax, my hon. friend's (Mr. Frost) statements are quite contradictory. In one place he admits, as I pointed out to him last year, that the province could levy a 5 per cent. personal income tax with no effect whatever on the total tax paid of Ontario income taxpayers; is that right?

HON. MR. FROST: If you ask me a question, I would say yes, but subject to this: yes, we can, with no change in the level of the taxes the taxpayers pay, but we take this position: to help our people, who are 50 per cent. of all the income tax payers in Canada, we stay out of the field in order to help the Dominion reduce taxes on them.

MR. SALE: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. member (Mr. Sale) should be a rivetter.

HON. MR. FROST: That is the answer to the question.

MR. MACLEOD: Let me continue; are you finished? The whole 5 per cent. would be deductible from the tax paid to the Dominion; that is right, is it not?

At another place in his budget speech, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) compares Ontario with British Columbia, stating that Ontario has no sales tax and no personal income tax.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. The point is, we do that to help the Dominion reduce taxes.

MR. MACLEOD: When you say that, surely you realize that the people pay the same income tax rate in Ontario as in British Columbia or anywhere else in Canada.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right, but half the taxpayers are in Ontario, and half the taxes come from Ontario, and when we benefit Ontario, we benefit everybody.

MR. MACLEOD: Now, my hon. friend's (Mr. Frost) statement that Ontario's policy has relieved Ottawa of the necessity of raising approximately $74,000,000 to hand over to Ontario by way of a subvention is equally at variance with the facts. Whether Ontario signs the tax agreement or not, exactly the same personal income tax is collected from the residents of Ontario. Instead of relieving Ottawa of the burden of paying a tax rental to Ontario, the policy of this Government has allowed the full amount of 5 per cent. of this tax, estimated at $15,800,000 for last year, to remain in the hands of the Dominion, without this province getting a thing in return. Whether Ontario signs the tax agreement or not, at least a 5 per cent. tax is levied on corporate profits. The only difference is that by staying out of the tax agreement, Ontario has levied an additional 2 per cent. corporation tax, the proceeds of which it retains. Whether Ontario signs the agreement or not, exactly the same amount is collected from Ontario estates in succession duties, unless Ontario decides to raise its rate of taxes about half of that of the Dominion.

This Government has always been extremely touchy on the question of personal income taxes and succession duties. To what purpose? My hon. friend's (Mr. Frost) statements imply that by staying out of the tax agreement with the Dominion, this province is saving its taxpaying residents some money.

HON. MR. FROST: We are in the case of the small estates. We are trying to help the little people.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Machiavellian.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, there is something Machiavellian about our hon. friend (Mr. Frost). Actually this is not so, for a provincial 5 per cent. income tax and a provincial succession duty rate up to one half the Dominion rate would not make 1 cent difference in the amount of either of these 2 taxes paid in toto by Ontario residents. Even if it did make a difference to the tax bill of a small minority—my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) is talking about small groups—even if it did make a difference to the tax bill of a small minority of the citizens of this province, is this sufficient reason for denying to the great majority of our people the social and economic security benefits to which they have a right in lieu of the wage and salary income they do not get for one reason or another.

HON. MR. FROST: We are not denying them anything. It is the reactionary government at Ottawa that is denying it to them—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. FROST:—and not living up to its promises. We are not denying them anything, we are helping them.

MR. MACLEOD: Just follow me. Now, to look to the future. What can be done next year, that is to say, the year that lies before us, the year in which you expect to be re-elected and the year in which you will probably be defeated? What can be done?

Of course, I know perfectly well the reason the Government makes such a fuss over the retention of taxing powers. That is no secret to anyone who has even a minimum of political "know-how." We know the motivation. It is not the reason that is usually given, but the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) himself, did lift the latch a little on this question last year. On March 25, 1947, at page 439 of Hansard, he stated in reply to a question of mine;

"We want equally clearly defined the division of taxing powers so that we can tax for our own purpose without the interference or control of any other government."

Later on in the same speech he stated, and I quote:

"The power to tax is the power to govern, the power to tax is also the power to destroy."

Very good. Since this Government has decided to run the republic of Ontario their own way, let them take care of the people of the republic in a way befitting a great and expanding province.

HON. MR. FROST: Let me ask you this: was our labour bill part of the republic of Ontario? You voted against our labour bill.

MR. MACLEOD: It was not your labour bill, you see. You only associate yourselves with Ottawa when they do something evil, but never when they do anything good.

HON. MR. FROST: My friend (Mr. MacLeod) talks in circles.

MR. MACLEOD: Let us consider for a moment what provincial revenue we can expect to get next year, taking the budget forecast and making some corrections which I will indicate. I would appreciate it if the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would have his pencil ready, because I want him to follow this.

The forecast of net ordinary revenue was $177,776,900, the net capital receipts were forecast at $33,081,350, making total receipts as forecast $210,858,250.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, but my friend (Mr. MacLeod) is confusing capital and ordinary.

MR. MACLEOD: I have never been very much impressed with separating capital from ordinary, and so on; that is the reason why governments in the past have been able to, according to the political whim of the moment, bring in a surplus or deficit.

HON. MR. FROST: No, you are all wrong.

MR. MACLEOD: They do not do that in Ottawa, or anywhere else.

HON. MR. FROST: One is revenue and the other is capital.

MR. MACLEOD: So, in order to give you a complete picture, I am giving you both the ordinary revenue and the capital receipts and, as I say, the total is $210,858,250—that is according to your own figures.

MR. SALE: You can get a pretty good course at night school, at no cost, that might straighten you out on that.

MR. MACLEOD: What was that remark? Would you remember it again?

MR. SALE: I can remember it very well. You can get a pretty good course at night school that might straighten you out on that, at no cost, with the compliments of the Department of Education.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, I once heard education defined as "what remains after everything you have learned in school is forgotten," I wonder how my friend (Mr. Sale) would measure up to that standard?

Well, $210,858,250—now then, since my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) estimates the yield on a 7 per cent. corporation tax at the same amount as last year, he must have been basing his forecast on equally prosperous general conditions as last year, right? If you are going to get $50,000,000 again, you are basing your calculations on the assumption that things will be as good next year as they were last year.

HON. MR. FROST: Not necessarily. You must remember that this year is only a part year.

MR. MACLEOD: Therefore, it is illogical to estimate Liquor Control Board tax and gas tax lower than last year; that is, if corporations are going to make $750,000 in profits in the next year, together with a yield of $50,000,000 from your 7 per cent. tax, by what line of reasoning do you assume that the consumption of liquor and the sale of gasoline will be lower than those of last year?

HON. MR. FROST: You may have rationing in gasoline.

MR. MACLEOD: So I propose to bring this back to the 1947-48 level, and I would add $9,300,000. Succession duties should also produce about the same as last year unless my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) has foreknowledge of a moratorium on millionaires dying in the years 1947-1948. I can think of some that you might wish to die, but I do not think you can do anything to control this. So there is a yield of $9,300,000. Now, let us impose a 5 per cent. personal income tax since it will not raise the level of total income tax. It does not make any difference to me or to hon. member here or hon. member there, they won't have to pay any more. Let us impose a 5 per cent. personal income tax since it won't raise the level of personal income tax. This is to yield $15,500,000. Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) heard that? If you take this 5 per cent. tax it won't add anything to your tax bill or to the tax bill of the hon. Minister of Highways (hon. Mr. Doucett) or to the Speaker. You won't have to pay any more. You will get on a silver platter, with the crest of Mackenzie King engraved on it, $15,800,000.

HON. MR. FROST: That is true, but we would place an impediment on the Dominion Government making a reduction in income tax. We want to reduce the income tax on the little man.

MR. MACLEOD: Your solicitude for the Dominion Government is enough to bring tears to one's eyes.

HON. MR. FROST: You see we are for all one country.

MR. MACLEOD: Now then, let us also increase the corporation income tax to 10 per cent., thereby taking up the whole amount of the Federal reduction of last year except for the Excess Profits Tax. Over and above everything that will produce $21,429,000. Thus you would have . . .

HON. MR. FROST: In other words, you would increase taxes.

MR. MACLEOD: I would increase the tax on the people who are able to bear it.

MR. FROST: Well, do you think the income tax on the little man is pretty heavy right now?

MR. MACLEOD: Corporation profits tax is the one I want to tax, and not the little man. So if you follow what I have proposed here, you would have total receipts of $260,000,000. From this let us take away the forecast expenditures—ordinary, $177,000,000, capital, $51,000,000, a total of $228,000,000 in round figures. Assume that there are no hidden pools of revenue, and that expenditures are made this year as planned, and we are left with a surplus of $31,239,829.

Now, does not that make you feel like resigning as Treasurer? And let me move over there to take your place?

HON. MR. FROST: We got $25,000,000 without increasing any tax. You are a poor financier.

MR. MACLEOD: This amount, in excess of $31,000,000, could be used to provide some of the benefits that have been denied the people of Ontario, because this Government chose "to tax for our own purposes" and refused to co-operate under the Dominion-Provincial Tax Agreement. Let us see what this $31,000,000 could buy for the people of the Province of Ontario. You say Ottawa is not going to do anything to help at all. You are going to put any impediment in their way and even though you do not put impediments in their way they still don't do anything. You are the Government of the Province of Ontario, and the first thing you have got to protect is the social welfare and economic well-being of its people.

Now, what can you do with this $31,000,000? First of all old-age pensions. The Dominion-Provincial Conference proposal was for pensions of $30 monthly to all aged 70 and over without a means test, and the Dominion to pay half the cost of pensions for people in need between 65 and 69. The total cost of the 65-69 pensions in 1948 in Ontario was estimated at $10,800,000. Second, health grants:

HON. MR. FROST: I think that $10,800,000 was only our 50 per cent. of the cost.

MR. MACLEOD: No.

HON. MR. FROST: You are quite wrong about that.

MR. MACLEOD: You will have a chance to go into it.

Health grants—part of the Dominion-provincial proposals on health insurance and health services included a series of health grants by the Dominion to improve the services of the provinces in public health work, tuberculosis treatment, mental health treatment and hygiene, venereal disease control, crippled children grant, professional training and public health research. The cost of these services to be borne by the Dominion under the agreement, for the Province of Ontario was $4,020,000.

Mothers' Allowances and Medical Services: These allowances could be doubled from the present levels for an estimated $4,218,800.

Other Welfare Department Activities: All other welfare department expenditures, not including old-age pensions and mothers' allowances, dealt with above, could be doubled over next year's estimates, for $3,136,000.

Free milk for school-children: Half a pint of milk daily for all school-children in Ontario, $4,000,000.

And then, last of all—improve hospitals and begin health insurance programme to the tune of $5,000,000, making a total of $31,164,800.

Now, I am not under any illusions that this Government will go very far along the road I have indicated. But if they did, then the Prime Minister would have a case against Ottawa. Then the Province of Ontario would have done many of the laudable things the Dominion has talked about, but has not undertaken, using the excuse of non-co-operation on the part of Ontario and Quebec.

That is Paul Martin's theme song.

HON. MR. FROST: Do you think it is a poor excuse on their part?

MR. MACLEOD: Of course it is.

HON. MR. FROST: Of course it is—that is where you and I agree.

MR. MACLEOD: They put up this programme knowing very well that the Prime Minister of Ontario and Prime Minister at Ottawa would put a sprag in the wheel and give them an excuse for not carrying it out.

Now, I want to look at the present state of relationship between these two jurisdictions.

As the situation stands, however, I have to admit that the Dominion's record of co-operation is better in some respects than of this Government's. The record of outstanding differences between the proposal made by the Prime Minister on April 29, 1946, and the Dominion's offer, has been substantially narrowed during the past year. I have used as a check list, the summary of the proposals placed on Hansard by the Prime Minister on April Fools' Day, 1947.

This was your first proposal: Rental of corporation and personal income taxes for payment of $12 per capita, based on 1941 conditions, and adjusted upward for changes in population and gross national produce per capita in ensuing years.

That was your proposal in April, 1947. Well, the Dominion, on its part, offered $12.75 per capita, plus half of provincial revenue from these taxes in 1940-41, based on 1942 conditions and adjusted as per contra, but on three-year average system.

The second proposition.

HON. MR. FROST: Do you know how much difference that means in money? Probably $50,000,000.

MR. MACLEOD: The second condition laid down by the Prime Minister of Ontario was: The Dominion to vacate following tax fields; gasoline tax. That was done on April 1, 1947. They got out of it and you got in it. Amusement tax, you expect them to get out of it in a couple of weeks; you hope you will get in. Electricity tax, I am under the impression they got out of that field in November, 1947, but I would not be sure of that. Is that right?

HON. MR. FROST: Did you forget to say that we did not get into it?

MR. MACLEOD: Well, after all, you have to store a few nuts away for tomorrow. That undoubtedly, is one of them. Race track pari-mutuel tax, you are in it, and you cannot get out.

Security transfer tax; I am not clear whether that stands, whether they are out of that or not, or whether you are in it.

Succession duties; not vacated but the province can levy up to 50 per cent. of Dominion rates at no added cost to taxpayers.

This was the next proposition of the Prime Minister; Dominion to recognize priority of provincial taxes on mining and logging. That, I want to say, was offered in May, 1946.

Three: Dominion to undertake not to enter any field of direct taxation except income and corporation taxes.

The Dominion refused on grounds of possible necessity during an emergency.

Fourth: repayment of tax hold-back under the War-time Tax Agreement.

That was done in 1947.

Five: Agreement to state that the province does not surrender any of its rights, powers or privileges. On the other side of the ledger, the agreement was only for a period of five years, so that nothing could be given away permanently.

Six: Dominion to make available foreign exchange needed to meet provincial and municipal obligations.

The Dominion has always done that. That is right?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. MACLEOD: That was my impression.

Seven: Dominion to be responsible for relief of unemployed employables.

On the Dominion side it is responsible under unemployment insurance Act until the fund runs out. What happens then is another question.

HON. MR. FROST: Quite a big question.

MR. MACLEOD: You could help them by signing the agreement with them.

Eight: Dominion to pay all old-age Pensions to persons over 65 without means test.

Dominion now pays 75 per cent. of $30 a month to all over 70 passing means test.

Nine: Statutory subsidies to be paid in addition to annual tax rental described in number one. On the Dominion side the Dominion does this by adding statutory subsidy to per capita and half 1940-41 tax revenue to get basic amount subject to adjustment. Escalator adjustment thus applies to statutory subsidy, which is more than the Prime Minister of Ontario requested.

Ten: Start thorough examination of whole Canadian tax structure. The Dominion is willing to do that; said it many times.

HON. MR. FROST: When did they say that?

MR. MACLEOD: In a letter that Mr. Abbott wrote to Premier MacDonald, in which Premier MacDonald argued very strongly the necessity of a scientific examination of the whole Canadian Tax structure. Mr. Abbott agreed that this was a matter that the Dominion would be willing to consider.

Eleven: If no permanent agreement reached, Dominion to reduce its corporation and personal income taxes to let provinces back in field.

Well, on the Dominion side, the Dominion reduced its corporation income tax by 10 per cent. in 1947, and its personal income tax by an average of 29 per cent., and last year you stood in your place and said they should reduce it as much as 25 per cent. They reduced it on an average of 29 per cent.

Twelve: Further study of health insurance proposals and expansion of hospital accommodation.

No doubt the Dominion would agree to this stalling tactic.

HON. MR. FROST: We are doing it. Everybody voted for that but you and your colleague. The House voted for it, you were the two members against it.

MR. MACLEOD: No, what we voted against was what you did.

HON. MR. FROST: No, you did not.

MR. MACLEOD: What you did was comparable to a millionaire robbing the poor-box of a parish church.

Number thirteen: Approved principle of public investment plan.

This is the Prime Minister's proposal. No argument here, both jurisdictions are stalling.

Fourteen: Dominion-Provincial Conference twice a year.

I do not think there would be any objection to this once the agreements were signed. I think it would be absolutely necessary and no government in the Dominion of Canada would be justified in signing an agreement with the Dominion of such a sweeping character as that proposed without it being clearly understood that the Dominion-Provincial Conference met once or twice a year.

Sixteen: Adjustment of Corporate Income Taxes to basis of provincial division of actual business transactions.

I do not think there is any argument here, either.

Set up a national adjustment fund.

It seems to be immaterial where the Dominion gets the funds to pay the stipulated rentals. The fund idea would be useful only where grants are made on the basis of fiscal needs and that not likely to benefit Ontario.

Now, I am getting near the end.

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Have you not proved the Dominion Government has not substantially complied with the reasonable request of the province?

MR. MACLEOD: No. My contention, my hon. friend, is that the area of conflict and the difference between the Province of Ontario and the Dominion Government has narrowed down substantially since 1945. I want to say to you, right now, that I do not think the Dominion Government has a leg to stand on in so far as its refusal to re-convene that conference; I do not think so, not a leg to stand on, because all the 7 provinces who have signed have asked that the conference should be re-convened, Mr. Douglas wants it re-convened, Mr. Johnson wants it re-convened, Mr. Manning wants it re-convened, Mr. Macdonald wants it re-convened. I do not know about Mr.

Garson, maybe he is too incurable a Liberal to step out of line with Ottawa, but they are without virtue on that and I'd say they are trying to make political capital out of what I consider to be an intrinsic attitude buttressed by this Government in 1945.

The whole tenor of the hon. Minister's (Mr. Frost's) budget address is, of course, but a reflection of this Government's policy, and smacks of a restrictive "Ontario - for - Ontarians" approach which is destructive of the national unity so badly needed in this day. Under present conditions a narrow provincialism does not contribute to the well-being of any section of the country.

At the outset of his speech the Minister drew a static, humanity-lacking picture of the greatness of Ontario. Then followed a long section on Dominion-provincial relations, the central theme of which was that, instead of complementary policies to enhance the welfare of the people, these relations involved a struggle between two governments for mutually exclusive financial advantage. This is not our conception of acceptable Dominion-provincial relations, and I do not think it is an acceptable idea to the people of Ontario either. At the end of his speech, which was calculated to "contain something for everybody," the Minister dragged in two paragraphs paying lip service to the idea that the people of the province merit some consideration from "their Government. Even in these two paragraphs, 'security' to the Minister means the physical values behind the financial evidences of debt, not the assurance of a reasonably good life for the average citizen."

In contrast to the glowing words of the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) let us look at the social and economic conditions in the province, as gleaned from statistics in the Government's own "Con-spectus" published last year. First as to conditions on the farm: that I spoke of a couple of days ago. While the total farm acreage has increased little in the past 30 odd years, the actual number of farms has decreased from 212,000 in 1911 to 178,000 in 1941. That is serious business. We could do with another 100,000 farmers in the Province of Ontario right now. The number of farms in all size groups under 100 acres decreased perceptibly, the number in the 100 to 200 group increased, and the number of farms over 200 acres increased by 37 per cent. That shows you that a lot of people from Bay Street are going on the farms. I do not know how many acres Dr. McCullough has out there in Richmond Hill. In other words the big farm has grown much bigger by swallowing up the little farms. And it is the little farm, the family farm that has made beautiful and effective the rural life and countryside of this province.

Then, just to remind you again, out of 179,000 farm dwellings in 1941, 32 per cent. were in need of external repairs, only 14 per cent. had inside running water, and only 9 per cent. had flush toilets, and only 37 per cent. had electricity. As to farm machinery, only 9 per cent. had motor trucks, only 5 per cent. had threshing machines, and only 789 combines, in the whole Province of Ontario. Nothing to crow about here in the way of past achievements!

I say, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, it is all very well for the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), to coast along on rising revenue when general conditions throw these in the Government's lap, because nothing this Government has done has produced these revenues.

HON. MR. FROST: Do you give us no credit at all.

MR. MACLEOD: I will give you this much credit, and I am sorry to hurt the feelings of my Liberal friends, but I think to be frank, and off the record, this Government is probably spending more money on social services in the Province of Ontario today than would be spent if the Liberals were in power. Does that make you feel happy?

HON. MR. FROST: That is a slight concession.

HON. MR. MACLEOD: Listening to my friend from Cochrane, North (Mr. Habel) it seemed to me that he went through that book from cover to cover, and what seemed to have roused him on the budget was the fact that you were spending more money. I do not complain about that. Of course, if you are spending more money on health, and in the Departmental of Municipal Affairs and other departments, the cost of administration is bound to go up.

What will happen if the general economic situation should go into reverse? And that is what the argument is all about in Ottawa in 1945. These Dominion-Provincial tax proposals, the social security programme and public investment programme were predicated upon the possibility, perhaps, these things that have occurred every four or five or six years may occur again, and if so, it is necessary for Canada as a political entity to be knit together in such a way as to enable the central government to cope adequately with such depressed conditions. And I would say this that quite apart from the accusations that you hurl in this direction—of course, you fellows are in it, too, not just us—that we are peregrinating apostles of gloom who claim to be working for an economic crisis and want to see Ontario fall apart and see people thrown in the bread lines, etc., are simply not true.

We will have to argue about a good many things, and there will be lots of attacks on this, perhaps, between now and end of the session. But let me say to the hon. members of this House, let me make it perfectly clear, that only an insane person—

MR. E. A. MACGILLIVRAY (Glen-garry): Like yourself.

MR. J. MEINZINGER: Why don't you consult the Conservatives?

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I could not "get away" with it.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, as one looks out over the Province of Ontario today and sees the relatively improved conditions from those which existed in the pre-war period, we see, by and large, there is no unemployment to speak of, but almost full employment in the province today. There is some seasonal employment, but for the most part people who are willing to work can find a job although not at the kind of wages they should be receiving.

For nobody to do anything to change that situation, and to plot and plan for those in the cities' bread lines is simply beyond my comprehension.

As far as we are concerned our conception of Canada is that it should be politically, economically and socially one nation indivisible, and not a Balkanized monstrosity, and I say that a heavy responsibility devolves, in the first place, on the Federal Government at Ottawa insofar as reconvening the Dominion-Provincial Conference, in order to resume where they left off in 1946, and if this Government and the other governments would go to that conference determined to reach the kind of an agreement on taxation and social security measures—

MR. MEINZINGER: Do you want us to go to Russia?

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I must say that I could not "get away" with that sort of thing.

Mr. SPEAKER: I ask the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzing) not to further interrupt.

MR. MACLEOD: I am trying to be reasonable about this. This is a very serious matter.

I say when the conference is reconvened, there is an equal responsibility on the shoulders of the Federal Government and of the leaders of the provincial governments in this country to make sure that the failures of 1945 become the successes of 1948.

If the provinces of Canada can come to an agreement with the Dominion and these much-needed social security measures can come into operation, agree on a public investment programme, perhaps in an expanded form, if a satisfactory taxation agreement is concluded, it will enable the Province of Ontario and the other provinces to meet the needs and requirements of the expanding economy in this province.

The conclusion of such an agreement would herald the bright day for this country of ours, and Canadians all could face the future with confidence.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House, and in moving the adjournment, move that when the House adjourns it stands adjourned until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 12.33 of the clock a.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: The Honourable J. DE C. HEPBURN

FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1948

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

The House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to hon. members of this House: it is my duty as Speaker to call attention of the House to the unparliamentary conduct of some hon. members of this House yesterday.

In my position as Speaker, I have tried to give fair play to every hon. member of this House, irrespective of their party affiliation, as much as is possible, in keeping with the dignity of the House.

That was taken advantage of yesterday, and my position became rather embarrassing, but rather than humiliate those hon. members who were out of order, I closed my eyes and ears, and the dignity of the House suffered.

In all fairness to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and the hon. member for North Cochrane (Mr. Habel), I feel I should apologize for the many unparliamentary remarks to which they were subjected.

In future, I wish to inform the hon. members who were out of order that I will expect them to conform with and adhere to the rules of the House, or suffer the consequences.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. T. K. CREIGHTON (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the report of the Standing Committee on Legal Bills, and move its adoption.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Mr. Creighton, from the Standing Committee on Legal Bills, presents the following as its report:

The Committee begs to report the following bill, with certain amendments:

Bill No. 72, An Act to amend the Commissioners for Taking Affidavits Act.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Report approved.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

RACETRACKS ACT

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intitled An Act to amend the Racetracks Act, 1939, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Will my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) indicate the import of this bill?

HON. MR. FROST: The change, Mr. Speaker, is a minor one in connection with the imposing of the tax. With reference to fixing the rate at the commencement of the year; it permits the rate to be fixed at any time during the year instead of only at the commencement of the year. That is all.

MR. OLIVER: Does it alter the tax itself?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

HON. CHARLES H. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Porter, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) briefly explain the purpose of the bill?

HON. MR. DALEY: Yes, Mr. Speaker. This bill has four amendments embodied in it. The first one has to do with the payment by the Workmen's Compensation Board for the maintenance and operation of the rescue stations in the mining area. It has been the custom to operate these stations under the Mines Department and pay for them out of Workmen's Compensation, and the question has arisen as to the validity of these payments being made. This merely validates that action. We wish to continue this. It has been very successful, and has done a great work and there is a great need in the mining country for these rescue people to be well trained and ready to go into action in the event of any catastrophe. That is merely all it does.

In Section 2, the deletion of the opening words is to require the accident notice to be given to the Board in all cases. At present, notice is given only when compensation is payable out of the accident fund. This has to do with the fact that there are two schedules under compensation. There is schedule 1 and schedule 2; schedule 1 covers all industry and this notice is compulsory as regards the injured person as well as by the employer; however, under schedule 2, under which the municipalities and the big railways operate, it has never been compulsory for the injured person to report direct to the Board. This has resulted in a great deal of difficulty, inasmuch as a man working on the railway gets what is considered by his employers to be an injury of a minor character, and the accident is not reported to the Board, and then later it turns out to be rather a serious accident, and then there is a great delay and difficulty in following it through and getting the record and substantiating the claim. This will eliminate that difficulty.

Section 3, I think, is a very important one. Subsection 1 and subsection 9 of section 35 of the Act establishes the amounts of compensation which are payable to the dependents of a workman whose death has occurred as a result of an occupational accident. These provisions are consolidated for convenience of reference and are simplified.

The reason for this is that for many years the compensation paid to the widow of a workman was $40 a month, and $10 for each child up to a certain limit as regards the number of children. In 1943, this Government increased that payment to $45, and in 1947 increased it again to $50, so that today the actual compensation to widows since 1947 has been $50.

However, in view of the difficulties which it seemed to present, which after a great deal of consideration seemed at that time to be insurmountable, in view of the fact that we have the two schedules, schedules 1 and 2, schedule 1 providing that industry is assessed on the basis of the pay-roll and the hazardous nature of the industry, which necessitated various rates, when a death occurs the amount is capitalized on the expected life of the widow according to her age and taking into consideration the number of children, and that amount is charged against that particular class of industry, and is put into a fund.

In schedule 2, that does not happen. In schedule 2, they only pay for accidents; there is no regular assessment, but when an accident occurs and a man is killed, the Workmen's Compensation Board estimates the cost of maintenance of the widow and her family for her expected life, and this is reviewed from time to time, but a certain sum of money is required from the railway or municipality concerned, and that is put into the fund. Therefore, it seemed to be very difficult to bring the fund up-to-date, to make the payments for widows' compensation retroactive over a long period of years. We realized the unfairness and unjustness of the fact that today we have some widows getting $40 plus $10 for each child, others getting $45 and $10, and still others, since the recent amendment in 1947, getting $50 and $12 for each child. What this Act does, is to bring all these payments to widows up to $50 and $12 for each child with, as I say, the qualifications which will be in regard to the amount, according to the Act. For instance, if a man is in a very low-earning field and is killed, leaving a great number of children, there must be a top to which we can go.

With that explanation, I will be very happy on second reading to go more into detail. I simply wanted to explain what this Act accomplishes.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WELFARE ACT

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Michener, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled the Department of Public Welfare Act, 1948, and that the same be now read the first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

OLD AGE PENSION ACT, 1948

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Michener, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled the Old Age Pension Act, 1948, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, would my hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) indicate the proposed changes?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, there are very few changes contained in the Act. It is more or less a revision of the old Act. It brings into line changes made in the Federal Old Age Pension Act, and this Act is intended to have it conform with the Federal Old Age Pension Act.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the report of the Ontario Athletic Commission for the year ended March 31, 1947, and for the period April 1st to May 20th, 1947.

MOTHERS ALLOWANCE ACT, 1948

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Michener, that leave be given to introduce an Act intituled the Mothers Allowance Act, 1948, and that same be read now a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

WELFARE UNITS

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Michener, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to Provide for Welfare Units, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

PURCHASE OF OTTAWA HEAT, LIGHT AND POWER CO. LTD.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Frost, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act respecting the Purchase by the corporation of the City of Ottawa of certain assets of the Ottawa Light, Heat and Power Co. Ltd., and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

MR. BRYAN L. CATHCART (Lambton West): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day I would like to draw to the attention of the House a matter of great importance to this particular north-east angle of the Chamber, and something which I feel is of such importance it should be brought to the attention of the whole House.

When some hon. members came in they may have noticed on the desks of two of the outstanding hon. members of this particular section two very delicious cakes. On these cakes were enough candles to give us an approximate idea of the number of years these hon. members have been on this earth. We lit the candles before the House met, with the result the candles burned down and the cakes were set on fire, and in putting out the fire, we destroyed the beauty of the cakes.

I want to particularly mention these two hon. members, one, the hon. member for Perth (Mr. Edwards), who celebrated his birthday yesterday, and on that day presented his maiden speech to this House, and I am sure we are all very proud of the splendid job he did.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. CATHCART: The other cake rests on the desk of the hon. member for Kent West (Mr. Parry), who today is celebrating his birthday. I am sure all hon. members well remember he presented his maiden speech one year ago in this Chamber, and of him I can say exactly the same thing, that his speech was of the kind which none of us have forgotten, even yet.

I should like to feel that all hon. members of this House join with us in this north-west corner in extending our best wishes to both these hon. members, and at the same time wishing them many years of health and happiness ahead.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. T. H. LEWIS (Welland): Mr. Speaker, one from whom you hear very little would like to take this opportunity to extend his felicitations, together with the hon. members of this Legislature, to these two hon. members. I am sure while the cakes may seem to be burned up a little, that in no way should be regarded as being associated with the hon. members, because I can assure you the only time they get "burned up" is when they go home to their ridings.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. LEWIS: I have had great pleasure in meeting the hon. member for Perth (Mr. Edwards) and the hon. member for Kent West (Mr. Parry).

One is in the happy business of selling drugs, and he made his money, I understand, during prohibition when you had to go to a doctor and get a prescription.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. LEWIS: He got $1 a "throw." I understand he was in "cahoots" with the other hon. member from Kent West (Mr. Parry), who raised the corn to make the whiskey so he could sell it.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. LEWIS: There is one point, Mr. Speaker, to which I would like to call attention. There is another hon. member on this side who had a birthday a few days ago. I refer to the hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Dye). While he is a very quiet and unassuming chap, in his way, he is very sincere in everything he does. I would like to bring to your attention and offer my felicitations and a wish for many happy returns of the day to "Stan" (Mr. Dye), one who fought at Dieppe, was wounded, and upon crawling out from the shell fire was caught by a sniper and had part of his shoulder shot away.

There are very few of us who know what happens at times, and very few of us get to realize how quiet these chaps are during the course of their lives.

So, Mr. Speaker, I thought while mentioning the other two hon. members, I should not overlook "Stan" (Mr. Dye), who has given his life to sports, hockey and other sports, who is now on the association executive of the Softball Association, and very well thought of in his riding, and I thought I would be in order in adding my felicitations to him when expressing them to the other two hon. members.

By the way, Mr. Speaker and hon. members, I am half a century on Sunday.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. GEORGE W. PARRY (Kent West): Mr. Speaker, this is indeed a pleasant surprise. I am sorry the candles burned away, but I will give you a little hint as to my age. I am over 16 and under 70.

I stand here in my own defence regarding the production of corn. That is a legitimate occupation, and you have no evidence to prove what it was used for after it was taken out in the raw stage. I notice quite a number of friends—I will mention no names—who are mighty glad I grew some corn years ago.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. PARRY: May I say, Mr. Speaker, in all sincerity, that I do appreciate the friendships I have gained amongst all hon. members of this House, and I hope my hon. friends to the south agree with me when I say I think I have a lot of friends in this House, and I do hope I will be able to have their friendship continually. I thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. J. FREDERICK EDWARDS (Perth): Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of this House; I appreciate this cake, even though it is burned, and I appreciate the kind things which have been said.

In order the hon. members will have no wrong impressions, I think I should clear one thing up. I should like the hon. members of this house to know the good druggists of the Province of Ontario did not make their money selling whiskey in six-ounce "hips." I want to make that clear.

I think the profession to which I belong serves one of the biggest purposes in all communities where drug stores are situated, and I am sure all hon. members of this House will agree with me.

In thanking the hon. member for Welland (Mr. Lewis) and the hon. member for Lambton West (Mr. Cathcart), I want to make it clear that I am proud of my profession as a pharmacist, with which I am associated.

Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say, in order to make these congratulations unanimous, I have been requested by the press gallery to extend their congratulations to the hon. members who have had birthdays today, yesterday, or any other day.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I wish to table answers to questions 4, 5, 6, 14, 17, 23, 26, 29, 34, 40, 44, 47, 48, 49, 52 and 53.

MR. STANLEY H. DYE (Brantford): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the hon. member for Welland (Mr. Lewis) for his very kind remarks. Perhaps I cannot agree with him in his statement that I am unassuming. Perhaps the war slowed me down that much, but I do want to thank the hon. member for his very kind remarks.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I thought it might not be inappropriate I should mention an event which is still very fresh in the memories of a great many of the hon. members of this Legislature, a day which has had considerable significance for many long years to those who saw active service in the other war.

This is the anniversary of the battle of Vimy in the first world war. Its significance is not in any way limited to those who recall the events of those days from their personal experience. The day is one of significance to all the people of this country, because on April 9th, 1917, the Canadian forces fought together for the first time in a combined army corps. On that occasion they wrote a page in the history of Canada which will for ever demonstrate the quality of our men. They were called upon as a combined army corps to attack the great ridge at Vimy, which had defied every previous attack for nearly three years of conflict, and everywhere it was agreed the execution of that attack and the valour shown by the men had not been exceeded at any time during that war. They drove back the picked troops of the German army, and broke the great log of the southern defences of the German lines with tremendous consequences in the months that followed.

In many homes still, April 9th is a day which carries sad as well as proud memories, because in the inevitable course of a struggle of that kind very many young Canadians laid down their lives. We have cherished, as Canadians, the expressions of loyalty related to those events which were written by a Canadian who himself served at that time, Col. John McRae, but it seems to me through the days in which we are now living, there are four lines of a poem which in itself has a rather remarkable history behind it, which seems to have special meaning in commemorating this event.

This particular poem was written without any thought of publication by a man who was about to go into battle at El Alamein in the last war. He wrote it on a sheet of paper, apparently for his own satisfaction, and later, during the battle, this sheet of paper fluttered into a slit trench, and the poem was passed on to General Wavell, who records it in his own collection of poems.

I would like to read the closing 4 lines of that poem with that rather unusual background:

"We know that death is but a door.

"We know what we are fighting for.

"Peace for our 'kids,' our brothers freed.

"A kinder word, a cleaner breed."

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me these 4 lines sum up with great clarity the thoughts of those who in their youth and vigour gave their lives for their country. They knew what they were fighting for. Those who cast doubts on the clarity of their vision are quite unaware of the thoughts which were in men's minds during days as serious, as ominous as those of other battle days during two world wars, when our men fought for the freedom of Canada, and freedom elsewhere.

They knew what they were fighting for; these simple things, our "kids," for freedom, and for a cleaner and decent world. They demonstrated in that battle that free men, with a clear vision, are stronger than the masses of those whose energies are weakened by any form of dictatorship and slavery.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 1st Order.

CITY OF TORONTO

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 1st Order, second reading of Bill No. 28, An Act respecting the City of Toronto. Mr. Roberts.

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH (Essex, South): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Roberts I move second reading of Bill No. 28, An Act respecting the City of Toronto.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I think this is the proper time to give the notice required by the rules that an amendment will be moved to this bill. The amendment, by its very nature, is such that it should be, quite aside from any rule, placed before the House so the hon. members will have adequate opportunity to give it consideration, and if I may have your permission, Mr. Speaker, and through you the permission of the House to do so, it might assist the hon. members if I were to explain the purposes of the amendment at this point, and read the amendment which will later be moved in Committee of the whole House, on the bill.

If that is acceptable to the House, Mr. Speaker, I will explain that subsequently to the bill being dealt with in committee, a view developed on the part of a number of hon. members that there were certain provisions of the bill which were indefensible on the ground of broad public policy, and required consideration. Those views, having come to my attention in the particular task I have as Attorney-General, I though it was expedient, rather than have some divergent views presented here in committee, that an effort should be made to reasonably and properly act on the questions which had been raised, consistent with the very laudable objects of the City's bill.

In the first place, clause 10 (1) of the bill—which I will not read, as I am only seeking to give the hon. members an explanation—contains what is regarded as an extremely onerous condition of filing plans and specifications in relation to repairs on equipment which, taken literally, might require the filing of plans and specifications in relation to the most modest type of repairs to heating equipment, and to overcome that difficulty, an amendment will be proposed which, without defeating in any way technically the objects of the municipality under that section, will, nevertheless, remove that objection from the bill.

The second question was one which presented more difficulties. There is a section in the Municipal Act which provides authority for a municipality to pass by-laws governing smoke fumes, and so on, subject to certain specific exemptions. Under those exemptions, owing to the state of the law at that time, certain business enterprises established industrial businesses in the city, and it is far from clear just what the effect would be of a continuation of some of these, without providing the mechanism for examining into the merits in each case, and the second amendment to the bill is designed to provide the machinery by which a municipality may bring in the provisions of a by-law subject to any suitable exemptions which may continue in relation to the particular industries.

With that explanation, I will simply table the proposed amendments. I will not read them, because I am quite sure the hon. members of the House will do better to read them and take them into the eyes than try to understand them by my reading them in the Legislature.

They will be moved as amendments to the bill when it is in committee of the whole House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). Have the proposed amendments been brought to the attention of the representatives of the city, and are they aware of the contents of the amendments?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, the answer to that question is "Yes."

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

MILK CONTROL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 27th Order, second reading of Bill No. 126, the Milk Control Act, 1948. Mr. Kennedy.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of the Milk Control Bill, I hardly think it is necessary to go into any lengthy explanation of the principles involved. The hon. members of this House have had an opportunity to study the provisions of the bill, and they are very simple and very clear in themselves. There are, as all members of this House will realize, some radical changes in this bill as compared with the former Milk Control legislation, and these have, to some extent, been derived from the report of the Royal Commission on milk which sat last year. Certain new principles are included in the bill, but we think they are sound, and we are certain that they are democratic.

I would like to point out that Ontario was the first of all the provinces of Canada to have a Milk Control Act, and it is very gratifying that, since then, all the other provinces have copied our legislation and come into line with what we did in Ontario.

I have said that the principles in this bill are democratic, and by that I mean that we now propose to let the people involved in the milk industry handle their own affairs. There will be no government direction or interference, except in extreme cases, so far as the price of milk is concerned. The bill makes no provision for any fixing of prices to the producer, or to the consumer, by the Milk Control Board. It does provide for the making of business arrangements between the producers and the distributors or processors, so that the producers can bargain for the best price possible. It permits the operation of free competition in distribution in order to establish fair prices from the distributor to the consumer. In other words, this bill provides a medium for producers and distributors, processors and truckers to do business together in an orderly manner. It places squarely upon the shoulders of the respective industry organizations the responsibility of running the fluid milk industry in the Province of Ontario.

I think, that is what the industry and the people of Ontario want today. They are tired of government interference in business, and so far as the milk industry of Ontario is concerned, they are going to have none of it. We are not going to put an umbrella over the inefficient producer or the inefficient distributor, but through free competition in the retail field, and collective bargaining between the producers and distributors in the primary marketing field, we are going to allow prices to find their proper level.

In this legislation, in the provisions for collective bargaining by negotiation, we are simply applying the principles that have worked so successfully in the Farm Products Marketing Act, under which a wide variety of farm products are sold by a process of negotiation or collective bargaining. That is getting back to true democracy, because it leaves the making of business arrangements in the hands of the people who are producing the milk, and those who are distributing it. They know that business better than anyone else, and under this bill, it covers not only the first sale of milk by the producer, but also applies to the transportation of milk and the fixing of quotas and other conditions of sale.

There is another important change in this bill, and one for which the milk producers have been asking. Under this bill, they are given power to establish marketing agencies to handle the sale of surplus milk during periods of heavy production. This is a very important provision. It gives to the producers the opportunity, through their own agents, to work out plans to secure greater returns for surplus milk, and so improve the returns over the whole production.

One of the difficult problems in the marketing of fluid milk is the securing of uniform supplies throughout the year. In the past, we have had too much milk in May and June, and not enough in the late summer, fall and early winter months. This bill provides the machinery whereby the producers can work out solutions to this problem. Producers may organize this marketing agency to market the surplus milk to the best advantage, or they may, by arrangement with the distributors, work out some plans to encourage and reward the farmer who can maintain high milk production in the fall and winter months. This and other steps for the stimulating and improvement of the production and marketing of milk are now made possible for the producers and distributors to work out amicably by mutual agreement, which can be enforced once the agreements are filed with the Milk Control Board.

The details of the various sections of the bill will come before the House in Committee, but the principles which I have outlined cover the main features in which the bill varies from the previous legislation.

I have confidence in the good judgment and common sense of our milk producers to make this legislation work effectively for the benefit of all classes, producers, distributors and consumers.

One thing is certain, and that is that our producers must have a fair price for their milk or they will go out of production. Some people have the mistaken idea that our farmers are making a lot of money today. In 1947, the gross farm income in Ontario was $546,300,000. But, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, their total farm operating expenses amounted to $235,800,000, so the net income was approximately $311,000,000, and when you divide that amongst the 170,000 farmers in Ontario, it works out to an average net income of $1,823.50 per farm. So even at present prices, the farmers are not making a lot of money.

In this Milk Control Bill we are doing a good job, not only for the producers of milk, but also for the distributors and the consumers, by allowing the industry to operate its own affairs, by removing government interference, and allowing the free play of those natural economic forces which in the long run bring prices to both producer and consumer to their proper level.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In connection with this bill, I do not believe that it has gone far enough. If we take into consideration the recommendations contained in the report of Mr. Justice Wells, this has just skimmed the top of some of those recommendations. It in no way implements the recommendations of the commission. There is no provision for the regulation of distributors, and the provisions controlling prices are inadequate. There is no control of price to the consumer, the board does not have power to prohibit sales above or below cost, plus a reasonable margin for handling and profits.

Who is to fix the reasonable margin? There is nothing set out in the bill as to who will say what is a "reasonable margin." Is it the distributor, or is it the processor?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: The Board.

MR. GRUMMETT: There is no provision, as far as I can see.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: The Board will do it.

MR. GRUMMETT: Would it not have been much more appropriate if there had been a provision right in the Act, stating that the board can do it? It leaves it wide open.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I think that is in the Act.

MR. GRUMMETT: I could not find it, Mr. Minister. There is also no provision for producer organizations to engage in the marketing of milk as recommended by the Royal Commission. They are authorized to only "stimulate, increase and improve marketing." The definition of "marketing" is also faulty, because it does not include processing and manufacturing.

I think, Mr. Speaker, this bill should go before a committee of this House which would be in a position to give it further study than we can here. On second reading here, we are merely sitting as the Legislature. This is a very important matter, and I would ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) to refer it to the Committee on Agriculture, in fact, I will make a motion to that effect.

To that end, Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Taylor, that Bill No. 126, the Milk Control Act, 1948, be not now read a second time, but be referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture in this House, in order that all interested persons and groups may have an opportunity of being heard.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, with your permission, I would like to ask the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett)—if he is either prepared to answer or able to answer—if he will indicate the basis of the statement he made before the House, as to which part of Mr. Justice Wells' report this bill carries out and which parts it does not.

I feel the proposal the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) put before us should be clearly identified as to whether or not there are proposals in the report under which he seeks to come, or whether there are simply proposals to further ideologies of the C.C.F., and I would ask him, since he uses the expression "Mr. Justice Wells' report," of what he complains in relation to that report?

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, that is merely a smart twist that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) is continually using in this House. We, in the Agricultural Committee, can take Mr. Justice Wells' report and study it there. If the whole House does not want to go over Mr. Justice Wells' report, the Agricultural Committee can, and hon. members of the committee can talk over the whole problem in a much better way than we can here. For the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to broach a proposition such as he did, is merely throwing a smoke-screen over the whole matter.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I would not have raised the matter except the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) stood up in the House and made reference to the Wells' report, and then proceeded to predicate his remarks on it.

My submission, Mr. Speaker, is that unless an hon. member is prepared to say what the report recommended and in what respects he complains the bill fails to implement the report, he should not make such a statement in the House. He has merely demonstrated his unwillingness or inability—I do not know which it is—to answer the question.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, to take one little illustration—I am not going to go over the whole Wells' report—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Have you read it?

MR. GRUMMETT: I have, Mr. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell).

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Have you?

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Have a look at it.

MR. GRUMMETT: The Wells' report suggested something should be done to eliminate the duplicating of services. I am just giving you one illustration.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The bill makes provision for that.

MR. GRUMMETT: This bill does not.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Of course it does.

MR. GRUMMETT: The bill introduced last October, contained in sub-section N—in paragraph N—the provision that the duplicating of delivery services were to be eliminated. When that bill came before this House last October, the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) withdrew that sub-section. He had it deleted from the bill of last October. There is nothing in this bill that I can find that covers this point.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) will permit me, I do not like to have him press those arguments in relation to the contents of the bill, saying it makes no provision, since if he will read the regulations section, he will see that there is a provision, first of all, for one thing that he said the bill does not cover, and that is where necessary the question of major and minor prices is taken care of.

In relation to his last question, the regulations section also provides for dealing by regulation with the question of routes.

Both matters are provided for in the bill, and I do not think the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) should rise in the House and make the statement there is no provision in the bill following the Wells' report, when both those matters are provided for.

MR. W. A. MURRAY (Stormont): Mr. Speaker, may I just say a word or two in connection with this bill?

First, I would like to put somewhat in the form of a question the fact that I do not know whether or not I interpret this bill properly, but I see that the milk producers—and that means practically the Milk Producers Association—and the Distributors Association must come to an agreement on the price they pay to producers. Does that mean the Milk Control Board has nothing to do with that?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is right.

MR. MURRAY: I would like to see the Milk Control Board in on that too, because they are practically consumers. That is the reason I did not like that. I believe the Milk Control Board should be sitting in there too, in order to help the consumer.

I would like to put another question on the subject, and that is, in case of dispute between the producers and the distributors, it may take some time to either raise or lower the price; or could it be shortened?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: It has been shortened. You can get it adjudged right away.

MR. MURRAY: Well, as I see it, the Milk Control Board, then, has control of practically everything else, is that right?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes, they regulate, they see the provisions of the Act and the agreement are carried out.

MR. MURRAY: Outside of those two points, the view I take is that I am in favour of the bill, because I do not think you can get a bill perfect and capable of suiting everybody. It can always be amended if it does not prove satisfactory. Those are the only two things I wish to mention.

There are other small things that do not seem just suitable, but otherwise, I am in favour of the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, at second reading of this bill, I want to express my view with respect to its general principles, without going into detail.

I think the bill is a terrible disappointment to the majority of the people in the province who looked forward expectantly for the promised milk bill. As is well known here, the milk issue or more concretely, the milk-price issue, was, and remains, a very lively and important one among the great mass of people. It was as a result of the increase in the price of milk when the federal subsidies were removed that a commission was appointed, and this Government permitted the increase in the price of milk.

In reply to all demands and proposals from various groups, this Government said that there was a commission appointed and that until such time as the report would be made and the recommendations implemented, nothing much could be done.

In the meantime, Mr. Speaker, the price of milk increased until today it is 18 cents a quart, a very high price, I submit, and a price which is responsible for a very serious decrease in milk consumption in the cities, and particularly among the working people.

Mr. Speaker, I think the milk bill before us falls short primarily because it does not reflect any social approach to this problem, and that is what is necessary when dealing with so vital a problem. The present bill will completely eliminate price controls insofar as the sale of milk is concerned. It establishes or re-establishes what the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) calls a "free market," "free play" within that industry, and permits prices to fluctuate until they will settle somewhere. And the very genial hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) says this is "free democracy," which only goes to show you that one could interpret the word as one pleases.

I assert, from the point of view of the working-class mothers, who have to buy a number of quarts of milk to feed their children in accordance with the advice of her doctor, this would not be very democratic because it does not help her. The bill, as I said, lacks social approach; therein lies its weakness, and its uselessness in the face of the present situation. It seems to me this Government, or any government representing the people as a whole, when confronted with a problem such as this, should be concerned with only two groups in the community, the producers and the masses of consumers.

The Government should do everything necessary to safeguard the interests of the milk producer, the farmer, the primary producer, and should introduce legislation which will guarantee every farmer producing milk for the market an adequate income, not merely enough to pay his way, but enough to enable him and his family and his help to live in decency. I say, Mr. Speaker, that the people of the cities are not at all desirous of depriving the farmers of their due insofar as the cost of milk production is concerned. The city people are anxious the farmers should receive enough and the Government should protect the farmers in getting enough. Once having done that, Mr. Speaker, the next task of the Government is to provide conditions which will enable the people to consume as much milk as is required for the health of the people.

I am sorry to say this bill does not provide for these considerations. It may offer some protection to the farmers—and I hope it will, Mr. Speaker—although I might say that from press reports even the representatives of farm groups speak very haltingly about the bill, and are not certain that the bill will provide the farmer with protection. But there is nothing there to protect the consumer. There is nothing to indicate understanding of the basic fact that the milk industry is monopolized. The report of the Royal Commission emphasized that. Three of the largest dairies sold 50 per cent. of the products of the industry in Ontario, and the profits of some of these very large corporations were fantastically high. The bill will not protect the consumer then.

One more point, Mr. Speaker; on the general principle of the bill, is the question of subsidies. The bill before us is not recommending any subsidy. This is a principal question, and I submit the Government would be fully justified and would receive whole-hearted endorsement of the people of this province in undertaking payment of a subsidy in order to provide milk at 13 cents a quart to the public. Milk, Mr. Speaker, is not just an ordinary item on the market, it is one of the essential foods. You cannot treat it as if you were treating an ordinary commodity which you buy or leave on the shelf. It is essential for the children, and it is essential for the mothers and for fathers, too; I must come to the defence of the fathers.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Are you coming around to drinking milk?

MR. SALSBERG: I will advise the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) I must drink milk, whether I like it or not.

Dealing therefore with such an essential food, I say the Government would be justified in providing a subsidy to sell milk at 13 cents a quart to the public. You may tell me that would run into a large sum of money, "you want to protect the farmer to see that he gets a fair price, then you want us to subsidize milk."

I submit, Mr. Speaker, we would be fully justified in taking the amount necessary for the subsidy from the profits of liquor and pay it to the farmer, so as to provide milk at 13 cents a quart. The farmer would be protected and the children would be protected. The bill does not provide that, and it is therefore not a bill which embodies all that was expected and desired by the public on the question of milk.

I am sorry to find another omission in this bill. There is a general widespread demand that milk should be provided for school children free of charge regardless of the parents' ability to pay, so as not to differentiate between one child and another, every child should be given milk at school every day, and this has to be paid for by somebody.

Now, a proper and all-inclusive milk bill would make provision for that, too, and I think the Government should have been prepared to assume the cost for distribution of milk to the children. This is not contained in the bill.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, I am naive enough to think it worthwhile arguing with the Conservative Government to try to convince them, but I think there should have been an amendment to the act where necessary, to enable municipalities to go into the milk-distribution business. I think if that were done, the farmers of this province would be in an ideal position, because then they would deal with responsible bodies, with the Municipal Milk Boards. They would get their price. The cost of distribution would be reduced to the very minimum, and the public would have the milk necessary, and our youth would grow up healthier and stronger. It is not there.

I will mention one more objection, because it has not provided for a number of the consuming public on the board, if I am correct in reading it. That is very serious. In view of these considerations, I am obliged to conclude with what I started, that the bill is a terrible disappointment, it is very inadequate. It provides no guarantee of protection for the milk producers, it certainly leaves the consumer at the mercy of what the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) would call "free play" . . . I am sorry to say I am afraid that milk consumption will, of course, decline, as it has since the increased payment, and will affect the health of our young people, the public will come in for quite a "fleecing," the big monopolies will become bigger and the little fellows will be gobbled up to the detriment of all concerned.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I had not intended saying anything on the bill.

Insofar as the principle embodied therein is concerned, we are going to support the second reading of the bill, but after the remarks of my hon.

friend for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) I want to set out in the bill the relief problem he suggested, and it is a very serious one.

He asks that the farmers should have a reasonable price for their raw product, and there should be an element there of profit for the farmer, and then on the other hand my hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg) suggests that the price to the consumer should be at the lowest possible level.

I think all of us in this House agree with those two conditions, but the difficulty arises, of course, when we attempt to make these two conflicting philosophies, shall I say, meet on common ground. So far as the farmer himself is concerned—and my hon. friend from Oxford (Mr. Dent) will agree—he is in this position; if he cannot get a price for his milk which will guarantee the cost of production, then the ultimate and only course he can pursue is to go out of the production of milk, so that we have a situation in the province, we have had it for a number of years and will have it for some little time ahead. We have got to give the farmer the price he must have for his milk or else we do not get the production of milk. If you are going to give the farmer the price he should have for his milk, then it must cost the consumer the difference between the farmers' price and what the processor has to take out of it.

I think we all realize, on the other side of the picture, the consumption of milk is very, very important for our whole population. I know, as a farmer, I realize that you are up against that stone wall, if the farmer does not get the cost of production, he goes out of production, and you have not got the milk. The only leeway my hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg) saw, and the only one I could picture this afternoon, is that some level of government, should pay a bonus in between to lower the price to the consumer. I think I am in harmony with my hon. friend, the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) when I say bonuses permanently installed are an unsound economic practice.

There is one more factor enters into it. My hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg) mentioned the distributors. I do not know the profits of the distributors, but I would suggest to him—and I think it is common knowledge—the Milk Control Board has at its disposal statisticians who can determine these things and they stand between the milk consumer and the public-at-large in seeing that these intermediaries—these processing plants between the consumer and the producer—do not get more than their just share out of the price of milk.

I think it pretty well gets back to the question, if we want milk and our people need it to drink—and they do—then they must be prepared to pay a price which will guarantee the farmer his cost of production. The only thing that could change that would be the imposition of subsidies by some level of government. I will leave that question with the Government as to whether they desire to enter into that field.

In the broad picture, the bill itself will, I think, have the commendation of the producers and as much commendation as can be given by the consumers. I do hope the consumers understand the picture and understand the part the farmer has to play. The farmer is not trying to gouge the market or take more out than he should. He is just taking enough out to continue in production and produce that very essential product.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): I might say, I cannot accept the hon. members' recommendation to have this laid over. For three months we have had this under consideration. This bill was introduced a week or ten days ago, and we have gone through it very slowly so that everybody could come in and lay their suggestions before the Government as to what they thought a Milk Act should be. A lot more work will be done. I did not go into any more than the principle of the bill. In committee we can go slowly over it, clause by clause, so everybody will understand what it means.

May I make this statement, as Minister of Agriculture, there is more milk drunk in the Province of Ontario today than ever before in the history of the province. That is, tinned milk plus fluid milk. I would like to make this public, there was more milk drunk in the Province of Ontario in 1947 than in any other year, and it was not all fluid milk, some of it was tinned milk. That is why you cannot buy a tin of condensed milk today.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: (St. Andrew): Why was the falling away from fluid milk?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Well, that is an argument easy to answer, of course.

THE FUEL SUPPLY ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 28th Order, second reading of Bill No. 127, An Act to amend The Fuel Supply Act.

HON. L. M. FROST (Minister of Mines): I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 127, An Act to amend The Fuel Supply Act.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): I think we ought to have some explanation of it.

HON. MR. FROST: I thought, Mr. Speaker, I had explained that on the first reading, at the request of some of the hon. members.

Briefly, I would say this Act clarifies actually what we have been doing in the past year, and it makes plain the authority for so doing. The Fuel Supply Act was an Act passed during the period of the First World War and actually there has not been any amendment or change in the Act since that time. This brings the Act up-to-date and permits us to carry on the course which we really have been carrying on under the Act for some time.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Who is the controller? How is he appointed?

HON. MR. FROST: The controller is Mr. Crozier, the mines assessor in the mines department. You met Mr. Crozier on the committee which we had looking into the Mining Act. Mr. Crozier is a man of very great experience. When the commissioner was on active service, he acted as commissioner and also acted for the power controller in Ontario during the war days and he is very familiar with the whole operation.

MR. SALSBERG: A member of your department?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 29th Order.

THE MINING TAX ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 29th Order, second reading of Bill No. 128, An Act to amend The Mining Tax Act. Mr. Frost.

HON. L. M. FROST (Minister of Mines): I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 128, An Act to amend The Mining Tax Act.

I have already given an explanation of this bill but I would just briefly say there are in southwestern Ontario a large number of gas producers—individuals and companies—who drill for gas. Some of these people are comparatively small and some of them are quite large. For instance, we have the Imperial Oil Company doing work down there, and they are a large producer of natural gas. That comes as part of their work in drilling for oil in Southwestern Ontario and I may say this to the House; in the oil business there are still some interesting possibilities in Southwestern Ontario and the Imperial Oil Company is spending a great deal of money on work in that area.

Perhaps next week I may have an opportunity to give a little more elaborate statement in connection with that.

Then, we have the Union Gas Company and the Dominion Gas Company, they are large producers and prospectors and developers in that line, but we have a host of little people who are unincorporated, little drillers and prospectors who are working over that area and sometimes bring in a very important field. I would say this, there are a considerable number of small taxpayers—for instance, I see here $128.50, another one pays $5.72 and another one $245, etc.

Now, those are un-incorporated individuals who have not any incorporation and they are doing that type of work. This Act relieves those people of paying any tax up to $250. With the larger concerns they do pay a tax and quite a considerable tax but with the larger ones, as you will notice in the Corporation Tax Act, we are giving those an allowance for actual expenditures in connection with development work. We are giving them an allowance for that as a deductible expense before the incorporation of Corporation Tax. I think this Act rather evens out the situation for the small man who would not benefit under the Corporation Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 30th Order.

THE ASSESSMENT ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 30th Order, second reading of Bill No. 129, An Act to amend The Assessment Act. Mr. Dunbar.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 129, An Act to amend The Assessment Act.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I think my hon. friend (Mr. Dunbar) should say something on this bill. Is not there a serious departure from the present principle involved?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes. There have been a number of municipalities coming for special legislation, private bills, in order to give them permission to enter into an agreement with the public utilities, in order that something in lieu of taxation might be allowed.

Last year, you will remember, the City of Toronto presented a private bill and it was passed; again this year Kingston presented a private bill, and it carried, and some other municipalities presented private bills.

This was the recommendation of the municipal organization of the Province of Ontario, that it be made general, so they would have the power to enter into an agreement with the municipality for fire protection, police protection, law enforcement, street lighting, snow and ice removal, drainage and sanitation, waste removal, and the conservation of health.

The reason these were enumerated in this way was we did not want to go into education, because a public utility would not have any person there, so it was decided for this year to try this general act, and if the municipalities feel that we have gone too far, or have not gone far enough, during the conferences this coming summer, it can be easily changed at the next session, but this is what the representatives of all the municipalities in the province have asked for.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): This list of services as set out in the bill, is precisely what Toronto got in their private bill?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, and Kingston.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: It is permissive legislation?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, it is permissive legislation, of course.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 31st Order.

THE PUBLIC LANDS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 31st Order, second reading of Bill No. 130, An Act to amend The Public Lands Act, Mr. Scott.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of Bill No. 130, I do not think there is any great explanation needed. It is a bill along the lines of the recommendations in the report of the Royal Commission on Forestry, and I would move second reading of Bill No. 130, An Act to amend the Public Lands Act.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) if there will be two deputies, one of lands and forests, and one for fish and game, or one deputy in charge of directing the affairs of fish and game. What will the set-up be?

HON. MR. SCOTT: Shall we say, one deputy in charge of administrative affairs, and one in charge of the practical end of forestry.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 32nd Order.

THE FORESTRY ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 32nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 131, An Act to amend The Forestry Act. Mr. Scott.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of this bill, again this is an implementation of recommendations which were contained in the report of the Royal Commission on Forestry, that a commission composed of the representatives of the various groups as listed in this bill should be advisory committee to the Minister, and I would move second reading of Bill No. 131, An Act to amend The Forestry Act.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask a question of the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) in connection with this and the previous bill. There seems to be an attempt to implement some of the recommendations on the part of the Commission.

However, the hon. members of this House will recall an Act adopted by this House for the establishment of a Forestry Commission along the lines of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. That bill was in accordance with the speeches made by the hon. Leader of the Government (Mr. Drew) prior to the election in 1943, when he promised that a commission would be set up. In other words, legislative action was taken to remove the administration of our forest resources from the Government and place it under an impartial and capable board, as we manage our hydro affairs. That bill was enacted. I think it was carried unanimously by the House. Then a Royal Commission was appointed, and the Act was not implemented. We are now confronted with a number of bills which bring in parts of the recommendations of the Royal Commission.

Does that mean the Act which was adopted by this House is now completely null and void? I do not think it was ever proclaimed. Is the old policy of the Government to be replaced by a commission of this type, still leaving the administration in the hands of the Minister in the department, rather than vesting it in the hands of an outside commission appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, as was understood by a majority of the citizens to have been the policy of the Government? It is rather an important item, and I do not think it is wrong to ask this question at this time. Whether the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) answers it or the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) wishes to answer, I think they should clear up the situation at this time.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) : Mr. Speaker, I think I might answer that question, in view of the fact that the earlier steps were taken prior to the time the present hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) occupied that office.

The committee which was set up by this Act is a committee whose functions would be very similar to those of the commission which was authorized by an earlier Act, to which the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) referred. I would remind the hon. members of the Legislature that the commission to which he refers was not a commission which replaced the department, but was a commission which had advisory powers. As was explained to this Legislature at the time the Royal Commission was appointed, the advice of the law officers of the Crown was that before the Royal Commission could conduct its enquiry, it was necessary the powers conferred upon the men named in the Act should be deleted. It is a strictly legal problem, and there was the question as to legal authority to appoint a Royal Commission to deal with matters which fell within the ambit of the authority conferred by the statutes upon the Commission.

For that reason, a bill was introduced in this Legislature amending the Act and removing the powers conferred upon the men, so the Royal Commission could proceed to conduct a full enquiry. That Commission conducted the most extensive enquiry which has ever been conducted in this or any other province into the general problems of forestry and forest administration, and made a comprehensive report which has met with very general approval throughout the whole Province of Ontario.

In that report by the Royal Commission there was a recommendation that the administration of the forest affairs of this province should remain under departmental administration, with the assistance of an advisory committee. The Government has accepted that recommendation, and the appointment of this advisory committee carries out the express terms of the recommendation in the report of the Royal Commission.

That is the sequence of events which brings us to the bill which is now before us.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to recall with some considerable degree of approval, many of the things which have been said on different occasions in this Legislature by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) in regard to divesting the Government of administrative functions, and placing them under the control of any commission. In fairness to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) I wish to qualify that statement by saying that at no time did he make that an inclusive statement or suggest there were no bodies in the form of commissions or boards which it was appropriate to set up, and I wish to take this opportunity to express agreement with the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) on points he has made at different times with regard to the undesirability of creating bodies which are not responsible to the Legislature, and in turn directly to the electorate, and placing in the hands of these bodies administrative responsibilities which must be constantly responsive to the general wishes of the people who are primarily concerned in these activities.

This Government has demonstrated its belief in the operation of certain activities by commissions and boards. I believe there are appropriate occasions for that type of administration and supervision.

We concur, however, in the recommendation in this case that the forest administration of this province should remain as a Government responsibility, and there should be this device for informing and advising the Government as to ways in which forest practises can be improved from time to time.

That is the purpose of this bill, and the advisory committee which was set up will be a representative committee capable of examining the facts in relation to this tremendously important field of provincial activity, and making proper recommendations from time to time through the department, which is responsible for the assets which remain as continuing property in the right of the people of Ontario.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on second reading of this bill. My first reaction is, if this is the only legislation we are to have at this session, then it does not correct the troubles in our forests, and is indeed a disappointment to the north-western part of this province. I have no doubt but the setting up of a committee of this type will be advantageous. As I understand it, the committee will not necessarily be made up of experts, but of men chosen from the various occupations named in the bill, the duty of whom would be to advise the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott).

I believe—and I have known many instances myself where a committee of that type might have something to do with the forests, especially in relation to the industry; adjustments might be made, but I cannot for the life of me see where this committee will correct the shortcomings, the inefficiency, the duplication of services, the wasteful practises, and the quarrels between the operators, and so on, so plainly laid down in the Kennedy report. I think it was a very courageous report, and laid down in unmistakeable language what he thought was a remedy.

The naming of this committee was, to my mind, one which could only be the result of a recommendation as to how the real difficulties in the forests might be corrected.

In April, 1941, a minority report was tabled, from a committee appointed to investigate and inquire into the department of Land and Forests, and point number 1 reads:

“The administration, conservation and utilization of forests resources of the Province of Ontario should be placed under the control of a committee to be known as the ‘Ontario Forest Commission,’ which commission should have similar powers to those conferred upon the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.”

I had hoped something along that line might be done. I feel the Government should follow exactly that path, and I would like to say this advisory committee will not go deep enough into the problems to make the changes necessary and which have been awaited for so long in my part of the province. We have waited through the years as various committees reported, and when the Kennedy Commission tabled its report, we were in hopes that in the long run we had received some relief. We felt that here was a commission who in unmistakeable language laid down the shortcomings of the law. He goes so far as to say the operators must be protected against their own folly. He pointed out the duplication of services, and quoted figures to show where over $6,000,000 or $8,000,000 saving could be effected almost immediately.

This advisory committee does not get to the meat of that problem. I think it is a good idea, and it can serve a useful function, but it is a disappointment that the Government did not see fit to go further than it did.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, with the consent of the hon. members, I think I should make it quite clear that this by no manner of means is the limit of what the Government is doing in relation to this report, and I regret the hon. member from Port Arthur (Mr. Robinson) has failed to pay attention to what has been said here, because it has been made perfectly clear that the Government has gone a very great deal farther than this, and is implementing most of the recommendations, and what has been pointed out publicly as well as in certain remarks here, is the fact that most of the things which have been recommended can be dealt with under existing legislation, and the department has long ago put into effect decisions of policy which implement most of the recommendations.

The hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Robinson) was present at the time I announced on behalf of the Government, on October 2nd, one of the most far-reaching decisions which have been made in regard to forest affairs of this province in a great many years. I was merely making the announcement on behalf of the Government in relation to a decision of the Department of Lands and Forests, when I explained in Port Arthur that the Government had made a firm decision which had been communicated as of that day to the operators, that we would stop the export of unprocessed pulp wood from Crown lands under a plan which permitted the progressive reduction so that there would not be unjust interference with arrangements which had been made which involved the expenditure of a very large sum of money and the employment of many men in that area.

Earlier this year, at a meeting of the Canadian Forest Protective Association in Montreal, I announced the Government had already reached a decision of policy and was putting it into effect, in regard to the utilization of all types of wood in areas which are being cut under permits from the department. That, as the hon. member (Mr. Robinson) will realize, was one of the other very important recommendations, and that policy will definitely be adhered to, and a public statement has already been made and has been carried fairly extensively throughout the province, particularly in the northern areas, to the effect there will be a conference in June of all those engaged in actual cutting operations to discuss ways and means of carrying into practical effect in the most efficient way the policy of utilizing all the wood cut in that way.

I think the hon. member (Mr. Robinson) by enquiry will find every major recommendation in that report will have been implemented, either by decisions of policy under existing legislation, or by the legislation which is now before this Legislature.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 33rd Order.

INSURANCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 33rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 132, An Act to amend the Insurance Act. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 132, An Act to amend the Insurance Act.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, could we have a word as to the purport of the bill; I do not think there was any explanation given on this before.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) said is true, I did not make a statement on the introduction of this bill.

I may say this about it—and I will be glad to add anything that the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) would like me to—that this is an amending bill which deals in the main with a great number of unrelated sections. It is extremely difficult to give this House a comprehensive picture, since those sections are individually dealt with, and it should by and large be a bill which lends itself to discussion in committee.

I will say, however, that the first part of it, which deals with the question of life insurance, brings the last provision, which I think was made about 1935, up to date, by taking into account the legal decisions and so forth since that time, following examination of their effect and the exercise of the best judgment of what the law should be. In that field, too, hon. members will appreciate that group insurance in the life field is comparatively new, and this represents a revision in relation to the provisions applicable to that field of life insurance.

On the accident and sickness field, in the main, the revisions are minor in their nature; they are of a technical nature, having no great principle involved.

Coming to the question of public policy, however, there is an amendment that is of some importance in principle, and which is a new view on the question of public policies. Perhaps what hon. members do not appreciate is if somebody commits a crime of any nature in the course of the operation of a motor car, on the grounds of public policy, that would void the insurance policy. That principle is now changed by this bill, unless the offense itself was of the very nature which occasions the damage. That is a matter of some importance.

MR. NIXON: Under what section would that occur?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) no doubt wants to read it, but if he is unable to find it, I will be glad to send him a note. This bill has hundreds of sections, and I do not want to delay the Legislature while I look it up, but I will be very glad to send the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) a note about it.

There is a rather important provision in the bill which has to do with trailers. I am very pleased to introduce this amendment to the Legislature, Mr. Speaker, because hon. members are familiar with the fact that when the vacation season is on, there are an immense number of people who move about the province in trailers and who use trailers to transport their own possessions to summer cottages and to camps and so forth.

Under the present law, persons in this position have to get an endorsement on the policy, otherwise the insurance would be invalid. It is a matter of satisfaction that these provisions in the bill, unless the trailer is used for commercial purposes, remove the necessity of getting that endorsement, and perhaps I should say to the Legislature that the amendment is being introduced to the satisfaction of the companies.

Mr. Speaker, I have not covered in detail the amendments in the bill; they are the sort of amendments which lend themselves to consideration in committee, but I hope I have said enough about the bill to give hon. members an indication of any important principles in the insurance laws which are affected.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 34th Order.

ACT TO SUSPEND THE INCOME TAX ACT (ONTARIO)

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 34th Order, second reading of Bill No. 133, An Act to suspend The Income Tax Act (Ontario). Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of this bill, I may say it is in accordance with the statement contained in the budget which was delivered just a week ago, and is also covered by the statement which I made on the introduction of the bill a few days ago.

Perhaps it would bear repeating, and I might say to hon. members of this House that in the good old Province of Ontario we have the lowest per capita provincial tax in Canada.

There are a great variety of taxes in force in other provinces in Canada which are not in force in Ontario.

As far as this particular bill is concerned, last year we stated we were desirous of assisting the Dominion Government to very radically reduce income tax. I am glad to say the Dominion Government was able last year to reduce income tax by, generally speaking, some 28 per cent. We thought last year, and I think it was stated here, the reduction should be somewhere around 30 per cent., and it turned out to be just about that amount.

Mr. Speaker, we are not desirous of hindering the Dominion in any way. This Government, I think, has been most co-operative with the Dominion Government. It is true there have been differences, but, nevertheless, this Government in every place where it has been possible to co-operate with the Dominion Government in a businesslike way for the benefit of not only the people of Ontario but for the people of Canada, has done so.

Last night the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) suggested we should go into the income tax field, and should impose a 5 per cent. tax which would be deductible from the Dominion tax, and which in effect would not raise the level. We feel this is not the time to do that. I think perhaps, making a rough calculation, that our refraining from entering that field last year meant it assisted in giving a definite tax reduction to the people of our province through the general tax reductions given by the Dominion Government in income taxes last year.

Let us remember we have in Ontario 50 per cent. of the income tax payers, and we contribute practically 50 per cent. of the Dominion total. Therefore, when Ontario stays out of the field to the extent of deducting 5 per cent. of the Dominion amount, it makes it easier for the Dominion Government to hand on tax reductions to our people. I think that is highly desirable, and we do not think it is the time this year to go back into that field. We think in carrying on the way we are, we are assisting the Dominion Government to further get rid of many of the wartime taxes which they had to impose for the purpose of carrying on our job during the war days.

Mr. Speaker, again I say we are anxious to help and not to hinder the Dominion. We are hopeful many of the wartime taxes can be further removed or reduced this year, and to further that we are not going to impose any income tax this year.

Therefore, I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 133, An Act to suspend The Income Tax Act (Ontario).

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has already said, I dealt with this matter at some length last night. Frankly I find it very difficult to follow the logic of the position put forward by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

He says in taking this course of action, he is making it possible for the Federal Government to eliminate some of the wartime taxes. I could easily understand the desire of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) to accommodate Mr. Abbott, if he were consistent in that policy.

HON. MR. FROST: We are consistent.

MR. MACLEOD: But, as rapidly as they withdrew from a field, you jump in with both feet.

HON. MR. FROST: We have not jumped in here.

MR. MACLEOD: You have not jumped in here, but you have jumped into gasoline tax, and into corporation profits tax, and you are going to jump into the amusement tax field; and I venture to say that if the Federal Government were to drop the 8 per cent. sales tax, under some conditions, which would make sense to you but not to anyone else, you would find a reason for jumping into that field as well.

The case I put forward last night, briefly, was this. This Government is throwing away about $15,000,000 of the Ontario taxpayers' money. The people of Ontario are in this current year going to pay, or last year did pay, $15,000,000 which this Government could have received back by just holding out their hand and taking it, and why they failed to do that is certainly not clear to me.

If there was any hope at the moment that the Government of Ontario and the Government at Ottawa would "kiss and make up" and were going to sign a tax agreement and so on, then one might regard this action as a helpful gesture to facilitate the reaching of such an accord. But that does not seem to be on the horizon. The words exchanged between Ottawa and Queen's Park are not becoming softer, they are becoming harsher, and I do not know how much farther you can go. I do not know what words there are in the vocabulary of invective which you could employ to describe the Government at Ottawa which you have not already employed.

We have the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada almost indicted for murder insofar as the Hong Kong business is concerned, and he is accused of "piling falsehood upon falsehood" and so on and so forth, so the cold war is going on, and relationships between this Government and the Government at Ottawa are in a state of impasse, and there does not seem to be any way out, unless this Government agrees to support the motion of mine now on the Order Paper, which would have the effect of forgetting all about Ottawa and calling an inter-provincial conference of its own. However, that, of course, is another question and I cannot debate it now, otherwise I would not be able to make my speech when the resolution comes up. But I say again to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), why throw that money away? Why make it possible for the hon. Mr. Abbott to make political capital out of the fact that he is going to have $1,000,000,000 surplus this year? Why should you be helping him to do that? I say let us keep the $15,000,000 here, because it is not going to place any additional burden on the people of Ontario.

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): You are becoming a provincialist.

MR. MACLEOD: No, I am simply looking the facts squarely in the face. You have put a barbed wire fence around the province, and you are allowing the money of Ontario to slide through that fence into another jurisdiction and failing to take the necessary action to protect your own wards because you say to yourself your mission in life is to "defend the customs and way of life" of the Province of Ontario against those unitarians in Ottawa.

If that is the proposition, I say let us make the best of a bad situation and keep the $15,000,000 here and use it for paying adequate old age pensions, adequate health services, and so on and so forth. And, in the meantime, while you are taking the 5 per cent. out, try to relax and create those conditions between yourselves and the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King and the hon. Mr. St. Laurent which will lead to improvement in your relationships.

If it is the intention of this bill to have this Legislature go on record approving a policy of allowing $15,000,000 to go into the Federal treasury that belongs to us, then as far as I am concerned, I am going to vote against it. I think it is bad policy.

HON. MR. FROST: I really feel sorry for my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod). I never like to see anybody living in a state of perpetual gloom and dissatisfaction, apparently at war with everybody, and dissatisfied with everybody, and unable to see the bright side of things, and in a state of mind apparently where everything displeases him.

MR. MACLEOD: I want to assure the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) I have the peace that comes from understanding.

HON. MR. FROST: I am glad he is satisfied with himself, because he is satisfied with nothing else. If he is really pleased with his own notebook, that is something. I would say he is very hard to satisfy.

A few days ago we introduced a bill in this House to assist, by way of taxes to be allotted to hospitals, in the very great problem, to help the people in this province who are ill and to lay a great foundation for a hospital system in this Province of Ontario equal to none on the continent of America. He was dissatisfied with that. The rest of the House was unanimously in favour, but he was able to get one colleague to vote with him and to oppose that great measure which is going to bring health and happiness to our people.

He criticises us for taking over a tax for hospitals, an amusement tax, which we expect the Dominion Government, in a spirit of co-operation will vacate, and which can be applied to that cause.

This afternoon I got up and proposed we refrain from imposing any additional burden on the little taxpayers of this province, hundreds of whom you see walking up and down the streets, some of whom are in the Chamber today, and he criticises us for not imposing that tax.

I should say I have reached the stage with my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) where it is impossible to satisfy and please him, and I would suggest to him he should look on the brighter side of things, and figure we are getting along in Canada and Ontario pretty well.

It is true we do have our differences with the Dominion Government, but things are working out and coming along very well, and in the good old Province of Ontario we have the lowest per capita tax of any place in Canada and we want to keep it just that way.

MR. MACLEOD: I think it would be very unfortunate if what I said—

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): A point of order, Mr. Speaker. I understand you cannot speak twice on second reading.

MR. MACLEOD: There has been a lot of latitude, and I think I am justified in correcting some of the statements which were made. The issue is not that you are going to impose an income tax in the Province of Ontario; that is not the issue. You do not have to impose a tax, all you have to do is take advantage of the provision made possible by the Federal Government whereby you retain in the Province of Ontario the sum of $15,000,000, and it will not add a single solitary cent of additional tax on anybody, including yourself.

HON. MR. FROST: It will not take anything away.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say one word to add to this debate, if I may.

The fact of the matter is in the imposition of this tax or not, I would like to repeat what I have said in this Legislature before, that the people of moderate means today pay sales tax, and despite what they may think about it, they pay corporation taxes. You cannot tax the corporation, it is paid for in increased goods and services the people buy. It is the opinion of this Government that in those taxes for which there is no exemption, the people of moderate means pay enough in that tax field.

This Government is opposed to participating in and being a party to levying upon the people of moderate incomes in this country a perpetual income tax without the present low exemptions, and that is the greatest motivating force keeping this Government out of this income tax field, until that is rectified.

There is another very important point involved. With our present low exemption, we are developing a huge bureaucracy which has to be collected out of this tax, collect the same amounts of money with small exemptions on people of small incomes, and that the law of diminishing returns. We would like to see a diminishing participation in that field, and brought within the scope of common sense so that the people who are already paying enough taxes in that field receive that tax relief.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I had no intention of participating in the debate on this bill, but the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) thought he would strengthen the case of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), and his effort to state what was already quite clear, and as strong as it could be, prompts me to say just a few words. It will only be a few words.

Our position of taxation is quite clear, and it sounds fantastic for a Government who had just put on a 20 per cent. amusement tax on the little people, to suddenly come forth as a defender of the small taxpayer and try to turn the table.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) also mentioned in the Chamber at this moment: "Let it therefore be very clear we are opposed to a personal income tax on the small taxpayer."

We are opposed to the amusement tax, not because we are opposed to helping hospitals, but because we believe that is not the way to help the hospitals—not by taxing the person who goes to the movies. Instead, we believe an increase in the corporation tax would provide all that was necessary, and more, without taxing the little people. Insofar as the point my colleague and the leader of my party (Mr. MacLeod) has made, it is simply that in view of the failure of the two Governments to come to terms, and in view of the fact that the Dominion Government does extract that tax, and in view of the fact this provincial Government could, without incurring a personal income tax to any taxpayer by 1 cent, get out of that tax $15,000,000, that this be taken, and acquire funds without increasing the taxation and would enable the Government to finance social services which are not adequately financed.

I hope this makes it very clear, and the matter is very well understood by the hon. members as well as by the taxpayers who are sitting in the Chamber at the present time.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 35th Order.

THE CORPORATIONS TAX ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 35th Order, second reading of Bill No. 134,

An Act to amend The Corporations Tax Act, 1939. Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this bill. This is a further allowance as against taxes and in effect a further reduction in the tax. A few minutes ago I explained to the House, in moving second reading of the Amusement Tax Act, we were introducing that in order that we might help a large number of little people, little producers in south-western Ontario. We have always tried to impress upon the hon. members opposite it was the small man—the little man.

This Act allows the corporations a deduction as a deductible expense before calculation of corporation tax, expenses which they incur in exploration and prospecting work. I might say to my hon. friends that last winter we called upon one of the large oil companies to assist in southwestern Ontario in very extensive work in attempting to locate additional wells of natural gas. The company proceeded, helped us in every way possible, and did a lot of work in drilling, which did not accomplish anything. That happens all over this province in the matter of all kinds of mining generally, precious metals, base metal mining, natural gas and prospecting and drilling for oil, and we are allowing as a deductible expense the expenses which are incurred in work of that sort.

MR. SALSBERG: That is for the little fellow?

HON. MR. FROST: This is in connection with corporations.

Let me point this out to my hon. friends opposite who are generally critical of everything we do, that in itself assists, in a sensible way, to develop our natural resources. In developing our natural resources it produces more wealth, and new communities, homes, work and wages, and we think it is the reasonable and sensible way to give an incentive to companies, small and large, which are, after all, the principal methods and means and instruments of development, to go ahead with the development of the great natural resources of this province.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are some other matters in the bill, but they may be discussed in committee, but that is the principal item and I move second reading of this bill.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 36th Order.

THE SECURITY TRANSFER TAX ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 36th Order, second reading of Bill No. 135, An Act to amend The Security Transfer Tax Act, 1939. Mr. Frost.

HON. L. M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of this bill, and in so doing, I say this bill is, in a sense, a routine bill coming up every year.

This is the amount of money we are asking the Legislature to empower us to raise, and is a very large sum, $100,000,000.

Mr. Speaker, I may say it may not be necessary for us to use the full powers of this bill, for this reason; a portion of the monies which are required are for refunding purposes. A portion of them we hope to raise on the province guaranteeing certain subsidiaries of ours, such as Hydro-Electric Power Commission, but, nevertheless, in an operation as vast and as great as the one we are faced with this year and will be for the ensuing 2 or 3 years, it is necessary and desirable to have powers which will enable us to act in a different way if we so desire.

It may be it is more desirable for us to borrow money directly ourselves than on the strength and credit of certain subsidiaries, but my own judgment is it may not be necessary for us to do that, but if we find it is necessary we have the broad powers in this bill to enable us to go ahead with the biggest programme of development the Province of Ontario has ever seen.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost), in the case of guaranteeing bonds issued by the Hydro—you do not need to cover that by this bill. This is not included in this $100,000,000.

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, does this bill restrict the Government to borrowing money only in Canada, or will it be free to borrow money outside the country, if they so desire?

HON. MR. FROST: We would be free to borrow outside of Canada. It has not been the policy of this Government to do it other than refunding.

MR. SALSBERG: You have no intention of going outside the country to borrow money?

HON. MR. FROST: Not at the moment.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 38th Order.

THE GAME AND FISHERIES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 38th Order, second reading of Bill No. 137, An Act to amend The Game and Fisheries Act. Mr. Scott.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, this Act is really not changed in principle; it is for clarification. There are certain minor amendments to improve the Act. One major change is the introduction of the use of metal seals for identification, and I think the sections can be really dealt with in committee. I move second reading of Bill No. 137, An Act to amend the Game and Fisheries Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 39th Order.

FOREST FIRES PREVENTION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 39th Order, second reading of Bill No. 138, the Forest Fires Prevention Act, 1948. Mr. Scott.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): This is a consolidation of the former Act with some very small amendments. Practically no change in principle. It is another Act which can be really dealt with better in committee when we go through it section by section.

I would move second reading of Bill No. 138, the Forest Fires Prevention Act, 1948.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 46th Order.

THE CROWN TIMBER ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 46th Order, second reading of Bill No. 146, An Act to amend The Crown Timber Act. Mr. Scott.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, this is an Act dealing with the implementation of various recommendations which are in the Royal Commission's Report on forestry and the various sections can be taken up when the House is in committee.

I move second reading of Bill No. 146, An Act to amend The Crown Timber Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 40th Order.

THE SECURITIES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 40th Order, second reading of Bill No. 139, An Act to amend The Securities Act, 1947. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 139, An Act to amend The Securities Act, 1947.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 41st Order.

THE COUNTY JUDGES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 41st Order, second reading of Bill No. 140, An Act to amend The County Judges Act. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 140, An Act to amend The County Judges Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 42nd Order.

THE NEGLIGENCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 42nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 141, An Act to amend The Negligence Act. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 141, An Act to amend The Negligence Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 43rd Order.

INVESTMENTS CONTRACTS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 43rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 143,

An Act respecting Investment Contracts. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 143, An Act respecting Investment Contracts.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 44th Order.

HOTEL FIRE SAFETY ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 44th Order, second reading of Bill No. 144, the Hotel Fire Safety Act, 1948. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 144, the Hotel Fire Safety Act, 1948.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, can we not get any information at all on any of these bills?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh, yes, Mr. Speaker. I do not think I have ever indicated to any hon. member of the Legislature I was not willing to explain any matter they wished to have explained. I hope I have not given the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) any such impression.

I did feel, however, that possibly this was one of the bills which he has read and would feel it could more advantageously be dealt with in committee rather than I should take up considerable time speaking about it now.

Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact he has asked me, I will say briefly this much about the bill. It is one which the Government wished to put forward earlier than this, but was really required to hold by reason of the question of labour and materials, and even now that situation is not too happy. In the revision of the previous safety regulations in relation to hotels, it has been necessary even now to keep that question in mind.

The bill is not divided exactly in two parts in the framework, but deals separately with existing legislation in the province, and the standards imposed, as the hon. members will find when they consider it section by section, are what might be regarded as the minimum standards which will put the present hotel premises into a reasonable degree of safety in this province, without putting the owners thereof to impossible expenditures.

The effect of the section applied to all construction will be that, for a reasonable expenditure, reasonable safety standards can now be created with respect to those hotels. However, with regard to new hotels, over 2 storeys in height, the provisions provide for sound, fire-resistant construction. We expect in due course, when labour and materials are properly available, there will be some hotels in the province built, which will be for the benefit of the public, and we feel those hotels should be soundly constructed according to good fire-resistant standards. That is the purpose of the Act. Whether those standards in detail will commend themselves to everyone, is a matter which will develop in committee.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, with your permission and if the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) does not mind explaining—I should have said this when Bill No. 141 was before us—there are a few words I do not understand. For instance, I see here:

“A tortfeasor may recover contribution or indemnity from any other tortfeasor who is, or would if sued have been, liable in respect of the damage to any person suffering damage as a result of a tort, by settling with the person suffering such damage—”

I confess, Mr. Speaker, I do not know what this is all about. I imagine it is legal language which only lawyers understand, but as a legislator here I would like to know about this "tortfeasor" and "tort" and all that sort of thing. I really should have asked this before, but I wanted to save the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) the trouble. But seeing he was so magnanimous about being ready to explain things, perhaps he might do so now.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, we were going on rather rapidly and although, technically speaking, the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is out of order, I certainly would not want to take the horrible responsibility of having him spend the week-end wondering what a "tortfeasor" was. Furthermore, if I showed any reluctance about answering the question, there might be an implication I did not know myself.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The expression may be literally and freely translated into "joint wrong-doers"; by its practical application it means more than one person who has, under the law, been negligent, by failing in a duty owed somebody else, either by refraining from doing something he should do, or doing something he should not do. The most frequent cases in this connection are negligence cases concerning motor cars, and in that respect the "joint tortfeasor" in that case means other people who are jointly at wrong in relation to some negligence.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I think what bothered my colleague (Mr. Salsberg) was that this might be the hon. Attorney-General's (Mr. Blackwell) version of the La-Croix bill.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It is not my intention, I assure you.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 45th Order.

LIGHTNING RODS ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 45th Order, second reading of Bill No. 145, the Lightning Rods Act, 1948. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 145, the Lightning Rods Act, 1948.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 5:08 of the clock p.m.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I say to hon. members of the House that following the announcement of the death of Dr. Millen, the member of this Assembly for the electoral district of Riverdale, I thought it proper to defer opening of today's sitting of the House until 4 o'clock in order that any hon. member who would like to attend the funeral, could do so.

STATUTE LAW AMENDMENT ACT

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Drew, that leave be given to introduce a bill intitled the Statute Law Amendment Act, 1948, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, and referring to what you have already mentioned, I would like to express, on behalf of the Government, and I know on behalf of every hon. member of this Legislature, the very great shock it was to all of us when we learned on Saturday of the unexpected death of Dr. Gordon Millen.

Dr. Millen has been one of the most faithful and, at the same time, one of the most effective representatives of his riding of anyone sitting in this Legislature. As every hon. member knows, but to an extent which is not generally so well realized outside, each hon. member is called upon to represent his own riding in many capacities continually throughout the year, and without regard to the political point of view or other affiliations of those who live in his riding. I think it may be fairly and properly said that all hon. members are very conscious of their obligations to their constituency and to the Legislature in the long months which elapse between sittings of this Legislature.

I think there sometimes is a tendency to view meetings here as the whole occupation of the elected members. Actually the work of every hon. member is very much greater in the sum total throughout the year. Of all hon. members who have sat in this Legislature for the past few years, no one gave more effective and continuous service to the people of his own riding than Dr. Millen. He was interested in everything that was of interest in his community, and he furthered all those worthwhile objectives which called for the voluntary services of those who are interested in the development along sound lines of the places where they live. Every one of us will miss his friendly, genial, and at all times cordial, association with other hon. members.

In expressing our own feelings in that respect, I think it fitting I should say this is a great loss to his own riding and to the whole city which he has served so well for so very long.

I know every hon. member here will want a message of the sympathy of the hon. members conveyed to his wife and his family in his very untimely death at an unusually early age. He was a good citizen, a good member of this Legislature, and a friend of everyone here.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I do concur in the tenor of the sentiments expressed by my hon. friend, the Prime Minister (Mr. Drew).

As we meet here today, we are very conscious of the loss this Legislature has sustained in the passing of our good friend, Gordon Millen.

I always thought of Gordon Millen as a man who held very deep convictions, but had a strong loyalty to the party of his choice, but overriding and rising above both these loyalties were the humanitarian instincts which were so apparent in the life he lived and the way he lived it.

Personally, I came to know Gordon Millen rather more intimately than I did the other Toronto members, and it serves me well at this time to recall that at least on two occasions I was his guest speaker at some of the service clubs to which he belonged and for which he did so much in the City of Toronto.

Mr. Speaker, we do join with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) today in sorrowing at the loss of one who was such a short while ago amongst us and now is gone. We do appreciate the fine qualities he possessed, and that should but urge us—yea, push us on, to do the job that he had so well in mind.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the group I lead in the House, I wish to join with the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and with the hon. Leader of the official Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in expressing to the widow and family of the late Dr. Gordon Millen our very deepest sympathy.

We here came to know Dr. Millen; he was sitting near to us, we had many opportunities of conversing with him, and we came to appreciate him as a generous man in all his actions. He represented his riding and also many other activities in the city, and I am sure that Toronto and Ontario have both lost a very faithful servant.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague and myself, I wish to join those who spoke before me in expressing very genuine sympathy to his family, his friends, and to his party in the loss of Dr. Millen.

I had the privilege of being with Dr. Millen in the City Council and working with him on quite a number of committees. Despite differences of views, I treasured his friendship and the very fine personal relations which existed between us. I have known the late Dr. Millen as one of the hardest-working men in public life. As a professional man, it was often only at great personal sacrifice that he attended to his many duties as a civic representative and a leader in various organizations. More than once I was witness to the fact that he rushed into Council chamber or to a committee meeting without having had his meal, in order to perform his duties, as an aldermanic representative of his ward.

Dr. Millen was particularly interested in the health of the people, and devoted his knowledge and talents to advancing public health services. He was a member of the Board of Health for years, and was chairman of the Board of Health. In this House, too, he brought to the attention of the Legislature public health matters perhaps more forcibly than any other individual member. It was to me very shocking, having known him as a man of boundless energy and continuous activity, to learn he suddenly was taken ill, and shocking to hear that he had passed away. His passing away is a loss to the Legislature and to the citizens whom he represented for so many years, and to the public at large.

MR. SPEAKER: Speaking through me to hon. members of the Legislative Assembly, the Press Gallery would like to record in the journals of this House a sincere expression of deep regret in the death of Dr. Gordon Millen, member for the electoral riding of Riverdale.

During his years of public service, Dr. Millen could always be regarded as a friend of the newspaper man. Co-operative and courteous to the press at all times in his social activities, Dr. Millen's genial ways assured him a warm welcome.

To Mrs. Millen and family, the Press Gallery extends sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

(Signed)

Reg. Pitt, president,

Norman Campbell, vice-pres.,

Richard Sheridan, sec.-treas.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether there is any established custom in regard to the communication of such messages, because, so far as I can recall, this is the first time within my experience an hon. member has died while we have been sitting. However, if it meets with the wishes of the hon. members, I would ask you, Sir, to communicate to Mrs. Millen the expressions which have been made on behalf of all parties represented in this Legislature, and also on behalf of the Press Gallery, in her bereavement.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before Orders of the day, I thought perhaps as a matter of convenience I might indicate what would appear to be the most advantageous way of proceeding, in view of, shall I say, a suggestion which has been very properly placed before me.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has indicated that the annual meeting of the party to which he belongs is taking place, and their annual dinner is tomorrow night, at which he is to be a speaker.

Having regard to the fact that each of us recognizes the importance of such provincial organizations in the public life of this province, I think it would be in accord with the wishes of hon. members of the Legislature generally that we make it convenient for hon. members of his party to attend that gathering.

For that reason, subject to the approval of the Legislature, I thought that we would not sit tomorrow night, but that we might meet at 2 o'clock, so we could accomplish more than would be possible by meeting at the ordinary time. Also that we should sit tonight.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), before we move into the legislation proposed this afternoon, would inform us what is the suggested line-up so far as the budget debate is concerned. It would be helpful, I think, to all hon. members to have an idea what the Government has in mind as to proceeding with and winding up the budget debate.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Well, of course there is no limitation upon those who speak. The information I have received is that there will be 5 or 6 more speakers in addition to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and myself. It is possible it might not be convenient to terminate the debate tomorrow and have the vote on it, if a vote is called for.

MR. OLIVER: Are we going to move forward with the debate today?

HON. MR. DREW: No, I had not thought we would. We have a fairly long Order paper, with which I think we should proceed. I had not intended we should proceed now with the debate, nor call the debate this evening, because we have a fairly extensive list on Government Orders, and there are a number of public bills with which we can proceed afterwards.

MR. OLIVER: That is quite all right.

HON. MR. DREW: I would be happy to meet the wishes of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

It is customary in winding up the budget debate for the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the head of the Government to terminate the debate. If he prefers, I shall be very glad to defer his contribution to the debate and my own until Wednesday, and have the vote on Wednesday. Would that be satisfactory?

MR. OLIVER: I think it would.

HON. MR. DREW: That will mean we will be sure not to be running over the closing time tomorrow afternoon.

HON. MR. DREW (Prime Minister): 48th Order.

RACE TRACK TAX ACT, 1939

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 48th Order; second reading of Bill No. 147, An Act to amend the Race Track Tax Act, 1939. Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Frost, I move second reading of Bill No. 147, An Act to amend the Race Track Tax Act, 1939.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I think hon. members would appreciate it generally, Mr. Speaker, if my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) would give an explanation of this bill on second reading.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I am, of course, glad to give any explanation the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would like to have, but the substantial part of the Act, that is, the imposition of the tax, is not changed. The matter is fully covered by a very brief explanatory note which says: "The effect of the deletion of the proviso is that the rate of the tax may be changed at any time." That is exactly what the provision means.

MR. OLIVER: Well, Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as this bill is the first one called this afternoon, I have not actually had time to peruse it as I should have done.

My understanding on reading the bill and hearing the all-too-brief explanation of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) is that this bill gives the Lieutenant - Governor - in - Council the right to change the tax at any time deemed fit. I would say, Mr. Speaker, that was introducing into this legislation a principle with which I cannot agree. If the Government feels this tax should be lowered, let them say so in the legislation. If they feel it should be increased, by the same token, let them say so in the bill. I do not for one feel we should delegate to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council the right to affect the tax as to whether it goes up or down, to leave that in the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council. Surely, before an authorization of such magnitude is made in the legislation, we should have from the Government something much more substantial by way of argument than we have had this afternoon. This is clearly a departure from the legislation as it existed on the Statute Books of this province for many a year. If we are going to depart from it, let us have some logical, outstanding reason as to why we should pursue the course outlined in the bill this afternoon.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I can quite appreciate that by the rules of the House, the same speaker is not entitled to thrust himself into the debate twice, but I am sure, under the circumstances, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) at least, wishes me to say something further about the bill. If that is his desire, and is agreeable to hon. members of the House, I am quite prepared to do so. Do I understand, Mr. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), through you, Mr. Speaker, that you really want me to do this?

MR. OLIVER: I did not get that, really. Tell me again—just once more.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You were the one who raised this question—

MR. OLIVER: I would say, Mr. Speaker, to my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) that I want him to do now what he should have done on second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I made this explanation as brief as I did, out of regard for the sensibilities of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), because there is nothing new in principle in this amendment.

If the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) had taken the trouble to read the comparatively brief bill, he might have been somewhat struck with the fact the act is intituled "Race Track Act, 1939," and the principle to which he now takes such violent objection was accepted and put forward by the Legislature, introduced by the Government of which he is an hon. member.

It is very difficult for me to appreciate why he should have been so much for it in 1939, and so much opposed to it at the present time.

I would like to interpret that a little closely for the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), as apparently he has had difficulty in reading the bill. The words to be struck out are as follows:

"Provided that the rate of tax shall not be changed in any calendar year after the commencement of the first race meeting of that year in which the particular pari-mutuel system is operating."

In 1939, the then administration passed an Act whereby the tax could be altered annually. The only effect of this amendment is to enable the tax to be altered during the year. Other than that, there is no great difference in the principle before the House.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 50th Order.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WELFARE ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 50th Order; second reading of Bill No. 149, Department of Public Welfare Act, 1948. Mr. Goodfellow.

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 149, the Department of Public Welfare Act, 1948.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) should say something on this bill.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, there is so little involved in the changes of this Act, I did not think them worth while mentioning. It merely clarifies and makes more specific the former Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 51st Order.

THE OLD AGE PENSIONS ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 51st Order; second reading of Bill No. 150, The Old Age Pensions Act, 1948. Mr. Goodfellow.

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, before moving the second reading of this bill, I might say it became necessary through the new Federal Old Age Pension Act, to come into agreement with it, and to make certain changes in the old Act. In this new Act, we have followed certain sections, and clarified them, and in some respects brought them in line with present practice.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, regarding these Acts, the Old Age Pensions Act, and the Mothers' Allowance Act, and so on, there is a very important matter, in my experience, to which I wish to call the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow), which I think should be taken under consideration without further delay.

It is the experience of every hon. member of this House that the procedure at the present time is for a prospective pensioner to make an application, which is placed before the clerk of the municipality. The clerk of the municipality has to be contacted personally by the applicant, and sometimes the applicant lives at quite a distance, and it may be the clerk of the municipality is rather a dilatory person, one who perhaps has the same fault as myself, that is, procrastination, and procrastination in the case of an application for old age pensions, or mothers' allowances—from people who are in need—is inexcusable.

After the application is, shall I say, designed to be written by the clerk of the municipality, it is sent to the county, and there again is delay. I am speaking of my own experience, but it has come so often, year after year, I believe it is the experience of every hon. member of this House.

After the delay in the county, it has to go to the local committee, composed of three persons, which meets once a month. There is delay again. The committee either appoints an investigator, or uses an investigator appointed by the department, and very often the investigator will delay for a very, very long time before going to the applicant. Sometimes it requires travel, and so on, and finally when he reaches the applicant, there has been as long as five months elapsed between the time the application was filed, and the visit of the investigator.

And all this before it reaches the department, because after the investigation, it has to go back to the local committee, and be sent by the local committee to the Old Age Pensions Commission or the Mothers' Allowance Commission. The result is—and I say this from my own experience—a delay of five, six or even seven months between the time the application is given to the clerk of the municipality and the time it reaches the department. These applications are made by poor people, very often elderly people, and widows in dire need, and, Mr. Speaker,

I have seen them in very dire need. I have seen widows with large families, having to tell their grocers "It is coming," and on that assurance, they may be furnished with food on credit. But there is a limit to that credit, and there comes a time when it stops.

The whole procedure is wrong, to my mind. There is red tape where there should be no red tape whatever, and I think immediate steps should be taken to revise the whole procedure so these delays will be removed. I think a new procedure should be adopted, and I am suggesting to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) it should be done immediately, and I would like, Mr. Speaker, to have assurance from him that the matter will be studied and corrected at once.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, I am inclined to agree with the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger)—

MR. SPEAKER: I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) will wait a moment. The matter is not before the House, and the remarks so far have been out of order.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It was an oversight, I assure you, Mr. Speaker. I move second reading of Bill No. 150, the Old Age Pensions Act, 1948.

MR. BELANGER: Mr. Speaker, would you kindly take the remarks I made, as being made now, at the proper time?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes, I will do that.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, there are delays in the facilities of the administration, both in regard to old age pensions and mothers' allowances, of which I am well aware. As a matter of fact, that is one reason why we are bringing forward an Act which will shortly be before the house for second reading, to provide for welfare units, because it will facilitate the implementing of old age pensions and mothers' allowances.

There is a great deal of over-lapping at the present time. I sometimes wonder why a former administration, back in the 30's, re-established the local boards. I am under the impression they were done away with during the Henry regime, but were later reinstated, and there is a question whether they served any useful purpose or not.

In setting up these welfare units, the hon. members will notice it does away with the local boards. However, for the information of the hon. members of the House, I will say we are now entering the new system of handling old age pensions' and mothers' allowance applications in this way; the local secretary, in making out the application, makes them in triplicate. One copy he retains, one copy is sent to the secretary of the local board, and one copy is sent directly to the commission involved, whether it be the Old Age Pensions Commission, or the Mothers' Allowances Commission. In that way the commission will be able to have an investigation made while the local board is dealing with the matter at the local-board level, and we feel that should cut down, possibly by three weeks, the time elapsing from the time the application is made until the pension or allowance is granted. An investigation will be made and a report forwarded back to the commission. In the meantime, the local board will sit and pass on the application, and the matter will all come in at the same time, and should materially cut down the time elapsing.

MR. BELANGER: With your permission, Mr. Speaker—because we are not in committee stage, and I have spoken once on second reading, and, under the rules, am not permitted to speak again without your permission—in view of the marginal note here which says:

"The provisions of this bill are the same in principle as those in the present Act."

and after the explanation by the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) to the same effect, I was rather taken aback, and I do not know that I am quite satisfied with his statement that three weeks is likely to be saved in certain cases. That is all right—in certain cases.

Mr. Speaker, may I mention one case of which I have personal knowledge. An application had been made to the municipality, which had been delayed for three months. The applicant, who was not one of my electors, but just a neighbour, came to me, and I renewed the application and tried to get some satisfactory results. The application was sent to the department, and, under the present system, it came back with the statement the regulations had not been followed, and, therefore, everything should be done over again. In that particular case, Mr. Speaker, there was a delay of over 7 months. These are people in need, otherwise they would not ask for what appears to be simply a "dole," and it is rather humiliating for them to have to make such applications. If they do, it is simply because they need the money immediately. Here was a case with a delay of 7 months, and in the meantime they were living here and there, getting loans. I may say—and I know whereof I speak—these people were getting help from charitable institutions, waiting to get that to which they have a perfect right.

That is why I suggested, Mr. Speaker, there should be an immediate over-hauling of all the regulations, so that an application could be made by a friend or neighbour, and the application could be brought before a commissioner, to be sworn and forwarded immediately to the department. Then a department investigator could make his investigation immediately and send in a report.

If it is the desire to keep the local committees alive, all right, but personally I do not see why.

After the investigator appointed by the Government has made his report, what more do you need? Why wait for the recommendation of the local committee, which would depend entirely upon the report of the investigator?

I believe this whole Act should be over-hauled, and the regulations made more to help the applicants. These delays seem to be increasing at the present time, instead of being allayed. I believe it is the opinion of the hon. members of this House the time has come when we should do away with a lot of the red tape in these cases, because the applicants are in dire need, and require the pension which the Legislature gives them through the Act.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I suggest the bill puts certain hon. members in a very awkward position. If it were simply to revise the old Act, it is understandable that revisions have to be made from time to time. At the same time, the revised Act contains so many features on which there are differences, in the House and outside, that an hon. member is almost compelled to express an opinion.

For instance, this bill contains all the features of the means test, of the signing over of one's property before he can be eligible for old age pensions; quite a number of clauses deal with the exclusive issues, and I almost wish the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) would have saved us the trouble of dealing with the revised bill until a new arrangement could be made which would eliminate the means test.

However, the bill is before us and, frankly, there is a question in my mind shall we have the full-dress debate on the question of the means test now when the bill is before us and it does provide for the continuation of the means test, or shall we leave it for another occasion? It could be left for another occasion because this is only a re-enactment of the existing bill, subject to minor changes.

On the other hand, one could hardly keep quiet when one feels so keenly about the means test and when one has before him the bill which continues to incorporate very bad and restricted clauses. If the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) could assure us he has any desire and intention of removing these clauses at an early date, I am sure the House would be very happy to hear it. Otherwise, having expressed the general dissatisfaction with the inclusion of these clauses I think we should have a full-dress debate elsewhere on another occasion, in view of the fact this is only revising an old existing Act.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I think we dealt with the motion which came before the House at an earlier date, and we disposed of the means test at that time. I had some figures prepared which I showed to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), and if the motion before the House had been implemented, it would only have cost the province $212,000,000, and the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was in doubt whether he could meet that at the present session.

MR. SALSBERG: That motion never came before the House as the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) knows, undoubtedly; it was never fully discussed.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): As far as I am concerned, I would like to see the means test removed, but as far as this bill is concerned, I think I am right in saying this province has not the right to remove the means test. That is imposed by the Federal Government, so we are in the unhappy position where we can not take it out until the Federal Government removes it; we have to accept it and carry it through the way it is handed to us from the Federal Government.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 52nd Order.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 52nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 151, the Mothers' Allowance Act. Mr. Goodfellow.

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, there are only minor changes in the principles in this Act compared with the Mothers' Allowance Act which it replaces.

In the first place, it is no longer necessary for the mother to be a British subject. This is to conform with the new Federal Government Old Age Pension Act.

In the second place, in regard to the provision requiring a mother to be a "fit and proper person;" we felt it was not necessary to have that in the bill since it can be taken care of under the Children's Protection Act.

In the third place, a permanently unemployable husband of a mother may be granted the allowance provided the mother otherwise qualifies under the terms of the Act. The Act simply clarifies the administrative practice which, in many respects, is being followed at the present time. I move second reading of Bill No. 151, the Mothers' Allowance Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 53rd Order.

ACT PROVIDING FOR WELFARE UNITS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 53rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 152, An Act to provide for welfare units. Mr. Goodfellow.

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I feel, before moving second reading of this bill, I should give an explanation to the House of what is proposed and the advantages we may expect to derive from the re-establishment of welfare units.

In principle, this Act enables the province to contribute an amount to the cost of welfare services, thereby relieving some of the burden on municipal taxation, and also to co-ordinate investigation services in one vast organization. That follows along closely the opinions expressed by the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger). There was an overlap, and we feel that is one thing that we will definitely overcome between the municipality and the department.

Existing welfare departments in the municipalities can be used as the basis of organization and co-operatively such departments and the provincial department will be in a position to evaluate needs immediately. By co-ordination of services, there will be a speed-up in the handling of applications for old age pensions and mothers' allowances.

The provisions will facilitate decentralization of administrative organizations for all welfare services, placing investigations and other similar services in an administrative unit close to the people served.

The province retains a measure of control, in that staff appointments are made by mutual approval. All such appointments are approved by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council with the consent of the municipality. That is, in the establishment of a unit, representatives of our department will sit in with the municipal officials and mutually agree on the staff to be required; it would have the consent of the municipality, and they would be appointed by Order-in-Council. Where units are established, there will no longer be local old age pensions and mothers' allowance boards.

It is the belief of the Government that the establishment of units will do much to increase efficiency, improve services, facilitate the handling of cases, and improve municipal welfare standards.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of the bill.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In the first place, I wish to say I believe this to be a very good Act. I think it will go far to eliminate many of the difficulties mentioned by the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger), and also mentioned by other hon. members from time to time in the House.

There are one or two questions I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow). The Act provides for the setting up of these units by a municipality passing a by-law. I can understand that procedure all right, but Section 3 of the Act states units could also be set up in unorganized territories in judicial districts. I am wondering how that will be done. Will the department take over the organization of these units and what would be the limitations of the districts taken in? For instance, in my own riding, I think there are 14 organized municipalities, including 3 or 4 development districts. That means, in Cochrane South, a very small portion of the total area is covered by municipal organization. How will these units be set up in unorganized portions of the districts of northern Ontario?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: In reply to the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett), at the present time, as he knows, we administer the welfare services in unorganized districts. My own feeling is, perhaps no place in Ontario would the welfare unit work to better advantage than in northern Ontario.

Where it would appear that organized municipalities in the district may be interested in setting up such an area, we would enter into an agreement with the organized municipalities in that district and set up a unit. That is the municipality by-law would approve in entering into an agreement with the province to set up a unit. Of course, we at the present time, are administering all the welfare services in the unorganized part.

MR. GRUMMETT: I wonder if I may ask another question? Do you mean, Mr. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) where there is an organized municipality such as a township or a town that that town could take all of a greater area and attach it to the town welfare unit for administration purposes?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It would be part of the larger unit, the organized municipalities in that area become part of the whole welfare unit.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, I rise rather in an apologetic mood. The remarks I have made should have applied more to this Act than to the Act upon which I spoke.

In these regulations we are giving very great powers to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow), and to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to make regulations, and unless we make sure a means will be taken to stop all the red tape, I think this Act is simply putting more red tape into the whole thing. The application to transfer all applications to the proper authorities, in my opinion, should be simplified. That is what we need. What the applicants in the province need is a simplification of the whole procedure. Instead of having those welfare units and the clerks of the municipalities having to receive an application before it is sent to the municipality—or call it a “welfare unit”—then having to be transferred to another body and sent to an investigator before it goes to the Government, I think there is too much red tape and too much delay.

I suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow), a change in the whole trend, all through the regulations, if you like.

I have no objection to the bill. I do not know it will work; in fact, as to making units, I simply say there is liable to be an order passed by the municipality to create units and during that time, all the applications again will be delayed in that municipality until those units are formed, and all the procedure is followed.

I think there is one thing absolutely needed in the organization and procedure of the whole Act, and that is a simplification. I do not like to see anything which appears like a definite multiplication of the delays. I think it should be made more simple.

Why should an applicant have to go to one particular person, either appointed by council or by a welfare unit, to make his application? Why should he not simply, as in many other cases, more important even than this, get his form and have the form filled in? What does it matter, when the form is already prepared, before whom or by whom it is prepared, so long as it is properly attested and verified? What does it matter under which commissioner it is verified, or attested to? I think that is one thing which should be simple, and the red tape done away with. Let the applicant have a form and make application. If he has to go to a clerk of a municipality or to the secretary of a welfare unit, that is not important; let some of these forms be deposited here and there in the post offices, if necessary, so they can be had immediately, and let them be filed, and when they are filed, it does not matter by whom so long as they are attested to. That would be simple and do away with a lot of delays.

I think under the power we are affording here to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) that should be done. It is something which should be attended to.

When that application is filed, why should it not be sent to the department? There will be no delay, and then the department send it immediately to the local body, if necessary, to look into it. Then, let it come back after being sent to the department. Why should it take more than a month when these people are in particular need of their pensions? I do not see any reason why there should be that passing from Peter to John and from John to James, and so on. I do not see the need of it at all, and I have had a lot of experience with it. Even at the present time, I am being bothered by a lot of people who will come to me and say, "we went to the municipal clerk and we put in our application and there is a month passed and two months and three months, and we did not hear anything about it." I wrote to the department and the department answered by saying, "we have nothing before us." That is a lot of red tape, and I think it should be done away with, when the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) prepares the regulations.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: That is exactly what we have in mind in setting up these units, to facilitate the work in respect to investigation.

Might I, for the information of the House, point out the method by which investigation of welfare services on the whole will be administered under one of these units.

Our present investigation staff—and I am referring to the present investigation staff—would become part of that administrative unit. My hon. friend (Mr. Belanger) has had brought to his attention an elderly person who wishes to make application for the old age pension. All he would need to do would be contact the local unit, and instead of an application being made out by the local secretary, as it is done now, it could be made out by my hon. friend (Mr. Belanger), or, better still, if he had contacted the unit, without any delay, an investigator could go out to investigate this case. There would not be any time lost, as there is at the present time by the application going from the local board to the department and then to the investigator, but the investigator would immediately go out and get the necessary information, and I see no reason why it should take more than 48 hours from the time the case is brought to the attention of the unit. I think the application, with all the information, would be in the department to be dealt with very quickly. That is one of the main reasons why we consider it essential to get some form of co-ordination from the administration of welfare services.

We feel this would work out to the benefit of the recipients. For instance, it is brought to the unit's attention that some one is in need; an investigator is sent out and that investigator would be able to ascertain whether the person qualified for the old age pension, whether it was a mother's allowance case, whether it was a case where they would qualify for relief to unemployables, whether it was a case where they required hospitalization, or whether it was a case where a party was unable to look after themselves and should be placed in an institution. There would not be the delay and the case can immediately be taken care of and the needs provided, instead of having to wait until the mothers' allowance or old age pension was passed on and granted here in the department. In the meantime, municipal relief, to which we contribute 50 per cent., could take care of the needs until such time as the regular pension was granted.

MR. SALSBERG: I would ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) who has had the appointing of the local board until now? That is, who appoints the local old age pension board and mothers' allowance board, and who pays the cost? I ask this in relation to the proposal contained in the bill.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) refers to old age pensions and mothers' allowance as they now exist?

Representatives are appointed by the municipalities and others appointed by Order-in-Council by the Government. In some cases they are remunerated, and in others they work gratis. In cases where they are paid the cost is now borne by the municipality.

MR. SALSBERG: I agree with the principle of this bill. I am wondering why we should try to extend the provincial authority into these local boards any more than has existed until now. I wanted to clear the matter up in my own mind as far as past methods are concerned. That is why I asked the question. It seems to me this bill will make it necessary for the provincial authorities to approve or disapprove any appointment the municipality will wish to make, and I do suggest it is not a bad practice to let municipal governments select the people to serve on such local boards. After they have dealt with the applications it comes to the Provincial Department anyway, and I wonder why this extension is made, this additional inroad into the municipal field.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, this is simply a co-ordination of services which are now being performed by the municipal and provincial governments, and as such at the present time we both have responsibility. The Act permits us to enter into it, or, if it is not satisfactory, to decide to abandon it. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, we will encounter no difficulties. I believe we can sit down by mutual agreement and decide on staff. As the Act states, the staff will be appointed by mutual agreement, with the approval of the municipality. I am not looking forward to any difficulties in that respect, and I think the purpose will be served in having such a board as nearly self-contained as possible and without any more direction than is absolutely necessary in the administration of welfare services either from a provincial or a municipal level.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a word or two on this bill. I can say at once to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) that I am sympathetic with the objective he hopes to reach, through the medium of this bill, but I am not so enthusiastic he is going to reach the objective desired.

There are two or three objections which come to me. The first one is that it gives power under this bill to set up local units. Well, in a large county, for instance, you might have 20 municipalities and each one of them, under this bill, would have the opportunity to set up a local unit. At the present time these applications are dealt with by a unit of a particular county, which is the county board. How are we going to improve on and expedite the passing of bonuses up to the granting stage by removing one authority and placing 20 in its stead. It seems to me to be getting out of the frying pan into the fire. Moreover, by this legislation—which is permissive, as my hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) agrees—you will have one municipality accepting the suggestion of the Government and setting up their local unit, whereas the one alongside will not deem it wise to do so and you will have in the counties a regular hodge-podge of administration.

I do not think, Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) is going to reach the point desired in this legislation. I think we can let it go through second reading. I am not so anxious to do that, because I am so sure in my own mind we will muddle the thing up still more, rather than simplify it and making it possible for these applications to go through expeditiously, and be granted or turned down in the shortest space of time.

My hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) properly objects to the cumbersome way the boards used to act. I can sympathize with him in that respect, but it seems to me when you do away with the boards it is not going to help to expedite matters by placing other boards far more numerous in the same territory, which is exactly what you are doing in this bill.

What particular objection would there be, if we were going to do away with the county board, to letting the investigator hand the applications direct to the Department of Public Welfare? If we deem it wise to do away with the board, why is there a need for these local units, which must, after all, be a delaying vehicle. It cannot be anything else. The Department of Public Welfare can very properly send out their investigator to investigate upon the basis of the application received, and, to me, that is a way you can expedite matters.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, the Act says a municipality may enter into an agreement, which would have to be approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. I can assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that we would not approve of individual municipalities setting up units.

MR. OLIVER: What would they do in that particular case?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The county would be the municipality that would form the unit. It would do away with the local boards, and the investigator might be the administrator.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to delay this debate on this very interesting bill, but I was wondering how it would work out in north-western Ontario. We have in the court house in Port Arthur a department of welfare under the jurisdiction of the province, which takes care of an enormous area, organized and unorganized, and we also have our local welfare board in the city of Port Arthur. As I understand the bill, these two could get together and form the unit. I was just wondering how the costs would be allocated when the provincial office takes care of the surrounding area.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, the trouble is, there will be no committee stage on this bill because it is only one section, and if we approve it now we will have no opportunity to amend it again. I am quite ready to wait until committee stage, but the principle of the bill is one and indivisible, and if we approve it now, we will have no chance to speak except once on it, and then we will be met with the objection—"you have approved the principle of a municipal welfare unit." We are objecting to that.

I think if the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) would take a little time, he might see he is simply complicating a matter we want to simplify. His own words were: "Well, if a municipality by itself in one county is going to form a municipal unit, we are not going to approve of it." What is the use of having all this? We are simply making bad things worse. That is all.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted to say a few words about the bill.

In the first place, nothing can be brought into being, unless at the municipal level there is a desire that such a unit be created, and, therefore, the discretion at that level lies with the municipality. On the other hand, no unit can be created unless sought by the combined thinking of the municipality and the province, so there will be an elimination of duplication of inspection, etc. From that it should be appreciated that it is not thought the immediate operation of this bill will be to create a whole host of units all over the Province of Ontario.

It is, perhaps, very like the evolution of juvenile courts, for the sake of argument. I merely raise that as a parallel, because juvenile courts have been brought into being throughout a very large part of the Province of Ontario by the municipality coming to the point in its thinking where it felt the juvenile court was a good thing, and, although in actual area of the province today, the juvenile court is not in existence in the larger part of the area, nevertheless it is in existence today by the evolutionary process in areas which cover three quarters of the population of the Province of Ontario.

It should be quite obvious that evolution into units under this bill will be somewhat the same sort of thing. There are certain municipalities in the province where it is very obvious at the outset a duplication of effort can be avoided, that there can be a cut in the combined cost of administration, and that, as well, the very same people, instead of doing separate and unrelated tasks, will be dealing with people requiring welfare consideration right across the board. The same investigators will be doing all tasks throughout the province, and for the municipality.

Therefore, it is with design that the word "municipality" is used in the act, because the interpretation of "municipality" means both the single local municipality, of which we have some very large ones and some very small ones, and the municipality right up to the county level.

I think, perhaps, the House is prepared to entertain the idea, under those circumstances, that in certain municipalities the need for this sort of co-ordination is apparent and immediate. I think under those circumstances, hon. members of this Legislature might very well be satisfied to have the Department of Public Welfare proceed with those which are apparent, and where there is that mutual desire for co-ordination, and to proceed with the remainder on an evolutionary, exploratory basis. I think if that is done, a very good job will have been accomplished.

Furthermore, I would like to add, as the bill states, there is very substantial provincial contribution to the establishment of these units, 50 per cent. of the cost of administration. That is the simple conception of the bill. It is not expected that under it, within a year it will be in total operation throughout the Province of Ontario. The "streamlined administration" which one or two hon. members have discussed is, I know, a matter of deep concern to the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow), and will be proceeded with independently under the act, whether welfare units come into existence in those localities or not.

Another question has been raised with which I might deal briefly, and that is the question of appointments. It is perfectly obvious how the creation of a welfare unit will be proceeded with. At the present moment, the whole field of welfare investigation is covered by the municipality, on the one hand, and the air-tight department of the province on the other. It must be borne in mind that when a unit is created, the investigator will have a dual responsibility to both the municipality—using the term in either the broad or narrow sense—and to the province. It is axiomatic that neither the municipality nor the province is going to be prepared under any bill to have somebody who is totally responsible to another administration passing on the expenditure of public funds for which that body is responsible, therefore, the design is simply this, if the unit is to be created, the department will sit down with the officials—and I do not mean the welfare officials of the municipality, I mean the people responsible for the establishment of agencies in the municipality—and they will discuss and reach a settlement. And out of the combined present administration will be established the new and “stream-lined” administration. In the first instance, so that the municipality may have its say about who will be dealing with the expenditure of its public funds, the municipality must consent before an appointment can be made, and, so that responsibility to the province may also be secured, and it may also have the necessary control, the appointment will be made by Order-in-Council of the province.

That is the simple desire, so that the question of fundamental responsibility to both administrations is concerned in the nature and manner of the appointment.

I hope that point has been cleared up.

MR. BELANGER: Mr. Speaker, may I call attention to the fact, that we had this at 3 o'clock this afternoon—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I beg your pardon?

MR. BELANGER: We have had this bill from 3 o'clock this afternoon.

AN HON. MEMBER: 4 o'clock.

MR. BELANGER: 4 o'clock, perhaps.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, having heard the learned dissertation of my friend (Mr. Belanger), I would have thought he had it for at least a week.

MR. BELANGER: Mr. Speaker, there are some hon. members who can think very fast. Would it be agreeable for this to be delayed until tomorrow? We might have a chance then to pick up the hon. minister's (Mr. Blackwell) arguments, and agree to them.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a good deal of interest to the remarks of the Hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell). He answered some questions, but there was one he did not answer and which I think is rather important. I do not know just how the Department will arrive at the division of costs. Let me give you a simple example.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I believe I can answer that right away if the hon. member (Mr. Anderson) will permit me. There is no division of cost. Once the welfare unit is established, the municipality pays the total cost of it and then the province will pay 50 per cent. of that total cost.

MR. ANDERSON: The answer I received, Mr. Speaker, would be very clear, provided this all took place within the confines of one municipality, but I was going to tell the Hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) how it becomes a little more difficult.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Yes, I appreciate that.

MR. ANDERSON: We will take for example my own city, the city of Fort William. Here we have a thoroughly efficient and well-established welfare department. The province looks after the outlying communities and some of these communities are organized and some are not. Assuming we were to form a larger health unit—which I think is a good thing, because it seems to me a lot of the delay today is created because people are not sure where to go for information and now they will know where to go, since there will be only one place they cannot miss—the difficulty is suppose one of these applicants comes in from one of the outlying municipalities or from one of the unorganized districts to this unit, then it is not going to be so easy, in my humble opinion, to arrive at a division of cost. Maybe the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has something in mind which I have not considered.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I am very glad the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) raised that particular question. As a matter of fact, it was also raised by some of the other hon. members who have spoken.

May I say the very fact he has raised the question in the way that he has, with his municipal experience and his clear perception of the difficulties, is the very reason why this bill must be flexible and why units of the nature referred to, involving as they do the participation of both the province in the place of the municipality as well as in its own place, and organized municipalities, it would have to be a matter of very careful working-out and negotiation in that area.

I want to assure the legislature that point of view was in very clear view when this bill was being drafted, because that was obviously the only way a unit could be created under those circumstances.

All these terms and conditions have to be settled when the municipalities would pass their by-laws and so the fact is, instead of the department having to sit down and reach an agreement with a single municipality, it really has to have a conference between the people involved and settle the terms in relation to the general individual provision of this bill which is exactly the conception of administering this Act the department has.

I hope that answers the question. It is a very sound question, and I am glad the hon. member (Mr. Anderson) asked it.

MR. ANDERSON: That is quite satisfactory.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 54th Order.

OTTAWA LIGHT, HEAT AND POWER COMPANY

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 54th Order, second reading of bill (No. 153), An Act respecting the purchase by the corporation of the City of Ottawa of certain assets of Ottawa Light, Heat and Power Company Limited. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 153, An Act respecting the Purchase by the Corporation of the City of Ottawa of certain assets of Ottawa Light, Heat and Power Company Limited.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, just on a point of information, if the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) will excuse me for asking this question. Usually such items are covered by a private bill. In this case it is not; what is the answer? I must confess I do not know.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I will say this about the bill; although I am not personally familiar with the different negotiations which have been had at one time or another between the provincial commission and the City of Ottawa and the Ottawa Light, Heat and Power Company Limited, the fact is the government is given to understand the City of Ottawa may in the very near future, though not yet—there is no transaction consummated as I understand it—they may reach an agreement whereby they will acquire the distribution facilities.

Their ordinary powers to set up a local commission are not adequate, because the distribution they would acquire affects more than the single municipality of Ottawa. Therefore, a further power is necessary.

If there was a transaction, it would be a simple bill, either private or public—it doesn't matter which—authorizing it. But the exact transaction is not known, therefore, there is this reservation in the bill; instead of giving that power, until the actual transaction is known, paragraph 4 says:

"No power conferred by this Act shall be exercised without the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council upon the recommendation of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario."

Motion approved: Second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move you do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole.

COMMISSIONERS FOR TAKING AFFIDAVITS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 25th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 72, An Act to amend the Commissioners for Taking Affidavits Act. Mr. Blackwell.

Section 1 and 2 approved.

Bill No. 72 reported.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 26th Order.

THE LABOUR RELATIONS ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 26th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 124, The Labour Relations Act, 1948. Mr. Daley.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive approved.

On Section 4.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, this new section, "Where decisions of the board are declared to be final and conclusive" over a tremendously wide range of questions; would the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) tell us why we depart from the method which left an opening for an appeal from the decision of the board? Why has that opening been closed now under the new Act?

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): There is no appeal at the present time from the decisions of the board. It is contemplated under this Act where, by negotiation, we have been able to establish a policy of submitting appeals from this board possibly to a Dominion Board, I think it is correct to say that is one of the possibilities we are endeavouring to take care of by this Act, and maybe we can get away from the condition of "No appeal." There is no appeal at the present time.

MR. SALSBERG: We are dealing with regulations which will govern the Dominion Act. Is there not a danger this could be construed as removing the possibilities of appeal? I do not know. I would like to be assured it will not remove the possibility of appeal to the National Board.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): That is right.

MR. SALSBERG: There will be no appeal?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: No, you asked for an assurance, and I said, "That is right."

Sections 4 to 10 inclusive approved.

On Section 11.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether this is the place to bring this up, but I have a matter to bring to the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley). The Journey-men Barbers International Union have protested against the manner of drawing up schedules in the Toronto zone, drawn under the Industrial Standards Act.

HON. MR. DALEY: I submit that is under the Industrial Standards Act. I do not think it has anything to do with this bill. It does not come under the Labour Relations Board at all.

MR. ANDERSON: I am satisfied to abide by the statement of the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley). May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) through you, Mr. Chairman, if there may be an opportunity some time during the session to bring this to his attention, in discussing some other bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: Of course, I do not compile the agenda for the Legislature.

MR. ANDERSON: Under the estimates, we have no agenda.

HON. MR. DALEY: It might be brought up in the estimates.

MR. ANDERSON: That will be fine, yes.

Sections 11 to 15 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 124 reported.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 27th Order.

DEVELOPMENT OF HOUSING ACCOMMODATION

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 27th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 125, An Act to assist the Development of Housing Accommodations. Mr. Porter.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

On Section 3.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) there should be more of what you are going to do by regulations included in this bill. Actually it is a blank cheque; nothing else. You do not say how much money you are going to spend, for what time the loans will be made, nor the terms of the loans. Surely those matters could be formulated to the extent where they could be incorporated in the bill.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) made a statement, which was outside the bill itself, in which he said the Government was prepared to spend a certain amount to do certain things. If the Government's mind is crystallized in this matter to the extent intimated by the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter), surely this Legislature has the right not only to suggest but to demand that what the Government intends to do by way of expenditures, under this bill, should be incorporated within the bill itself. That is not an unreasonable suggestion.

HON. DANA PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Mr. Chairman, I do not know that I can add anything beyond what I said the other day. I would just refer my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) to the remarks I made on first reading of this bill. In connection with the guarantees for the purpose of reducing down payments, I said:

"We are ready to extend these guarantees to the limit of 10,000 houses. We estimate the average amount guaranteed per house may amount to $1,000."

"I may say that in view of the flexibility of the bill under the general terms of it, we shall be in a position to meet any changing conditions from time to time that arise, but I have indicated those figures to outline the general target as to what we might look forward to over the period that lies ahead."

If we were limited by this bill to, say, 10,000 houses, and applications came forward for 12,000 houses, our hands would be tied.

MR. OLIVER: The hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) has already limited the Government to 10,000 houses.

HON. MR. PORTER: No, I said the bill is flexible and if, before we meet the Legislature again, we find we could bring about the building of a greater number of houses under conditions which may arise, we have the power to do that. I pointed out very clearly in my statement the general terms of the bill. It will be found at page 612 of Hansard for April 1st.

It is true it could be limited, but it seems to me, in view of the relations which will have to be established with loaning institutions of a variety of types—and I may say with a variety of powers—unless we are free to make the best bargain we can to bring about what we have set out to do, it could easily entirely defeat the purpose of this bill, that is, if we limited ourselves in the way of detailed arrangements by this bill.

I merely take the same position I did before in that respect, and I am sure my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) will appreciate the position we will have to be in, to work out some of these requirements, during the next 12 months.

Sections 3 to 8 inclusive approved.

On Section 9.

MR. OLIVER: Section 9 is the regulations section, Mr. Chairman, and I do again submit to the House and to the Government there should be in this bill the terms and conditions upon which money could be granted. The hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) unquestionably has looked up the 1919 legislation of this very House, and has found therein the machinery under which and by which the municipalities can borrow money. He will find there the terms are set out. If that was proper in the legislation of 1919, it is just as proper and just as fitting these regulations should be incorporated in the bill itself, and not leave it to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) will be fair, I am sure. What objection can there be to placing within the framework of the bill the particular terms and conditions under which the municipalities or an individual can get a loan or advance under this legislation? There is no regulation attached to the bill at all. The things you can do, under the bill, by regulations, should be, in my judgment—and I think in the judgment of most hon. members of this House who have read the bill carefully—incorporated in the bill itself, and become part of the statute. Is there any particular reason why this should not be done? I want to press the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) on this point, because I think it is important. It has been done before in similar statutes.

HON. MR. PORTER: May I say, Mr. Chairman, the statute to which my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) refers is by no means a similar statute, nor did it attempt to bring about the same type of objective.

That was the statute which provided means for financing the building of houses by municipal commissions, as I recall it, and it was an entirely different type of legislation from this.

This, as was outlined, is designed with the view of approaching the housing problem on four different fronts. I can only repeat what I have said before, and if my friend (Mr. Oliver) wishes us to get ahead and do the best we can under all the circumstances, with the most flexible powers, to bring about the building of the greatest number of houses in the shortest possible time, please do not tie our hands. If we are going to have our hands tied down to details in this bill, we shall not be able to accomplish that objective. That is all.

MR. OLIVER: Let it never be said, Mr. Chairman, I placed a straw in the path of my hon. friend (Mr. Porter) in regard to the building of houses in this province. I will let it go at that, and see how we make out.

HON. MR. PORTER: Without any limit, at any rate, to the number of houses to be built, my friend (Mr. Oliver) cannot say that more could have been built, anyway.

Sections 9 to 11 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 125 reported.

At 6 o'clock the committee took recess.

The Committee resumed.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 28th Order.

MILK CONTROL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 28th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 126, The Milk Control Act, 1948. Mr. Kennedy.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2:

MR. J. D. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on section 2, this section defines the board and seems to limit its members, without definitely establishing the number of members on that board. It says "one or more members" and then later on it says, "four or more members" but there is nothing in the section which clearly defines the number that would constitute the board.

Secondly, I would like to ask the hon. minister (Mr. Kennedy) why there is no provision for the inclusion in the board, regardless of its number, for a representative of the consumers. I respectfully suggest that such specific mention should be made so as to guarantee a representative for the consuming public on the Milk Board.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Chairman, there are seven members of the board now. Justice Wells' report recommended against the present set-up of different representatives having a member of the board—it is the same as the old act exactly, "one or more," and we decided on seven. Justice Wells made a recommendation that there should be no representative of any certain class of people on the board, and we are going to follow out his recommendation.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, the fact, however, is that there was no representative of the consumers on the board; is that not right?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No, Mr. Chairman, the chairman was supposed to represent the consumers.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, that is not satisfactory.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On section 2, if the hon. minister (Mr. Kennedy) will allow a question, is the board as it is to be constituted, to have—what shall I say—a "judicial air" about it?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: Would the hon. minister (Mr. Kennedy) say a word on that, please? You mean a judge is to be chairman of the board?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes. We hope so. That is the present intention, to have a judge as chairman.

MR. OLIVER: You do not think you will have any difficulty in persuading some judge to take the job?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I hope not.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Did I understand the hon. minister (Mr. Kennedy), then, to say the board will consist of seven members?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes, the present board is seven members.

MR. MACLEOD: Why does not section 2 state explicitly, it is to be a board of seven members, instead of leaving it in this fluid state?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: We may not want seven members, or may not need them. The old section stated: "one or more" and we are just following that old section out. We may have five, we may have seven, we may have nine.

MR. MACLEOD: I know, but what is the hon. minister's (Mr. Kennedy) idea as to the number of members who should be on the board? Do you not have any clear idea as to how many should be on the board? What would you favour, a board of five, seven, nine, or what?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Mr. Chairman, they certainly ask leading questions here.

MR. MACLEOD: You are a very leading minister.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: My own thought is three or five.

MR. OLIVER: Or seven?

MR. MACLEOD: Seven, or nine?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: My own thought on the 12th day of April, 1948, is three or five.

MR. SALSBERG: To go back to the question of consumers representative, the hon. minister (Mr. Kennedy), a few minutes ago, said that the chairman is supposed to represent the consuming public. Then, a minute later, he advised us that a judge will be the chairman. Now, with all due respect to the judges, I do not think we can look at them as representatives of any special section of the community. They are supposed to stand above sections, groups and interests.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): That is right.

MR. SALSBERG: I thought he did say so, replying to a question of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). The words "a judicial air" were used.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am just trying to agree with you.

MR. SALSBERG: I want to raise this question again, Mr. Chairman, because the absence of a direct representative of consumers' associations or housewife groups has been one of the complaints of those bodies. I remember the time not so long ago when the present chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, the ex-Mayor of the City of Toronto, made very strong statements on that very point, and protested against the failure of the government to include a representative of the consumers on the board. In fact, he stated emphatically in city council and in statements to the press that there is no consumers' representative, no one there to fight for the interests of the consumer, or words to that effect—I am not quoting him, I am repeating what I am quite reasonably certain he said at the time. It was prominently featured in all the papers.

I think a man of the importance of the present chairman of the Ontario Hydro and a former mayor of this city, should convey some meaning to the hon. minister (Mr. Kennedy). I agree with those sentiments, I think there should be a specific provision in the bill for the inclusion of a representative of the consumers, chosen by the most representative group of consumers' organizations in the province. Otherwise, with the board limited in the number, in which the consumers have no representative, with the large milk monopolies exercising the influence they have, we will have repetitions of what we have had in the past. Milk was increased in price without proper consideration as to the effect of it. We had that when the price of milk was raised, and I think the public should be safe-guarded, at least to that extent, where they will feel a representative of the consuming public is on the board.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Chairman, I believe the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) read Mr. Justice Wells' report?

MR. SALSBERG: I have.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Because I come from Ottawa, I am very proud of that, because he said, "the only representation made on behalf of the consumers with anything constructive was the two old ladies from the city of Ottawa, Mrs. Whitely and Mrs. White." He said none of the other representatives of the consumers had anything constructive to offer.

MR. MACLEOD: Would that apply to the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts), who travelled with that commission as a representative of the consuming public?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh, no, he was a member of the House.

MR. SALSBERG: He is absent.

MR. MACLEOD: But he accompanied that commission as a spokesman for the consuming public, and Mr. Justice Wells commended him very highly for the very constructive suggestions he made. Surely you are not going to cast doubt on the contribution one of your own supporters made?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Your colleague only referred to the housewives.

MR. SALSBERG: He spoke for the housewives, too.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, may I make this suggestion to the hon. minister (Mr. Kennedy)? If you are adamant on the question of making provision for a representative from some of the consumers' organizations on this board—and that I take it is "out," because you do not look very enthusiastic about the suggestion—could what my colleague (Mr. Salsberg) has suggested be met by asking the Ontario Association of Mayors and Reeves to propose a member for this board? That, surely, is an organization which speaks for the consuming public, made up as it is of the mayors and reeves of all the towns and municipalities in Ontario. Would that not be a proper body to ask to submit a recommendation for a place on this board? What would you think about that?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: A very useful suggestion, I would say.

MR. MACLEOD: Will you make a note of it?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I will make a note of it.

MR. MACLEOD: Good.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, if I may go back just for a moment. One of the reasons why my colleague (Mr. Salsberg) and I press this matter is, that last year when the composition of the Hydro-Electric Commission was under discussion in this House, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) indicated it was the intention of the Government to name a housewife, a representative of labour organizations and so on and so forth. I do not think that anything has ever been done about that. We are merely suggesting here that the very excellent proposal put forward by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) with respect to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission applies equally to the Milk-Control Board. Have you forgotten about that?

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, I do not want to prolong the discussion, but I wanted to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy), if I may, through you—under the old regulations, the municipality could appoint a representative to represent them on this board. Now, under this bill, did I understand you correctly when I thought you said there would not be any representation by any separate group, as it were?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No, Mr. Chairman. We are going to try to appoint a board which will be acceptable to all people. I do not think we can, perhaps, do that.

MR. SALSBERG: "Of all people"? "All"? That is a lot of people.

MR. ANDERSON: Mr. Chairman, I will not be a minute. In making the recommendation, the commissioner did suggest there would be no great benefit in having a consumer representative as an actual member of the board, but he did suggest the form of consumer represensation where the representatives could appear before the board and could argue the consumers' case, should be not only continued but should be strengthened. Now instead of strengthening that form of consumer representation, the new Act it seems does away with it altogether.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Mr. Chairman, I do not look at it the same way as the hon. member (Mr. Anderson). Everybody realizes the more milk that is sold, the better it is for producers and distributors, and we are trying to cheapen milk as far as possible, so the farmer may get the cost of production plus reasonable profit all along the line.

MR. SALSBERG: Just like that? Everybody will be satisfied.

Sections 2 to 5 inclusive approved.

On Section 6.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Chairman, I just want to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) if there was not a typographical error in sub-section 2 of Section 6, in the second line; it reads as follows:

"The application may be referred to the board, and thereupon it shall be the duty of the board of examine the application . . ."

Should that not be "to examine"?

MR. KENNEDY: Yes, that is just a misprint, it should be "to examine."

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa, East): Mr. Chairman, sub-section 4 of Section 6 reads as follows:

"Every marketing agency shall be a body corporate with the following objects, powers and duties" and then it goes on to give the objects, powers and duties. Are those objects, powers and duties in addition to the powers and privileges that are usually enjoyed by a company under the Companies Act, or is that restricted?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I do not think so. I think they are the usual powers.

Sections 6 to 11 inclusive approved.

On Section 12:

MR. OLIVER: On Section 12, does that meet with the producers' approval?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes, Mr. Chairman, they endorse it.

Section 12 approved.

On Section 13:

MR. ANDERSON: Mr. Chairman, under Section 13, there is mention made of a co-operative corporation dealing in milk—

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No.

MR. ANDERSON: No, not "dealing in milk," but transporting milk. Are they permitted under this regulation to go into business? They were not, under the old Act.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: It is just the same as the old Act.

MR. ANDERSON: They could not under the old Act.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes, they could.

MR. ANDERSON: The producer, but not a producer-consumer.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: This is simply for hauling—transporting milk.

MR. ANDERSON: But what I wanted to ask, Mr. Chairman, just for my own satisfaction: I assume the old Act has been cancelled and it would now be possible for a genuine co-operative to function if it so desired.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is right.

Section 13 approved.

On Section 14.

MR. GRUMMETT: Under Section 14, clause "k," I believe, Mr. Minister, this clause could be simplified and clarified by the addition to the end of the clause of the words: "as determined by the board." There is no means of telling who would determine the cost or reasonable margin of profit for handling milk.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: At the top of the section it says: "subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, the board may make regulations." Just as you say, the board has the power.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, Section 14, sub-section (n)—N like "in nothing"—says:

"Providing for the regulations and control of the delivery routes of distributors, including the number of deliveries that shall be made in each week and the days upon which delivery shall be made."

That does not apply to city deliveries direct to the consumer?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Oh, yes, if necessary they have that power.

MR. SALSBERG: In other words, the Board will have power to determine how many deliveries per week shall be made by dairies in the city and how many trucks or delivery wagons shall be used in an area?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes, that is what it says.

MR. SALSBERG: That is tremendous power.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

MR. SALSBERG: That is, of course, encouraging, but, Mr. Chairman, I do think this deals with a matter that affects the welfare of many small dairy operators, as well as men employed in the delivery of milk to the home, and I am wondering if any opinion were sought from those most directly interested, that is, the dairies, large and small, in the city or from the unions of teamsters who are engaged in the delivery of milk, and if so, what their opinion was. I think the members—I for one and I think others, too—would welcome a bit of information as to this.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I have no criticism of this clause and I have many people who commend it, including the small and large dairies.

MR. SALSBERG: Including the Drivers' Union?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No.

MR. SALSBERG: Did they know anything about this legislation?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: They must have known about it. I think that some unions wrote in about it. They seemed all favourable.

MR. SALSBERG: I must say that some hon. members of this House were not yet aware of this clause and I cannot see how the unions affected were able to become acquainted with it if the bill was not presented to them and if their opinion was not sought before the bill was framed. I suggest this is so important, Mr. Chairman, that the Government should agree to let this section stand over while proceeding with the balance of the bill, to give the representatives of the Teamsters' and Drivers' Union an opportunity to meet with the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) tomorrow morning. I do not want to drag it out, but I do think they should be given an opportunity to appear and discuss the matter with the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy).

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No, I think every distributor would naturally be in touch with this bill because drivers are very important people to the dairies and distributors and they have endorsed this.

MR. GRUMMETT: Reverting back to sub-section (k), the section was:

"Subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, the board may make regulations"—and then "(k) prohibiting the sale of milk by retailers and others at less than or more than the cost thereof and a reasonable margin for handling and profit."

To my mind there is nothing in that sub-section or the commencement of Section 14 which would determine reasonable profit.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: No, that is right.

MR. GRUMMETT: If you add to the section at the bottom, "as determined by the Board" I think that addition would clarify the whole section.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I read in that the Board makes a decision of what the profit should be.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington, North): Did the producers give their approval to section (t) in that?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes.

MR. McEWING: Why waste so much time with all that page and a half?

Section 14 approved.

Sections 15 to 18 inclusive, approved.

On Section 19.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, before you proceed with the last, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) care to give an explanation as to why there is no provision in this bill for the removal of the restrictions which are at present placed upon co-operative dairies preventing them from granting bonuses to members and consumers?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I think that is changed, is not it?

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): That Act is repealed.

MR. SALSBERG: That means that is no longer in force?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Yes.

Section 19 approved.

On Section 20.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Before the bill is reported; as we were going through it I was trying to find the section in the old Act which The Globe and Mail could not understand last year. Did you drop section dealing with collective bargaining, which The Globe and Mail could not understand and suggested it be written in English?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: This bill is very simple. I think anyone who reads it understands it.

Section 20 approved.

Bill 126 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 29th Order.

FUEL SUPPLY ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 29th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 127, An Act to amend the Fuel Supply Act. Mr. Frost.

HON. L. M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Chairman, in section 1 of this bill under the heading 10—(1) (a) I would like to move the words "or in any designated area" be struck out and the similar words in (b) "or in any designated area." They have no relation to the Act now and are superfluous.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): What bill are we on?

THE CHAIRMAN: Bill No. 127, An Act to amend the Fuel Supply Act.

Section (1) as amended, approved.

Sections 2 and 3 approved.

MR. MacLEOD: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) this question; have we had a fuel controller in Ontario before your dispensation?

HON. MR. FROST: No. I am advised there was a fuel controller back in 1918 and 1919. That was when the Act was originally passed and it stood for all the intervening years. In the crisis of a year ago we used the Act and just introduced these amendments to bring it up to date.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD: Is that in line with the information you had, Mr. Chairman?

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): From the hon. minister's lawyer interpretation, what does "2 of 10" mean?

"Every order, requirement or direction made or issued . . ."

HON. MR. FROST: That has to do with the Regulations Act which was passed by this House some three or four years ago. If the orders were deemed to be legislative, they would require to be published in the Ontario Gazette, and if such were the case, the crisis might be over before the advertising is carried out, and, therefore, this is designed so quick action can be given.

Bill No. 127 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 30th Order.

MINING TAX ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 30th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 128, An Act to amend the Mining Tax Act. Mr. Frost.

Sections 1 to 3, inclusive, approved.
On Section 4.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) what the object is in remitting the tax as provided under section 4?

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): The purpose is this: my recollection is that under the Iron-ore Bounty Act in certain cases a bounty could be paid. Some years ago, under the direction of the hon. gentlemen opposite, the iron-ore bounty was dropped. In this particular case my recollection is we have not been collecting the tax on iron ore, only where exported. Where used in Canada we have not imposed a royalty tax.

Sections 4 and 5 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 31st Order.

ASSESSMENT ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 31st Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 129, An Act to amend the Assessment Act. Mr. Dunbar.

On Section 1.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Will my hon. friend (Mr. Dunbar) tell me how many municipalities have similar powers to these outlined in the bill?

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Well, Toronto last year, Kingston this year, had a private bill. Niagara Falls has been collecting under an agreement, also Scarboro. There may be one other not included; I did not look them up. I think that is about the number.

MR. SALSBERG: You do not favour the practice, Mr. Minister?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Very much in favour of it.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, that is too bad.

On (1). MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William):

In the first clause I notice a list of items—fire protection; police protection; law enforcement; street lighting, etc. It covers pretty near everything but education. How is it that education is not included?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Well, figuring this would be a start off until you find out. Do you think education should be assessed against a public utility because the people working in and served by the public utility are paying their educational tax on their own homes?

MR. ANDERSON: I was not objecting. I was just wondering.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: In other words, it is to keep some municipalities from going "off at the deep end."

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Business premises would be in the same category as public utilities' companies as far as taxation is concerned, and yet they are paying taxes on education.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: They are not taxed with anything. We are just giving permissive legislation to come to an agreement.

THE FORESTRY ACT

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 34th Order.

THE INSURANCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 34th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 132, An Act to amend The Insurance Act. Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 16, inclusive, approved.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I had a question I wished to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell). It has no particular reference to any of these sections that I can see, but a problem has occurred at different times, where a young man has been working in an industry and placed a policy on his life in favour of his mother or father. Later on, he gets married and he carries on that policy without changing the beneficiary.

I have seen in the past couple of years two or three very hard cases along that line. A young widow was left with two or three children, but all of the insurance has been made payable to the parents of the assured. He undoubtedly forgot to change his policy, or neglected to do so, thinking he was young and in no danger of dying, and carried on his policy thinking he would make the change later on.

In connection with the group insurance, a number of industrial firms are seeing to it, if they know their employees, that they do change their policy. I know the Abitibi Power and Paper Company Limited in my own home town call in a young man when he gets married and explain to him the contract of insurance carried under the Abitibi group and he is advised to name the new beneficiary, but other insurance policies are not so protected. I was wondering if any effort had been made to remedy a situation such as this. As I have said, I have seen two or three very severe cases within the past two or three years.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): This is a very long and difficult Act, and if these things had come to the attention of the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) over the period, and he wanted to come and tell me about them in my office, I would have looked into them, but I do not propose to give off-hand views of all these sections in the different Acts in the Legislature. I think that is only common sense.

MR. GRUMMETT: I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) will recall I spoke to him one year ago on the same problem, and he referred me to the superintendent of insurance. At that time I took it up with the superintendent and he informed me there was a conference of all the superintendents of all the province to be held last June, and he stated he would most likely bring the matter up at that time, but there is nothing in the Act and I have heard nothing further, so undoubtedly it was overlooked.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I am not entirely ignorant on that subject, and I do not want to indicate that, either.

It is extremely difficult to make laws on such a matter; you may change one set of injustices for another set of equal injustices. This legislature has been going now for about 30 days, and if there was something of importance to be dealt with in this matter at the moment, it has been open for the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) to see me about it and I would have been very pleased to look into it. I do repeat I do not propose to give off-handed views on these difficult matters in the Legislature. I think the hon. members will agree with me on that.

Sections 17 to 27, inclusive, approved.

Bill No. 132 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 35th Revised Order.

THE INCOME TAX ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 35th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 133, An Act to amend The Income Tax (Ontario). Mr. Frost.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, may I ask for a little clarification from the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost)? Section 1 says:

"No person shall be required without a notice or demand in writing from the Comptroller of Revenue or the Commissioner of Income Tax of Canada, or an Officer of the Government of Canada on behalf of the Government of Ontario, or of an Officer of the Government of Ontario authorized to make such demands," and so on.

Why is that provision in there? What are you guarding against? Why does the section contain the possibility that taxpayers in the Province of Ontario might be required, by an officer of the Government of Ontario, to make such a return?

HON. MR. FROST: My recollection is, that sometimes in succession duty matters, as Solicitors know, personal representatives are asked to produce the income tax return for the deceased person, and I presume that is in there just to make sure there is no legal bar to asking for that information.

MR. MACLEOD: Then why does it eliminate the period prior to the calendar year 1941?

HON. MR. FROST: I think a Dominion Act came in in 1941.

Section 3 approved.

Bill No. 133 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 37th Order.

THE SECURITY TRANSFER TAX ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 37th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 135, An Act to amend The Security Transfer Tax Act, 1939. Mr. Frost.

AN ACT FOR RAISING MONEY ON THE CREDIT OF THE CON- SOLIDATED REVENUE FUND

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 38th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 136, An Act for Raising Money on the Credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. Mr. Frost.

Section 1 approved.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Has any Government ever asked for authority at any time to borrow in excess of $100,000,000?

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): No Government has planned for Ontario as this Government has.

MR. MACLEOD: I just wondered whether or not at any time in the history of Ontario a Government had thought of legislation to borrow a sum in excess of that. I realize you have great expectations, but that is not what I had in mind.

Section 2 approved.

MR. MACLEOD: Have we ever borrowed money for a period exceeding 40 years?

HON. MR. FROST: I do not know of any case in recent years where we borrowed.

Sections 3, 4 and 5, approved.

Bill No. 136 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 39th Order.

THE GAME AND FISHERIES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 39th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 137, An Act to amend The Game and Fisheries Act. Mr. Scott.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): What is the "old-world polecat"?

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): I was wondering if that clarified the term "ferret":

"Ferret" shall mean any of the domesticated forms of the "old-world polecat."

Section 3 approved.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Just as a matter of clarification on "h" of section 2, where it reads:

"'fur-bearing animal' shall mean a beaver, fisher, fox, lynx, marten, mink, musk-rat, otter, raccoon, rabbit, skunk, red squirrel, weasel and wolverine or any other animal which the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may declare to be a fur-bearing animal."

I was wondering what might be declared.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): You do not give the poor animals a chance to object.

Sections 4 to 22, inclusive, approved.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, before the bill is reported, I want to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) would it not be possible to hold the sale of some of the confiscated firearms in sections where a lot of the hunting is done? These sales are held down here and it is difficult for anyone to get down to attend a sale. Could it not be possible to hold some of the sales at least in the northern section of Ontario?

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): As you know, at the present they are subject to inspection beforehand, and anybody may send in a tender without coming in to bid on an article, on the day of the sale. They have a certain time beforehand to send in a tender and the tenders are opened afterwards. If you have been into our storehouses you will see the amount of space involved and the care involved looking after these guns, and until such time as we have other facilities for looking after them, I hesitate to make any change. As a rule, these guns go out in much better condition than they come in. We have an armourer, you might call him, looking after them.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, if we may revert to section 15. I missed raising the point in sub-section "c." In the second last line, Mr. hon. Minister (Mr. Scott), there is the word "not" before "carry." Is that not an addition? I cannot get the meaning of that section with the word in there, "cannot carry or possess a fire-arm on a railway velocipede or handcar."

HON. MR. SCOTT: No, there is no change in the wording from the old Act. It has been working very satisfactorily. It means he cannot carry it when on a railway velocipede or handcar. As a railway employee, resident there, he might have it, but he cannot carry it when on a railway velocipede or handcar.

Bill No. 137 reported.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): 40th Order.

FOREST FIRES PREVENTION ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 40th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 138, the Forest Fires Prevention Act, 1948. Mr. Scott.

Sections 1 to 11 inclusive approved.

On section 12:

HON. MR. SCOTT: Mr. Chairman, at the request of the solicitors for the operators, we have changed the wording of section 4. I believe copies have been sent to the leaders of the various groups on the other side. This is the wording the representatives of the operators asked us to use in place of the words shown in the Act, and I move, Mr. Chairman, that section 4, as it stood, be struck out, and an amended section, reading as follows:

"Where fire originates in any particular area in which any person either by himself or his employees or someone on his behalf, is carrying on any of the operations referred to in clause "a" or "b" of sub-section 1, in the absence of reasonable evidence that the fire may have occurred from causes other than such operations the onus shall be upon that person to prove that the fire did not result from such operations and in the absence of such proof that person shall bear the full cost of controlling and extinguishing the fire."

be substituted therefor.

Sections 12 (as amended) and 13 approved.

On section 14.

MR. GRUMMETT: At the commencement of section 14, there is a definition given the word "owner" which includes "locatee."

Subsection 5 reads:

"If, within the time so fixed, the necessary work has not been done, the corporation of the municipality may cause the work to be done and the expenses of the corporation in doing such work shall be a charge upon the land and shall be payable by the owner forthwith."

The owner may be the Crown.

HON. MR. SCOTT: Mr. Chairman, section 15 reads:

"The Minister may enter into such agreements with any municipality as he may deem advisable for the prevention and control of forest fires, and any expenses incurred by the Department in carrying out any such agreement shall be paid out of such monies as may be appropriated therefor by the Legislature."

MR. GRUMMETT: The owner in that case would not be the locatee?

HON. MR. SCOTT: "Owner is defined to mean "locatee."

MR. GRUMMETT: You cannot charge up costs against land where the locatee has not title to that land.

HON. MR. SCOTT: The charges assessed against it would be from the Crown?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes.

HON. MR. SCOTT: If the Crown still owns it—

MR. GRUMMETT: There would be no charges?

HON. MR. SCOTT: No.

Sections 14 to 23 inclusive approved.

On Section 24.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) tell us what amendments there are to Sections 24 and 25?

HON. MR. SCOTT: In the original Act it says, in line 2 "give an officer or agent"; we have deleted the word "agent."

MR. OLIVER: Is that the only change?

HON. MR. SCOTT: It says "officers" in the old Act; we now use the singular "officer."

And then "any person who refuses to give the information" in the old Act, has been amended to read "give such information."

The words "as required by such section" are omitted. In the old Act it said, "Any person who refuses to give the information shall be guilty of an offence against this Act." This has been changed to read, "who refuses to give such information shall be guilty of an offence against this Act."

It is simply a case of tidying up.

Sections 24 to 30 inclusive approved.

THE SECURITIES ACT, 1947

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 41st Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 139, An Act to amend The Securities Act, 1947, Mr. Blackwell.

On Section 1.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Chairman, in the explanatory notes are the amendments "complimentary" or "complementary"?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): As the hon. members know, Mr. Chairman, there is a bill before us concerning investment contracts, and the amendment to this sub-section referred to in Section 1 of this Act is simply to re-define the definitions to exclude "investment contracts."

Sections 1 to 17 inclusive approved.

HON. L. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): 42nd Order.

COUNTY JUDGES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 42nd Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 140, An Act to amend the County Judges Act. Mr. Blackwell.

On Section 1.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Will the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) tell us why the provisions of this new Act are limited to the County of York? Could it not be made to apply to any county where there are senior and junior judges.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, there is only one county in which there has been any difficulty about arranging between the judges, as to how the judicial work should be apportioned. There has been difficulty in that respect in the County of York, and as that is the only difficulty to meet, the amendment is limited to that.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

INVESTMENT CONTRACTS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 44th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 143, An Act respecting Investment Contracts. Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 12 inclusive approved.

On Section 13.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I move that Section 13 (1) (a) of the present Act be deleted, and that a new Section 13 (1) (a) be substituted, to read as follows:

"The total liability of the issuer on the last day of the quarterly period last ended on outstanding investment contracts."

Mr. Chairman, the difference is there are 2 entirely different liabilities involved in this contract, as there happens to be in insurance contracts; one is a liability for the cash surrender value, if anyone comes along and asks for the cash surrender value, and the other is the liability in relation to the maturity dates of the contract. This section refers to the larger rather than the lesser liability, and is in accordance with the letters patent of this type of company.

Sections 13 (as amended) to 26 inclusive approved.

THE HOTEL FIRE SAFETY ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 45th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 144, The Hotel Fire Safety Act, 1948, Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 9 inclusive approved.

On Section 10.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Does this apply to hotels all over the province?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Sections 10 to 15 inclusive approved.

On Section 16.

MR. OLIVER: "Every boiler or furnace room in a hotel shall be of fire-resistive construction and shall be equipped with fire doors;" that would apply, the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) says, to every hotel in the province over 2 storeys, is that right? 2 storeys or over?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is any hotel which had a boiler or furnace room.

MR. OLIVER: It seemed to me while we all would reach out and grab any precaution against fire, actually many of the provisions of this bill would weigh very heavily on hotels in outside districts, I mean in medium-sized towns throughout the province. Would it be the purpose of the department to insist these changes and these renovations be made, or would they do it gradually over a period of time? Just what has the Government in mind?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I take it the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) really intends his question to be directed to somewhat broader considerations than just this section?

MR. OLIVER: That is right.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I think, under the circumstances, I should also make some remarks of a general application to apply to more than this section.

The fact of the matter is, the fire safety measures have been held in abeyance for some little time for the simple reason that, departmentally, we could not satisfy ourselves that the proprietors of hotels could even carry out these provisions, in the matter of obtaining labour and material. I should say that even yet these provisions in the aggregate are not what might be termed "ideal considerations." You will note in the bill that "new construction" and "old construction" are definitely separated. It is calculated that existing hotels throughout the province can be brought to the reasonable standard of safety required by this Act, except in very rare cases, by the expenditure of a few hundred dollars.

I am referring there to the mandatory provisions of the Act, because there are some occasions provided for in the Act, which no doubt the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has noticed, where there is a discretion to impose certain other conditions which quite obviously could not be done for a few hundred dollars. There the view taken is if the risk is great enough, there should be a discretion to impose reasonable minimum standards of public safety requirements, but in order that no one shall be arbitrarily dealt with, there are 2 appeals supplied. The first appeal is to the Fire Marshal, and then if the proprietor should not be satisfied with the disposition given by the Fire Marshal, he can go to a County Court Judge. So there are those safe-guarding checks on even the discretionary matters which relate to such things as putting in sprinkling systems and so on, where a considerable amount of expense would be involved. But, generally, the existing hotels of the province, of any moderate size, may be brought into a condition of reasonable public safety by an expenditure of a few hundred dollars.

The conditions, of course, are entirely different for new construction over 2 storeys in height. This bill provides that any new hotels constructed in this province over two storeys in height shall be of fire-resistive construction where the public can be assured of a maximum of safety.

MR. OLIVER: I have no argument with my hon. friend—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: No, you just want an explanation.

MR. OLIVER: —in respect to new construction, but it did seem to me it would take quite a substantial amount in various towns in this province, and if we were to insist on the letter of the law being followed, we were going to impose upon them very severe difficulties financially.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I think, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) over-rates the combined effect of these provisions. For instance, with relation to Section 16—the one to which I know his anxiety is not limited, but relates to discussion on that section—does not mean there has to be a newly-constructed boiler room. That boiler room can be made fire-resistive by a simple alteration and repair and without structural alterations, in the main. Is there any reason why, if I were building a new hotel, I should have to build it with a boiler room of fire-resistive construction, and yet leave the old hotel with all the risk, when it could be done for a very modest expenditure relating to what the new construction might reasonably entail?

Sections 16 to 25 inclusive approve'

On Section 26.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): On Section 26, I just want to clear up 1 point. What is the view taken by the department concerning—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am sorry, I cannot hear the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand).

MR. CHARTRAND: On Section 26, I just wanted to clear up 1 point of interpretation. The Act has reference to hotels over 2 storeys high. Some hotels have got part basements, which are used as beverage rooms and which have windows 4 feet above the ground. Would that be classified as 1 storey?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am very sorry, I do not want to embarrass the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) by repeating that I find it very difficult to hear, but possibly, his question might be answered by referring to Section 1

(m) of the interpretation section, which defines "storey". I think he will find that answers his question.

Sections 27 and 28 approved.

MR. OLIVER: Before the bill is reported, would it be the intention of the department to send out inspectors to determine the fire worthiness of these hotels, or how are you going to determine whether they need renovating or not?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: As the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) probably knows, there is a delegation of this responsibility to the local municipalities, the fire chief and so on. In the City of Toronto, for instance, they recently elevated the position of the fire chief in that he may have a special marshal, but that inspection is made ordinarily by the fire chief. There are inspectors who do special inspections from the Fire Marshal's office. In relation to licensed premises under the Liquor License Act all the inspectors who inspect under that Act also have received special instruction on fire conditions, and include that in their reports.

MR. OLIVER: I quite understand where hotels licensed under the Liquor Control Act would be inspected, but I can think, and I am sure the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) can—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh, yes.

MR. OLIVER: —of fine hotels situated in small municipalities where I do not think the fire chief knows much what he is supposed to do, and I was wondering if there would be a systematic inspection set in motion to determine the fire worthiness of these hotels or are you just going to let it go and let the information come in?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: No. Mr. Chairman, it is not a question of "letting it go." As a matter of fact, in the main, the fire chiefs are pretty responsible people and the experience of the department and the co-operation they undertake under the statutory responsibility which is imposed on them is very good.

We have not any projects where we are going to dispense with the available service, and at the cost of the taxpayers of the province, institute a large inspectional service to replace that. It would be an expensive adjunct to the Fire Marshal's Department, and the work is done by reasonably responsible people in a reasonably satisfactory way.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): As a matter of curiosity, Mr. Chairman, may I ask if the Fire Underwriter's representative reaction has been sought as to this? Has this been presented to the fire insurance companies in some way, and their advice, or reaction sought?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I understand not.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Any connection between this and the coming election?

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Spare the rod and spoil the child.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: All I can say is when it comes, there will be lightning rods available.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On Section 2, will my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) tell me how 2 is amended? I would like to know.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): There is no substantive amendment in 2. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) wants to know the precise change in wording, I would have to get out the old Act.

MR. OLIVER: Never mind now.

Sections 2 to 14 inclusive approved.
On Section 15.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Are there not regulations now regarding those things? I understood there was a regulation for years regarding the minimum standards on lighting rods, for instance.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Yes, Mr. Chairman, the understanding of the hon. member (Mr. McEwing) is quite right. There have been regulations for years.

MR. OLIVER: Have we had a licensing system?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: That is not new in this?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: If my recollection is right, the original Act was passed in 1922; if it was not exactly in 1922, it was a year before or a year after.

Section 15 approved.

CROWN TIMBER ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 47th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 146, An Act to amend the Crown Timber Act. Mr. Scott.

Sections 1 to 6 inclusive approved.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Just one question in connection with the Act. I was wondering why penalties were not set out in the Act? It is left to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to prescribe the penalties. Why were they not set out in the Act like the majority of other Acts we have been dealing with?

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Is the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) referring to Section 17 of 3?

MR. GRUMMETT: Section 2 of this present Act, sub-section 7.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, the section in question does not say "set out", it says "imposed by". Although the sections are set out in the Act, they are imposed by either the act or by the regulations.

MR. GRUMMETT: My question was why are they not set out in this Act the same way as they are in most of the other Acts?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is what I was saying. This is just an amending Act. This Act has not repealed the penalties that are set out in the Act. I tried, Mr. Chairman, in a simple way to say that the penalties set out in the Act are unaffected, but penalties are imposed by reason of somebody violating a provision of either (a) the Act, or (b) the regulations, and then the penalty section as set out in the Act applies.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 1st Order.

CITY OF TORONTO

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 1st Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 28, An Act respecting the City of Toronto. Mr. Roberts.

Sections 1 to 9 inclusive approved.

On Section 10.

MR. W. E. DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Mr. Chairman, I wish to move an amendment to Section 10, which is under "Notice of Motion" on page 217 of the Order Paper.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, the amendment deals with the smoke by-laws, and I think the original request of the city as embodied in the bill, before it was amended, should be carried.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: The city asks authority and adequate machinery in order to rid itself of the nuisance of the smoke which is undermining the health of the citizens and is a general nuisance. That the Act, as requested by the city, is not extreme, is proven by the fact that the Board of Trade of the City of Toronto, speaking on behalf of the most interested business groups of the city, is whole-heartedly in favour of the bill as presented by the city. Every hon. member of the House, I think, has received a letter signed by Mr. Tolchard, the general manager of the Board of Trade, and I submit, Mr. Chairman, if this is satisfactory to the Board of Trade and has been requested by the City Council, we should feel fully justified in voting for the bill without amendment.

I believe, Mr. Chairman, there is an exaggerated fear expressed by some people if the bill in its present form should be adopted, certain types of businesses will find it impossible to continue. That is incorrect. It is a wrong assumption—a wrong conclusion.

If, for instance, the brick works in the Don Valley, or another industrial establishment in some other part of the city, should be faced with a special problem, there are ample provisions for appeals to be made and for a hearing to be given, and I think, Mr. Chairman, we should have confidence in the council and the officers it will appoint to enforce this act, and in the machinery they will set up to receive and deal with special appeals.

And so, Mr. Chairman, I cannot approve the amendment and I suggest that we reject it and adopt the original Section 10 that is before us.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Mr. Chairman—

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): As a point of order, we want to know what is the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth).

MR. DUCKWORTH: The amendment is on the Order Paper.

MR. BELANGER: I do not care whether it is on the Order Paper or not. I want to know what it is.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Mr. Chairman, the amendment is on the Notice of Motion, page 217.

MR. BELANGER: Cannot you read it?

MR. DUCKWORTH: The hon. member (Mr. Belanger) can read it himself.

MR. BELANGER: Why should I? You are the mover.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Mr. Chairman, I want to answer the question of the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) who has just spoken. This bill came down and was presented by the city.

MR. BELANGER: The amendment is not before us and cannot be spoken to unless it has been read.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Read it, read it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Surely the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) is not going to insist on the hon. member (Mr. Duckworth) reading an amendment of that length?

MR. BELANGER: Well, I do not know how long it is. I have not it before me.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You have it in the Orders of the Day. There is no doubt any hon. member of the Legislature can take it better through his eyes than his ears. If anybody wants to insist that the hon. member (Mr. Duckworth) read that long amendment, I suppose he will oblige.

MR. DUCKWORTH: When the bill came here from the city, I was not satisfied with Section 10 of the bill. The part that I objected to was where a man had a furnace installed in his residence and his grate burned out, his pipe fell down, or something else went wrong, and he could not repair them until such time as he went to the city and got a permit. I considered that was very drastic, and was a hardship on the little fellow on the street. It might happen on Sunday, or on a holiday. What is he going to do? Sit in the house and wait until some city authority grants him permission to install a grate in his furnace? That is why I objected to the section. I got in touch with the city solicitor and some of the members of the Board of Control and they read the part over and considered what I said about it was absolutely right, and so we had the bill changed. That is the only section I was interested in and that is how the bill came before you tonight. It will not make any difference about smoke. The grates put in the furnace would be of the same quality as was in the furnace before. That has nothing to do with the smoke.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. member (Mr. Duckworth) show me where the original section would cause such hardship on the individual citizen whose furnace grate would burn out? My way of looking at it, is this is a gross exaggeration, and I would like to know what part of the section would cause hardship.

MR. DUCKWORTH: I presume the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) can read, and if he turns up Section 10 of the bill presented by the city . . .

MR. SALSBERG: Where?

MR. DUCKWORTH: In Section 10.

MR. SALSBERG: There is nothing at all about stove pipes or grates.

MR. DUCKWORTH: It says if any part of the furnace falls down you could not repair until you got a permit.

MR. SALSBERG: Where does it say so? I submit the section says nothing of the sort, and there is no need for the fear the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) seems to display.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Have you the bill before you?

MR. SALSBERG: I have a bill and I submit to you there is nothing in the section to justify your fear.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): I do not know whether the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is just trying to have fun in this, but may I point out to him the section under discussion, as appears in the book? the bill introduced, and Section 10 as it emerged from the Private Bills Committee and reported here? With that explanation, if the Votes and Proceedings are examined it will be found the amendment now made by the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) relates to Section 10 of the bill which is the section as enumerated as the bill came back from the committee. If the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has not received it—

MR. SALSBERG: I have it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: What is all the argument about?

MR. SALSBERG: I am sorry, if the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) had listened, the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) told this House unless the bill is amended, any citizen of the City of Toronto whose furnace grate is broken will not be allowed to fix it without authorization, and if his chimney pipe should break he is not able to correct it. I submit the private bill which is before us has no such provision and will create no such hardship for any house owner or stove owner or what have you. If the amendment that is proposed is for the purpose of protecting certain types of establishments which require the burning of coal, etc., I say in reply that the Board of Trade have taken all that into account. They sent a letter to every member of the House supporting the bill in its original form and they point out there are ample provisions to protect any single firm in Toronto which may have a special case. I say if it is satisfactory to the Board of Trade, it should be satisfactory to us.

MR. DUCKWORTH: I do not think the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) should mention the Board of Trade or to whom it is satisfactory. To my mind it is the bill as it came down in its first order which was not satisfactory to the home owners in the City of Toronto. The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is always talking about the "little fellow" and "housewives" but when it comes down to the individual home owner then he stands up and says "take the Board of Trade and you will agree with what they say." Why do you not stay on a straight line and not be wiggling off all the time.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, following what the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) has said—I am being very serious about this; I was under the impression that the thing which bothers the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) is amply covered in subsection 4 of Section 10.

I sat on the committee where this bill was discussed and I would like to call the attention of the House to subsection 4 which authorized the officer of the municipality charged with the enforcement of any by-law or resolution passed pursuant to the section, to permit deviation or exemption from the requirements of the by-law or resolution. What could be clearer than that?

This amendment, Mr. Chairman, was carried in committee. It seems to me this amendment meets all the contingencies which the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) speaks of. I, for the life of me, cannot understand why it is necessary to accept a long amendment like this when the committee took very good care to see that nothing appeared in this bill which would work hardship on the very type of people whom the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) has described.

I think it is very clear and very explicit and is intended to achieve the very thing the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) has in mind. I do not see why we should complicate it any more by accepting a long, involved amendment like this because I do not see anything in the amendment which is not very clearly provided for in this section I have just read.

MR. DUCKWORTH: Do you want me to read the section in the old bill as it came down from the city?

MR. MACLEOD: I was quoting from the amended bill as it came down.

MR. DUCKWORTH: It is the amended bill I am talking about now, to which I am moving the amendment. I am speaking of the bill as it first came down from the City of Toronto as presented by the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts). I objected to certain things which were in that particular bill and when I made objection then the amendment came along and it is the amendment I am moving now.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, no.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) a question? Do you have in your book the bill as amended which came from the Private Bills Committee?

MR. DUCKWORTH: The section I objected to was not amended in the Private Bills Committee.

MR. MACLEOD: Oh, yes it was.

MR. BELANGER: I say, as a member of the Private Bills Committee, If we were to put in this bill with that cumbersome amendment—all those who were in the Private Bills Committee and who heard the discussion which lasted about an hour and a half and at which time the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) could have brought before the Private Bills Committee his amendment, if he thought it was necessary—I think every member of that committee would stultify himself in this House at the present time.

I think this covers all the provisions which have been put in, and I do not see why at the present time without any satisfactory explanation at all from the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) trying to show how this amendment is necessary, and after all the discussion that took place in the Private Bills Committee, in which he took part as a member of the Private Bills Committee, and having heard the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) in the Private Bills Committee, I am not going to stultify myself by voting for it.

MR. MACLEOD: May I ask you a question before you speak?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Suppose you let me speak and ask me questions afterwards.

MR. MACLEOD: It will not be necessary.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: What happens to this bill will not affect the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) very much, or his constituency. I rather regret he has made a definite declaration of his intention regarding the bill for possibly he might have the advantage of discussion which might ensue on it.

Possibly he was not in the House on Friday when, with the permission of the House, I attempted to give an explanation here which might avoid some of the misconception which has developed in the discussion. I might say, had it been open for me to do so, I would have moved the amendment, but being a Minister, it would have been out of order for me to do so.

The situation was simply this: I know the hon. members of the Private Bills Committee gave very considerable and very earnest consideration to the questions involved, but the situation was, that to a number of the Toronto members it became quite apparent to me the amendments were to be moved to this particular section and I thought it might be better if an effort were made to have drafted, as a co-operative effort between city solicitors of Toronto and the Legislative Council, an amendment which will be well and carefully considered, to try to meet the divergent points of view, and place that before the House, than having an amendment raised here, on the spur of the moment, which might not meet the situation.

With that background, I will endeavour to explain once more to the House, if I may, what is involved. There are two distinct amendments dealing with two entirely different situations in the amendment moved by the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth). They both, however, arise by reason of the fundamental objection to the wording in which section 4 of the bill, as amended, came from the Private Bills Committee. What the private bill proposes is that a by-law be passed, under which it becomes a delegated legislation, and then under the authority of the private bill, it is left for an official, in the face of what the law is declared to be, by by-law, to determine in his discretion whether or not some deviation or some exemption should be made from that by-law, and on the grounds of public policy that represents a bureaucratic and irresponsible way of making a law.

On that basis, there were plans and representations made to some of the Toronto members. The first amendment in question simply relieved from the filing of plans and specifications in relation to dwelling houses where some repairs are being made to furnaces and heating equipment. The city is aware of that fact the amendment is being proposed, and they do not seem to be very upset about it. It simply means where an owner takes the responsibility there is no change in putting forth the smoke by-laws and so on; he can have the simple repairs made to a furnace without having to go down to City Hall and file plans to get a repair made to his furnace.

The second amendment: Under a section of the Municipal Act which has been in force for many years, and under which municipalities have been empowered to pass by-laws dealing with smoke, there were certain exemptions. Under these exemptions, certain types of manufacturing plants and of home owners in the city of Toronto have established a limited number of businesses, and a great many homes. Here is what happened under this proposed amendment; instead of them being brought initially under the by-law and then having to plead with an official to let them out, this form of amendment simply says initially they are outside the by-law, but the city, if it feels the enterprise or property in question should be brought under by-law, may serve a notice covering the terms under which the business of that person should be brought under the by-law. If there is no objection taken on the expiry of 30 days, the property or business is automatically brought within the full provisions of the by-law. If objections are taken by the owner, then what happens is a hearing is held by city council or by the board they set up, and if, as a result of that hearing, the owner or operator of the business does not wish to appeal to the municipal board, he comes under, automatically, the provisions of the by-law.

There is a right of appeal to the municipal board to determine whether or not the terms and conditions under which these people who have enjoyed these exemptions for this length of time are brought under the by-law. That seems to me to be a democratic and proper way to deal with this, and it seems to me to be the decent way. That is the full effect of the two amendments and it seems to me any laudable efforts being made by the city of Toronto to correct smoke nuisances, there is within the machinery of that act, with those amendments, a very proper procedure where the people concerned will all have their day in court and will not be left to the mercy of an official appointed under an Act that says thus and so happens. That is the explanation of this amendment, and I am sorry to be put in the position of boring the Legislature by repeating that explanation twice.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): I hope the members of the Committee, who formed the majority, and of course were supporters of the Government, will take their chastisement just administered to them.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is not a chastisement, because the only person who raised the question and would not consent to approve the motion, to begin with, is the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger).

MR. BELANGER: I said, as a member of the Private Bills Committee, I wished always to co-operate, when things were explained to me with the majority, and I did co-operate at that time. The majority were members of or supporters of the Government, and there was in that committee the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth), who took a very important part in the discussion, and this was never presented to us in that committee, but we are so keen and co-operative when things are explained to us properly, that we voted with the majority and co-operated in the amendment which was brought before us. After all that is done, then comes an amendment to this section which is as long as the section itself.

MR. BLACKWELL: Not quite.

MR. BELANGER: Not quite. Perhaps if the officials of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) had been desirous of finding something shorter, they might have done so. We, in the Private Bills Committee, did find some measure of compromise. Now it comes here and we are being asked to go through the whole set of arguments, and so on. I can see the full force of the argument by the hon. member (Mr. Duckworth), although I do not just know exactly what the situation is in Toronto. I was glad to be present, as that was the first discussion period.

I can see what the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) was hinting at when he said: "I am sorry to have to repeat what I said on Friday." He was not present in the committee and I am sorry, because if he had been present in the committee he would have given us the first draft of this thing, I suppose, which came out of mind, as Minerva came out of the heat of Jupiter.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Yes, but she came out whole.

MR. BELANGER: I am quite amenable to the argument, but not having had occasion to study that long section, after giving so much attention to what was put before us in the Private Bills Committee, I am justified, I believe, in saying I would not like to stultify myself by voting against what took place in the Private Bills Committee.

However, after the reason given, and as the Government wants to take the responsibility, that is another matter, though the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) said, as a Minister of the Crown he would not like to speak on it, because it puts him in a queer position and he thought it was out of order. However, I do not agree with him, and I think he was right in putting it, but I am still saying, why did not the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth), if he was not exactly satisfied with it, go to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) in the first place and come to the Private Bills Committee and put the thing before us? Then we might have been able to bring a bill such as the city of Toronto and the Government wishes to have. What we did was simply to co-operate with those interested in the matter.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: No one is questioning that.

MR. BELANGER: I am glad you are not. I am questioning if the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) as a member of the Private Bills Committee, wanted such an amendment, he did not put it before the Private Bills Committee and if before putting it before the Private Bills Committee, he needed to consult the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) he could have done so and then we would have had the whole thing before us.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: What do you think about it now?

MR. BELANGER: If Toronto, and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) want it, I am going to vote for it.

Section 10 (as amended) approved.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, I think the House should be fair with the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth). After all, he was in the same position as all the other hon. members of the Private Bills Committee. He was handed a bill which went through. It is true we took three-quarters of an hour or so on it, but after the bill went through the Private Bills Committee, the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) was evidently bothered about some of the provisions, and went to the trouble of consulting the City Solicitor and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and evidently was satisfied that some of his doubts and fears were well justified.

After listening to the statement made by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) a moment or so ago, I am thoroughly satisfied that the amendment proposed is a vast improvement over the amendment which was suggested in the Private Bills Committee and I think the hon. members of this House should understand that what is happening here tonight on this amendment could happen on any future occasion. After all the Private Bills Committee is not infallible, not even the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) claims to be infallible, and he has said that many times and has even admitted it publicly.

I think the statement made by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) straightens this thing out, and I want to say to him the question I was about to ask has been answered with characteristic clarity.

THE RIGHTS OF LABOUR ACT, 1944

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 9th Order, second reading of Bill No. 40, An Act to amend the Rights of Labour Act, 1944. Mr. Grummett.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 40, An Act to amend the Rights of Labour Act, 1944.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple amendment to the existing statute. The bill provides the Rights of Labour Act, 1944, be amended by adding thereto the following section:

"3(a) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, or any other Act, no application for an injunction may be made in any court in connection with a strike or lock-out or apprehended strike or lock-out except with the consent of the Ontario Labour Relations Board."

This bill was previously before the Legislature in October, 1947. At that time, in speaking to the bill, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) made the following statement:

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and I am sure the hon. members realize if injunction proceedings could have been had in this province, many of them would have been taken before now. You cannot bring injunction proceedings in relation to that which Legislation requires to be done or not to be done."

That was on October 28th, 1947. The Hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) went on to explain in the remainder of his address, it was not the practice in Ontario to take out injunctions in cases of this kind.

Shortly after the session ended, an injunction was taken out, and I wish to quote from the Globe and Mail of December 6th, 1947. I will not quote the whole article, but just refer to the heading: "Judge dissolves injunction, but grants new one." The Evening Telegram of December 9th also referred to an injunction.

This was an injunction taken out restraining the organizers of the striking United Electrical Workers Union (C.I.O.) from denying the company officials and maintenance men access to the Corbin Lock Company's plant in Belleville.

It was rather significant that shortly after we had discussed this matter, in October, we find injunctions taken out in labour disputes.

This Act, Mr. Speaker, does not deprive anyone or any concern or industrial company from its present rights. It merely provides that before an injunction can be taken out they must submit the whole matter to the Ontario Labour Relations Board, and then, if they get the "go ahead" signal, they are entitled to apply for an injunction.

This is a very simple amendment, Mr. Speaker, and I will not prolong the argument on it.

I move second reading of the bill.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, it appears to me this proposed amendment would result in a basic change to the fundamentals of the Labour Relations Act. I think I will be almost as brief as the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) and say it is not acceptable to the Government.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) why it would be such a fundamental change?

HON. MR. DALEY: Because the courts are here, and they will decide whether an injunction should be granted or not. The Labour Relations Board is not a permanent Board; it does not meet every day. True, it meets every week now, but there may come a time, if business falls off, when the board will not actually be meeting for a week or two.

The fundamentals are there. It is part and parcel of the Labour Relations Act, and I certainly would not recommend the Government accept this motion.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak on this, for a moment only. I had no intention of speaking on it, but the remarks of the Hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) compel me to reply, even though briefly.

It is surprising to find an hon. Minister (Mr. Daley), who boasts of holding a union card for many years, to state the proposal contained in this bill is outlandish and unacceptable. May I suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley), and to the hon. members of this House, that labour's battle against injunctions is as old as the labour movement. The opposition of labour to the use of injunctions in labour disputes is not limited to one section of the labour movement, but has been fought by every section. Even the most conservative union leaders in American labour history have battled against the use of injunctions, and I think it would perhaps help the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) to recall that the late Samuel Gompers, who was amongst the most conservative union leaders in the world, not only led the fight in his day against the use of injunctions in labour disputes, but defied injunctions, and demonstratively went on the picket lines more than once, when injunctions were procured prohibiting picketing. That is part and parcel of the whole history of labour in the United States and Canada.

It is also known to people in the labour movement, that employers have, in the past, applied for and secured temporary injunctions which sought to prevent the affected workers from exercising their elementary right of peaceful picketing, and I emphasize "peaceful picketing—"

HON. MR. DALEY: No need for an injunction, then.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, Mr. Minister (Mr. Daley), employers have applied for injunctions to prevent peaceful picketing because they did not want to have picketing of any sort.

Not so many years ago there were certain lawyers who specialized in injunction law, and in the art of securing injunctions, even of a temporary nature, but a temporary injunction was often sufficient to cripple a strike.

This is nothing outlandish, and nothing new. I thought the provision in the bill was an excellent one. They are in full accord with what the labour movement is always demanding. This in no way infringes upon anybody's rights; all the provision of this bill seeks to do is guarantee that the inalienable right of peaceful picketing and striking will not be subverted by a given employer who may succeed if he applies and secures an interim injunction.

I suggest this bill should, therefore, be endorsed by this Legislature.

HOURS OF WORK AND VACATIONS WITH PAY

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 11th Order, second reading of Bill No. 42, An Act to amend the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944. Mr. Robinson.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 42, An Act to amend the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944.

Mr. Speaker, my remarks in support of this bill will not be lengthy. My mind immediately goes back to some 25 years ago, when labour was fighting for the 8-hour day. I can recall at that time remarks were made that the 8-hour day would bankrupt the companies and all sorts of fearful things were stated would take place if labour were given the 8-hour day. I notice the companies survived and, from the profit sheets, they are doing pretty well.

I also heard the argument at that time that labour would have too much leisure time, there was fear they would get into all kinds of trouble in this leisure time they were going to have if we shortened their workday to 8 hours. I always thought that was an insult to the intelligence of the working man. I feel he can make good use of any leisure time he may have, and he will enjoy better health because of it.

That was 25 years ago, Mr. Speaker, and the production methods since that time are vastly superior to those methods we knew at that time, and yet we hear the same arguments advanced today, opposing the shortening of the hours of labour, as we heard in those days.

In good times, we are told there is a shortage of labour and the 40-hour week is premature, and in bad times we are told that industries cannot afford it and that we will have to wait for good times in order to get it, and so the game goes on and the working man never realizes his objective. No matter how furious becomes the pace at which the labourer works, no matter how enormously modern machines and techniques speed up the production tempo, we still hear the cry for greater and greater production.

Statistics today prove that profits stand at an all-time high, and I think the time has come when labour rightfully feels it is high time some of those profits come back to them in the form of shorter working days.

It is a fallacy, in my opinion, Mr. Speaker, to believe the 40-hour week will come automatically some happy day in the future. I think it will come, as all other gains for labour have come, through continuous and organized effort, when the day comes when the pressure becomes so great it is impossible for the employers to stave it off any longer. That, in my opinion, has been how labour has gained all of its ends, and, unfortunately, when that stage is reached the benefits given to labour are too little and too late.

The question we have to decide, in my opinion, is whether or not under today's production methods labour rightfully deserves a 40-hour week. I believe they do, but I believe if it is left to the usual channels, as I said, it will be "too little and too late." I believe Ontario, Canada's wealthiest province, can rightfully be expected to take the lead and give her workers hours of work in keeping with the times. I feel regulations should be provided to control the application in keeping with the conditions, as was done in the 48-hour-week bill.

Insofar, Mr. Speaker, as the section of the bill covering holidays is concerned, surely it is not necessary for me to emphasize that one week is too short for a vacation. I am sure there is not a single member in this House will disagree with me when I say that one week is too short. I think the time is long past due when two weeks vacation with pay should be statutory.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to leave these thoughts with the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) before I take my seat.

I move second reading of the bill.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I felt rather good at the statement made by the hon. member (Mr. Robinson) when he said that for 25 years or more labour had been fighting for an 8-hour day, because if you will look at the bill this amendment proposes to amend, "an Act to amend the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944," you will recall it was this Government which had the courage in that time to establish in this province an 8-hour day—a 48-hour week.

It was felt at that time, men were being called upon to work long hours and there should be some control, and a decision had to be made as to what was a reasonable day's work, and what was a reasonable week's work. The number of hours was figured at 8 hours per day, which I do not think is unreasonable. I thought it was a reasonable amount of hours at that time, and I still do.

It was also considered at that time, it would be necessary in certain cases, under certain conditions, to permit a certain amount of overtime. A number of hours based on 100 hours per year per man was established, and while it was not deemed advisable to establish a basic rate of pay for overtime, I am sure the hon. member (Mr. Robinson) will admit it is practically an accepted rule in the province to pay time and a half for overtime, and I do not think there is any legislation required to change that, nor do I deem it advisable to do so.

The hon. member (Mr. Robinson) points out that industry is profiting at the present time. That is true, and I am very glad it is true, Mr. Speaker, because profitable industry makes profitable workers, and increases the standard of living, and I cannot be convinced in my own mind that 8 hours a day is an unreasonable amount of time, and as the basic rate of pay is accepted for overtime at time and a half, there is no need to alter that legislation.

I can also say that in the same Act was included a holiday with pay. The workers in this province had no doubt been attempting to get holidays with pay for many more than 25 years, but again, this Government in considering this matter, felt that a week's holiday with pay should be granted to every man and woman who works in this province. You can argue that some get 2 weeks, some get 3 weeks. I am not one who would like to see one half minute of the two weeks taken away from those people who, by negotiation, collective bargaining, or in any way, or by agreement even if they are not in an organization—there are many firms whose men are not organized who give people various amounts of holidays—get their holidays. This Government felt then, and still feels, that to make it mandatory for every man and woman who works in this province to get a week's holiday with pay, was good and reasonable legislation, and we still feel that same way about it.

Therefore, I must inform the House, through you, Mr. Speaker, that the Government is not prepared at this time to accept this bill.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make just a few short observations on this. It strikes me that it will not do too much good to talk too long when we can accomplish something by talking little.

I do feel, however, that if there are any people in this province who are entitled to two weeks' vacation with pay—I want to deal with this section first—certainly it must be the working people who provide all of our salaries through their labour. We talk much about the "beauties of Canada." I referred not so very long ago when I was speaking in the House, to the poor opportunity—or lack of opportunity I should say—of the great masses of working people of this province to see the great beauties of the province, people particularly who work back in the bush who, perhaps, spend that week coming to a city for a change of scenery and back to their place of work. They have little or no time left to themselves to see some of the things which would be a contrast from the conditions they are living under and the particular environment by which they are bound. I know of no people who need the 2 weeks' vacation worse than some of the people who toil so much harder than we do.

True, we once in a while work a long session, from 3 till this hour, but many times it is from 3 to 6—we, who legislate the laws of the province. We might say, "Yes, but we have chores to do in the various departments here," but the working people have chores to do, too, when their day's work is done.

As far as the 40-hour work week, I think they are entitled to that also. It is time we introduced a shorter work week for the working people. Maybe if we wait much longer we will have great, huge armies of unemployed again, with one army of workers and the other one outside the gate waiting for them to quit, to get fired, or get killed as happens in many cases.

I plead with the Government, let us pass this bill. I think it will be in the best interest of the whole province and accordingly, the whole nation.

MUNICIPAL HEALTH SERVICES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 12th Order, second reading of Bill No. 43, An Act to amend the Municipal Health Services Act, 1944. Mr. Harvey.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 43, An Act to amend the Municipal Health Services Act, 1944.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few comments on this bill. The present Act was passed in 1944 with the idea of making it possible for the municipalities to establish local health services, medical services and hospital services, etc. At that time, it will be recalled this group in the House criticized the bill because all the controls were centralized in the Medical Services Board at Queen's Park, and the municipalities were merely left to collect the taxes and pay the bills.

We said then that the municipalities were not inclined to accept this bill. That was four years ago, and so far as I know, no municipality has yet set up a Municipal Health Service under this Act.

In 1946, the hon. Minister at that time (Mr. Vivian) said that a number of services had been made and he believed that certain municipalities would be going on with this Act, but as far as we know, none has.

It seems to me there is no use in having legislation on the books unless people make use of it. I have suggested amendments to this Act in previous years, to bring it similar to the St. Joseph's Island Act, which provides services under similar legislation I intend to move in this amendment.

We believe the proposed amendment will make the Act work, and make it more attractive to the municipalities. It allows the municipalities to make their own arrangements for health services with the medical and other personnel required. There are provisions in the Act, of course, for the protection of personnel required and that any contract be approved by the professional association concerned, but the municipalities will be free to develop their own plan and administer it themselves.

That seems to me to be the most democratic method. It is sound in principle, and we believe it will work where the present act does not work, and is not acceptable to the municipalities.

In speaking to this bill in 1946, the hon. Minister of Health at that time

(Mr. Vivian) made a statement, part of which I quote:

"At the present time we feel that from the standpoint of standardization of service and maintenance, the whole thing would be better to have it done by the Municipal Board, as it is here in the Act."

Now, as far as standardization of service is concerned, it seems to me this is the acme of standardization because no municipality so far as we know has accepted the provisions of the Act, therefore, there is no application and no function and nothing is happening. I do not think you could beat that for standardization. It is the acme of standardization—nothing being done, nothing accepted.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I suggest this amendment in order to make the Act more acceptable to the municipalities. I believe the municipalities require such legislation, but I do not think they will accept the present Act as it is. Therefore, I move second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not know with what authority the hon. member (Mr. Harvey), who is moving the second reading of this bill, says this Act would be more acceptable to the municipalities. We have no evidence of that, and it is rather interesting that the municipalities—which after all, are very well organized to speak for themselves—have not seen fit to indicate that opinion. There is no evidence before us that the amendments which are proposed would increase the number of units by a single one. The fact that the municipalities have not seen fit to avail themselves of this legislation is not in any way related to restrictions, because under our whole health plan in this province we follow a course of not assuring standardization. After all, it does come strangely from the hon. members opposite to be talking about our advocating standardization and centralization. There is not the slightest evidence of any difficulty being raised on that score, because we simply follow the policy followed for a very long time in this province of assuring through the health services of this province that such plans as are adopted in relation to any health activities are satisfactory from the point of view of health standards—nothing more. Nothing in the Act in the Statute books limits the opportunities of any municipality to have a community service of this kind and the amendments which were made would not extend it on the basis of any legislation before this House, and the Government will not accept the amendments.

THE HOURS OF WORK AND VACATIONS WITH PAY ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 14th Order, second reading of Bill No. 52. An Act to amend The Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944. Mr. Parent.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I wish to advise you, sir, the hon. member (Mr. Parent) is ill, I understand. I do not know whether you want to let it stand over.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. Salsberg) seconded this. I do not know that there is any reason to believe the hon. member for Essex, North (Mr. Parent) will be back in time to deal with the bill, and I think the seconder could deal with it.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On this particular bill, the hon. members will find it undertakes to give a vacation of at least two weeks with pay for every working year of his employment. If you had 10 years you would have 20 weeks with pay.

HON. MR. DREW: The bill actually is so obviously—I should use terms fitting to the Legislature—utterly impossible, I do not believe it deserves to be diverted. The hon. member who seconded it (Mr. Salsberg) is here, and can move second reading in place of the hon. member in whose name it stands (Mr. Parent).

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Well, Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the hon. member for Essex, North (Mr. Parent) I move second reading of Bill No. 52, An Act to amend The Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944.

In the absence of the hon. member (Mr. Parent) I want to say a few words in favour of the bill, conscious of the fact that at this stage we are discussing the principle of the bill and not the sections separately nor the editorial part of the bill. We dealt with a previous bill this evening that included many other proposals and extension of the vacation period to two weeks. This bill differs in that it is limited exclusively to the two-weeks' vacation proposal and I think it is a very good proposal. It is true, as the hon. Minister has pointed out, there is already in the Statute Books of the province provision for one week's vacation with pay. However, it should also be remembered that was introduced at a time when one week's vacation was becoming universal. Most industries at the time had already granted one week's vacation to the unions in those industries. Many large establishments in the province, even where there was no union, had already introduced the one week's vacation principle and were applying it.

When the Government introduced this legislation it was good, of course, and we all voted for it and it did bring vacations with pay to a portion of employees, but numbers would not have gotten it without the Legislature bringing it in. That does not change the fact that a rapidly-increasing number of factory and store employees and office employees were already getting one week's vacation at the time the Government introduced this legislation and for which we all voted.

Today the proposal of this bill is that it be extended for more than one week, one week being inadequate. I think it is a very good principle. I have covered the argument in favour of it, and I do not care to repeat it. I propose the bill be adopted and remind the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that insofar as the wording of the bill is concerned it could be amended very easily in committee stage, if that is the only objection he has to this bill. If I recall, the hon. member for Essex, North (Mr. Parent) had already expressed a readiness to make such amendments as may be suggested by hon. members of the House who are prepared to vote for it except for the amendment as suggested by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and can overcome the difficulty in Committee stage.

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): If a man worked for a firm for ten years, under this bill would he get 20 weeks holidays?

MR. SALSBERG: I would not propose nor second such a bill. I am not in favour of such a proposition at this stage. I could say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) there are people who get far more than that period of vacation and perform very little work, but they are an exception, of course, and I do not propose imitating them.

In reply, I say I am not proposing that and I do not think the hon. member who moved this bill (Mr. Parent) had that in mind. I am sure he would be ready to accept the amendment, and I therefore urge the hon. members of this House to vote for the bill with this understanding, that in committee stage the changes required will be made, to leave no doubt in anybody's mind that it is restricted to only two weeks' vacation with pay the first year, the second year and so on.

Motion negatived.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn and stands adjourned until two of the clock tomorrow afternoon.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: The Honourable J. DE C. HEPBURN

TUESDAY, APRIL 13, 1948.

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. WILLIAM DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, I beg to present the report of the Select Committee appointed to direct the expenditure of any sum set apart in the estimates for art purposes, and move its adoption.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Mr. Duckworth, from the Select Committee appointed to direct the expenditure of any sum set apart in the estimates for art purposes, begs leave to present the following as its report.

Gentlemen:

Your Select Committee appointed to direct the expenditure of any sum set apart in the estimates for art purposes, begs leave to present the following as its report:

Your Committee begs to report that the system adopted by your hon. body on the recommendations of your Committee on Thursday, October 30, 1947, for the purpose of conducting a competition amongst Ontario artists for a prize of $500 to be awarded annually by the Legislative Assembly, did not prove to be satisfactory. Your Committee therefore recommends:

1. That the system authorized last year, as above, be abandoned.

2. That your Committee be authorized to continue its functions following the prorogation of the present session of the Assembly and be authorized to hold meetings during the recess of the Assembly.

3. That your Committee be authorized to establish new regulations to govern the holding of the said competition in the present and future years and to arrange for holding the competition according to the regulations established by it.

4. That your Committee be authorized to purchase during the present fiscal year, pictures by Ontario artists and to pay for same out of the money appropriated for the use of the Committee and not used in the said competition.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Report approved.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I was wondering, in connection with the report, if I heard my friend correctly. It includes a provision they sit after the prorogation of the House, is that correct?

Should we not have some indication as to when this Committee is going to sit?

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): What happens if the House is dissolved?

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Dent, I beg to present the report of the Standing Committee on Printing, and move its adoption.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: In the absence of Mr. Dent, Mr. Downer from the Standing Committee on Printing, begs leave to present the following report:

Gentlemen:

The Standing Committee on Printing begs leave to present the following as its report:

Your Committee recommends that the supplies allowance per member for the current session of the Assembly be fixed at the sum of $50 and that, to meet the convenience of the members, a cheque for that amount be issued to each member of the Assembly in order that he may make the desired purchases in his own constituency;

Also that an allowance be authorized and a cheque issued to each of the full time daily newspaper representatives covering the present session of the Legislative Assembly, as nominated by the Press Gallery and approved by Mr. Speaker. Your Committee recommends that copies of the Canadian Parliamentary Guide, the Canadian Almanac and the Canada Year Book be purchased for distribution to the members of the Assembly.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I just wondered whether the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has placed his stamp of approval on the proposal to increase the stationery allowance? Did he agree to that?

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that the report be taken under consideration.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, what disposition is being made of the report? Does not the report have either to be adopted or rejected by the House? How can the House take it under consideration?

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) moved that the report receive consideration. As I understand it, that means the report will be laid on the table for future consideration.

MR. MACLEOD: At this session? Does that mean it may be discussed in the House during this session?

HON. MR. DREW: I think, Mr. Speaker, the situation is a very simple one. This involves certain proposals to which it seems obvious the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) should have an opportunity to give consideration before the House vote on the approval or otherwise of the report. I am not suggesting this be deferred, but simply that the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) be given an opportunity to examine it before the House votes on it.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On that point, Mr. Speaker, I agree with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) up to a point. However, this Committee sat in this particular session of the Legislature and it would seem to follow, to my way of thinking, we should dispose of this report in some way while this particular session is sitting.

HON. MR. DREW: My intention was that we deal with it tomorrow.

MR. OLIVER: That would be fine.

HON. MR. DREW: I might explain, however, as a matter of courtesy to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), who must find the revenue for these various purposes, I think the report should be before him before we, as a Legislature, pass on the recommendations.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, of course.

Motion approved.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

COMPANIES ACT

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Goodfellow, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Companies Act, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Speaker, perhaps it would be in order to make some brief comment at this time about the bill, as it is the second bill to amend the Companies Act.

This bill deals entirely with Part 12 of The Companies Act, which is the part which regulates the incorporation and operation of co-operative organizations. Since 1917, when the part was introduced, there has been very little change in the legislation to keep it abreast of practice followed by the co-operatives in the province, of whom there are now a very considerable number. My department informs me that something over 400 co-operatives have been incorporated under Part 12.

This particular revision results from the request of the Ontario Co-operatives Union, representing quite a number of these co-operatives, that the law should be brought more into accord with the practice which has been developed, not only in this province but in other parts of Canada and in the states of the Union. The details, I think, might well wait until hon. members have the bill in their hands. At this stage of the session, I thought it advisable to have the bill mimeographed and distributed, which I expect will be done this afternoon so that hon. members will be able to have more time to consider the changes before it comes up for second reading.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, may I present to the House the following report:

The 14th annual report of the Department of Municipal Affairs of the Province of Ontario, for the year ending March 31, 1948.

The Department of Municipal Affairs Annual Report on municipal statistics for the year 1946.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I would like to express the gratification of hon. members of this Legislature that one of the members of the press gallery attached to this Legislature should have received the recognition he has, as appears in the announcement in the press, of the proposal by the Congress of the United States to strike a medal recognizing the service of the 16 press representatives who were chosen to report to the world the surrender of the German Army at Rheims in 1945.

I feel sure it must be a slightly different picture which presents itself to him today from those troubled times when such large and far-reaching events hinged upon the immediate details being reported, but while the events themselves may not be on comparable terms, the fact is that now, as then, this reporter, together with the others attached to the press gallery, is performing one of the essential services of our democratic system.

At that time, from the very nature of the gratification we all felt over the formal surrender of the German Armies, it perhaps may have escaped us that never before were world events, on such a scale, brought to the knowledge of people everywhere with the same speed and completeness and, perhaps, the same accuracy as they were on those recent occasions of that time.

Therefore, I feel sure I am simply expressing the feeling of every hon. member of this Legislature when I say we extend our congratulations to Mr. Ross Parry on having been so signally honoured by the bill which is now before the Congress of the United States.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I beg to join with my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) in extending congratulations from this group on the occasion of recognition being granted to the reporter, who is in the gallery this afternoon.

I think sometimes we are apt to underestimate the responsibility which is placed on the shoulders of these men of the press. Generally speaking, they discharge their duties in a very creditable manner and give support to the contention that we have in this country a free and untrammelled press.

May I say to my friend, Mr. Parry, that I hope he is able to continue in his good work, and continues to bring a leavening influence in the sphere in which he now finds himself.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in extending to Mr. Parry the congratulations of the group which I lead in the House.

I am sure we all realize the arduous duties of reporters. They have to be here, there and everywhere whenever important news is breaking, and we all owe a debt of gratitude to our reporters and editorial staffs who were in that field during the recent conflict. They kept us well posted on the movements of armies, of what was impending and what might be happening. It is to men such as these that we express our appreciation for the manner in which they kept us informed.

I know the honour which has come to Mr. Parry is an honour deserved by him and I am sure all the other members of the press gallery will appreciate what has been given to him. It is a signal honour, and it reflects honour and glory on all the members of the press.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, when I picked up the Globe and Mail last night and read the announcement of the honour about to be awarded to Mr. Parry, I sent him a note of congratulation, but I take advantage of this opportunity to associate our small group with the congratulations which have been extended to him from the floor of this Legislature.

We have all come to respect Mr. Parry and his worthy colleagues from the Globe and Mail in the press gallery. The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has said there is little comparison between reporting the surrender of an army with the sort of thing the press gallery is subjected to here from day to day, nevertheless, I feel events are shaping up in such a way, that the political battle in the province of Ontario may take on some of the glamour it has lacked hitherto. I am sure in reporting the events which lie before us, the writing of Mr. Parry will stand up to the high standard which he set as a war correspondent.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 41st Order.

STATUTE LAW AMENDMENT ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 41st Order, second reading of Bill No. 154, The Statute Law Amendment Act, 1948. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 154, the Statute Law Amendment Act, 1948.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, with the permission of the House, if it will permit me to do so, I would like to draw attention to the fact there are two sections to be added to the Statute Law Amendment Act, and I thought I might table them now so that they will be available with the bill for the convenience of hon. members.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair, and that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion approved.

House in Committee, Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 32nd Order.

THE MINING ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 32nd Order, House again in Committee on Bill No. 63, An Act to amend The Mining Act. Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Chairman, hon. members of the House will recollect the fact that we held out section 153 of The Mining Act for further consideration.

Section 153 was a section passed many years ago before the present labour legislation relating to hours of work and other legislation was on the statute books. The purpose of section 153 was simply this, it was considered there should be a safety factor in connection with the hours which workmen should be underground, and 8 hours was set as the time. This was a great many years ago.

In the revision of the safety features of The Mining Act which took place during the last year, it was considered desirable to make certain references in this section to the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act.

When we considered the matter in the informal committee, they looked over these sections, and these points arose. First of all, this section was one which had been inserted many years ago as a safety factor. The point was as to whether the section should be loosened at all by inserting the words at the end of sub-section "a" of Section 1, and I think it was felt there should be no loosening up of the Act at all. This was where the matter stood when the section was held over.

The second point was whether this section had become entirely obsolete in view of the other legislation now on the statute books in relation to hours of work and vacations with pay, and in connection with the collective bargaining Act. If the section was obsolete, it might just as well be repealed.

That is where the matter stood when it was last considered by the Legislature, and I held it out for further consideration. Since that time, I have submitted the matter to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), and I have his good judgment in connection with this suggestion. I think I can sum up what he told me in these words:

First: It would be better to leave the section exactly as it was in the Mining Act before we commenced the revision; in other words, we should leave the section as it was, with the amendment which I introduced the other day, to strike out the words at the end of sub-section "a" at the top of page 7, "but the total excess hours which any one man shall work" and so on, leaving the section identically as it was before.

The reason for that decision is, first of all, this section is definitely a safety section, and it provides some restrictions in connection with hours of work, over the present provisions in the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act; in other words, it is more restrictive than the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, therefore, if this section is left in, it is a restrictive measure and deals with the factor of safety, and the Act should not be loosened at all, by removing the section.

The second part is this: The section does not prevent collective bargaining agreements. Everyone knows that, of course. In regard to many of the mines, this section, in effect, says, "No man shall be underground for a greater period of time than 8 hours at his place of work in the mine." A great majority of the mines have collar-to-collar arrangements, or portal-to-portal arrangements, where the period of time commences when the man enters the mine. The fact is, this section in no way interferes with the collective bargaining arrangements which are in force in a great majority of our mines.

The third factor is the Act itself does not prevent collective bargaining arrangements, but it does provide additional protection, under this section. If you have some mines where collective bargaining arrangements do not apply, where, in fact, the workmen have no collective bargaining agreement management, this section comes into full force, and provides a ceiling on the hours the men can work.

Mr. Chairman, after a consideration of the whole problem, and having the advantage of the decision of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) on the matter, we have come to the decision the section should remain in the Act, as it was before the revision, and the section should be according to the amendments which were moved by myself the last time the matter was before the House.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury):
Mr. Chairman, I am just a bit disappointed that sections 51 and 53 (a) were not deleted. It was my thought when we left the meeting, that would be the case.

That is the section dealing with hours of work, in which it states:

"Eight hours shall be reckoned from the time the man arrives at his place of work in the mine until the time he leaves his place."

The hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) stated most of the mines were covered by collective bargaining agreements. That is quite so. He also said that nothing in this Act would prevent those agreements from functioning. Again I agree with him. But I am quite mindful of the days when we did have collar-to-collar working hours in the mines of Cobalt. I worked under those conditions there, and also in Kirkland Lake, in the early days, and at that time our union was fairly strong, although we had no collective bargaining provisions to enforce the law, and what was done was through economic pressure, even by strikes.

Our unions are now comparatively strong. True, we have those provisions in our collective bargaining agreements with most of the major mining companies in the Province of Ontario.

However, everything is possible, and it may be one day we may not have these collective bargaining agreements, and then we will have to fall back on the conditions we worked under, and struck to change. Mr. Chairman, with a very small stroke of the pen we can delete this, and pacify all of the miners in the north country. I am sure the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) has letters from such people as the Sudbury local, which represents some 10,000 miners, who have requested this change, and from the Timmins local, which represents a major portion of the miners up there, who have recommended this change, and even if they did not, I would recommend the change because I know what it means to the miners. I am a miner myself; I have worked for some 23 years around the mines, and I know this collar-to-collar and face-to-face provision, and what it means to the miners. It means you can go into a mine where we have the face-to-face provision—and I know this because I have hoisted men up and down and worked in them myself—and you are supposed to take your place at your work, sometimes at 20 minutes to 7 in the morning, and you do not get up until perhaps 20 minutes after 3 in the afternoon, yet you are told you must not be underground longer than eight hours. In many cases the men have to walk half a mile, after leaving their work, then up a rise into a stoke, and walk again for a quarter of a mile before he gets to his work. Sometimes these men have to carry equipment with them to their places of work, and I maintain they should be getting paid for that.

Since the mine operators have agreed to it, and the mine employees have agreed to it in all the major mines, why should we not agree to it? Whom do we represent under this section? If not the operators nor the mine employees, I would like to know whom we do represent. The operators have agreed to it, although with some resentment, but in the process of collective bargaining, when we sat around the table with them, this provision was included.

Mr. Chairman, I want to conclude on the note that the miners will be very displeased regarding this section of the Act. They have requested it. They have been living under those conditions, and see no reason why it should not be in the Act at this time.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, unless my hon. friend the Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) is prepared to accept the amendment, I am prepared to move an amendment that the section be reworded, but first, I would like to hear from the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost).

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I think my hon. friend (Mr. Carlin) misunderstands what is being done by this section.

First of all, this Government, with the approval of the Legislature, has introduced into this province a most effective measure containing wide provisions for collective bargaining. May I assure the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) we are most anxious to make an effective bargaining arrangement and agreements which can be arrived at between management and labour. In fact, we have in some cases extended the provisions. The hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) now has such provisions in his Milk Bill, and we are desirous of extending them. We are thoroughly in accord with and believe in the principle of collective bargaining, and we are very desirous of extending them and strengthening them wherever possible.

Here is the situation in connection with this Act: We desire to absolutely protect the workmen who are not covered by a collective bargaining arrangement. We say "There is a ceiling of hours beyond which you must not go." That is what we say in this section, and it was also in the old section. We say, "You must not, under any conditions, have men working underground for more than provided by sub-section 1 of Section 53."

But we also say, "You can work as many hours less than that as you agree upon, and you can make all your arrangements beneath the ceiling, but you must not, under any circumstances exceed the ceiling."

Our only purpose here is to protect the men. This was a safety feature introduced into the Act many years ago, and we have the greatest hesitation in removing that safety feature. If we do, we may run into conditions where some mines, which do not have collective bargaining arrangements, or where there are no agreements between management and labour, may find men are working beyond those hours.

I think the proper way to regard this is that it is a ceiling which the Legislature of Ontario places over this industry and says, "You must not go beyond that; you can make all the arrangements you want to beneath that ceiling if the conditions are less than the maximum set out here."

I think what made me feel this way is the fact that this Act is not an act relating to labour; it is an Act relating to safety measures in the mines.

After consideration, I feel sure all the hon. members of the House will agree with me when I say the length of the period which a man works underground has to do with safety. We say the men should not be working in the mines for a greater time than the period set out in the Act. The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) looked into this most carefully for me. We did not want, in any way, to interfere with any collective bargaining arrangements which are in existence or may come into existence. To introduce certain features into the sections referring to collective bargaining, might bring about conditions we do not want. We know, in the operation of this section, the ceiling is there; it cannot be exceeded, and yet all the collective bargaining in the world can be had for hours of work and periods of time, and conditions, provided they are beneath what the Act states.

I think some of the mining unions up north, and elsewhere, have felt we are trying to set up a condition in this Act which would apply to industry generally. Such is not the case. That is not the way the section has been interpreted in the past. It has no such effect.

We feel the factor of safety ought to be clearly stated, and that certain hours must not be exceeded, and that was done in this case.

There are a great number of small, non-union mines, where any conditions may apply. This section is to meet that type of mine. The fact of the matter is this section has little or no relation to the conditions of the agreements which obtain in the large mines at Sudbury, such as the International Nickel and other mines, and the large mines at Timmins and Kirkland Lake, and other places. It does, however, definitely protect the rates of the workmen and provides a safety measure in connection with the great run of little mines, where no union agreements apply.

Mr. Chairman, may I say to my hon. friend (Mr. Carlin) I think he will be making a very great mistake in altering the section. It has been there over the years and served as a protection to the men, and I think it would be a great mistake to start, if I may use a street expression, "monkeying" with it now, and taking away the effect of the section.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD: (Bellwoods): I would like to say I dropped into the committee where this matter was under discussion, and I thought the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) was on very solid ground when he expressed the view that the section did not belong in a Mining Act.

HON. MR. FROST: That was actually my first feeling.

MR. MACLEOD: It is rather a pity, it seems to me, you took counsel with the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) since then, and were brought around to his point of view. But, if I might say so, I think it is possible to amend it in a manner which will meet the point raised.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Can an hon. member of the House speak when he is not in his seat?

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was finding it difficult to hear me, and I was just trying to get a little closer to my hon. friend (Mr. Frost). He is a very nice man to be close to. If you want me to step back, I will get behind the chalk line.

I was going to suggest perhaps the section could be amended with a sentence which would indicate that nothing in that section shall prejudice agreements entered into between employees and employer with respect to working hours. Perhaps that is an unprecedented thing to have in an Act, I do not know. I think that thought has some merit.

I will not try to put it into words, because the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) can always unscramble words better than anyone else in the House. I think you get my point; I feel the hon. member from Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) is certainly expressing what the vast majority of miners in the north feel about the section as it stands, and I feel you can meet his point without in any way doing injury to the safety provisions in the Act. I see the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) straining at the bit, so what does he think about it?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): It is only deep curiosity which brings me to the bit at the moment. I was just wondering whether or not the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) might perhaps seem a little bit upset when he sees the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) turning to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) as to who should speak next and what should they say.

MR. MACLEOD: I object to that. I saw the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) arise and as I was not quite clear, I felt he should have precedence in this.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): No one need object to what the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) says in this House. We all know how he talks and how he acts, so why object? It is only meant for meanness.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: After all the effort the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) has gone to, to keep clear of this information, I just wondered if he might be a little upset at that apparent intercourse that was going on.

Coming to the question asked, I might say, Mr. Chairman, it is good, clean fun for both the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and myself.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT: We would not want to be mixed up in it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Coming to the question of the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), it is a very sensible question. I would like to say that, in the discussion held between the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and myself, as to the effect of tampering with the section, that was one of the matters we considered, whether or not we might satisfy everyone on this by simply introducing a section with the wording subject to the terms of any collective bargaining agreement, but that merely illustrates the danger of using words which really start out with the thought they do not really convey anything; they sound pious and useless.

But supposing conditions deteriorated from where they are today and such words were in there, it is quite conceivable at some time they may be seized upon as an authority for forcing a collective bargaining agreement at terms more onerous as to hours underground than those used in this section.

I would go back to what the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) said, I think the proposition is really simple. This section is directed to not more than a certain number of hours of work and not introduced into this Act initially on the basis of having anything to do with wages and working conditions as such, which is properly for collective bargaining, but really on the basis of minimum standards having to do with safety. This Act, like other Acts of this Legislature, which are not in the nature of the collective bargaining machinery, are not acts to establish deals between the employer and the employee. They are there for other purposes, and as a matter of public policy. If we were to accept all the proposals that somebody can have carried unanimously, if you will, at labour union meetings or a meeting of the Law Society of Upper Canada, we would have some very bad legislation in this Legislature.

The question of unanimity which emerges out of a meeting of any trade or any particular group in this community, whether it is a labour union meeting or the Law Society or the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, it is no relief to the Government in introducing measures and taking the responsibility of these measures. I would like to say for the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) if we did everything by legislation that was advocated at labour union meetings, this Legislature itself would be undertaking the function of the labour union and its reason for existence would disappear. I suggest we do not confuse in this Legislature the question of minimum safety standards with the other machinery of arriving at wages and working conditions by properly organized unions and proper processes.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) stated the provisions of this section would in no way prevent collective bargaining. All I can say is the provisions you propose leaving in will, in no way, assist collective bargaining.

THE HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We did not say it would.

MR. GRUMMETT: I am saying it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It is very obvious. Everything you have said has nothing to do with collective bargaining.

MR. GRUMMETT: I think you will notice, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) have been skating around the main objection to this section. The hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) raised a point, the collar-to-collar provision in the section. Why not take out that last portion?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: What does "collar-to-collar" mean?

MR. GRUMMETT: To arrive at the top of the mine at the shaft head at your place of work.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I just wanted to see if you knew.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is just an illustration of the hon. Attorney-General's (Mr. Blackwell) meanness in this House, and I do not think we have to put up with interruption of that kind from the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell). I do not mean the interruption from the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost), because I know he is a gentleman, and the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), but I am not going to put up with the hon. Attorney-General's (Mr. Blackwell) mean insinuations at all times.

The last part of that section reads:

"which eight hours shall be reckoned from the time he arrives at his place of work in the mine until the time he leaves such place."

I think those words could very well be left out of the section. They have nothing to do with safety measures or anything of the kind. The miners of the north are very much afraid, because they say the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) is introducing an amendment to the Mining Act. Why not bring it right up to date?

If we leave this provision in the Mining Act, it leaves the impression we are taking a backward step, leaving the way open for mine operators to say to the miners, "Here it is in the Act. You have to take your time, as running from the time you reach your place of employment." That is, the place in the mine where they are working, which, as the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) has already stated, may be some considerable distance away. It may take them half an hour to get there. In the Hollinger and the McIntyre there are instances of that kind. In a great majority of the unions in northern Ontario, they have secured in their collective bargaining agreement a collar-to-collar provision, but as might well happen, suppose the bargaining strength of these unions should go down, then it would be quite simple for the mining operators to say to the unorganized working men: "You have to take your time, as running from the time you reach your place of work, not from the time you reach the shaft head," instead of the collar-to-collar arrangement now pertaining in mines.

Mr. Minister (Mr. Frost) I appeal to you on behalf of the working men in northern Ontario to take out those few words of the section. There is a great fear in the north that it may be used against the men.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, with the hon. member for Cochrane's (Mr. Grummett) greater knowledge of this subject, I am very sorry the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) took offense at what was a technical question. It was quite reasonable I should be ignorant on this subject, but with his knowledge of this subject, I would like to ask whether he would consider this proposition—so that it will not be difficult to understand, I will give him an illustration. He knows that for years the fireman's union—for the sake of argument—have been passing resolutions for a 48-hour week in fire departments. That is what the Ontario Federation would pass if they were passing a resolution again tomorrow. Throughout the province there are a number of fire departments which have the 48-hour week, and others have the 53, and others have longer. Although that is the expressed policy of the union, to ask for a 48-hour week, might I tell the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) to my knowledge there would be many locals very upset indeed if they had to take the 48-hour week in the fire departments, in lieu of the arrangements they can make with increased wages without a reduction in these hours. This is one of the dangers we take in this Legislature if we are to pass legislation and have one condition satisfied.

There are not many small mines where those who work in them might quite well feel this Legislature has no right to set the terms in question of hours, and force them to accept the hours in lieu of wages.

I would like to ask the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) if, in relation to some mine on which he can speak in authority, each one of these men would rather accept this provision than they would the alternative of better pay and the same conditions.

MR. GRUMMETT: I can assure the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) there is not a man engaged in the operation of mining who does not object to reaching the mine head and then having to travel a considerable distance, waiting on lifts, and so forth, and on orders from foremen before he reaches the face where he is working. I do not know of a man working in the mining industry who does not object to that delay. He maintains that when he reaches the shaft head or the mine entrance he has come on his job and his time should begin to run from that time.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is not an answer to my question.

MR. GRUMMETT: Your question has no bearing.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Of course, everybody objects to every condition they feel could be improved. What I asked was a plain question, as the alternative to meeting one condition, would they rather have that given to them by a statute rather than having it left open to negotiate for better wages, or better wages as an alternative to that statutory provision. I am not prepared to make a decision for some people who would prefer to make it themselves, and I ask if the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) was prepared to say to the Legislature there were no people who worked in the mines who would prefer to have those left open as negotiating points.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I might say this matter seems to me is getting my hon. friend from South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) away from the matter of safety or a ceiling, to a matter of legislation and things relating to labour's rights and conditions of work, which really belong to the Department of Labour.

I hope we are not attempting in this Act to legislate in connection with conditions and hours of work. We are legislating in a matter which relates to safety only.

In the small mine we mentioned, it really means nothing, the collar-to-collar arrangement means nothing in the smaller mines; it is only a matter of a few minutes, and does not mean a thing.

It does mean something in a big mine like Lake or Hollinger or International Nickel. For that reason, a man going down the shaft at the face, may take a long period of time to go down, and he has to walk or go by means of underground railways, and what not for a great distance, which may take him an hour to get to his work. That is the condition where the unions come in and deal with it.

In the small mine, the small developmental mine, it does not mean a thing. I know my hon. friend is interested in this. After all the new developments and new mines mean work and wages and homes, and the fact of the matter is I would not like in this Act to impose conditions which might make it difficult to develop all these. You must remember that in Timmins the great McIntyre mine was developed on a shoestring, actually. For a great period of time they did not have money to pay their men, and they paid in stock which was issued, and which afterwards became worth large sums of money, and finally the mine did "click," and they were able to create a great mine there which has already created a great city, and there you have good working conditions, and all sorts of arrangements for the working man, for their happiness, and with great recreational centres.

I would not want to impose some condition which makes it difficult to bring that about in some other places in northern Ontario, places where there may be cities some day, the same as at Timmins. Let us get back to the fundamental fact that this is purely a simple safety measure. Let us impose a safety measure and leave the individual case to the good sense of labour and of management to deal with as they see fit.

I think that is the reasonable and the sensible thing. There is no use our whipping ourselves into a big lather and a froth over something which does not exist. Leave it to the good sense of those people, they can work the situation out themselves. All we say here is this, you must not work more than a certain number of hours. We say to them: "Go ahead, make your collective bargaining agreements under that ceiling, but you cannot exceed it." They seem to me to be sensible and reasonable, and they will have a decent application.

Remember, that territory is 1,000 miles wide and 500 miles deep and you have all kinds of conditions to meet. This act applies to the north end of Haliburton County the same as it exists away out in the Rainy River District. You have a host of different conditions. What we are doing is to make one standard condition beyond which they shall not go. That seems to me to be reasonable and sensible.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, it seems to me I have my choice—accepting the opinions of attorneys here and going back to the miners and telling them: "You are 'all wet,' boys, this does not work at all. I was down at Queen's Park and I heard three attorneys speak and they told me all about it. It is a safety device."

I do not know, Mr. Minister (Mr. Frost), where you get the "safety" there, when you say the hours are a "safety factor" and at the same time have face-to-face provisions. As long as that condition exists, it does give ruthless operators—and there are lots of them in the very industries you are speaking of up in Timmins—the permission, at any rate, they want. They are trying to remove our unions, to get "back to the good old depression days" when they used to say to the boys: "you are coming out five minutes early," and when they used to come in and say to me, the master mechanic: "you are hoisting the boys early" or "you must get them down earlier," and the hours kept stretching out. Do not forget, Mr. Minister (Mr. Frost) this provision was still in the act. It was forbidden by law to work underground more than 8 hours, but I, myself, worked underground as high as 10 hours for 8 hours' pay.

May I say I do not know where you get your experience. I worked in those little mines also. You say it does not mean anything to the little mines. Oh yes, it does. Many a time I worked in the little mine where you have to carry the machine in, as they do not have the modern equipment they have in the larger mines. You have to carry it into your place of work, and you have to carry your hose and your steel in, and all your equipment, and you are sometimes a good half hour before you start actually working, with the result you had to do an hour's work before you got to what we call "face-to-face."

For years and years, the miners have been fighting for collar-to-collar or portal-to-portal conditions in the mines. Are we going now, after collective bargaining have been signed with all the major companies, including International Nickel Company, where they agreed to this? That it is working out fine, it is practical and they can get a decent day's work and make a good profit out of their workers—

HON. MR. FROST: Let me ask my hon. friend (Mr. Carlin)—

MR. CARLIN: You may in a moment. I did not interrupt you, sir, when you were speaking.

HON. MR. FROST: All right.

MR. CARLIN: I am speaking as a practical miner. When you say, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) mentioned there may be some people, and he would not like to offend, some of the people who would like longer hours; do we want to give up something which has been fought for down through the years, and now agreed to?

Here is the point, if we lose our unions, we will get back to those long hours again, and I am sure in that case the workers will then condemn us who said what we were doing was a "safety provision" for them.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): There is an Hours of Work Act in the Province of Ontario and that covers it.

MR. CARLIN: Yes, that was in the act too when I was working 9 and 10 hours.

HON. MR. DALEY: Oh, no.

MR. CARLIN: Oh, yes, it was.

HON. MR. DALEY: When was this?

MR. CARLIN: They used to post it up in the shaft house.

HON. MR. DALEY: You have not worked in the mine since the Hours of Work Act came in.

HON. MR. FROST: My friend (Mr. Carlin) knows, surely, lots of mines have less than 8 hours collar-to-collar.

MR. CARLIN: That is right.

HON. MR. FROST: Then, Mr. Speaker, let us be reasonable about this. If we pass an Act, for instance, changing this to: "8 hours from collar-to-collar" there are many mines up there working less than that, and my friend (Mr. Carlin) knows it would be just as unfair to change that arrangement to an arrangement where we say "8 hours collar-to-collar" to the mine which perhaps, at the present time, is working 6 or 7 hours collar-to-collar. He knows that. It is simply nonsense.

MR. CARLIN: I do not know what mine my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) was in where they are working 6 hours collar-to-collar.

HON. MR. FROST: They work less than 48 hours.

MR. CARLIN: Not in the hard rock mines, not in a single one.

HON. MR. FROST: You know there are mines working less than 48 hours.

MR. CARLIN: Perhaps so, but how would this affect them if it were changed?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): He knows it perfectly well.

MR. CARLIN: All I can say is, I do not know how long you have worked in the mines. I know the operators have fought against the collar-to-collar provision; you are either on the side of the operators or on the side of the miners.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: No.

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. CARLIN: I am going to move an amendment.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): You will lose it.

MR. CARLIN: I move, seconded by Mr. Grummett;

"that sub-section 1 of section 153 of The Mining Act, as re-enacted by section 13 of The Mining Amendment Act of 1948, be amended by striking out the words 'from the time he arrives at his place of work in the mine until the time he leaves such place' in lines 4 and 5 of the sub-section, and substituting therefor the words 'from the time he commences his descent from the collar of the shaft until the time he completes his ascent to the collar of the shaft,' so that the first 5 lines of the sub-section shall now read as follows:

"No workman shall remain or be allowed to remain, underground in any mine for more than 8 hours in any consecutive 24, which 8 hours shall be reckoned from the time he commences his descent from the collar of the shaft to the time he completes his ascent to the collar of the shaft provided that . . ."

and so on.

The amendment negatived.

Section 153, as amended, approved.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WELFARE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 35th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 149, the Department of Public Welfare Act, 1948. Mr. Goodfellow.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive approved.

On Section 4:

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): I think under the old act you have the word "inspected" or "inspectors," which seems now to have been taken out. Under the clause as it is now, has your department the right to make inspections of these buildings outlined in this clause?

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Yes, by amendment last year to The Charitable Institutions Act.

Sections 4 to 8 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 149 reported.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY
(Minister of Agriculture): 36th Order.

OLD AGE PENSIONS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 36th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 150, the Old Age Pensions Act, 1948. Mr. Goodfellow.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

On Section 3:

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, in Section 3 the matter of this commission is dealt with and again there is no clear-cut provision for the number of members to be on the commission. Would not the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) agree to be specific and to amend that section so that we will know exactly how many people will serve on that committee or, at least, establish a minimum, otherwise it could happen that 1 person will serve as the commission, and I do not think that is correct. We are dealing with important matters, such as old age pensions.

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): There is no change in the Act. It is just the same as it has been. It has always been open as to number.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) says there is no change in the Act. That may be true, but why should we not change it? Let us change it. Let us specify a commission of 5, or a commission of 7.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Chairman, it would be pretty hard to make the number up. Conditions may change.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Did I understand there is a minimum there?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): A minimum of 1.

MR. BELANGER: 1 or 3?

MR. SALSBERG: 1, 2, or 3.

Sections 3 to 8 inclusive approved.

On Sections 9 and 10:

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): In Section 9, and also in Section 10, Mr. Chairman, there is a new principle involved, apparently. Both sections are designated as new sections. In 9,

"where a pension has been paid and upon audit by officials of the Government of Canada, the Government of Canada refuses to pay any amount in respect thereof, all payments which at that time have been made shall be deemed to be expenses incurred in the administration of this Act."

As I recall the policy of the Dominion Government in these matters, they make their audit as to the eligibility of the pension roll. Is my hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) saying by this, where it has been proven a pensioner has made an incorrect application for pension, or, what might be involved, a false application for pension, the money would not be in some way recovered; that it would be charged up instead to the item of expense? Surely we are not going that far. What has my hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) to say about that?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), from his experience, knows that there are cases where it is not recoverable. It has to be paid in case the pensioner should die, and there is no source from which to recover it. This makes provision that it may be paid by the province, where it is rejected by the federal auditors.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, but you are making this quite broad, to cover not only specific cases you have outlined, but to cover any pensioner who might be in a position of that character. Is that not right?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It is not the intention to make it that broad, but only in cases where it is not recoverable.

MR. OLIVER: It is certainly the intention of the section to make it that broad, and it would appear to me that is going much too far, really. For instance, if an applicant applied and said he had only $10 in this world, and in a few years you found out that he had a good many times $10, enough to disqualify him under the provisions of the Old Age Pensions Act, would you come along and say: "Oh, well, it was just a mistake that was made, we have charged it up to expenses"? That is what that section means, it seems to me.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, the section does not provide it shall be charged up to expenses, it says "may." I am sure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will appreciate there are many possible cases where payments of pension under the audit provisions might be determined to be not eligible, and yet it would not be feasible to attempt to recover it.

MR. OLIVER: That is right in certain cases.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: This section simply leaves it where, in such cases, morally speaking, there should be an effort made to recover, then it may be handled as "expenses," but that is only permissible, it still leaves it open to collect back in case of fraud.

MR. OLIVER: I cannot agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell). Far be it from a layman to argue with so eminent a lawyer, but it does appear—

HON. MR. KENNEDY: You do it pretty well.

MR. OLIVER: Well, coming from my hon. friend (Mr. Kennedy) that is a compliment of rare dimensions.

But is my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) correct when he says that there is discretionary power in that section? It seems to me it is a section which makes a definite recommendation covering not cases alone which should be considered, but the whole broad mantle of the old age pensioners that might be in that category.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I am sure my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) knows there is often misunderstanding in the interpretation of the Federal Act between what the commission might decide as to who might qualify and the interpretation the federal auditors might give to the picture. In that case, they would turn it down.

MR. OLIVER: But that does not alter the thing at all.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) is quite right. I had looked into the permissive provision of Section 10.

MR. OLIVER: But not in 9.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is right, and I think the point raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has merit. If it is acceptable to him, both Sections 9 and 10 might be put on exactly the same basis, which would leave it open to the department to recover by action or other proceedings, if necessary, any improper, fraudulent extortion, and yet, in proper cases, to direct it be charged to expenses of the administration.

If that is agreeable to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), we might pass the section now. A matter of this kind should be carefully checked, I think, by the Legal Department men, and an amendment will be submitted, or an explanation as to why one should not be made. The suggestion I make is, we pass it for the moment and then come back to it.

MR. BELANGER: We cannot pass it and then come back to it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We may get it done before the bill.

Section 9 stands.

Section 10 approved.

On Section 11:

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, Section 11 provides where the Dominion department shall, for any other reason whatsoever, "ceases to make the contributions provided for under the Old Age Pensions Act"—and so on; then payments shall cease.

This is rather severe. I submit, Mr. Chairman, conditions could arise where our provincial department would be fully satisfied about the eligibility of an applicant for pension, and would proceed to give the pension. Then, due to some representation by the department at Ottawa, it is discontinued. We then have to tell the old age pensioner, whose rights we do not question, that we are sorry, but he does not get his pension. I appreciate the fact the old age pension fund is made up by Dominion and provincial contributions, but looking at it from the humane point of view, the point of view of the pensioner who has satisfied the provincial department in all respects, it is not fair to just dismiss him because the Dominion Government will not agree.

I would say, in such case, the law should be so flexible in its application, so as to give the department some leeway in disposing of a case like that.

We assume, of course, the pensioner has satisfied our own department. Why must we instruct the department to forthwith discontinue? I would give the department leeway to continue payments, until some other arrangement has been made. I submit the way it is worded now, the department would have no alternative, regardless of its own opinion, but to discontinue at once.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I think the only proper way would be to convene a special session of the Legislature. The section is there to cover the contingency of there being some central policy, and certainly no Government, without placing the matter before the Legislature, would take the responsibility for 75 per cent. of the fund being paid by the province. It is referred to in Section 64, of the revised statutes, of 1937.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): I think it was in the first Act which came into the House.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is right.

On Section 12:

MR. SALSBERG: A question, Mr. Chairman: Are we obligated to incorporate this section in the Act? That is, are we obligated by Federal statute, because this section deals with what I consider to be one of the worst features of our old age pension scheme. We may have to abide by the Dominion regulations, but are we obligated to make this an essential part of our own provincial law?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Which one?

MR. SALSBERG: Section 12.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Chairman, this was put in to conform with the Federal Act, which says that we shall collect from estates.

MR. NIXON: What is done with this money after it is collected? Does the Federal Government receive any part of it?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Unfortunately for the province, the Federal Government receives 75 per cent., after we pay the cost of administration. The provincial Government makes very little net out of collections from estates.

MR. SALSBERG: Then why bother collecting?

Sections 12 to 15 inclusive approved.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, with the permission of the House, may we return to Section 9, and with the consent of the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow), I move the draft amendment provided by the legislative council, to the effect:

"That Section 9 be amended by inserting after the word 'thereof' in the third line, the words 'The Lieutenant - Governor - in - Council may direct that—' "

And, "so that the section will now read—," and will read the same as No. 10.

Section 9 (as amended) carried.

Sections 16 to 19 inclusive, schedule of forms, approved.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture) 37th Order.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 37th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 151, the Mothers' Allowance Act, 1948. Mr. Goodfellow.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2:

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, in Section 2, under "b"—I do not know whether it is a new section or not.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The other Act, Mr. Chairman, had some clauses which we deleted in this bill.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I think my hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) will likely agree with what I say, in respect to a man who has proved his unemployability, is completely disabled, cannot work, and has no means of livelihood. Does it not appear rather obvious that to wait for 2 years in order to qualify under the provisions of this Act, is really quite a long time?

I could go with my hon. friend (Mr. Goodfellow) on the other part of that clause which says "in connection with desertion, the 2-year rule shall apply." There is a good deal of merit to have it applicable under that condition, but when it comes to a man who is down and out, not able to earn a cent, why should he have to wait for 2 years before he can apply and be looked upon with favour by the Mothers' Allowance Commission? I suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) there is an element of unfairness in connection with that clause.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Of course, he would be taken care of by public assistance long before that.

MR. OLIVER: That hardly answers the question. If public assistance is adequate for this man's welfare, he might as well stay on public assistance. It seems to me, if you are going to make him eligible for relief under the Mothers' Allowance Act, you might as well do it in 6 months as in 2 years.

You say he is qualified for relief from the municipality? Of course he would be. But this man has qualifications under other Acts of this Legislature, so why make him wait for 2 years for what he should have, perhaps, in 6 months, or something of that nature?

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, before you leave Section 2, I would like to refer to clause 2. May I read it?

"Where a mother who otherwise qualifies for an allowance as a permanently unemployable husband, an allowance may be granted for the husband, in the same amount and manner as though the husband were a dependent child, provided the allowance for the husband shall cease when the youngest child becomes 16 years of age."

I submit, Mr. Chairman, there is not much danger of a husband living until the youngest child is 16 years of age, if the child happened to be much younger than that, and if the husband is forced to live on $6 a month. It seems to me that is a very small amount to give a husband who is incapable of doing any work, that is, an amount equal to that given for a child. It seems to me we would merely be forcing the municipalities to assume adequate responsibility for providing a relief allowance.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: They have assumed that now, entirely. The municipalities are now paying for relief.

MR. ANDERSON: My reply, through you, Mr. Chairman, to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) would be that some of the larger municipalities can afford to do that, but in many of the smaller municipalities they are not in a position to help. The result is the unemployable husband would either have to depend on charity from neighbours, or starve to death. I think this should be more liberal in its grant toward unemployable husbands.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, may I say a word on the point raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver)? I am not just sure whether in his interpretation of the section he was under a misapprehension or not. As I construe the section, there is no waiting on the part of the wife or the husband who has reached a state of unemployability. The 2-year condition, at the end of the section, simply assures the family must have been residing in the province 2 years beforehand.

I know these are quite difficult to follow at times, and I did not want to pass it to you dogmatically without checking it, and that is the exact meaning.

Does that satisfy the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver)?

MR. OLIVER: Yes.

MR. SALSBERG: If that is the explanation—and I am glad the explanation was given—what would be the waiting period for a person in that category?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: There would be no waiting period, if the family had been resident in the province for 2 years.

MR. SALSBERG: He would get it immediately?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The 2-year period is for obvious reasons. There has to be some limitation as to residence. With the scale of social security measures in this province, we have people moving in here to get them, and this provision is a protection against that.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Chairman, on Section 2, Subsection 4, dealing with children attending school who have attained the age of 16. The allowance would be continued until the completion of the term. I quite appreciate there must be a line drawn some place, but I am wondering if the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) has given any thought to the possibility of leaving it up to the principal of a school, for instance. I know of cases where the children have reached the age of 16, and are very excellent students, and perhaps 1 additional year would be sufficient to enable them to complete their course and secure their senior matriculation, but because they were 16 years of age, they had to quit school and go to work.

I do not know the answer, but no doubt the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) has given some thought to this, and possibly could tell us what provision, if any, is given for taking care of such cases, where the child has not completed its education at the age of 16.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I appreciate the difficulty in connection with those cases. You will recall we included in the Act a regulation passed 2 years ago, making provision for a child to continue their schooling after the age of 16. We have to draw the line somewhere, and it would be difficult for us to establish a scholarship, or to make a separate regulation dealing with each particular case.

Section 2 approved.

On Section 3:

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): How many persons constitute the Mothers' Allowance Commission now, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow), Mr. Chairman?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: 3.

MR. NIXON: Are they the same as the Old Age Pensioners?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: No, they are different commissioners.

MR. NIXON: They have a different set of commissioners altogether?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: That is right.

Sections 3 to 11 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 151 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 38th Order.

WELFARE UNITS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 38th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 152, An Act to provide for Welfare Units. Mr. Goodfellow.

Sections 1 to 3 approved.

On Section 4:

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): In Section 4, does the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) say the investigator would still be under the Department of Public Welfare, or would they do their work at the direction of the local units, or what would the position be in respect to investigators?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Under the direction of the administrator.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I think perhaps we should have some clarity at this time. I think I am correct in saying an investigation made by the local board, say for the old age pension, is again reviewed by the provincial authorities after recommendation is made to the provincial authorities. Now, with the establishment of the welfare units, in which the province would have a more direct hand and control, will there be additional investigation after the local units will have approved an application, or will that local approval be sufficient and final insofar as the province is concerned?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The investigation would be final, because it would only be necessary to take one investigation. All the information would be secured on the first investigation.

MR. SALSBERG: That is not so at the present time. The local boards investigate an application and make representation and we find it happens very often where the local recommendation is disregarded by the province. Are we then correct in concluding that with the establishment of these local units, they become the sole investigatory agency of the province insofar as old age pensions are concerned, and that their approval is final, and that payment begins automatically?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Yes. Sections 4 to 8 inclusive approved. Bill No. 152 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 39th Order.

PURCHASE OF ASSETS OTTAWA LIGHT, HEAT AND POWER COM- PANY LTD.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 39th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 153, An Act respecting the Purchase by the Corporation of the City of Ottawa of certain assets of Ottawa Light, Heat and Power Company, Limited. Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 6 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 153 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move you do now rise and report certain bills, 2 with amendments.

Motion approved.

The House resumes, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report certain bills, 2 with amendments, and moves its adoption.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 40th Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 40th Order, second reading of Bill No. 148, An Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Daley.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

HON. CHARLES DALY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 148, An Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): If I recall, the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) did explain.

HON. MR. DALEY: Well, Mr. Speaker, the bill is 1 that on introducing it at first reading I made quite a comprehensive explanation of it. I would be very glad to go into the matter at this time and explain what this bill does and what is supposed to be accomplished by this bill.

Clause 1, the accident fund; in the mining areas there are set up certain rescue stations that have been in operation for a good number of years, and do a very worthwhile service when an accident strikes, explosions, fires, and various fights and things that happen. These men are trained and very competent in fighting that sort of thing.

The Compensation Board has always paid the cost in connection with these rescue stations, and there has arisen a question as to the validity of the Compensation Board assuming the cost for these stations, so this simply means the validity for what has been done for a long period of years, and so I am sure nobody would wish to change that.

Section 2 simply insists that the same procedure that exists in Section 1 of the Workmen's Compensation Act shall be carried forward, and Section 2, namely an injured person shall report directly to the board, as well as to his employer. Today, under Schedule 1, he reports, but under the scheduled report, he does not, so a lot of difficulty has arisen in that connection in view of the delay and the board being acquainted with the fact someone has been injured, and there is often considerable delay.

Section 3 corrects a situation that has given the board a great deal of thought over the past few years, and the Government, some of you will recall, in 1943, raised the compensation to a widow from $40 to $45, and then again in 1947 raised it to $50. It was felt at that time it would be impossible to make that retroactive, that is, to compensate all widows of former years on that basis when an accident occurred and a man is killed, the amount, as nearly as could be estimated, according to the age of the widow and her expected life period. That is capitalized, and that amount of money is put into a pension fund to take care of that. We could never figure out how we were going to go back over the period and get this money. That is a bill that still has to be worked out, but the opinion of the Government was that it was unfair and unjust to have some widows getting $40 and some $45 and some $50, and some children being paid for at the rate of $10 and some at $12. Unfortunately, the circumstances were that a widow that got $40 for herself only got $10 for her children, and where a widow came under the new amendment of 1947, she got $50 for herself, and $12 for her children, so she was in a much better position. This section simply brings all widows up to the rate of $50, and all children to the rate of $12.

As you read that section, you will see other benefits were paid there, which are paid now, and not changed.

Section 4 is in regard to the payment of compensation to children, and that compensation shall cease when the child reaches the age of 16 years or dies prior to that age, the compensation shall cease, and also continues that under certain instances the compensation may be continued, if it is felt that the child has some ability and should continue on at school until a later date, up to the age of 18. That is a discretionary power. I move second reading of the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, this is a bill which does provide for minor improvements in the Act, and there could be little quarrel with it. However, I submit that there are a number of improvements overdue—improvements that are necessary in the Workmen's Compensation Act which I am sorry to see have been omitted from this annually amending bill before us.

I am concerned especially with the compensation cases where the injured workman has suffered injury a long while ago. They provide the most tragic cases that were found in this category, namely, working men who were injured—in some cases became completely incapacitated — when the wage rates were low and on the basis of our compensation law their compensation was fixed at only two-thirds of their then earnings.

No account is being taken at present of the increase in the cost of living, the different wage levels, and we could find cases where, say, a bricklayer, who was injured 8 years ago, is receiving compensation that may be half of what another bricklayer, who was injured a year ago, is receiving. To me, Mr. Speaker, this is a problem that we cannot ignore. I know it was raised in the House on a number of occasions. I remember it was discussed quite heatedly and I remember the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) replied, it would cost quite a lot of money to bring them up-to-date.

As 1 member of this House, I did discuss this with the late chairman of the Compensation Board, who was in sympathy with the proposal for the amending of the law to enable the Compensation Board to increase the amounts allotted to such families. He equally agreed it was necessary, and to make my position more painful he turned and said, "Well, you make the laws, we only execute them." He said, "Go back and improve the law in order to enable us to do that." Well, as one member of the law-making machinery here, I would like to see the law amended. I would like to see this bill include also another amendment that would enable the board to re-examine the cases of the categories that I mentioned and make adjustment in their payments in an upward direction because we have afflicted great hardships upon many such families and yet the law is very rigid and does not permit the board to give any special consideration.

This is but 1 item I felt had to be brought to the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) at a time when we are dealing with the annual amending bill covering compensation.

There is another item I would like to bring to the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) and perhaps something should be done about it, either in legislation, regulations, or some other form. I will cite a case that came to me only last Saturday, a young girl. Well, Mr. Speaker, I see the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is wondering whether I am speaking exclusively to the bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: I would say you were not.

MR. SALSBERG: If you think not, I am willing to drop this point and deal with it on another occasion on another bill. However, I do think the matter I raised before has a relation to the bill and I would appreciate a word from the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) as to the likelihood of amending the Act to take care of that category of families.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to speak on the bill but only to say this; that I think some of the proposals the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has made might commend themselves to the present Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) when he becomes the chairman of the Compensation Board.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, there are 2 sections in this bill before us which are rather commendable—numbers 1 and 2. I have full agreement on number 1 and that is very important and a great improvement.

However, in Section 3 I stated my position on this last year and that is relative to the amount of money coming in case of a funeral of $125 for burial. I could not conceive at that time it was a sufficient amount of money and I am of the same opinion at this moment that $125 is inadequate. I have experienced this on many occasions—in fact, I have participated in it—where an injured workman who lost his life had to depend on the philanthropy of his fellow workers to have a complete burial—many, many times. I venture to say, if the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) was in industry very long, he has participated in that himself, where the hat is passed around to raise enough money to pay for proper funeral services. I would say $125 is inadequate.

I would also say that $50 a month for the widow is inadequate, because in many instances—and I recall many of them where a man perhaps is suffering for some time and contracted bills and then would die of silicosis, that the home treasury was just in no shape to look after the needs of the family. I would say because of the great increase in the cost of living that $50 a month is too low and I would say with emphasis that the $125 is totally inadequate for a burial.

HON. MR. DALEY: I might say in answer to the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) Mr. Speaker, that is a matter that we are making a study of, that question of the $125 for burial. You will note, and I think it should be pointed out here, immediately a death occurs that $100 goes to the widow immediately so that she will have cash on hand. Then in addition to that there is $125 goes for the burial. I would not argue this point, as I say we are making a very careful survey of costs.

MR. CARLIN: I will just conclude with this remark. I am very happy to hear you say you are giving it consideration.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 31st Order.

DEBATE ON THE BUDGET RESUMED

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 31st Order. Resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion, That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair, and that the House resolve itself into The Committee of Supply. Mr. Frost.

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak in this debate I would first like to join with all those gone before, in offering you my congratulations on the manner in which you preside over this Assembly, and I would be very remiss in my duty if I did not pay my tribute of esteem to the 2 late members of this House.

We have lost in this province 2 very fine public-spirited servants and I am sure every hon. member joins with me in extending to their families our very deepest sympathy in their very great loss.

I would like to add to that, another name—he was not a member of this House but he was for a time in the press gallery—the late Kenneth Cragg and extend to his loved ones my sympathy and the sympathy of every hon. member of the House.

Just a short few days ago we heard the presentation of the budget address. Personally I believe it was the best address ever delivered in this House, and once again the Government has demonstrated the fact that it has carried out its promises to a "T". It has carried out its promises to "keep Ontario strong" and to legislate in the best interests of all the people and not in the interests of any 1 group or any 1 class.

I think even the group who sit on my right will agree we have very wise leadership in this province. When we look back 2 or 3 or 4 years or a little longer, and remember the load the people had to carry, we can offer a little prayer of thanksgiving that we have wise leadership, leadership which has provided for a reduction of the burden the property owners have to carry in this province.

When this Government decided to pay half the cost of education they reduced the burden tremendously. The previous administration could have done the very same thing because we have not increased taxes.

Then, too, we have given assistance to the villages and towns which were not receiving assistance before in the way of subsidy—that is, for the building of their streets and bridges.

So we can take a great deal of credit on our side of the House for the magnificent things which have been done for the people of the Province of Ontario.

I would like to say a word about the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) and his Department of Highways. All of us hold the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) in very high regard and we hold his staff in high regard too because they are always affable and courteous and ready to meet with the members and talk over with them the problems affecting their constituency.

Last year on the occasion of the budget debate, I had occasion to ask for a particular favour, and that was that Highway No. 24 be given some consideration during the year. Well, that consideration was given. I want to say that with the establishment of the commando unit in Orangeville, we have had no more trouble so far as snow is concerned in that very difficult section of the country, and I would like to commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) for his vision and commend his dispatch. Last year I presented to him a long petition by the citizens of my area asking for assistance. This year I presented to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) not a petition but a letter of thanks for the magnificent work that had been done in that particular part of the country. I say again, that the new commando unit for snow removal proved highly successful.

I mentioned the Department of Education just a moment or two ago.

I would like to say just a word, Mr. Speaker, about the grants which are given for cultural education. We heard something the other day about "vision." This Government has vision, and realize we want more than just to have our children learning to read and write, we want them to know something about the finer things, about art, culture of various kinds, so this Government has made grants for cultural education of our boys and girls.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, if you listen to the radio programmes in the mornings, you will hear some very magnificent programmes for the children of pre-school age, programmes which are arranged by the Department of Education.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I will go through the departments quickly.

I would not want to forget the Department of Health, because it touches every constituent in every riding, and I want to say the new proposals to aid our hospitals, have met with universal acclaim. I do not think our people are concerned at all about having to pay the little tax on theatre tickets or tickets to hockey games. They are not concerned at all, because they know the money is going to a good cause.

There is one thing, however, I would like to mention, Mr. Speaker, and that is the need for health insurance in the Province of Ontario. I know the argument will be put forth that health insurance, to be of value, must be national in scope. But we should not have to wait, and wait, and wait. All the schemes we have had so far, are far too expensive for the little fellows—for the common man. With the high cost of living, it is impossible for many to save to pay doctors' bills or hospital bills. I would like the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) to consider very seriously this whole field of health insurance.

Now we come to the Department of Public Welfare. Of course, I would like to see the age when people are eligible for the old age pension to be lowered, but I know perfectly well there is no use of us talking about reducing the age limit, because we simply administer the Act. Ottawa sets the conditions and makes the rules, so when I have listened to my hon. friends on my right suggesting that old age pensions be made available at the age of 65, I would say to them, "Get in touch with the authorities at Ottawa."

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): We have.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: How did you come out?

MR. ANDERSON: We did not succeed yet.

MR. DOWNER: I would say that the age set at the moment is very much too high. The average age when people pass on is 69, yet they are only eligible for pensions when they reach the age of 70. They are not taking very much chance after all, are they?

Mr. Speaker, personally I am in favour of the old age pensions without a means test at the age of 70. I am in favour of old age pensions at 65 with a means test. The $10 bonus for those who need it has proved of tremendous value, and I would like to commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) for his vision and his thoughtfulness in that regard.

Mr. Speaker, there is another class of people who are worthy of our assistance. We give pensions to the aged, and, Dominion-wide to the babies—called a "bonus"; it is the same thing; we pay pensions for the blind, but we have forgotten another group who are even more helpless than the blind, and that group is composed of those who are hopelessly crippled.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: Crippled from polio, or this, that, or the other thing. I maintain something should be done for those hopelessly crippled people. I say it is only a humanitarian act to look after them. I know young men and women who are simply a burden to their brothers and sisters, not wanted; in many cases they are sent to a house of refuge, and I would suggest that we, in the Province of Ontario, do something for these people, these hopelessly crippled people, whom you will find everywhere.

Coming under the same department administering mothers' allowances, I wonder if you have ever thought of giving fathers' allowances? We find in many cases it is far more difficult for a father to get along than a mother. I know a particular family where there are four young children under the age of 10. The mother passed away last fall, the father is only a working man and is not able to pay for a housekeeper, and there he is with 4 children, and has to stay home and look after them, and there is no income in the family. I think something should be done to assist people in that category, under those conditions. You may say, "It is going to be rather difficult," but something could be done along the lines of mothers' allowances to help those fathers who find themselves in a desperate situation.

I now come to the Department of Reform Institutions. I would like to pay my tribute to the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar). He is making a real attempt to reclaim the lives of the young men and young women of this province who have gone wrong.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: May I say, Mr. Speaker, the new reformatory at Brampton will stand as a lasting monument to the hon. Minister's (Mr. Dunbar) vision and his work.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: Mr. Speaker, I think we should be a little more interested than we are in the moral teachings of these young men and young women, who have gone "off the deep end."

I agree with the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. Davies) in his suggestion of chaplains being appointed in these institutions. We should not be interested only in facts and figures. We should also be interested in the moral conditions which exist. We must make it as easy as possible to do right, and as hard as possible to do wrong. When the moral conditions in a community are at low level, the people find it difficult to do right, and easy to do wrong.

You may say, "What has that to do with reformatories?" Those who do wrong, ultimately end up there. Most of them have had very little moral teachings up to that time. There we have the opportunity of putting before them the two choices, if you like, and the reason why they should choose the right. In the reformatories, the chaplains could do a magnificent work, and I would suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) he take this matter under consideration.

Of course, the chaplains would have to be especially trained. There is no doubt about that. But I believe the appointment of especially-trained chaplains would pay dividends over a period of years.

I now come to the Department of Labour. This province has been very fortunate during the past year in having very few labour disputes and very little labour trouble. I maintain this peace in the industrial world has been largely due to the influence of our genial Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: May I say, Mr. Speaker, the enactment of the uniform labour code is a big step forward, and will go a long way to give protection and security to our working men.

The report which the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) gives to hon. members at each session of the Legislature speaks for itself. He has done a grand job, and I pay tribute to him.

Of course, we cannot possibly forget the farmers. Everybody in this House has a high regard for our hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy). Every time I see the genial hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) in this House, I am reminded of the picture which used to be on the end of the old threshing machines, with the wording, "The farmer's friend." That is "Tom" Kennedy—"the farmer's friend."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: As far as agriculture is concerned, we should be concerned about our young men and young women on the farms. These young men and women deserve the very best we can give them. They work long hours. There are no 8-hour days on the farm. They work long hours, and deserve to have all the labour-saving machinery we can possibly give them. They need hydro. I was very glad the other day to hear our Vice-Chairman of Hydro (Mr. Challies) make the statement that 3,000 miles of hydro would be constructed this year. I was very glad to hear, too, that at long last, the people of South Grey were going to get 100 miles. They got very little during the nine years the Liberal Government was in power.

I think every hon. member will agree the Liberal Government was responsible, and is responsible, for whatever hydro problems we have at the present moment. I remember 10 or 11 years ago, when the hydro contracts were repudiated, the then hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Hepburn) made the statement we would never again be short of hydro, that we had hydro "to burn," if you like. Then last winter came along, and we were short. That is just another example where there is no vision, and the people suffer. The old scriptural passage, of course, is "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

Where there is no vision, there is no light, and I say every man and every industry who lost a dollar because of the hydro shortage last winter, lost it because of the lack of vision and ordinary common sense of the previous administration.

I am glad to belong to a Government with vision, and confidence in the future, which has vision and confidence enough to declare the change-over from 25-cycle to 60-cycle power. There is, however, 1 other thing I would like to ask this Government of ours to consider, and that is a uniform rate, or a flat rate for power across the whole province, to enable industry to settle in the smaller places. We have been speaking about "decentralization" for years, now. We will never decentralize so long as power is cheaper in the larger places. We will always have these problems which have to do with larger cities so long as the larger cities have a lower rate.

Mr. Speaker, I would like now to come to my hon. friend who heads the Department of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter).

We have been accused, of course, of forgetting all about our 22 points. Now they will have nothing more to say, because that is the last, and it is fulfilled. The entire 22 points are cleaned up.

MR. SALSBERG: The end of the rainbow.

MR. DOWNER: We are ready for anything that comes.

MR. GRUMMETT: Some people are easily satisfied.

MR. SALSBERG: The end of the rainbow.

MR. DOWNER: There will be no pot of gold at the end of this, you may be sure.

MR. SALSBERG: I never look for the pot of gold.

MR. DOWNER: I think we all agree housing is one of our greatest needs today, especially housing for the low and medium-income earners, for those who cannot pay more than $30 per month rentals.

The hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) has the answer, and I would like to plead for a special group, because I am more interested in that group than in any other, and that is, the group of young veterans, and I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) to give them a priority in his housing scheme.

While we are on the subject of veterans, I would like to commend the Government for their attitude to the veterans of both wars. All of you received this little paper which tells the story of veterans' employment. Among the new male employees coming in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1946—80 per cent.; the year ending 1947—82 per cent.; the year ending the first of January—74 per cent.—that is something that you and I can be proud of as hon. members of this Government. But I would like the older men to be given some consideration—the chap who joined the army in the first great war at an advanced age if you like—oh, not so terribly advanced, he might have been 30, but he is now 60, and it is awfully difficult for that man to find a place in the civil service. I say that some provision should be made for these aged veterans who can do so many of the jobs around buildings like this, who can do so many of the jobs in the civil service in the Province of Ontario. I plead for those men, and I ask you if possible to give them a break.

I did not finish with the Department of Planning and Development. I got off on a tangent. All of us have heard the excellent story of air immigration. The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is to be congratulated on bringing over 7,000 of the finest type of immigrants in this province. The hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) who, after all, went over to England and set up the machinery, is to be congratulated too. The arrival of those 7,000 men and women has brought hope and confidence to themselves and to many of our population, and the whole scheme has met with the general approval of the population of the Province of Ontario.

Now, I want to come to the most important part of this speech. It has been mentioned so often one rather hesitates to say anything more, but it would be strange if I did not say something about Communism, that vile, soul-destroying thing which steals away the freedom and liberty of people wherever it raises its ugly head.

There is not any freedom or liberty in Russia, or Roumania, or Bulgaria. When they go out to vote, there is only one name on the ballot.

For the life of me, I cannot understand the mentality of men and women here who subscribe to the doctrines of Communism. Only a warped mind would suggest we exchange our freedom and our liberty for the chains and iron curtain of Communism. Yet we have these people in our midst. Man's greatest foes are in his own household, and we have them in our own midst. We have them right here in the House.

I would like to compare, just for a moment, the living conditions which exist in Europe under Communism and the conditions which exist here. These people would exchange what we have for what they have, in other words, they would trade their birthright for a mess of pottage.

I wonder if you know or realize we have the second highest standard of living in the world. The highest standard of living exists just over the line, and the second highest standard is here in Canada. Well down the list, almost to the bottom, comes Russia. Why, if these people told the little fellow—they are always baiting the little fellow, you know—the truth, not 5 per cent. of them would follow.

I would like to read to you the report of the 7 delegates of the Iron and Steel Trades Federation of the United Kingdom, a trade union group who spent several months in Soviet Russia. Here is an extract from their report:

“The standard of living of the Russian iron and steel workers, apart from war scarcities, is without doubt considerably lower than ours. There is no question of striking because striking is illegal. One strong impression which was gathered by every member of the delegation is that the workers in Russia have a long way to go before they can reach anything like the standard of living here in England.”

Then we think of income. At the very top of the list are the workers of the United States, and we are not much below it. Then, away down the list, are the workers in Soviet Russia, receiving not one quarter the amount that is received by the workers in Canada or the United States. Tell that to the little fellow and see what he will do.

But what about our friends to the immediate right? They are not Red, they are just pink.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): That is a good healthy colour.

MR. DOWNER: But you know, almost without exception, during this last session they stood up with the Communists,—

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): For what?

MR. DOWNER: —and were counted; and yet they get up and say: "we want nothing to do with them." You know, what you do speaks so loud, I just cannot hear what you say. I am going to tell you it will take a lot of persuasion to convince the people of this province of your sincerity. I know you have several laudable aims. You would like to do this, and you would like to do that. You would like to make the state a controlled state. You would abolish poverty. Very good. But you would abolish it by abolishing inequalities and initiative. You would run society on the plan of a penitentiary and regulate everything, and see to it that all share and share alike. You know that is something that just cannot be done. Our people would not stand for that sort of thing.

I say to you that nearly everywhere the way is prepared for the Communist by the Socialist sapping the foundations of the structure of freedom. Yes, we have them here, both of them. We would like to mix them up a little.

In Russia there are 6,000,000 Communists, the ruling class, controlling the lives of 184,000,000. The worker does as he is told, wages and working conditions are set without any reference to him, or to a union, strikes are outlawed, trade unions do not exist, no man can get a good job without being a party member. 10,000,000 Soviet citizens live in forced-labour camps, and they work without reward and they work without hope. Tell that to the little fellow. Is that what we want in Canada?

And then, Mr. Speaker, I believe with all my heart that the labour people have made a great mistake by linking up with the C.C.F. These people are no friends of labour. I call upon labour to stop and think, look for the truth, rid yourselves of these false prophets who promise everything and will never be able to deliver anything.

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: Rid yourselves of these "Red" agitators, these fomenters of strikes, and creators of unrest. Rid yourselves of these leaders who, if trouble comes, will be the first to be interned.

Labour has been and it still is loyal, and I believe the time will shortly come when they will rid themselves of these people who would destroy their liberty and take away their rights. The only friends labour has—

MR. ANDERSON: Are the Tories.

MR. DOWNER: —Are the Tories. Absolutely.

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: The only real labour legislation of value to the worker has been given by the Conservative administration of this province.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DOWNER: All these came with a Conservative administration. You would exchange that for what they have in Russia.

And so I say to the labour people of this province, rid yourselves of these people who would destroy you, and line up with the people who have given the only real labour legislation this province has ever known.

I could go on for a couple of hours, but I want to just say before I close: I have a little piece of paper here, "Canada, unite with the new democracy," and it is entitled: "From the Labour Progressive Party."

I have heard a couple of hon. members in this House talking about racial discrimination. The people who stir up hatred, above all others, are the people who call themselves members of this party.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, rising on a point of order—

AN HON. MEMBER: Sit down.

MR. MACLEOD: I must say, Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member (Mr. Downer) is referring to and what purports to be a document issued by the Labour Progressive Party is nothing but a downright forgery. The Labour Progressive Party never issued that document at any time, and I ask the hon. member (Mr. Downer) to accept my assurance on that point.

AN. HON. MEMBER: You know what it is.

MR. DOWNER: Well, whether you ever issued it officially or not, your aims are identical.

MR. MACLEOD: It is from the office of Gladstone Murray. That is where it is from.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. V. C. KNOWLES (Hamilton Centre): Why did you not deny it when it was first distributed here?

MR. DOWNER: Mr. Speaker, this is a time for men of good will to get together. This is a time when every loyal citizen of Canada should stand shoulder to shoulder against these schisms which would destroy all we hold dear. Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. F. S. THOMAS (Elgin): Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of this House, in rising to speak on the budget debate, I wish at the outset to express to all hon. members of this House my sincere appreciation for the genuine welcome which I have received upon my return after such prolonged illness. I want also at this time to express through this medium to the good people of the County of Elgin my very deep and sincere appreciation for their loyalty and support, which was so freely given during the long period during which I was unable to carry on my duties as member for that riding. Last, but not least, and I hope you will pardon the personal aspect, I wish to say that my recovery to health, was due in no small measure to the loyal devotion of my own wife and family.

Those things which I have just said are said with all the sincerity at my command, and from the bottom of my heart. I desire at this time also to pay a tribute which is just as sincere as the words I have spoken, and that tribute is to the ministry of this Government and, through them, to the civil service of this province. I think, Mr. Speaker, that I know something about the civil service of this province during the past 26 years, and at no time in the history of this province has there ever been a more loyal and conscientious group of public servants, who have been more courteous and kind in their attitude to the public and their sense of responsibility to the public. I just want to take this opportunity of saying that publicly.

Mr. Speaker, I want for a moment to deal with one phase of agriculture, and that phase has to do with something which my hon. friend for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) commented upon when the estimates for the Department of Agriculture were going through.

I have no quarrel with the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) when he defends or speaks on a subject with which he is familiar, but I can assure this House that the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) knows nothing whatsoever about agriculture.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. THOMAS: I shall proceed to explain, and prove, that is true.

He painted for us a picture of a dejected and despondent farm population eking out an existence on the farms of Ontario without tractors, without trucks; without motor cars, without telephones, or hydro, in fact, the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) impresses me so greatly that I just took time, even on Sunday morning last, to make a little survey of my own in the township in which I am living. I did not take the highway, Mr. Speaker, nor did I take the tobacco country, nor the specialized country, nor the country which might be considered somewhat more prosperous than other areas of my county.

I took the concession just south of where I live in the township of Yarmouth and the concession south of that again, and with my neighbour, we just made a survey starting with Concession 5 of Yarmouth township and went east for a distance of 5 miles, drove 1 mile north and back west to Lot 1, Concession 6. Now, that little survey revealed these interesting facts, and I am only going to boast of it for the benefit of the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod), and I can assure you that if in future he wants any statistical information, I will only be too happy to give it to him. If he desires to check up, I have my file with the list of names and addresses of every farmer in that area. These are the facts: These 2 roads are populated by 40 farmers who, as I said, are average for our own mixed farming and dairying only with 2 exceptions. One has a small fruit farm and the other is fruit. Outside of that, they are a good average for Elgin County. I mentioned 40 farmers; they owned as follows: 40 automobiles, 33 tractors, 10 trucks, and almost 100 per cent. of them enjoyed the blessings and the privileges of hydro and telephone.

We do not represent the decadent, down-at-the-heel, worn-out picture my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) stated in this House the other day. So much for that.

I wish to say a word about the riding which I have the honour to represent to the hon. members of this House. The mention of this riding will, perhaps, bring back different kinds of memories, depending on how long they have been in this Legislature. However, the fact remains that the county of Elgin is so well known to this province that I would not for a moment propose to give a detailed account of its history and accomplishments. However, that riding is situated midway between Windsor and Niagara Falls, the most southerly point in Canada, comparable in latitude with that of southern France and southern Italy. In the centre of this county is our county seat, the city of St. Thomas, which is a thriving city with a population of approximately 19,000 and 2,000 or 3,000 in the suburban area. 96 per cent. of the population descended from British stock.

My constituency is highly favoured with rail transportation and, Mr. Speaker, so far as I know, it is the only city in Canada which is supplied with six railways. We have there the Michigan Central, the Pere Marquette, the Wabash, the Canadian Pacific, the Canadian National and the Electrical London and Port Stanley. The largest railroad is the Michigan Central, operating from Chicago to Buffalo, and it is now a portion of the New York Central system lines. It is a double-track railroad equipped with automatic block signals, together with automatic train controls which permit the operation of frequent high-speed passenger and freight trains with a despatch that is unequalled anywhere on the American continent. The Pere Marquette recently was made a portion of the Chesapeake and Ohio Central lines terminating its line from Windsor at St. Thomas and from there to the Niagara border, using the facilities of the Michigan Central. The Wabash operates also from Windsor to the Niagara border on a 99-year lease with the old Grand Trunk. The Canadian Pacific has a branch line over as far as Ingersoll, where it joins the main line. Then, of course, the London to Port Stanley Electric Railway runs from London to the town of Port Stanley. The highest operating officials of the Michigan Central, Pere Marquette and the Wabash have recently issued the following data which I think is interesting and of significance. These railroads, the three I have mentioned, have invested a total sum of $43,991,730. The Michigan Central and Pere Marquette paid in property taxes in 1947 a total of $203,110.18. The total number of employees in these three railroads alone is 3,217, and the total payroll for 1947 was $10,789,118. In addition to that we have probably another 500, 600 or 700 employees of the other railroads.

The high wage rate, unemployment insurance and retirement annuities permit these employees to maintain a high standard of living which is reflected on the general welfare of the county.

In addition, these railroads are giving service at a most nominal figure. The tariff rate for hauling in Canada, 1 ton of average freight 1 mile, figuring a loaded car being hauled from Windsor to Niagara, amounts to approximately 1-tenth of 1 cent. That, I think, is the acme of efficiency.

Present industries—I will not indulge in any detail except to say that the present industries include iron, steel, bronze, enamel ware, wooden ware, shoes, milling, textiles, clay products, automobile and industrial parts. The highways traverse the county east to west and north and south.

I want to express appreciation of our roads to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) for getting highways Numbers 3 and 4 resurfaced. It was badly needed and much appreciated.

Here is a very interesting thing about this locality to those that are not familiar with it. Within 125 miles of the city of St. Thomas lies more than 1/5 of the population with almost 1/3 of the buying power of the entire Dominion. Empire trade may be handled by all-water routes from Port Stanley, one of the great summer resorts of Lake Erie, and where at the present is being erected a $2,000,000 gas plant, as the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) knows. Situated on the lake are also Port Bruce and Port Burwell, two summer resorts, and at that place we have the local industry of which we are very proud, the well-known McConnel nursery.

In the heart of the tobacco country are located Aylmer and Strathroy. At Aylmer, besides the Carnation Milk plant, the Canadian Cannery and other well-established industries, is located the new $2,000,000 plant of the Imperial Tobacco Company, recently opened by the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy). At Belmont, our latest acquisition to Elgin is located the powder milk plant of the Borden Company.

This brief sketch of Elgin County touches only a few of the high points, and only covers the provincial riding, leaving out the two great townships of Dunwich and Aldborough in the extreme west end. This county, in fact, is so good, we generously, for political purposes, donated those two townships to my hon. friend for East Kent (Mr. Thompson), and he is a most worthy representative of these people.

Now, Mr. Speaker, may I change from the local scene to discuss for a few minutes and devote some time to the problems of the farmers of Ontario and to set out, if I can, in bold relief some of the changes that have taken place in agriculture in Ontario during the past quarter of a century. In order to properly portray the picture, I am going to refer to an historical volume entitled, "The Talbot Regime." I now wish to quote:

"In 1803, Colonel Thomas Talbot, an Irishman, landed at Port Talbot and actually began his settlement of Dunwich township. Colonel Talbot died in London on February 6, 1853, and his remains are buried at the historic St. Peter's Church in Elgin."

An instance of the spirit and hardships of the early pioneers is stated in that book, and I hereby quote, and this will be of interest to the hon. members of the Government, and many of you who are well acquainted with the people I will refer to:

"Finlay McDiarmid, an early settler (grandfather of the former member of this Legislature for West Elgin), was confined to the house by ague, while his entire crop of wheat, an acre and a half, was ready for harvesting. His winter's bread depended upon its being saved, and in the absence of even a sickle, his faithful wife not only cut it all with a butcher's knife, but threshed the grain and ground it in a handmill to feed her two infant children and sick husband. It is a satisfaction to know that this heroic woman lived to within one month of a full century."

Again, may I quote :

"A man with 4 horses will tread out 30 bushels or more grain in a day, which does very well for grain that is used in a distillery,"

They must have had them in those days, too—

"but it is too dirty for flour for the merchant and baking in the family. When flail threshing is hired, the thresher gets 1/10 and his board, and one man often threshes from 8 to 15 bushels a day."

This, Mr. Speaker, typifies the hardy background of rural Ontario, even today. What a contrast from threshing 8 to 15 bushels a day by flail to the modern self-propelled combine, harvesting 1,200 to 1,500 bushels a day at $3 or $4 an acre.

This, Mr. Speaker, indicates some of the transformations that have taken place almost all over the Province of Ontario.

Now, I recall my boyhood days—I was born in the county of Peel—and I remember the greatest thrill of my life as a child was to come with my father to Toronto. We left home with a few hogs and veal we had killed, to come to West Toronto. We had breakfast at the Peacock Hotel, and would go on to the market and sell our load and go home with a few dollars and get home around midnight the next night. That was the only kind of show we had to go to in my childhood. These were experiences which even those of us here who are farming have seen in our own lifetime.

Out of this great historic past came the Ontario farmer as we know him today, proud of his heredity, still retaining his integrity, thrift, and independence, facing the future with a courage which equals that of his ancestors, but confronted with a multitude of problems which he, as an individual, cannot possibly hope to solve.

In the building of this great province, the farmers of Ontario have, during the past couple of generations, depleted the soil, both of organic matter and minerals. During this period we have taken heavily from the soil and returned very little. It is true that in Ontario we have many good farmers who have improved their farms, but, in the main, we as farmers have dissipated our resources to the point where it not only affects the profits of the farm, but at the present rate of soil depletion it is only a matter of time until we pass from soil erosion, and all that it means, to human erosion with all its grief and problems.

I am not going to take time to go into it, but we have got the history, and anyone who knows anything about the soil would agree with what has happened to even empires when the soil gives out, and then what happens to that civilization.

During the past quarter of a century we in southwestern Ontario have changed from general farming to a specialized type of agriculture, and where we once grew grains and hay, we now grow all the fruits, white and yellow eye beans, hybrid corn, sugar beets, soya beans and four types of tobacco and all the vegetables and truck crops.

I would, if time permitted, and I hope some time I may have the privilege of telling this House the romantic story of the tobacco industry which is less than 50 years old.

I might just demonstrate some of the changes in agriculture in Elgin by telling you in 1927, when I first moved to the county of Elgin, there was at Stratfordville, in East Elgin, one of the largest milk plants receiving milk and shipping it to the city of Toronto to the whole milk trade, and that milk was supplied to that plant from a wide area of general farmers. This plant has gone completely out of operation due to the swinging over from general farming in that area to tobacco. This is just one illustration of many, indicating how these specialized crops have become part of our farm economy in the last 10 or 15 years.

Incidentally, Mr. Speaker, there is perhaps a minor change in crops. It has just occurred to me at this moment. The apple crop is getting larger and there is not so many onions grown as there used to be in the county of Elgin. Few realize the importance of the farm production in Ontario. From the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the Ontario Department of Agriculture Statistics Branch, I now give the factual evidence of our agricultural wealth, and I quote:

"1947, field crops in Ontario $277,000,000. Cash income from the sale of farm products other than field crops, $524,000,000. Agricultural products produced and consumed on the farms, $64,000,000, or a total of $865,000,000.

In the Dominion of Canada the total is $2,987,509,000, or Ontario's contribution to the agricultural wealth of Canada is therefore approximately 29 per cent.

In the production of this great wealth there are many salient factors, but to me there are three main divisions, and I wish briefly to discuss them.

The first is production by the farmer himself in collaboration with nature.

Secondly, the matter of distribution. That is accomplished in a variety of ways by various marketing agencies both provincial and national and international.

The third thing is consumer demand, and I regret to say that all too few of us who are engaged in farming know too much about consumer demand.

In the agricultural programme of this province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture is the most important factor next to the farmer himself. I want to repeat that and emphasize it—in my humble judgment, and speaking as a farmer, next to the farmer himself, the Ontario Department of Agriculture is the most important factor. I think I say that advisedly, for this reason: with this department and its staff lies the responsibility of first solving production problems, and we have many and we always will have. The ascertaining of consumer demand, we know relatively little of that; and thirdly, planning a programme from the soil problems right through to see that the ultimate consumer receives the highest quality product at the lowest possible price. And the thing that concerns me most in farming is that we just do not know how to meet that condition because we must face it if we are to be successful in agriculture and if we are to provide for the people of this province and other countries in an export market, the kind of product that will be in demand. And I am satisfied, as I am standing here, that we must have ways and means of cutting our costs of production to a point we can provide the consumer with a high-class article at a reasonable price and yet retain our fair share of the dollar.

I think, Mr. Speaker, it is now fitting that I should say something that everyone in this House knows, namely that this Government has as hon. Minister of this department, the best Minister of Agriculture that Ontario ever had. That, Mr. Speaker, is not idle flattery but a fact which I now propose to prove in a very substantial way, and it will be necessary to make use of some data in that connection.

However, in order to have the records straight, I wish to start my proof by quoting from a speech made in this House by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver)—and I regret that he is not here at the moment—who, as everyone knows, is an estimable farmer himself. I now quote from the Throne Speech Debate as taken from Hansard:

"The thing to do if you want to help the basic industry of agriculture is not to sit for months inquiring, but it is to do the obvious thing that needs to be done. The hon. Minister of Agriculture, who is a farmer, knows quite well what things should be done to help the farming industry. I believe that the time has come in this province when we should place more emphasis on the marketing of farm products than we do on their production."

That is from the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in this House, and I propose to prove, Mr. Speaker, that the obvious has been recognized by the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) and has been done.

Now, Mr. Speaker, let us go a little further back in history to an article clipped from some papers. These clippings are from two papers. One is from an issue of May 26, 1934, from the Mail and Empire of that day. The second was from the Toronto Daily Star of Saturday, May 26, 1934, and I will read the heading: "Storage Plants May be Started, Hepburn States." "Use Excess Power." I presume that has something to do with the Hydro. This clipping comes from Barrie, May 25, 1934, and in this I quote from that clipping:

"In the event of a Liberal victory at the forthcoming general election, the Liberal party will consider establishment of a system of small cold storage plants throughout Ontario, Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, tonight told electors of Centre Simcoe."

Mr. Hepburn addressed more than 1,000 persons who packed the armories here. He had spoken in Alliston earlier in the day.

I again quote—these are his words:

"Recently we have had a number of engineers travelling about the province seeking means of making suitable preparations for the establishment of a chain of small cold storage plants in various centres," Mr. Hepburn said. "The plants would use excess hydro power and would enable farmers to obtain better prices for their products. The farmers would be enabled to store their apples, meat and other products until they could get a fair price for them. Under our plan, they would be given negotiable receipts for their goods. These receipts could be exchanged at once for cash.

We believe a plan of this kind would be of inestimable benefit to our farmers and would lead to increased trade and freer circulation of money."

In case anyone has any doubt about that article I am prepared to read from the Toronto Daily Star, which is substantially the same.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Hepburn was almost a Social Creditor at that point.

MR. THOMAS: Well, you would be in a better position to know than I.

Now, then, I ask the hon. members to listen attentively, because here are the facts of the cold storage as gleaned from the publication of the Provincial Treasurer's office. There are no provincial grants to cold storage plants. There are loans made to cold storage plants under the Co-operative Marketing Loan Act passed in 1932 by the then Minister of Agriculture, who now sits in this House, and made applicable to 1931.

From the year 1931 to 1934 he, as Minister, made 11 loans of $310,625. From 1934 to 1943, 6 loans, amounting to $109,900 were granted. 1943 to March 31, 1947, 14 loans, a total of $484,400. Or, to sum up, the Government of which he is the responsible Minister has granted loans to the extent of $795,025.

That, I think, Mr. Speaker, is absolutely doing what the hon. Minister of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) asked to be done—doing the obvious.

In these cold storages we have a cooler space of 3,709,322 cubic feet, and we have freezer space of 465,515 cubic feet.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) also suggests something more should be done on marketing. So let us get the figures on that score as taken from a report of the Economics Division of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

There are in Ontario 186 farmers' co-operatives with 45,955 members which last year had a business of $62,563,128. This only includes the straight farmers' co-operatives and does not include such co-operatives as cheese factories, etc., who do business of $9,000,000 to $10,000,000 a year.

This whole co-operative movement is but an expression of a sincere desire on the part of farmers to give to the consumer at the lowest cost the best quality of product and retain for themselves as large a share of the purchasing dollar as possible. May I briefly illustrate what quality in farm products means by telling the simple story of eggs. In 1920, previous to egg grading, the per capita consumption of eggs in Canada was 16.8 dozen per year, and by 1928 the consumption per capita was 30.65 dozen per year; and it has held at that level ever since, irrespective of price fluctuations or changes in purchasing power, and today Ontario eggs are held to be the highest quality anywhere on either domestic or export markets.

I would like to add this statement, Mr. Speaker, that, as far as I can recall—and I have been actively interested in this—most everybody I know in the Province of Ontario, and in the Dominion of Canada, was definitely opposed to the grading of eggs. In 1920 that experiment started in a downtown departmental store. A man who worked for the Government had vision, and the chap in the departmental store had vision, and the experiment became so successful, it eventually was made law.

Quite frankly, as farmers, we have long been grading all the eggs we produce, and we have no right, as farmers, to expect the most of the consumers' dollars unless we are prepared to give them the best quality product in all lines.

Another example of the common-sense approach to the problems of agriculture is found in the history of what the present hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) did for the tobacco industry. Back in 1932, when the tobacco grower was in dire distress, the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) was very realistic in his approach, and to the Growers' Association he, on behalf of the Government, guaranteed a loan of $1,000,000 at the bank, thus saving a catastrophe in a comparatively new industry, with the result that the tobacco growers themselves were able to establish a sound organization and paid the loan in full within 18 months, and have ever since, without further aid, made steady progress in a sound expansion of their tobacco growing as indicated by the following figures. At the present time we in the tobacco business are equipped with land, buildings and machinery to produce from 110,000,000 to 130,000,000 pounds per annum in a normal season. We are using in Canada annually a bit in excess of 70,000,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco, green weight.

Crop Year	Total Acreage	Total Quantity Produced	Total Revenue
1927	7,570	6,247,750	$2,117,987.25
1946	90,787	109,852,000	40,843,000.00

Our Tobacco Growers' Association has a membership of over 3,200 people, operating 3,500 farms which represents about 95 per cent. of the total production of this type of tobacco in Ontario.

This year the tobacco grower is faced with a very difficult situation because of the fact no one at this time, even those in power in Great Britain, can give us any inkling as to what the situation will be in that country, so that we may be guided in our planting. If they are able to buy a large quantity of tobacco, which we have for export, we have no problem. If, on the other hand, they just have not the money to buy it, then we are in this position, that we have an exportable surplus which must be taken care of.

So the members of our association felt it would be most unfortunate if we, as tobacco growers, after spending 20 years building up an export market from nothing, as it were, to around 20,000,000 pounds, did not have tobacco for export if it was demanded. At the same time, we do not want to be placed in the position of having a huge surplus, and having no market for it. So we are voluntarily reducing our acreage 15 per cent.

I mention this matter of the tobacco business because, from time to time, people have a wrong impression as to the type of organization we have, and it has been called by a variety of names. I used those statistics to prove that any group of farmers, under sound leadership, working toward the end of putting out a better product for the trade, will get all they can for it, which, after all, is human.

The domestic market will likely purchase this year between 70,000,000 and 80,000,000 pounds, even with the acreage reduction, and having in mind a normal average yield of about 1,100 pounds per acreage, we will have a surplus of between 20,000,000 and 30,000,000 pounds left for export.

The facts as I have presented them surely prove beyond all shadow of a doubt that this Government, through the present hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) has far exceeded any previous Government in the accomplishments for agriculture.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. THOMAS: However, in making that statement, I want to be fair, and point out some things about the future.

We are, today, at the crossroads, and we must be realistic and face the future in the light of the past. In my lifetime of close association with agriculture, I feel that the farmers of this province are, as never before, conscious of the many problems that confront our industry.

May I say, as an aside, two things which illustrate more than anything I could describe the progress of the extension work, which will show you the change in the attitude of the farmers toward the extension work on behalf of the farmer.

I believe it was in 1910, or 1911, in the county of Elgin, when a man by the name of C. W. Buchanan, now of Napanee, was county representative. He started first with a horse and buggy, and then on a motorcycle, and then a Ford car.

One of the great problems at that time was the putting in of tile. Everybody needed tile, but nobody knew which way the water ran on flat land. This incident happened to one of the best Scotchmen who ever lived in the county, and a good farmer. He was trying to put in tile, and a neighbour was chatting with him, and Charlie (Mr. Buchanan) was coming down the road in his car, and he had all the necessary accoutrements for surveying for the tile. He stopped, because he knew the neighbour, who said: "Here is a Government man; he has all the equipment, and it will cost you nothing, and he can take the levels, and get your tile in properly." The Scotchman, in all sincerity, believing he was conscientiously saying the right thing, said: "I dinna mind doing it, but I dinna like to encourage these extravagant Government ideas," and Charlie did not run that level. That typifies the attitude of the farmer some years ago.

On another occasion the farmers met in their community hall to stage a debate, and the subject of the debate was to be: "Resolved that an agricultural representative does not earn his salary." Charlie (Mr. Buchanan) was not at the debate, but a long time later he met one of the chaps in the neighbourhood, and he said: "How did the debate come off?" and the chap said: "We did not have it; one side did not know what you did, and the other side did not know what you got."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. THOMAS: That was about the position we were in when the agricultural extension started. I do want to pay this tribute to "Charlie" Buchanan. I have lived in Elgin County for 21 years, and I have yet to find any man who has not said a good word for "Charlie" Buchanan, and I doubt if any man in the Province of Ontario has a record of that kind.

We are very conscious of the problems which confront our industry. What are they? To my mind, there are four. Some practical farmers might say I have placed them in the wrong relationship, but I think they are in the right relationship, fundamentally.

The first is research, and I will give you a short quotation from Francis Bacon, who said:

"In order to subdue nature, you must first understand it."

Well, I have been farming for years, and I do not, frankly, understand nature yet.

Let me illustrate by giving a few of the research problems which can be applied to any group or any branch of agriculture. I am only going to use two, of which I have very intimate knowledge.

First, is tobacco. I have been running up against these problems year after year, and there are certain things which show up under certain conditions, certain deficiencies, and we have not been able to equip enough trained men to show us where our deficiencies in the soil are, and to assist us in solving the fundamental problems. Every season we go ahead with our planting, and endeavour to raise tobacco. The crop was good for about 3 years, then our frosts came one fall, and the loss to the average tobacco grower was severe; and that provides one of our first research problems. If we are going to tie up between $7,000,000 and $10,000,000 in plant and equipment to grow tobacco, I think we are entitled to some fundamental research, to see how we can get the tobacco matured and harvested earlier, because we cannot get the moisture when we want it. The farmers believe that irrigation is the practical answer, but as far as we know, there is no one in Canada who has a scientific knowledge of irrigating tobacco. Personally I would like the answers, and I think every tobacco grower would, to the questions: "What does it cost?" "How do you do it?" "Is it a practical matter?" "Should it be done by co-operative effort or by private enterprise?" And one of the particular things I want to know is, "Will it work? Is it practical for me as a farmer, and what will it cost?"

I can illustrate the same thing in regard to fruit. The fruit growers of Ontario are growing apples which are not good enough. Perhaps I should not say that; we are growing apples which are good enough, but we are not packing them, and I think a little research work would do a world of good in the whole fruit industry. That can also be applied to the sheep industry, the dairy industry, the beef and hog industries, and all along the line.

This applies to two departments of this Government. If we had, before this time, recognized the problem of soil erosion for what it is, and studied it with a view of implementing a possible solution in relation to agriculture, as we see it today, we would not have this difficult problem. If we continue not to study this problem from this angle, we may have depleted farms in the Province of Ontario 20 years or 30 years hence.

We know this will cost a lot of money, but let us go on. The two departments concerned are the Department of Planning and Development, and the Department of Agriculture.

I am glad to see that progress has been made, but we must have a more active leadership from the municipal level all the way through, and this until we create public opinion and get this job done in our lifetime, before it is too late. I am very sincere about that.

So much for research.

The second is education, and I have only this to say, Mr. Speaker: I hope, when the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) of this province presents his report on education, something fundamentally sound for agriculture will be in that report, something which will be for the betterment of our country at the present time.

The third thing I want to elaborate on for a moment is extension. I have been, I think, in every county in Ontario, that is, southern Ontario, and in every district of western and northern Ontario excepting Manitoulin Island.

I am not familiar with the problems there, but I am familiar with them in western Ontario. We have reached such a stage in agriculture today in western Ontario where we are so highly specialized that our extension service is not quite adequate for the job for this simple reason, and I have 23 years' background to support this statement: No one individual can go into any one county in western Ontario and hope to wage a successful programme of agricultural extension, for the simple reason that there are so many of us now engaged in specialized agriculture who, when we have a problem, it is a specialized problem, and we have nowhere to go unless it is to Guelph, Ottawa, or some place a long piece away, and when certain things happen to a man in agriculture, as hon. members who are farmers in the House know, when you are in trouble with a highly specialized branch of industry and there is a lot of dollars involved, it is not a matter of a week from Friday, you want the information then.

In other words, to make this a practical basis, I suggest the Government give serious consideration to this, that here and there, according to the type of crop, the type of soil, and the needs of those areas, we have located specialized people. It might be horticultural fruit in one place, it might be corn and beans, it may be eggs; but I sincerely hope they will be given some consideration.

The fourth point I mentioned was marketing. We have made some progress in marketing, because you all—not all, but some of you—remember the days of barter, trading eggs over the counter for groceries. We have all got away from that, and I have recited the improvement in eggs, but we have a long way to go in marketing.

For instance, I as a fruit grower, am not familiar with what consumer trend is. I have no way of finding out. My apples are picked and they go into cold storage. I cannot afford to go to Toronto, or New York or Philadelphia or some other place and see the latest trends in marketing. Neither can any other farmer. But I think through a proper programme of study of these things we can have provided for the farmers of this province some indication as to market trends of the future. And why do I say of the future? Because when you go into such a business as the fruit business, you think in terms of 30 and 40 years, the life of the tree. I paid for my experience, because I listened to the advice of the gossip—it was not advice, it was the opinion; nobody knew—everybody said that McIntosh apples were vastly over planted, and there would be too many for the market. Had I used my own judgment and planted the block I originally planned, last year at harvest I would have had exactly 1,100 more bushels of McIntosh apples than I had, and you can sell McIntoshes readily. And we are going to keep on selling them. They are a good apple.

That is the kind of thing that I point out in marketing trends.

May I suggest to all hon. Ministers of this, the best Government this province has ever had, that we, the farmers of Ontario, expect and need a sound, fundamental agricultural programme that points the way to providing for the farmers of this province guidance and leadership that will make it possible for Ontario to become the outstanding agricultural centre on the North American continent.

What we need, Mr. Speaker, is simple. We need sufficient money from the treasury of this province to place farming in the forefront of the business of government. I suggest we need immediately $1,000,000 devoted to agricultural research. I have given one or two indications, and as a farmer I think that is not asking too much. We produce a provincial wealth of $865,000,000—29 per cent. of what the Dominion produces—and I think that we as farmers need this and need it badly to provide the necessary research.

I think further that we need another $1,000,000 devoted to education, extension and marketing, so that the money spent for the benefit of the farmer is spent on the fundamentals of agriculture and not used, as has been done by all Governments at all times, periodically in the form of subsidies as emergency measures to tide over temporary situations.

We as farmers have never knocked at the door of the hon. Provincial Treasurer of Ontario (Mr. Frost) for a handout.

Our breeding and background make us a proud people. We desire always to retain our great national heritage of independence, dignity and pride in our business, the greatest of all professions.

Farming today is based on science, and farmers in Ontario know that without science in agriculture today we simply cannot farm either efficiently or intelligently. Science, to me, means knowledge—nothing more and nothing less. To farm successfully in the future we, as farmers, know that it must be based on science, and frankly, I will admit here in this House that without the benefit of scientific agriculture I simply could not produce tobacco, nor could I grow apples.

I have to have recourse to the very latest information, and at that it is a tough enough job to succeed.

We cannot in Ontario attain and hold top position in the markets of the world, and that is where we must eventually go, unless the art of farming is based on the sound foundation of science. Ontario cannot afford to delay any longer in tackling the fundamental problems of agriculture which, after all, are the fundamental problems of the human race.

I would like to conclude with a little quotation from Shakespeare printed in a book of which I am very fond. I am going to send this book over to the Cabinet benches. If you have not read it, I recommend that you do so. The book is entitled "Pleasant Valley," by Louis Bromfield.

I recommend to anyone who reads the book the chapter headed "My 90 acres." It is the most philosophical, homely, fine bit of farm life of which I know. I would close with this quotation:

"And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones and good in everything."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before moving adjournment of the House, I might say that we will be sitting tomorrow night, so that hon. members may make their arrangements accordingly.

I would also suggest that, when we adjourn, we adjourn until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Hon. members realize that the reason we are not sitting this evening is to accord with the very proper desire of the Liberal members of this Legislature to attend their annual meeting this evening.

Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn and when it adjourns, it stands adjourned until 2 of the clock tomorrow afternoon.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 5.59 of the clock p.m.

CORPORATIONS TAX ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 47th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 134, An Act to amend the Corporations Tax Act, 1939. Mr. Frost.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Chairman, I beg to move an amendment to Section 3 of the bill as in the members' books. The amendment I have given to a number of hon. members opposite and probably they think it is rather a formidable looking amendment. I shall not read it, but I have given a copy to the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House and the Clerk and a committee of some hon. members of the House.

The wording of that amendment looks to be formidable. I notice that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) is looking at the amendment in rather a dazed manner as if to say: "What is this all about?"

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, Mr. Chairman, while the amendment is formidable in the number of words, actually it is very simple in operation.

I announced in the budget address on the 2nd of April, it was the intention of the Government to permit as a deductible expense before the calculation of corporation taxes, expenses incurred in exploration and prospecting work by oil companies, natural gas companies and mining companies, these expenses to be expenses which were incurred within the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Chairman, the Government has given this matter a good deal of consideration. It is true Ontario is a province and our corporations tax is a provincial Act, but nevertheless the whole tenor and tone of our Act is Dominion-wide in its operation. As hon. members understand, we allow as deductions, under certain circumstances, profits which arise in business conducted in other provinces, and there are certain conditions which apply to make the whole Act Dominion in its scope.

After consideration, the Government felt this—while we were making a great move as regards oil, mining and natural gas companies within the Province of Ontario, it did appear that perhaps what we were doing was restrictive as regards the Dominion of Canada as a whole.

Mr. Chairman; I want to say this to you, this Government has always, despite what some of our opponents have said about us, taken the broad national view in connection with what we have endeavoured to do and the policies that we have placed before the people. Certainly nothing we do is slanted toward Balkanizing Canada. Everything we do is directed towards increasing the prosperity of the whole Dominion of Canada, and I want to say this, Mr. Chairman, with that in mind, the Government has decided to extend that exemption to the whole of the Dominion of Canada.

I can give you many good reasons for that. I might give you a reason or two here at this very moment.

I may say Ontario is the head office of many, if not the great majority of companies doing business in Canada. This Government has done many things in the way of stream-lining the Succession Duty Act, the Corporations Tax Act and other acts to attract business to this Province of Ontario. Only yesterday I was talking to representatives of 2 very large insurance companies who advised me they were transferring their head offices to the Province of Ontario because they liked doing business with us.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Where are they now?

HON. MR. FROST: They are companies outside of Canada. They are coming to Canada, and among the provinces they are choosing the good old Province of Ontario for their head offices. That is the way we want things. We want to attract business here because we are anxious to make the wheels turn round.

Mr. Chairman, I can give you this one example and hon. members may multiply it many times: the other day in an aside with one of the hon. members, I mentioned rather loosely—the fact is I should not have mentioned it at all; I admit to the House I was guilty of either saying too much or too little—there might be gas rationing in Ontario. I should have, of course, amplified that statement or else not made it at all. The fact is what I had intended to say was there might be shortages of gasoline in Ontario, and the dealers themselves would be forced to ration the gas among their customers.

That is not a new condition. That is a condition which occurred here this last winter, and if we were faced with very much of that sort of thing in the summer months, when there is a great deal of traffic, it might be a very serious matter for us. Obviously it makes it difficult for any government or any department to gauge the amount of revenues which would arise from that commodity if there was going to be any restriction in the supply. I just give gas as 1 example in connection with this amendment which we are introducing and which is very far-reaching in its effect.

At the present time, hon. members of this House know there are very extensive explorations and developments in the Province of Alberta in oil.

It is true they are within the Province of Alberta, and are resources which belong to that province, and that province has jurisdiction over them. We have nothing to say about them, but we are most interested in the development of Alberta's resources. We wish that province and every other province luck in that great work, because it reflects prosperity to the whole of Canada.

Therefore, in extending the benefits of this section, for instance, to the companies doing business in the Leduc oil fields in Alberta, we are automatically bettering business here in the Province of Ontario. While it may cost us something in taxes, we believe in the general prosperity which is created the loss we might sustain by allowing a deduction of expenses will come back to us ten-fold in the increased business which will be produced by such a move as this.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to give you a few facts on the oil situation. This refers to the Leduc field.

Although the field was discovered only slightly over a year ago, it has now some 50 producing wells yielding between 5,000 and 6,000 barrels per day of high-grade crude oil. It is anticipated by the end of 1948 there will be 150 to 175 producing wells in the field yielding around 20,000 barrels per day. This production will cancel out the equivalent amount of imported crude oil products from other countries and make Canada that much more self-sustaining.

Why not help them on that? That is the case before us, and what we are doing in this amendment.

The Leduc field has not yet been defined but it has been proved to cover an area of over 10,000 acres and it is expected it will ultimately produce more than Turner Valley which has yielded to date some 93,000,000 barrels and will yield an additional 20,000,000 barrels before exhaustion. Leduc is, therefore, a major oil discovery, and is of very great importance to the Dominion of Canada.

The finding of Leduc has stimulated an extensive exploration effort in that area which, because of its geological setting, should logically lead to the finding of many other similar oil fields. It is estimated the industry will be spending this year in oil exploration, exclusive of oil development at Leduc and elsewhere, at the rate of about $2,000,000 per month.

The production expected from the development of Leduc and the adjacent Woodbend area, plus the production from Turner Valley—and Mr. Chairman, this is very important—and other smaller fields in Alberta, and the production anticipated from new discoveries, is expected to reach a total of some 70,000 barrels per day early in 1951, which is estimated to be sufficient to supply the petroleum products required by the 3 prairie provinces.

You can see what that means. If Canada is relieved of importing oil for the 3 prairie provinces, or for the western provinces, it seems it will be possible for us to get much more oil here in Ontario from the sources from which oil is being imported into Canada. That naturally follows, and we feel it is a matter in which we should help industry in Canada to produce the oil which is very vital for Canada's needs.

Now, if the production increases beyond 1951, as anticipated, there will be a surplus over that required by the prairie provinces which can be moved to other parts of Canada or sold in the adjacent part of the States, and through an exchange arrangement crude could be made available to Ontario refiners—as you understand, by an international switch of oil.

The development of oil in Alberta has not only had a stimulating effect on the economy of the west, but will also contribute indirectly to the prosperity of the whole of Canada, and more specifically may, by the above suggested exchange, make more crude available to the Sarnia refinery thus contributing to the supply situation in eastern Canada.

Mr. Chairman, I beg to move the amendment which I have given to you and to hon. members of this House. As stated, the purpose of the amendment is to extend to all of Canada the provisions of the sections which were introduced following the budget address.

Section 3, as amended, approved.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, does my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) have any estimate as to what we might lose in corporation taxes as a result of this move?

HON. MR. FROST: No, it is difficult to say, but over the long haul, we will make money.

Sections 3 to 8 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 134 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 48th Order.

RACE TRACKS TAX ACT, 1939

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 48th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 147, An Act to amend the Race Tracks Tax Act, 1939. Mr. Frost.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2:

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, we really have not had as yet a very satisfactory explanation of this bill from the Government. The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) moved second reading in the absence of the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost), and I just wondered why the Government desires this amendment in the form that is before us. Did the Government collect 10 per cent. on wagers last year, may I ask my hon. friend (Mr. Frost)?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) may follow with some further explanation. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has arisen and said I gave an unsatisfactory explanation when I moved the second reading of this bill, in the absence of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost). I think, in view of his statement, I would like to direct the attention of the hon. members of the Legislature to the fact the question was raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), became somewhat exercised about what he described as a highly improper principle of enabling tax to be dealt with by an Order-in-Council. On indicating to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that the principle had been introduced into the legislation by the Government of which he was a member by a bill in 1939, he apparently accepted the explanation.

I do not think it is quite proper for the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) to term that as an "unsatisfactory explanation" because it was one that appeared at the time to be acceptable to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) himself.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): If I might say to my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell), I think he is quite well aware of the fact that the amendment proposed in this legislation goes far beyond and is of a different character to what was acclaimed in the old legislation to which my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) referred. Let one of you say what this means and how it will operate and how it can operate.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) well knows the bill is simple, and not a complicated bill, and there is no change in principle. I feel the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would accept that and I made an explanation on the broad principle involved in second reading of the bill.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) is prepared, as he indicated, to give any other explanation asked for. I think, under the circumstances, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) is going a long way to call that explanation in relation to the manner in which it was raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) "unsatisfactory," because he himself accepted it at that time.

MR. NIXON: I do not know that I just deserve that little lecture.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I think you do.

MR. NIXON: I say your explanation of the bill was unsatisfactory to me. It is not an explanation of the bill to say, "You did the same thing in 1939," because we did not.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Exactly the same thing in principle.

MR. NIXON: As I understand you, the amount collected on a race meet would be whatever the Government may set up in the Order-in-Council; I think it was 10 per cent. last year. If the Order-in-Council is passed the rate will be 5 per cent. will it not? I think there is 5 per cent. set out in the original Act of 1939. I want to point out, if 1 or 2 race meets are run the Government can step in and make it 5 per cent. or lower or discard it entirely. Why would you want to do that in the middle of the season? Surely the rate set should be applied throughout the racing season.

HON. L. M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): I, perhaps, can clear the doubts in the minds of the hon. members opposite. I can say to them to soothe them down, they have at least showed commendable curiosity about this and I am glad to give any assistance I can.

MR. NIXON: That is all we want.

HON. MR. FROST: The situation is this; the Act of 1939 is substantially as stated by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). The Act provided a certain rate of tax which could be altered at the commencement of any year and if it was altered at the commencement of the year then that was the rate of payment for the whole year. I think, myself, in ordinary circumstances there is much to be said for that principle, but the circumstances I am going to relate to you are not very ordinary.

The fact of the matter is, the whole racing situation is most difficult at the present time. I notice some of the hon. members made reference to that, or at least, there have been references in the press to it. Some of the race tracks in Canada have closed down because of the conditions which apply. At the present time the province is in the field on the basis of 10 per cent. tax, the Dominion is in the field on a 3 per cent. basis and under the criminal code or Dominion legislation, the race tracks themselves are allowed 7 per cent. upon which to operate and that is the principal cause of the difficulty. 7 per cent. is not sufficient to allow race tracks to operate. I will give my friend some figures in a moment. The principle of the amendment is to give the Government more freedom of action in dealing with that matter. For instance, the tax at the present time as fixed by Order-in-Council of a year or two ago, is 10 per cent. It may be desirable to continue that during the year. On the other hand, it may be desirable to alter that. The fact remains, if racing is going to continue with all the results it has on breeding fine stock in the Province of Ontario, we have to expend some relief and assistance to the breeders and owners and race track associations. Otherwise, the situation could not continue and the race tracks would have to close down. I could give the hon. members this rough explanation.

We have gone into this thing with a good deal of care. At the moment the matter is uncertain, and frankly, we have not determined as to what course to take, as to what relief to extend. We have decided it is necessary to extend some relief, but as to what method we will adopt, will come about from a further study of the situation.

The race track associations have been suffering very substantial losses. The statements of the associations have been gone into carefully, and their losses are very real and very substantial. On the other hand, the breeders and owners of horses—my hon. friend knows that the breeding of horses comes down to the farms of Ontario—the breeders and owners are faced with very greatly increased expenses, having regard to the high cost of feed and looking after expensive animals of this sort, with the result that it was quite impossible for them to operate on the purses which were paid prior to the 1947 season.

The hon. members of this House are not strangers to this matter, because every hon. member of the House was circularized a year ago with information from associations relative to the very unsatisfactory conditions which obtained on the tracks at that time. During the 1947 season, in order to meet this situation, the purses were revised and provided for a minimum purse of $1,350 at all of the tracks with the exception of Fort Erie and Stamford Park, where they were $1,200. They increased these, bringing the minimum purse up to $1,350 from, I think, around $1,100, which sounds very simple, but that increase meant an overall increase in purses of about $325,000, which is sizable money, with the result the racing associations were all placed in very serious deficit positions last season.

The racing associations on the present percentages, since they cannot continue to operate, are faced not only with increased purses, but very greatly increased cost of operation, including wages and other items. I think the situation is the owners cannot take less than the scale of purses which was in effect in 1947, which had an overall increase at that time of $325,000. If the owners are to be cut on the amount of purses, the Canadian breeding industry goes out of business. That is a serious matter.

It may be of interest to the hon. members to know American horses are not generally attracted to Ontario, owing to the fact the Ontario purses are much less than the purses paid in the adjoining States, with the result in the main, horses on Canadian tracks are Canadian or Ontario-bred horses. Furthermore, American horses do not come to Canada because of the longer periods of racing on the American tracks, and the expense involved in transporting horses for long distances. The result is the Ontario tracks are to a very large extent made up of horses bred and trained in the Province of Ontario.

The other side of the question is this; the matter of racing on the pari-mutuel system is under the jurisdiction of the Ottawa Government. Representations are being made by race track associations and by owners and breeders to the Federal Government. The situation, however, is so acute that if present conditions persist, it will simply mean the tracks would not open this year at all. It is not as simple as it may seem.

It is quite apparent Ontario horses which are bred and trained and owned in the Province of Ontario are fine stock belonging to the people of this province, and must of necessity be sold and the stock obviously will go to the United States. So, we are faced with a difficult situation. If the tracks close, and if the stock is sold in the United States, our breeding stock in Ontario is irreparably damaged and, if it could be repaired, it would take years and perhaps a generation.

I would say, after consideration, Mr. Chairman, it has been decided to extend the relief. As to how that will be done will depend upon the investigation we are conducting at the present time. I would say the purpose of the amendment—and I think this will clarify the whole situation as far as my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) and other hon. members of the House are concerned—we felt one of the first things to do was to free our hands so we could act. If it were not for the unusual conditions, we would not introduce the amendment. Actually I think, in normal times, the Act was quite satisfactory as it was.

The Dominion Government may vacate the tax field and it may be desirable to raise or lower our tax. Having regard to the whole problem, we felt it was better to have our hands free. I want to apologize to the hon. members of the House for not having been present on second reading to make this explanation. I had intended to make it at first reading, I am sorry if there was any misunderstanding, which was due to the fact I was unavoidably absent.

Section 3 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 49th Order.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 49th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 148, An Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Daley.

Sections 1 to 6 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 148 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 50th Order.

STATUTE LAW AMENDMENT ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 50th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 154, the Statute Law Amendment Act, 1948. Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive approved.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On Section 3, Mr. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), what in essence does this mean:

"'Supervisor' shall mean a supervisor of the Department of Public Welfare."

Is that a change?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): No. When those Acts were amended, corresponding amendments were needed to be made in line with the principal Act, and were overlooked, and are included now to bring them in line.

Sections 6 to 8 inclusive approved.

On Section 9:

MR. OLIVER: What change is made in Section 9?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The change in Section 9 is made with reference to the City of Ottawa and the City of Hamilton in answer to a by-law to increase the salaries for the Board of Control. Unless there is a population of between 150,000 and 200,000, the Boards of Control in these two cities could not become eligible for that remuneration, until the population grossed the 200,000 level.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Has this amendment been asked for by any authorities at the City of Ottawa or Hamilton?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I understand the City of Hamilton already passed its by-law, and it has requested that this be done. This is an amendment that really concerns the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar). It happened to come into my office and I sent it over to him, and after consideration he recommended this amendment.

Sections 9 to 12 approved.

MR. OLIVER: Under Section 13, when would the grants commence?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I understand in 2 areas in the province the public grants were limited to 80 acres. This is a Lands and Forests amendment to make the grants which could be made from public lands uniform, throughout the province to 160 acres.

Sections 13 to 16 approved.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I believe I tabled an additional amendment which was to be considered with this bill. I understood it would be printed. I would like, before the bill is reported, to move an amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment that I am now going to move, the hon. members will find is printed on page 242 of the Votes and Proceedings. Rather than wait to move them, I tabled them, so they could be printed as notice of motions, so the hon. members could follow them.

I will therefore now move that the present Section 17 of the Statute Law Amendment Act become Section 18 and a new Section 17 be included in the bill as printed on page 242. After the motion is put, Mr. Chairman, I will make a brief explanation, if the hon. members desire me to do so.

I believe I indicated I would make a short explanation of this, and I believe the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) wishes me to do so.

It was not the intention in regard to the unsatisfied judgment fund, where the insured has a policy for collision insurance and become indemnified by reason of that policy of insurance, and the insurance company has written that sort of insurance as pure speculation, the claim is to be satisfied out of the unsatisfied judgments fund.

This has the effect, according to these two paragraphs, that under no circumstances where a claimant is insured, the insurer can come in and take the benefits of the unsatisfied judgment fund. That is the effect of the amendment.

Sections 17 (as amended) and 18 approved.

Bill No. 154 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise and report certain bills, two with amendments.

Motion approved.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report certain bills, 2 with amendments, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the House now go into a Committee of Supply.

Motion approved.

House in Committee of Supply; Mr. Reynolds in the Chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Vote 20, page 24, Attorney-General's Department.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney - General): Mr. Chairman, before proceeding with the votes in detail, it might assist the hon. members of the Legislature to assess the effect of the votes as a whole, if I were to make some initial comments.

It will be observed by the hon. members, that the aggregate estimates from the Department amount to the sum of $6,250,000. This represents an increase in estimated expenditures over the estimates of last year, amounting to approximately $900,000.

I would wish at this stage to indicate to the hon. members the principal reasons for these increases, because they fall mainly under certain particular headings, outside of which, as the hon. members will discover in going over the estimates as a whole, in the details, there is very little increase; as a matter of fact, there are decreases.

The first item which has a substantial impact on the increases is the public-service policy now being followed by the Government as a whole, and as it affects this particular department. It is one more example of the fact the members of the public service of the province are now receiving an annual consideration on increment, and the aggregate of this increment in the department, having the large personnel such as the department of the Attorney-General, both inside and outside, are very considerable.

The department progressively has reviewed the public servants outside the department, scattered throughout the province in various subdepartments, coming under the Inspector of Legal Offices.

The Legislature will remember last year it was plainly put before the hon. members the remedial steps taken with relation to the salaries of magistrates, and what was done in relation to the provincial contribution to county court judges and full-time Crown attorneys. This year, there is carried forward into the estimates similar provisions for Supreme Court registrars, clerks, and other civil servants throughout the Department.

While it is human to err, and certain adjustments may still be required, we feel the entire personnel connected with the department of the Attorney-General has received consideration, and both inside and outside services have been put on a common basis.

Another element of the business of our department which has developed, and for which a substantial increase in the estimates is shown, is what is called "criminal justice accounts." That is the mechanism by which certain disbursements are made in connection with the administration of justice throughout the province, by the municipalities, on which there is an annual accounting, and contributions made through the Criminal Justice Accounting Department.

Mr. Chairman, I might add that a certain number of institutions, such as the jails, throughout the province—although they are dealt with in the first instance by the Department of Reform Institutions—receive provincial contributions to the personnel carrying them on, but is finally handled through the Criminal Justice accounts, and while we do not have the initial operation in the department of the Attorney-General, nevertheless, the increases in wages, and the costs of material and supplies has had a substantial impact upon the estimates of the department.

The other principal element of increase, to which I should make reference, is the question of law enforcement itself. There is a very substantial increase in the estimates which relate directly to the increased equipment and personnel of the Ontario Provincial Police force.

In that case, I feel I should say something to the hon. members of the Legislature, at the moment, concerning the progress which has been made in the installation of the Provincial Police radio system, and for the information of the hon. members of the Legislature, I have obtained an up-to-date memorandum, dated April 13th, indicating exactly where that installation is, which I am sure the hon. members will be interested in hearing. From this memorandum I will read: The Commissioner states that he reports the status of the Ontario Provincial Police radio system as follows:

"250 watt radio stations at Aurora, Niagara Falls, Dundas and London are presently in operation, as well as the 60 watt stations at Brampton, Whitby, St. Catharines, Cayuga, Welland, Brantford, Simcoe, Oakville, Sarnia, St. Thomas and Woodstock. 119 radio cars are controlled by these stations; payment has been made for above stations.

"The 250 watt stations at Chatham, Barrie, Belleville, Perth and Cornwall, as well as the 60 watt stations at Essex, Burk's Falls, Bracebridge, Parry Sound, Cobourg and Lindsay have been installed and will be put into operation shortly following completion of the necessary tests.

"The Barrie district, consisting of the stations at Barrie, Burk's Falls, Bracebridge and Parry Sound and 24 radio cars have been paid for also.

"The 250 watt stations at Mount Forest and Peterboro are partially installed, and the 200-foot towers are completed as well as the transmitter buildings and telephone and hydro facilities and the 60 watt stations at Guelph, Kitchener, Stratford, Goderich, Walkerton, Owen Sound, Napanee, Kingston, Picton, Brockville, Pembroke, Arnprior and Ottawa are partially installed.

"The remaining 157 radiocar installations are presently being proceeded with.

"Professor J. E. Reid, of Toronto University, our radio consultant, is of the opinion that our entire system in southern Ontario will be in operation by early summer."

Another expansion of service offered by the provincial police force, to which I wish to refer, is the police training schools. There is an item in the estimates in relation to those this year, and they are being established, in co-operation with the municipal authorities at the following points: Windsor, London, Hamilton, Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, North Bay (or Sudbury), and Fort William.

The object of these schools is to decentralize the means of instruction, making them available at various points throughout the province where perhaps the municipal—not the provincial—police forces may be given good police training and instruction. These schools are being carried on by the municipalities in question, with the assistance of the province under a joint provincial-municipal agreement. In other words, where these municipalities, having a well-established police department, conduct the schools, with the province providing assistance by way of assisting in settling the curriculum, and filling in the gaps in the instructional staff. Also, in relation to a great number of smaller municipalities throughout the province, the provincial police force makes it possible for a reasonable number of the members of the municipal police forces in the smaller places to go to the schools, by temporarily taking over the duties of such police officers in the municipalities, while the officers are away at school. I thought perhaps the hon. members might be interested in that reference.

I am also sure the hon. members would be interested in the increase which has taken place in the Provincial Police Force over the last few years.

Before I give the figures, I would like to indicate this increase has taken place for two primary purposes. One is in relation to the policing of municipalities under contract.

I should say, as of the most recent figures, we have 108 provincial police personnel engaged today in municipal police duty. That accounts for 108 of the increase. Also, there has been a complete re-survey by the Provincial Police Department of the requirements of up-to-date efficient highway patrol throughout the province, and that in turn, has required an additional number of police to bring that patrolling to the point where we will have good traffic control and accident prevention on the highways. That has received careful study.

There is one other reason, of course, for increasing personnel, and that is the operation of the radio system itself. I will give hon. members first the increase by years in the provincial police force from 1943; I will then give them the increase in law enforcement units, and I mean by that cars, all of which are now being radio equipped.

1943	Uniformed strength	412
	Administrative strength	49
		461
1944	Uniformed strength	410
	Administrative strength	51
		461
1945	Uniformed strength	456
	Administrative strength	51
		507
1946	Uniformed strength	483
	Administrative strength	54
		537
1947	Uniformed strength	593
	Administrative strength	58
		651
1948	Uniformed strength	751
	Administrative strength	68
		819

During the corresponding period, I will give the increase in the number of Government-owned and operated cars which are now, in the main, in southern Ontario, and radio equipped.

Year	No. of cars
1943	176
1944	182
1945	197
1946	207
1947	244
1948	343

There is an off-setting factor in the increase in the equipment, in that there was a number of cars used by the police that were owned by the personnel, numbering approximately in the neighbourhood 100 cars. With the installation of radio equipment in cars, the policy was reached, all the equipment should be Government owned, so the privately owned cars and their allowance have now completely disappeared, and all cars now mentioned are Government owned and equipped.

Mr. Chairman, it follows, from that expansion of the provincial police force, additional projects which are undertaken in the interest of policing have involved a very substantial increase in personnel and a correspondingly very large increase in the estimates of the Department of the Attorney-General.

Hon. members will appreciate two things about that; first law enforcement throughout the province is no stronger in the final analysis than its weakest links, and the department has been engaged in a combined project of doing everything it can to improve the standards and efficiency of the municipal forces and to see that the provincial police force is brought to the strength, and is equipped to do the job of policing all those parts of Ontario which may be described as rural or undeveloped, so that the province as a whole, through the combined agencies of the municipal forces and the provincial force is a well-policed province.

I will conclude my remarks about the police by saying the people of the Province of Ontario have been extremely fortunate in that this period of the undertaking of these tasks by the provincial police force has coincided with a time when the very finest recruit material has been available for that force. I am sure all hon. members would like to know from very early in the war till currently, the policy of the department has been to accept for the police force not only young men who are under the age of 35 and who can pass the physical and educational tests for the force, but also it will be pleasing to hon. members of this Legislature to know all of these fine young men have had not only active service, but active combat service in one of the services in the last war. Frankly anticipating a difficult law enforcement situation in this province, these results cannot be obtained by improvising over-night. We planned for the difficult days ahead, and the people of this province can view with satisfaction the fact that standards of policing in these difficult times have been raised, where, in so many other jurisdictions in the world, police forces, by reason of the failure to require standards and provide adequate standards of pay, have deteriorated in the face of the most serious conditions, with the most lamentable consequences to the population.

I feel the people of this province can view with very just pride the efficient and competent Ontario Provincial Police Force that exists today and that is doing such a good job of policing throughout the province of Ontario.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Vote 19 approved.

On Vote 20:

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, in Vote 20, Item 12, there is provision for an expenditure of $2,500 in connection with the municipal police training schools mentioned by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell).

I presume this in no way covers the total cost of operating the schools, but is merely some assistance or small grants provided by the Government and the greater portion of the cost will be borne by the municipalities.

I was wondering how that cost would be apportioned among the different municipalities taking advantage of the training. We might have a city sending 10 or 20 police officers to be trained, whereas a township might send only 1. Who will fix the basis upon which the different municipalities contribute to the cost of operating the schools?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, quite obviously there is a great deal of substance in what the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) has said. The amount of $2500 in the estimates by no means covers the cost of operating these schools.

The reason for this is obvious, the municipalities conducting the schools provide personnel for which nothing appears in the estimates. Also, the police department provides personnel, the cost of which is paid for under the estimates covering the police force generally, and is not especially charged against the schools, in other words, we make no charge to them for our contribution of assisting personnel.

The item of $2,500 that is in there is merely to cover the cost of those matters which are not covered by that combined contribution which is already paid for, that is, in the way of preparing curriculum and texts and so forth, and really represents a cash outlay in addition to those other matters. It represents a very minor portion of the cost if you bring everything into the picture.

Votes 20 to 26 approved.

On Vote 27:

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): On Item 27, I had always been under the impression the cost of elections appeared in the estimates of the Department of the Attorney-General. In 1944, I believe, or perhaps in 1945, there was an amount in the estimates of the Department of the Attorney-General, which indicated the cost of election was included in his department. Now, on this Item 27, there is only $1,000 there for the annual revision of the voters' lists, and since I have been unable to find in any other departmental estimate an amount of money set aside for general election purposes, are we to take that to mean there is not going to be a general election this year?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I rather welcome the opportunity to make some reference to election and election expenses. I think the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) knows the cost of an election is always tabled in the Legislature after the election, and for reasons of convenience, it is shown under the public accounts in relation to the Department of the Attorney-General, because the Chief Electoral Officer, to the extent he has a home at all, seems to come to rest in that particular department.

I must say, though, I have been impressed with the references that have been publicly made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the leaders of the other groups to the probability of a provincial election this year. Personally, I have heard no discussion about it in Government circles. This discussion which is initiated by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), the leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) and the leader of the Communist Party (Mr. MacLeod) is merely an indication that if those different parties, Mr. Chairman, had the record of this Government, they would immediately hold an election.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) misunderstood me completely. I think it would be more correct to say any reference to the possibility of an election from this side of the House is only our way of encouraging you along the way out.

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

Votes 27 to 31 inclusive approved.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): On Vote 32, Item 6, I see the amount of salaries to Local Masters of Titles and Registrars of Deeds offices is $100,000. I think this is double the amount of last year. Would the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) give us some explanation of this increased amount?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I thought I had indicated that although the reclassification of the public service and the adjustments had been previously carried out, it is only recently we have completed the same process in relation to the immense number of legal offices there are about the province—all the registry offices, the land titles offices, the registrars of the Supreme Court and the sheriffs who come under the Department of the Attorney-General.

An effort has been made to give all of those the same relative treatment as the inside service itself has had, and also, equally important to bring them under the superannuation part of the Public Service Act for every part of the province. That has occasioned quite a substantial increase in the estimates of this department, entirely necessary, I may say to the Legislature, if we are going to attract to the public service competent public servants throughout the province.

Vote 32 approved.

On Vote 33:

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): On Vote 33, Mr. Chairman, with respect to the policing of municipalities, I think the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) told us there were 108 of the personnel engaged in policing municipalities. Did he tell us how many municipalities they were policing, or did I miss that—I was called out for a few minutes?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I do not believe in what I said I mentioned the exact number of municipalities that are policed. The present number is 50.

If the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will give me just a moment I will look up the progression in that, from the material I have here.

I have the figures now. Hon. members will remember the first provision which was made for policing municipalities by agreement was made under the old statutes in the session of 1944 prior to the enactment of the new Police Act of 1946. Following that, in the year ending March 31, 1945, the number of municipalities which had taken advantage of that was 8. In the year ending March 31, 1947, the number of municipalities was 33. In the year ending March 31, 1948, the number of municipalities was 50.

MR. NIXON: And this contract provides for the repayment by the municipality to the Government of the entire cost, does it?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: No.

MR. NIXON: How much of a proportion?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I take it the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) would wish me to elaborate—

MR. NIXON: Yes, I am rather interested.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: —to some degree, which I will be pleased to do. I do not think I can give an adequate answer quickly.

In order to give an adequate picture there, we have to go to the Police Act of 1946. Although the contract provision was brought in in 1944, it was looking forward, it was an evolutionary step in what was established in 1946.

The conception of policing in the Province of Ontario, as settled by the Act of 1946, was that the cities and towns were to be made responsible for their own policing. They had been before and that responsibility was continued.

Then we also had special situations in the province. One example of this special situation was the urban areas which were still part of townships which had grown up adjacent to some of our urban centres, where there was the assessment and density of population that enabled that municipality in relation to that part to provide policing just as well as the cities and towns at large.

A provision was introduced into the Police Act of 1946 that enabled the Attorney-General to designate such areas as being responsible for their own policing. As well as that we had wartime housing areas. We had a situation out at Malton, Ontario, where the old village out there had, let us say, six hundred of a population, which would ordinarily be regarded as a provincial policing rural responsibility. Then the city of Toronto established a project out there that had 800 or 900 people in it, and wartime housing had a similar situation and there was great confusion about policing responsibility.

This designation enabled this to be done; a conference was held between the police of the city and the Dominion, and this is one dominion-provincial conference that worked. It was agreed there that the city, the province and Dominion would each take a responsibility for one-third of the policing, and so today there are two provincial policemen out there and the cost is paid one-third each by the Dominion, the province and the municipality.

Up in Northern Ontario there are municipalities, as hon. members from Northern Ontario appreciate, which are practically company towns. It is a wholly unsatisfactory situation that law and order should be administered by somebody that is hired by another under those circumstances, and their responsibilities have been designated, and without the slightest difficulty, everybody has shown good common sense, and where those designations have taken place they have paid the province for provincial policing which is under the control of the province and not under the control of the company.

What happens with relation to all of these designated areas is they can do one of three things—either provide policing in themselves, they can buy it from an adjacent municipality or they can buy it from the province. The policy followed by the province in relation to entering these agreements is not to do so with our secondary cities, etc., where there is a police force that can be put and kept in good shape. That section is primarily designated so that municipalities who have a responsibility for their own policing but who have not got a tax rate and a population that will enable them to provide first-class policing at some cost within their means, can buy it from the province.

The rate they have been paying, the average is $1,750 for provincial policemen plus the depreciation on any equipment supplied by the province. That costs the province somewhere between $2,200 and $2,300. So for those municipalities where the province has some responsibility in relation to the policing—take the town of Barrie—there is in this agreement a provincial subsidy representing the difference between $1,750 and somewhere between $2,200 and $2,300. I hope that case will give the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) a picture of the basis under which those agreements are entered into.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): I realize there is quite an increase in our expenditures for police officers largely, I presume, due to the increase in the number of police officers but I was wondering what the difference in the rates of pay for police officers has been over some period of time. What has been their increases or is that governed by a scale of increases each year? For instance, what policemen get now in comparison with what they got in 1943.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The answer to that question is that at the same time the Committee worked on the question of re-classifying the rates of the civil servants, it also dealt with the provincial police and at that time the category for the police officer under corporal rank was—I may be out a little—but my recollection of those categories is that they run either from $1,840 or $1,860 for probationary policemen up to $2,300 or $2,350—I forget which, as I stand here, for grade III constables. That resulted in an increase in the maximum. In 1943, the maximum was $1,900 and the result of that classification was they were increased to $2,340.

The members of the police force received consideration for their annual increase between that starting and that finishing figure each year, with the idea that a constable who does a good job goes right through his increments and in five years' time arrives at the $2,340 figure. The next grade is corporal and an increase goes to them and the next grade is sergeant and an increase goes with that and then when he gets into the class of inspector, etc., it continues to go up.

Quite obviously, among a large body of men—there are some 800 odd persons—the whole situation is advancing, with a lot of new men coming on the last few years and there is a sizable amount in the estimates each year to deal properly with the increases.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Would the hon. minister (Mr. Blackwell) tell me what is the educational requirements for admission to the provincial police?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, a person is not debarred from the police force because he is not a college graduate. There are educational tests which are applied in an examination of the applicants by the Police Department itself, and then the actual passing of the examination, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows—the course for provincial police is conducted before the policeman receives his permanent appointment. The first thing he has to pass is his police course and he has a written examination and if he fails to pass those then he is not permanently appointed at that point, and then his probationary period runs on for the balance of the year and if his performance has been satisfactory then he receives his permanent appointment and from that point on only removed for cause.

Section approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Department of Mines.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Chairman, in introducing the Mines Estimates there are one or two comments I should like to make. First of all, I would like to refer to a statement which was made on the 6th of this month by Mr. Clarence Gillis a member for Cape Breton South in the House of Commons. I think that these statements are so far wide of what the facts are and, in fact, are so reckless as to require an explanation in this House as to what the situation is. Mr. Gillis either is speaking on a subject on which he is quite uninformed or else he is just recklessly disregarding what the actual facts are.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): He is a miner.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, he may be but I would like to bring him here and teach him a little about conditions in the Province of Ontario and I intend in a few minutes to tell my hon. friend here about conditions which we have in the Province of Ontario, which I think is not only the best in Canada but I do not think any jurisdiction in the world equals the conditions under which men work and the general conditions which we have in the mining industry in this province.

MR. MACLEOD: He used to be a Tory too. I think you should know that.

HON. MR. FROST: It is bad to see a man go so far astray as Mr. Gillis in these short years and I would suggest that my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) opposite should get hold of Mr. Gillis and put him back on the right track and try and correct his views.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): He is quite capable of taking care of himself.

HON. MR. FROST: If this has relation to what Mr. Gillis knows, he is badly off the track and I think my hon. friends will be the first to admit it. I will take several parts of Mr. Gillis' statement. I ask the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) to listen to this:

"I do not suppose in the whole of Canada there is a section of any industry where the hazards are greater than in the gold and nickel mines of Northern Ontario."

He is referring to the disease or hazard of silicosis.

Well, the facts are these—first as to silicosis.

As to silicosis, the assessment rates levied by the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario against Ontario mines for compensation costs are the lowest existing in any province in Canada.

Of course, that is at once an indication that the hazards and the incidents of silicosis are lower in Ontario than in any province and therefore the assessment rates which are based on insurance calculation upon the hazards of the occurrence of silicosis, etc., are the lowest in Canada. I know the hon. members of this House will be interested in this general situation.

As to general accidents, including silicosis and causing absence from work for more than 6 days, the results of the Ryan Trophy Contest for safe mine operation in 1947 show that an Ontario mine, the Levack Mine of the International Nickel Company, with an accident frequency of 4.1 per 1,000 men employed throughout the year, not only won the trophy with the best record of any mine in Canada, but four other Ontario mines followed immediately behind, before any other mines in Canada was placed.

I would like to see my hon. friend from South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) pound his desk on that one because that affects his own riding.

This mine also won the same trophy against all metal mines in Canada in 1946, and another mine of that company won the Canadian award in 1945 and the Ontario award in 1944.

There is a good statement for Mr. Gillis' book. I would like him to get up in the House of Commons and tell something about Ontario mining about which he apparently knows very little.

He further states—he is telling about the dreadful conditions in Ontario mines—

“I remember in 1941 reading into the record of this House the will of a man in the mining industry who was suffering from silicosis but could never prove it to the satisfaction of the Compensation Board, so he willed his body to his friend to be dissected in order to prove that he had died from that particular disability and secure compensation for his widow and children.”

Now, that statement, taken as it is, would indicate a very dreadful condition in Ontario. Now, the facts are these:

“The performance of autopsies, with the consent of or at the request of the next of kin, is not unusual. In 1947, 17 autopsies were performed in Ontario. In six cases the condition of silicosis was confirmed; in one case it was allowed, but in ten cases either no silicosis was found or other causes of death were definitely established.”

Now, the next point I would like to bring up is this. Mr. Gillis, in his profound and abysmal ignorance, says this:

“There is no adequate machinery provided today by the Compensation Board of this province (Ontario) which can definitely diagnose the disability in its early stages.”

Now, these are the facts:

“This province has required for many years that no man shall work underground in a mine unless and until he obtains a certificate of fitness, an important feature of which involves an X-ray examination of the chest.”

Now, that is before he can work underground.

“In addition, every man working at a mine in a dust exposure occupation is required to have such an X-ray examination annually. Through co-operation of the mining industry and the employees, this system of annual X-ray examination has been extended to surface and other workers not necessarily exposed to dust.

“Since experience over the years has shown that certain types of persons are more susceptible than others to incurrence of disability due to dust, it is highly essential that in their interest the issuance of a certificate should be dependent on careful examination, and freedom from tuberculosis.

"The following annual examinations provide the means of ensuring to the workman full recognition of the incurrence by him of any later disability."

Now, my hon. friends know that the utmost care is being taken. Mr. Gillis would lead the people of Canada and the House of Commons to believe conditions are simply disgraceful in the province.

"The Medical Board of three Referees, appointed by the province to assess disability resulting from silicosis are recognized, even outside of Ontario, as being experts in their field, and are fully competent to take advantage of all known aids in their determinations."

Now, Mr. Gillis states this:

"The final stage of silicosis is tuberculosis, and when a man finally passes away he has no compensation rights."

Now, the facts are these:

"The Workmen's Compensation Act of Ontario, Section 115, provides for compensation to be paid for disablement resulting from industrial disease as if the disease were a personal injury by accident and this disablement were a happening of the accident."

The schedule to the Act, listing approved industrial diseases, include silicosis, which was added at the request of the mining industry itself in 1926. Section 115, subsection 9 (b) of the Act provides for the inclusion of silicosis, complicated by tuberculosis of the lung. The figures for 1947 show that tuberculosis was a factor in 23.3 per cent. of all claims for silicosis compensation allowed in the mining group in that year.

I would like to give credit to the hon. members opposite; sometimes they are criticized very mildly, but sometimes they are helpful and the hon. Minister of Labour at Ottawa was fair enough to say:

"To be fair, I should state that the Ontario Government was the first one to provide Workmen's Compensation against silicosis."

The hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) will be very proud to know your province is in the van.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (South Cochrane): What is that? I did not hear you.

HON. MR. FROST: I said you should be proud your province was the first to provide Workmen's Compensation against silicosis, instead of Mr. Gillis running down this fair province of which you should be proud and no doubt are proud, that your province is in the vanguard in the road in having these problems which arise in connection with dust hazards in certain mines.

I have already said that it was the mining industry of this province itself that asked that this provision be included in the Compensation Act. The Mining Industry Act has it. I would like further to say that with the effect that industry has spent and is spending large sums of money to improve ventilation in its mines because in good ventilation lies less dust and better all round health of the miners. It has been spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in developing a method of prevention of silicosis by the use of aluminum powder now generally used in the gold mines of Canada and of many other countries. I might say, I believe in British Columbia the aluminum dust method is now compulsory in this province, and we are continuing to conduct an investigation into that preventative, and progress is being made. I may say the great McIntyre Mine has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in investigating that particular method of preventing silicosis disability. This Government has, in turn, recently conducted a review of this process in the hope that some definite measure of its effectiveness may be determined. We think it is good. On the other hand, we hesitate to put the official seal on it until we are absolutely sure that aluminum dust is a preventative for silicosis. We recognize that silicosis should be not only compensated for as an industrial disease, but eradicated from our mines and other industries if possible.

Mr. Chairman, let me give these figures: among some 30,000 employees in Ontario, the number of claims entered in 1947 and allowed were 19, and the number of claims entered in prior years and allowed in 1947 were 27; making a total of 46. The average number of years' exposure to dust by test cases was 18.4 years, and the average age at death was 57 years, of the 46 cases. That is, they had spent 18 years and over in the mines, and the average age of the persons was over 57.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): How many claims were disallowed?

HON. MR. FROST: I cannot give you it, but I would be glad to give my hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg) the information.

It is interesting to note, in passing, that amongst the death cases, six of them were over seventy years of age. I obtained these figures from the Workmen's Compensation Board.

Having regard to the incidence of silicosis, we cannot give you definite figures because we have always studied this from the standpoint of man-year exposure, and the particular individual is never taken into consideration in workmen's compensation statistics. You will note, however, that there were 1,263 cases in the industry since 1926. The yearly examinations of miners average about 22,770 examinations yearly by industry, which is a preventative measure, which would give you a fair indication of the low incidence of the disease among these men. In other words with examinations of nearly 23,000 a year since 1926, there actually have been only 1,263 cases established.

Besides all this, of course, much money has been spent by the individual mines. Before the Research Foundation took over the work of the investigation of aluminium dust, the McIntyre Mine had on its own accord spent over $300,000 in research as to the use of aluminium dust to prevent silicosis, and I am glad to advise you that their expenditures in this regard, I am advised, have exceeded half-a-million dollars. That is one mine alone that has spent that much to try and eradicate that disease.

MR. SALSBERG: The 1,200 cases you mentioned were from 1926 up until what year?

HON. MR. FROST: Up to the present time. This is dated the 8th of April, 1948. In all classes of business in Ontario—silicosis runs into other classes of business as well — there are planing mills, brick manufacturing, rolling mills, foundries, and everything pertaining to mining. There were 1,902 cases in Ontario over the twenty-two year period since 1926; 1,263 in mines and the total compensation paid in Ontario in that time is $10,424,000, of which $5,207,000 was paid by the mining industry.

I do not think Mr. Gillis adds anything to his stature as a political leader making reckless statements such as he made in the House of Commons early this month, and I take this opportunity of correcting them.

Talking about accidents and the protection given to the workmen, we have a first-class example today.

As you know, there has been a fire in the Sylvanite Mine, and I know the hon. members of this House will be quite interested in hearing the report telephoned in here just an hour or so ago, and I think you will feel that our protection measures up there are very very good. I think some of my hon. friends opposite might send this information down to Mr. Gillis to show him how things are done in Ontario:

A fire was discovered in 2,706 stope (above the 2,700-foot level) at the Sylvanite Mine, about 10 a.m. on April 13, by two men retimbering the stope.

This stope was mined out some years ago and is now part of the fresh-air forced draught ventilation system.

Warning was given and the stench gas was injected into the air lines at about 10.20 a.m. The men were all evacuated from the mine in less than 40 minutes. The fire drill procedures in force at the mine proved to be satisfactory. The adjoining Toburn Mine and Wright Hargreaves Mine were warned and a check of conditions underground was maintained.

The Rescue Station Superintendent, G. E. Wilson, who was with a training class underground at the Lake Shore Mine, was contacted shortly after the stench gas warning was given, and arrived at the Sylvanite mine, with the Lake Shore team fully equipped, about 11 a.m. Four other teams, one from the Lake Shore, two from Wright Hargreaves, and one from the Sylvanite, were brought in before noon.

The ventilation doors on the 25th level were closed and the surface fan reversed from blowing to exhausting so that there was no danger of forcing smoke through connections into the adjoining mines of the Toburn and Wright Hargreaves.

No. 2,706 stope is in an isolated section on the 2,700-foot level. It is not connected to the 2,600 level above, but is connected by an untimbered raise to the 2,500 level. The fire was attacked on the 2,700 level with fire hoses and fog nozzles to keep the fire from spreading. At midnight the crews were relieved by five fresh crews. The fire was still burning at six o'clock this morning, April 14. There is no danger of its spreading.

The safety of the men was not involved at any time and no risks were taken by the fire-fighting crews. The crews and supervisory staff performed very efficiently. Many of the rescue crew are veterans of the East Malartic fire-fighting operation.

The fire was probably caused by a cigarette dropped by one of the timbermen, which set fire to the old dry timber in the stope.

The information for this report was received from L. K. Walkom, Inspector of Mines, Kirkland Lake, by telephone.

There are no workmen underground except the fire-fighting crews, and the mine will not be worked until all danger from smoke has passed. The adjoining mines are operating normally.

Mr. Chairman, I am sure the hon. members of this House will be very satisfied and very grateful that the protective systems in that area are working in that manner. Last year mining in Ontario approached an all-time high, not from the standards of precious metal mining but because of the great amount of base metals, iron, nickel, copper, all base metals mined in Ontario. It looks this year as if we will exceed the all-time high which was achieved, I think, in 1941, because of the great value of gold mined that year. In passing, I should say many people are pessimistic about the gold industry in Ontario. I do not share that pessimism. I think the gold industry is going to go ahead and this year will be much better than we have had for some time. Last year there was produced in January $5,466,000 in gold; this year $5,833,000, and in February of last year $5,304,000, and this year $5,315,000. You must remember those figures are comparative because the price is set at $35.00 an ounce. I think the gold mining industry has a great future in Ontario, and the pessimism that prevails in some quarters is not altogether justified. I prophesy a very bright future in gold mining in Ontario.

On the other hand, I see a great future for mining in Ontario in the base metals and iron. We have tremendous iron ore resources in Ontario which will be, in the course of years, developed and will prove a valuable asset for this Province of Ontario, and also for the whole continent of North America. There are areas in Ontario which are at present overlooked or had been overlooked in the march of progress in the past. In the great natural resources of this continent, I say the ore resources such as you have in eastern Ontario have been by-passed because of the development of the Masabi Range in the United States. That depletion of high-grade ores industry is coming back to some very valuable but not high grade deposits, but by-passed in years gone by. For instance, in the American Civil War the metal for General Grant's guns came from eastern Ontario; yet in the march of time that was by-passed, but these deposits are still there, and the Mines Department, in conjunction with the Dominion Department, with whom we have very close working arrangements, are going to survey all that area to try to establish the extent of the iron-ore ranges in eastern Ontario. It may be that some of these days places like Lindsay and Peterborough will be the centres of the iron-ore industry in Canada. That may be, it is all within the realm of possibility. I just ask the hon. members of this House to bear in mind some of the marginal resources of this province which were apt to go down as being uneconomic at this time may in a short time become of the greatest possible value. That also applies to such a thing as the lignite business at Moosonee—which I hate to mention. It is fantastic and foolish to try and compete that with fuel at the present time. Some of these days it will be immensely valuable and we only have to wait out time until that comes about, until science and economic conditions catch up.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): The hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) has looked into his crystal ball and predicted great things for gold and base metals and iron. I wonder if he would take another peek in the ball and see what he sees for the future of silver in Cobalt?

HON. MR. FROST: I did not have time to mention everything. I would not want to take up the time in mentioning all the great prospects we have in Ontario in all mining—uranium and what not. Concerning silver; I well recall in 1944 I think it was meeting my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) in the mines office and my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) told me Cobalt was so badly licked it was going to get nowhere. He told me unemployment was going to set in immediately and we would have to set up relief offices if we did not establish some economic method of taking care of Cobalt.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Who are you talking about?

HON. MR. FROST: My hon. friend who asked the question, the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor). He did not have very great faith in the country he comes from. He pressed his case with very great vigour and—I was only a first-year student in mining—I was pretty nearly "taken in." I was going to recommend to my colleague measures which were quite unsound which he recommended. Instead of that, we took a big view of Ontario and the possibilities of Cobalt. We said, "Cobalt is not dead, it is going to come back and be a great mining community and will be valuable. We have two geologists up there looking over the country which was passed over." I prophesy Cobalt will come back, the town of Cobalt, and silver will come back, and it will be a prosperous up and coming community, and the Department of Mines intends to make it that way if they can.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): In regard to the hon. Minister's (Mr. Frost) remarks, he was referring to silicosis. I am pleased that he has brought this question to the attention of the House because in my part of the country silicosis is one of the greatest worries among the miners. The hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) referred to Clarence Gillis having made some statements about silicosis.

HON. MR. FROST: He did not know much about what he was talking.

MR. GRUMMETT: He got his information from the miners who go into the ground, not the mine operators. I have talked to a large number of the miners and there is great discontent in the north about the treatment given those who claim they are suffering from silicosis. Everyone will realize if you lose an arm or a leg in the mine, that is easily visible, you can prove to the medical profession or the compensation board you have lost an arm or leg, but if your lungs are filled with silica dust, it is another matter. I have had doctors in northern Ontario who were the personal physicians of men suffering from silicosis tell me they have asked their patients to allow them to remove their lungs after death in order to prove to the Compensation Board these men had died from silicosis. Undoubtedly, there are many men in northern Ontario suffering from silicosis who cannot prove it. Silicosis is caused by dust getting into the lungs and burying itself in the membranes of the lungs, collecting in small nodules throughout the lungs.

X-ray plates may show it up. It may only develop in a form which would be recognized as T.B., and the Compensation Board, the Referee Board, and so forth, will tell the man he is not suffering from silicosis, but from bronchitis or T.B., and so on. These men are not satisfied with that decision.

In regard to silicosis, the hon. members of the House will understand that men have to work a certain number of years in positions in the mines, where they were exposed to silica dust, before they are entitled to make a claim.

It has been estimated the average time a miner is fit and able to work underground, exposed to silica dust, is between 8 and 9 years. If they are exposed to the dust, they cannot stand it much longer than that. It is true, I know a number of men who have worked for longer periods, but it depends on the type of rock in which they are working; some rock will give off more dust than others, and there are some occupations in the mines which cause more dust to be present, and these men undoubtedly are taking a lot of silica dust into their lungs, more so perhaps than others.

I feel, Mr. Chairman, the Compensation Board, the Referee Board and the physicians, acting on behalf of the Board in different towns and municipalities, should take a more kindly attitude toward these men. There is intense bitterness and resentment amongst the miners, in regard to silicosis. You never hear so many complaints about other forms of compensation, but you certainly do about silicosis.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) referred to a number of cases. I think he said, "1263"—if I am correct—in 22 years. That averages about 55 or 56 cases per year. It is a small average, but it probably represents the number of men who were successful in fighting bitter opposition against their cases. I have known private citizens in northern Ontario, recognizing the injustice which has been done miners, working in the hard-rock mines, complaining of same. As I said before, large numbers of miners are convinced they are not getting a fair show, and I would ask the department to give more consideration to this one branch of disease, which they are not getting now, and have not in the past.

Silicosis is a scourge to the miners of the north, and they deserve all the attention the Government can give them.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, I cannot let this opportunity go without saying a few words, since I come from the silicotic area myself.

I want to say at the outset it is one of the most dreaded diseases which plagues the miners in the quartz mines.

It is the same when you get a cold in the gold mines, particularly in Timmins and Kirkland Lake; you get a silicotic cough, and it scares both the men so inflicted and the women folk as well.

I have brought patients into the doctor's and discussed this matter with doctors, whose names I am prepared to give if necessary. The doctor will say, "Yes, they all have dust in their lungs, but not to a degree where they could draw compensation, in their opinion," which is based on an interpretation of the Act.

I have listened to miners themselves, when they would go to bed, awaken in the middle of the night. It was not a cold germ they were suffering from, it was the itching of the silicotic dust tearing the lungs down. I have heard them cough all night, and have seen them so fatigued in the mornings they could not go to work, and yet they are not drawing compensation.

I have a letter over the signature of a doctor in the north country, which I would like to read into the record. It is addressed to the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley). I do not know if he will recall it, but I would like to read it, and make certain comments on it.

We have set up in our unions what we call "Compensation Committees," and among the duties of those committees is the handling of all silicotic cases and other which come within the jurisdiction of the Compensation Board.

This letter was written to you, Mr. Minister (Mr. Daley), as it was brought to the attention of this doctor through the medium of the compensation committee of local 241 of the International Union at Timmins. This is the letter:

"Honourable Mr. Daley, and Provincial Secretary,
Parliament Buildings,
Toronto, Ontario.

Dear Sirs:

"Two representatives of the Local Union of Mine and Mills Employees have just brought me a problem.

"It concerns a patient of mine and the Compensation Board.

"This patient who was on full pension for silicosis died from heart disease. His pension stopped of course and his widow receives nothing. If he would have lived he would have continued to receive about $60 a month and after his decease his wife would receive a small pension for life.

"Now with his death due to another cause everything stops.

"This is not the fault of any one particular individual. It is a defect in the Act."

In the opinion of this learned doctor in the north country—

"It is obvious that the Board, after accumulating actuarial information have made provision in reserve for pension for this man and for pension for his wife after his decease from silicosis.

"Contributions have been made. Reserves set up and all necessary examinations carried out.

"If the silicotic died from another cause like falling into a well, or being struck by a motor car or having a heart attack the Board saves money.

"The funds are not used. In other words, the Board saves money every time a silicotic dies from another cause.

"The act is obviously defective. It invokes a hardship on the wives of these miners.

"What should be done is that the amount for some part of the amount set aside to provide pension for this silicotic and his wife should be used in some form for her distress. For unless accident intervened he would have died from silicosis anyway at some time.

"There are many cases like this—two in my own practise in the first year.

"The money should be used regardless of the cause of death unless death can be attributed to some other cause from which the widow would receive some compensation.

"Your most careful consideration would be appreciated.

"This letter is being written to the Government because I think any alteration is beyond the jurisdiction of the Board.

"The Act, I believe, should be changed.

"Sincerely,

"(signed) Dr. James B. McClinton."

I want to say, Mr. Chairman, there are a large number of cases. I have the letters here, which I intend to read later on, from a lady who came into my office. Her husband is in the Hamilton Sanitarium. When she was down to see her husband recently, the doctor who was examining her husband advised her, that her husband was also suffering from silicosis, but he had entered the hospital as a T.B. patient, and it was very difficult to treat a person suffering from T.B., if he was also afflicted from silicosis.

I could bring endless cases such as I have outlined. I intend to bring up more letters later on. I think the remark by Mr. Gillis in the House of Commons was justified—

HON. MR. FROST: You did not hear what I had to say about that, you were outside.

MR. CARLIN: Of course, other hon. members were here.

HON. MR. FROST: They must have passed the information on to you pretty fast.

MR. CARLIN: Oh well, you were out yourself, pretty often.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Chairman, I think the reading of that letter, which was addressed to me, brings me directly into this matter, and I should make a few comments.

I have not the correspondence at hand, but I do recall this particular case. This man was working in a mine and became ill. As has been said, it is very difficult at the outset to determine whether his illness was caused by silicotic dust or not. The doctor recommended his going to a hospital.

As there was no proof positive he did have or did not have silicosis, the Compensation Board—and I think very generously; I approve absolutely the policy—immediately started paying the man compensation, because had he had silicotic dust, and that was the cause of his illness, he would be compensable, that is, eligible for compensation.

The man entered the hospital, and his wife received compensation which, if the regulations of the Workmen's Compensation Board were adhered to—and I have mentioned this before; the Board has treated these matters in the most humane way—this woman received compensation on the strength of the fact her husband might have silicosis, and she received such compensation for a number of months. The man eventually died. His body was carefully examined to determine whether he had silicosis or not, and according to the records from the most exhaustive survey of his lungs, which medical science could make—and silicotic dust is quite easily detectable—he had no silicosis whatever. The man died from some other disability, which was revealed after his death.

I do not want anyone to think I am unsympathetic with the widow, but the actual facts of the case were she had received compensation for a number of months—I cannot recall how many—to which actually she was not entitled. Upon the death of the man and proof positive he did not die from silicosis, of course, she was not eligible for a pension after his death. That is the story of this particular case.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, I want to say a word or two on the question of silicosis, not in a general way, but to pin it down to one case which has come to my attention since we met here last session.

This man, Thomas Bluish by name, worked in the mines of northern Ontario—and I would like the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) to listen to this.

HON. MR. FROST: I am listening. Go ahead.

MR. MACLEOD: This man of whom I am about to speak worked in the mines of northern Ontario for 15 years. About 1918 he began to spit blood, and it became quite apparent that silica particles had become imbedded in his lungs. He was not X-rayed by the company for which he was working.

HON. MR. FROST: How far back was that?

MR. MACLEOD: That would be back in 1918.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. WILLIAM G. WEBSTER (Minister without Portfolio): Another of those sob stories.

MR. MACLEOD: I understand, even that far back, the provincial regulations made it obligatory on all companies to X-ray their employees. I think there was a regulation in effect at that time.

HON. MR. FROST: Since this government came in, there have been great reforms, along all lines.

MR. MACLEOD: I will come to that in a moment. The man had to quit the mine in 1927. Despite all efforts he made, he was unable to get back into the mines, because he was physically unfit. On the other hand, he was never able to get compensation, and this man, who gave 15 of the best years of his life to the mine operators of northern Ontario is today living as an unemployed unemployable in the city of Toronto. When I talked to him a few months ago, he was receiving 48 cents per day relief, amounting to about $6.67 every two weeks. I think it has gone up slightly since then.

The point I want to make is that according to the examination of this man by physicians in Toronto, it is quite obvious that he contracted silicosis while employed in these mines, but has never been able to qualify for compensation.

I want to suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) when an individual runs into a number of cases of that kind—and the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) and the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) have both intimated there are many such cases—when cases of that kind are called to the hon. Minister's (Mr. Frost) attention, I think it is understandable why people are bound to get a bad impression of the way things are done in this Province of ours.

I am satisfied the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) is the last person in the world who wants to see any injustices done to a person who has contracted silicosis.

But there is something wrong somewhere. Somebody is at fault in this matter. Otherwise you would never have a case such as I have just described. I think the responsibility of the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) and the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is to delve into these specific cases which are brought to their attention from time to time.

HON. MR. DALEY: We are doing that all the time.

MR. MACLEOD: I suggest you look into this case. You will find this man on the records of the Welfare Department. I propose to deal with it again when the welfare estimates are up.

The other point I want to make is this: I always enjoy listening to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) speaking of the expanding economy that lies ahead of us. I would only say to him this, if he keeps on talking about expansion here day after day, he is not going to have a button left on his vest.

HON. MR. FROST: If you keep on the way you are, they will call you "Joe Gloom."

MR. MACLEOD: Oh no, I think everybody in this House shares the high hope and the high expectation the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) holds in his heart for the future of the province of Ontario, but I would say to him, with the mining industry expanded along the lines you predict, I hope you are beginning to feel perhaps your shoulders are a little too narrow to carry the burden of this expanding department of government, alongside the heavy sacks of money you have to carry on your back as Provincial Treasurer.

I have been reminding you year after year this government gave a solemn undertaking when it took office it would appoint an experienced man as full-time Minister of Mines, and I even pointed in the direction of a person whom I thought might qualify. I am rather interested in something that occurred here a moment ago which I think ought not to pass unnoticed. While your estimates were before the House, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has given the nod to the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) and taken him out of the House, and it may be at this very moment things are in motion to relieve you of some of your responsibilities.

I am bound to say, however, having sat in with you in the Committee on the Mining Act and having had the pleasant experience of travelling with you up to northern Ontario to see the lignite deposits, and having had the opportunity to delve into the budget which you presented here a week or ten days ago, I am inclined to feel perhaps you would make a better Minister of Mines than you do a Provincial Treasurer. However that may be, I think the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) should realize if the Department of Mines is going to develop and expand along the lines he has suggested, then I think it maybe a little too much for you to carry; I would not like to see you injure your health or break down under the load. I hope, without wanting to see an injustice done to you, the conversation going on out in the lobby now is going to give us an experienced Minister of Mines.

HON. MR. FROST: It is very kind of my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) to be so solicitous for my welfare. I do not know that I have shown any signs of failing in the last little while, but I would say I have the very highest regard for the hon. gentleman he has mentioned, the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts). I would say his ability in this line is second to none in this House, and certainly I would be very pleased if some day what he mentions may happen.

On the other hand, though, I say this, some of these days the people of Ontario from northern Ontario are going to return some good Progressive-Conservative members from up there—

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): It will take a long time.

HON. MR. FROST: —who are experts, real miners. Then, you will have a Minister of Mines who has a real practical knowledge of mining.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): They have tried them often enough.

HON. MR. FROST: I just mentioned that. Now, to get back to the matter of silicosis, and I presume to close this matter for the moment—not to close it up, in this way that it is always open, it is always under study, night and day—I may say to my hon. friends they can rest assured while there are many things to be learned about this disability and the matter which causes this disability, Ontario is the leader in research, not only in Canada, but probably in the world, in connection with this disease. There is no other jurisdiction which can match us, not even the province of Nova Scotia—

MR. MACLEOD: A very poor province, Nova Scotia.

HON. MR. FROST: No other province can match this province in that respect.

I know my hon. friends want to be fair about this, it is a very difficult disease to establish—I should not say “disease,” it is a difficult cause of disability to establish. I have some very interesting figures on autopsies performed last year in 17 cases. In 6 of them, the diagnosis was confirmed. Remember, as the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) says it is easy to establish the presence of this disease when there has been an autopsy. Establishing it then is a simple matter. With respect to these 17 autopsies performed, in 6, the diagnosis was confirmed, in 1 case only was it established silicosis was the cause of the death, and in the remaining 10 cases, it was found silicosis was not the cause of death. It all goes to show this—I know there are difficulties—it goes to show how difficult it is to establish the actual cause when a person is living. It is one of these difficult things which, by trial and error, research and work, we must try to find methods of keeping down to the point where we do justice of the great majority of people who are working.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, I find it rather difficult to follow the reasoning of the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost).

HON. MR. FROST: My friend (Mr. Anderson) is never able to follow my reasoning, that is the trouble.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): We all find the same thing.

MR. ANDERSON: At one point he expresses the hope some day the people of northern Ontario will send a practical miner down as a member—

HON. MR. FROST: Sure; they will, too.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Don't get touchy about that.

MR. ANDERSON: —so that he may become Minister of Mines. On the other hand, when Clarence Gillis, who is a practical miner, gets up and talks—

HON. MR. FROST: Through his hat, you mean.

MR. ANDERSON: —about the situation, the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) attempts to discredit what Clarence Gillis says.

HON. MR. FROST: He does not know anything about conditions up here. He had better confine himself to Nova Scotia where he knows something about it.

MR. ANDERSON: That is what you think. Mr. Chairman, I am not a miner, but I live in a municipality where we have a very good sanitarium and because of that I meet a number of men who have been employed in hard rock mines, and have contracted T.B., had been cured. While they are cured, they cannot go back to their former occupation, and this creates quite a hardship on them. I am not blaming that on the hon. minister (Mr. Frost), but that is the situation which many of these men are confronted with.

I am going to quote a few figures here showing the T.B. among miners, and comparing the number with that of other industries. The article I am quoting from is a manual put out by the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

"The Canadian Tuberculosis Association has compiled the frequency of clinical diseases by occupation for T.B. patients admitted to hospitals. The number in each occupation has been compared with the total number of gainfully employed persons in the same occupation throughout Canada.

"In all, 7,686 patients were admitted to Canadian Sanatoria in 1937, at which time there were, according to the last census, 9,668,570 gainfully employed persons, thus establishing an over-all rate of 0.79 per thousand. The rates for major occupational divisions were as follows:

"Occupation

Mining	2.55 per 1,000
Service professional personnel	2.26 per 1,000
Logging occupations	1.87 per 1,000
Manufacturing	1.70 per 1,000
Fishing and trapping	1.17 per 1,000
Transportation and communication	1.10 per 1,000
Building and construction ..	1.09 per 1,000
Trade	1.03 per 1,000
Finance76 per 1,000
Warehousing and storage ..	.71 per 1,000
Agricultural occupations57 per 1,000
Power production47 per 1,000"

The source of this information is taken from the International Labour Encyclopædia of Industrial Hygiene Supplements, page 7.

I gather from the remarks of the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) there is far more being done towards combatting this disease than has been done in former years, and that, I think, we are all very glad to know. On the other hand, I submit there are many many cases that are on the borderline where miners, because of contracting this dreaded disease, through silicosis and developing T.B. later, have suffered because they have had to take an inferior position.

Votes 113 to 119 inclusive approved.

On vote 120:

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, before we leave the estimates, and since this is perhaps the only opportunity we will have this session to direct a question to the hon. minister (Mr. Frost)—the dual minister—you were quoted in the press the other day as stating you expected the population of this province to double in the next ten years. I think that is the way the Globe and Mail reported you.

I wonder whether the government has discovered some secret weapon of which we are not aware to bring about that rather sudden increase in the population in Ontario. I was wondering if you were going to introduce some of the theories of Brigham Young into Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST: No, just the benefits of good government.

Vote 120 approved.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Highways Department.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Just a few words before we go on with the estimates in the Department of Highways.

The Department of Highways is one of the largest spending—perhaps the largest spending department in the Province of Ontario. There have been many comments, which I appreciated, from the Opposition, and of course, some criticism. I think in that we have the largest expenditure this year in the history of the province, it would be well for me to say a few words about it, and give you a little idea of how this expenditure is made.

There have been many comments about the “over-taxation” from gasoline, and how roads can be built without that heavy impost. During the past year, the Department of Highways has spent something over $61,000,000. I concur with my hon. friend the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in that I have a very bright outlook on the future of the Province of Ontario. I read the article which the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) just spoke of about Ontario's population increasing. It is increasing very rapidly and therefore, the demand for roads will increase very rapidly. The registration of motor vehicles has increased very rapidly during the past few years.

Also, we have taken on in the department of Highways a great additional responsibility since this government came into power. You will remember the legislation which we passed a couple of years ago adding section 4(b) to the Highways Improvement Act, whereby we can enter into an agreement with municipalities to designate certain roads for construction and maintenance and later, when the work is completed, turn them back to the municipalities. That, I might say, has proven very satisfactory in the short time it has been in effect. In fact, the legislation which I mentioned has benefitted in the past year 40 municipalities in the province of Ontario. 26 new projects, affecting the 40 townships have been authorized out of which 232 miles of road have been designated and 163 miles of that road completed, which involved a cost of an estimated $631,401.

The total of this plan, of course, is not yet complete. As we entered into the agreement, we agreed with the municipality we would take over a certain mileage and would bring it up to a certain standard before turning it back; therefore, in that 232.40 miles of road I have mentioned, we have some yet to complete.

There are throughout Ontario and indeed here in the older sections of the province of Ontario, many sections which can be benefitted under this amendment, which have sizeable populations and still have not sufficient receipts from taxation to pay for the roads that are needed for special causes.

There are problems in getting proper roads and some might say, why should one municipality be favoured more than another. This legislation, of course, does not take isolated cases, it is very broad in what can be done, but nevertheless, it was passed with the intent of serving the smaller and weaker municipalities in the province of Ontario where it would be more or less utterly impossible for them to develop their roads in a reasonable time.

In passing, I would like to mention a few of the municipalities in which we have done some work:

Township of Petawawa.

Township of McNab.

Township of Snowden; district of Muskoka.

Township of Balfour, Rayside and Blezard.

Township of Machar.

Township of Matchedash.

Township of Marysburgh.

Township of Bagot and Blithfield.

Township of South Crosby; Counties of Leeds and Grenville—a tourist area.

Township of Parry, District of Parry Sound.

Township of Caldwell; District of Nipissing.

Township of Tehkumseh; District of Sudbury and so on.

This is the class of municipality we have entered into an agreement to assist under this new legislation. In mentioning that, is one of the obligations which have been taken on and is going to be surfaced and paid for out of the extra taxation which we asked for a year ago.

Just in passing, I want to mention the amount of roads that were completed during the past year or under way. We had 220 miles of mull, about 15 miles of double cement—Highland Creek to Oshawa—hot mix 96 miles, old surface re-surfaced 117 miles and from the time of taking office we have paved 420 miles and graded 842.9 miles. Last year we started grading on approximately 200 miles of road and we have 80 per cent. of it completed at the present time.

Before this Government took office, in the year 1943 the Province of Ontario had 621 units which they were giving service to in the way of subsidy or assistance of some kind or another. In 1945 this has increased by the addition of some municipalities in organized territories and Statute Labour Boards to 808, but last year new legislation which gives assistance to the towns, to the villages and to the cities and to separated towns, brought the unit which the Ontario Government today are subsidizing or assisting in some way to 1,304 units, and in that includes 146 towns, 28 cities and 156 villages, which means that the corporations of the different units which we are dealing with has increased materially in that time.

There has been, of course, some talk as to why we need this gasoline tax. Why not take it out of surplus? Well, after all I do want to say a word about gasoline tax before I finish, but before doing that I would like to mention a word of some of the things we have done in the past year to develop the road system.

Last year we were criticized for having inadequate equipment set up and that, of course, we agreed in, but it was due to war years and in the year 1947 we have been able to correct that greatly, and we have added to our machinery 448 pieces of new equipment which consists of graders, power mowers, rollers, trucks, etc. This surely is quite costly, but we have also added to our machinery pools for northern Ontario and the section which I mentioned which we hope to develop under new sections 4B—and hon. members sitting opposite will know of some of those.

We have 13 machinery pools set up in the north and we now have 70 pieces of equipment there that we rent out to the townships who are unable to buy expensive equipment, at a very moderate rate per hour or per day, and we send operators who are quite efficient and trained to operate. This equipment consists of 22 power graders, 12 pole graders, 15 tractors, 7 bull-dozers, 3 loaders and 10 snowploughs, and those pools will be supplemented just as rapidly as we can obtain the equipment. I realize that this has met with much favour in the north with those municipalities who have been unable to purchase such equipment themselves. We realize they can use a greater number and I am sure it will work to the advantage of municipalities and to the advantage of the Government. For, after all, when a municipality buys a piece of equipment, it will be subsidized in the usual way, and be used only a few days when their estimates would run out and would probably lie along the side of the road for the rest of the year. This will be eliminated in this way.

I say this in all kindness—I see my good friend here from Wellington (Mr. McEwing)—there has been a few odd statements made that there is favouritism shown where the roads are built. Well, I think I can prove to you conclusively this afternoon that that is quite unfounded and for my hon. friend across from me from Wellington (Mr. McEwing) I might just read a few lines of an article that appeared in one of the county papers. It says this, speaking of a road that was designated some years ago;

“This also appears to have been shelved by the present Government as their policy is not to carry on a road improvement programme in the ridings represented by Liberal members.”

I want to assure the hon. member (Mr. McEwing) that is quite incorrect and to confirm that I would like to give you the figures. As your county is divided into two ridings, my hon. friend (Mr. Hamilton), representing Wellington South received in his constituency $185,000 less than in your constituency. So I have every respect and admiration for the representative for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton). So you see you are not so badly treated after all.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington, North): Would you allow me to ask a question?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Most certainly.

MR. McEWING: Would you tell the House how many rural municipalities there are in the south and how many miles of roadway in the south riding and how many there of each in the north of Wellington.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, that is a question; I will be able to tell you. I have quite a bit of information but I cannot tell you it all. I mentioned that in passing because this Government has not taken such petty politics into consideration as that of favouritism, and in a few moments I will show you that that is quite correct. The hon. Leader of the C.C.F. Group (Mr. Grummett) will I think agree with me in that because in his riding, which happens of course to be in a section of the province of Ontario that has not been so fortunate and has less roads and it is quite necessary to develop in order to have a road. I have other statements.

I think the hon. member for Parry Sound (Mr. Armstrong) was mentioning something the other night but even in his riding we have expended in the past year some $681,000, which is not any small amount, and I might say to you before I pass along, that we spent more money in your riding than your own Government did, which is something worth taking note of.

I did mention the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett). I am almost afraid to tell the House how much money I spent in that riding, but I might say it runs into millions and I also know the great need and necessity of development of the roads which will cost many hundreds of thousands of dollars more—yes, millions of dollars—before they will be in the shape that has been requested by our good friend, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), because when he was up there last fall he condemned the Department of Highways for not spending sufficient money in the north. I think, if I remember his argument correctly, he said:

"It appears the Government's policy is to spend money only where they get gas revenue."

I want to assure my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) that has not been a fact because we have spent money in parts of the Province of Ontario which, in his time and mine, would probably not return the money expended in gas tax, but is a very essential connecting link or road serving part of the Province of Ontario.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): How much did you spend in Belleville?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We spent, I think, $900,080. That was the grant we made to the city. Almost a million dollars.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD: All you gave us was an office.

MR. R. BEGIN (Russell): I would like to know how much you spent in Prescott-Russell in eastern Ontario.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We spent considerable in Prescott. I might say in your riding I have an agreement with the corporation and we will be spending much more.

MR. BEGIN: You did not spend anything.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: If you wait for a moment I will tell you. For roads alone we spent about $150,000.

MR. BEGIN: Where?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: In Russell county.

MR. BEGIN: I mean roads, Ontario highways.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That was to your constituency, not to the united counties of Russell and Prescott. This Government paid to the united counties of Russell and Prescott all told and in the county of Russell which you represent about $150,000.

MR. BEGIN: That is away out.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We have in the city of Ottawa a division office. There we have placed a very capable engineer and a couple of assistants and if you would like to have a drive around your county he will show you a very nice road he is building and improvements he has made in the past year, I will arrange that you will have a free trip.

MR. BEGIN: I will do that.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I come to the matter of revenue, and I want to say a few words about that, but before doing that I want to read another little article which was rather amusing, and this was taken out of The Times-Advocate, Exeter, Ontario. Now, you might just get the name. It says:

"This Liberal Government will remove the three cents extra Drew imposed tax on gasoline . . . will establish a real policy for Agriculture—will extend rural hydro to the maximum—will build better roads to encourage the profitable tourist industry—will reduce the 2,000 new Civil Servants added to the provincial payroll by Mr. Drew—will substantially reduce the cost of operation of the province—will give a better deal to the aged and infirm—will sign a fair and beneficial agreement with Ottawa."

MR. MACLEOD: What does it say about the 20 per cent. Amusement Tax?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, we will come to that; you just wait a moment. They say they are going to remove the 3 cents extra tax and going to build better roads, and they are going to reduce the civil servants, a great number of that 2,000 new civil servants or at least a portion of it was necessary to take on in order to carry on an expanded programme. So that is one of the things. I wonder how it is possible to do it. You go about making statements—I must say very modest about highways because you try to be fair and there is not very much you can say when you get right down to brass tacks because this Government has developed the Province of Ontario and its highway system in the last couple of years. It is true during the war years very little was being done, but we have heard a lot of talk about economy and stable Government, and there is one thing sure that we are going to develop, and we are going to build roads and unless we add to the debt of the province we must tax gas, and I think you will all agree with that.

I want to say what the revenue for the Department of Highways has been over a period of years. In 1937-8, previous to this Government coming into power, there was a 6 cent gasoline tax. The motor licence was the same as at the present time, which produced $26,364,280 and the Government of the day expended on King's highways $37,440,000, gave subsidies to counties and townships in the amount of $4,320,000. Administration costs about $2,000,000. In other words the total expenditure was $43,750,000, leaving a deficit of $17,338,000. So at that time we were not getting sufficient revenue to build the roads that they were called upon to build.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): What year was that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That was the fiscal year of 1937-8. Again, in 1938-9 the revenue was $26,406,445 and they had an expenditure of about $41,000,977, which left a deficit of $15,570,000. I am giving the round figures. Then we come, of course, to the war years and the gasoline tax was 8 cents and the revenue went up to $33,787,000 and the expenditures $31,860,000 leaving a small surplus of $1,926,000 in the war year.

Then, we come to the first two war years that this Government was in power, with quite a large surplus, 1944, $17,000,000, and of course there was a reason why that was left.

MR. OLIVER: What was the expenditure in that year?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: In 1945 to 1946, $22,924,000, which left a surplus of $14,123,359. Of course, that was a year in which we were under an agreement with Ottawa. Now, coming to 1946 to 1947, with the 8 cent tax on gas surplus, $44,486,064; the expenditure, $45,758,428, or a deficit of $1,272,000. Then, last year when the new legislation came into effect and we added on the new municipalities and extra assistance to others, and, of course, the extra 3 cents gas tax which was taken over when the Federal Government left the gas field, our revenue was $59,800,000, and there was expended $61,956,000, leaving a deficit of $2,156,000. I mention those figures because there has been considerable comment by different people that the tax collected is not given back to the building of roads and assisting motorists.

There has also been criticism about the extra 3 cents tax. I think you will remember quite well the explanation made in this House last year, that it was our intention in taking over the extra 3 cents that that would go back to the municipalities to give them extra assistance, as it is this Government's intention to relieve the burden of taxation of the local municipalities.

The 3 cents gas tax would mean $12,600,000, figuring it on the basis of our total revenue.

I will show you how that has been divided. Subsidies to the towns and villages and cities as mentioned, $2,680,000, additional subsidies to counties $3,453,809, additional to townships over the former year, $5,121,093, to development of roads and statute labour board, $920,450, which makes $12,625,122 that has been given to the municipalities more in the year 1947 than the previous year.

The total assistance to municipalities last year was three times that, or more, than when we came into power.

I do want to say, before I sit down, we have great faith in the Province of Ontario. We have great hopes for the development of the Province of Ontario and the Department of Highways have made plans to cope with the development as mentioned by my good friend and colleague, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost). If we are going to serve our people, if we are going to develop, there is one thing we must have, and that is roads. To show the increase of the need locally—and that is only one of the items, compare the millions of cars we have here from the United States. In fact, my hon. friend said the other night in making a speech, they had provisions made for 18,000,000 from the country to the south in the coming year. In 1946 we did during that time reach an all-time high, last year, which is an increase of 10 per cent. of passenger cars over the all-time high, and 20 per cent. on motor vehicles and 35 per cent. on motor-cycles, but we have an increase from the previous war time years of over 80,000 trucks. So, during the period of the war, there was a reduction in number of passenger cars but there was no reduction in the number of motor trucks at any time, and these vehicles have increased in number from 1938 of 81,000, to the present figures of 140,930, or an increase of 72.6 per cent, increase in trucks. In passing, I should like to mention that the Province of Ontario has a very reasonable rate, as far as registration fees are concerned. I will just mention, taking the cheapest outside of the four-cylinder cars, which is the Plymouth, in Alberta, $25; British Columbia, $25; in Manitoba, $19; New Brunswick, $20.60; Nova Scotia, $20.00; Prince Edward Island, $17.50; Quebec, $22.50; and Saskatchewan, $15; so it is less than 50 per cent. of the lowest of any other province in Canada.

I might say that I have quite an extensive programme, which I could not read here, it would take up too much of the time, although I would like to mention a few of the projects we have in mind, not for the immediate future, but to be developed, and to develop that plan we announced in the post-war plan.

I realize during the coming year we must keep on in taking care of the roads such as we were doing last year, resurfacing roads broken up during the war and the building up of some other sections carrying very heavy traffic, and general maintenance. We have yet 3,000 miles of road with no type of hard surface. We have in the plans the development of a four-lane highway from Toronto to Windsor, a continuation of the present four-lane highway which was opened this fall from Highland Creek to Oshawa continuing to Port Hope and later on to the Quebec boundary. So that some day in the future there will be a highway of the type of the new road built from Windsor to the Quebec boundary. We are going to continue our highway from the Queen Elizabeth, or a continuation of the Queen Elizabeth to Fort Erie, the development of the cut-off, the Eglinton cut-off which is badly needed to relieve traffic going east out of the City of Toronto, and later on a road leading from the south end of the new road which we have built and which we have not yet opened, known as the Barrie Two-lane Highway, which will go in that section. We have not reached exactly the plan, but it will cut off towards Kitchener and Guelph, or in that section and serve many of the towns along the way.

There is another road which we hope in some near future will be a cut-off of the new road which will lead across to Highway 7 and bring it up to the higher standard of 7 from Sarnia to Perth at the present time, but will go on to the Quebec boundary in the future years; completion of the four-lane highway which I mentioned, to Fort Erie, which base is partly built. We have a long process of improving the Trans-Canada Highway project which is of great importance to Canada and to our sister provinces to the west and which will be of great service to the Province of Ontario. I mentioned that slightly before. This is a huge job as in the development of number 17, which leads from the Montreal boundary through to North Bay and from North Bay to Sudbury and from Sudbury to Sault Ste. Marie there are many miles of surface yet to be completed before it will be in the shape that we would like it.

Then there is a road which has been so much talked about, that is Highway 69. I am sorry the hon. member for Parry Sound (Mr. Armstrong) is not in his seat because I read in the paper a release he made that I promised to develop that road this year. There is a slight misunderstanding there. I hope we will be able to develop the road in the not too far distant future, but I do not know that it is one that will be done immediately to other greater needs. As I have always said, "first things first."

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Did my hon. friend indicate to the hon. member for Parry Sound (Mr. Armstrong) that road would be completed this year?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, I did not indicate any such thing.

MR. OLIVER: That is what I understood.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Then you misunderstood it.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Hansard has it.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: He was not talking about 69. There are mining roads which, during the past two years we have started construction, on the road leading from Matheson, known as the "Lightning River Road."

We hope in the very near future we will be able to complete it to the southern boundary of Quebec, when we will have an entry into that great province.

There are many roads which we have in mind. As you will note in our estimates, which will open up new farm lands in the north, coupled with the Great Lakes clearing land and drainage scheme, under the direction of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy).

I am not announcing a programme for today or tomorrow, but one which I suggest will meet the problems facing us in the future.

When I say our registrations have increased greatly during the past few years through the development of the roads in the Province of Ontario, I believe that registrations will go to over 1,000,000 before many years have passed. I have great faith that Ontario is going to develop. It could not help but develop, with such a government as the province has.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We are laying plans with the positive proof we will be in power for many years.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: And all the plans I have mentioned, I know will be developed during the time we are in power.

I know there are minor criticisms regarding the 3 cents gasoline tax, and there has been explanation of that. As I have said before, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) when he introduced the budget said that every cent of it has been paid for, and every cent of it has gone into roads. Every extra 3 cents, as I have shown you, has gone to the municipalities of the Province of Ontario, of one type and another.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Have you earmarked it?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I have explained how I figure it. I think my explanation was reasonable.

HON. MR. FROST: The former government ear-marked it, but did not spend it. We spend it on the roads, and give it to the municipalities.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I will give you a simple formula, and you can work it out yourself. There is nothing to be hidden. You have the detailed amount of money brought in from gasoline. Divide that by 11 cents and you will get what 1 cent produces; then multiply it by three, and you will get the amount of money which is paid to the municipalities, over and above the year's before.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Very good accounting.

MR. R. BEGIN (Russell): I do not think anybody thinks you used any of it yourself.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Thank you very kindly for that.

Getting back to what I was about to say, I think the registrations in the Province of Ontario of motor vehicles will soon surpass the 1,000,000 mark, and I have no doubt instead of getting the gasoline tax, the demand for roads and for development we will be getting from the tax already levied many millions of dollars more than we are at the present time.

I have no fear in making the statement or the prophecy, that the Province of Ontario within the near future will be spending, instead of $60,000,000, nearer $100,000,000 on the roads, and the people of this province will be saying: "We want more roads, because we have more people." That is due to good government, such as you have at the present time.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister a question? How does the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) square what he said a moment ago with the low estimate for gasoline tax in the budget presented by the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost)? He does not seem to have very much faith.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: As I said, I was looking into the future. This is a forward-looking government, with great hopes for what lies ahead.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question of my hon. friend (Mr. Doucett) in relation to highways. He has told about what they are going to spend in the future, but may I ask what roads are designated for building this year, or next year? Could he give us a picture of what is in the minds of the departmental officials, and the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) for the immediate future, for the year upon which we are now entering?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Have you any particular road in mind? We hope to finish the road we started in your own community.

MR. OLIVER: I had not that in mind at all.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: From Parkes to Durham; we have another, Shelburne toward Horning's Mills; we have Number 2 highway upon which we will spend thousands of dollars in repairs; we will be spending many dollars on the Queen Elizabeth; we have a road we hope to continue in Cochrane, from Matheson to Temigami, which we started last year. We may do preliminary work on a road from Matachewan to Swastika, the Lightning River road, and highway No. 11, going north.

There are many places where we could spend $100,000,000 this year, if we had it.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): How about highway No. 17, Sudbury to Sault Ste. Marie?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I am glad the hon. member Mr. Harvey mentioned that. Last year we built 17 miles, and I hope we will be able to do another stretch this year, and keep at it until it is completed.

There also is the Montreal River road, from the Sault up the river. There is a small job to be done there.

I could name many of them, if I stopped to think. We have a very large maintenance programme this year, as well.

MR. R. BEGIN (Russell): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) if he intends to do anything with highway No. 17 from Ottawa to Montreal, where the government in 1933 spent a lot of money in widening, building culverts, and so forth? Is there anything intended this year, to be done on that highway.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: When was that done?

MR. BEGIN: In 1933.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: This government has spent on highway No. 17, known as the Montreal road, considerable money every year since it has been in power. When I get the engineers together, I promise to take you around your own riding, so you can see what is going on.

MR. BEGIN: I do know now, but there has been nothing done since this government has been in power.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Surely, you have to accept my statement. In fact, if you want to check with the construction company, they will have the contracts of the work they completed last year.

MR. BEGIN: That was given before you were here.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: If you know better, all right, but I say it was not.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, I was wondering why the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) did not acknowledge in his usual graceful manner the orchids he has received from this side of the house. He received enough compliments this session, to double his majority at the forthcoming election.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I said there were many complimentary remarks made. Of course, it could not be otherwise, taking into consideration the efficiency with which the programme has been carried on, during the last few years.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) has spoken at some length, and I found his statements very interesting. I do not want to keep him on his feet very much longer.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Oh, do not worry about that.

MR. SALSBERG: I have not much experience in highway construction, and I was wondering whether the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) would mind touching on a matter which I am sure is being thought and spoken of by people, outside the house.

After all, the department, as the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) has correctly stated, is the largest spending department in the government. It spends tens of millions of dollars during the year.

In the past, there used to be a lot of tongue-wagging about highway construction. Almost everybody who was anybody went around talking about highway construction. A certain gentleman became a multimillionaire, it was said, in no time at all, from building roads for the province. He had a palatial home, raised racing horses, and entertained lavishly, and, of course, people talked, "How come he was able to make so much money in so short a time building roads for the government?"

I think it would be quite appropriate for the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) to tell the house who the main contractors are at the present time. Are there any large contractors, large concerns, which do the bulk of the contract work? Is the work pretty well divided up? Is the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) satisfied the contracts are let in a manner which will give the taxpayers a maximum dollar's worth for every dollar spent? Is the system ever checked and audited, and so on, to the full satisfaction of the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett)?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: What check and what audit do you mean?

MR. SALSBERG: As far as I am concerned, I do not know anything about it.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to know if the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) is satisfied that when a contract is let, the citizens and taxpayers and the department are getting a dollar's worth of road for every dollar paid. I am sure he will say "Yes," or he would not let the contracts.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Then why are you trying to ask a question?

MR. SALSBERG: It seems to me, I think, if the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) does not mind, I would like to hear a few words from the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) as to how this is being handled.

I raise that question because the public here and there, the laboring people of the province, at the moment are rather alarmed about road construction, the costs of road construction, and so on, and so on. Well, you know what I mean.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: I suggest, in view of the large amount which will be spent on highways this year, the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) should give some explanation of how it is spent, and so on, and so on.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Are you referring to the method by which we let contracts?

MR. SALSBERG: No, the suggestion is made here that the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) should tell us whether there are at the present time large single contractors getting the bulk of the work, as used to be the case in the past. If so, who are they, and so on?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I might say, in reply to the hon. member for St.

Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) the contracts would not be let unless I was perfectly satisfied. Secondly, we have a class of employees in the Department of Highways, civil servants, second to none in America. We have as fine a class of engineers as you will find anywhere. As far as naming the contractors, we have 270 contractors who are working with the Province of Ontario, and of course, as you know, if you read the public accounts, they are listed there, and the amount of money they are paid, is shown, and so forth.

I remember noticing a question asked on the order paper as to whether contracts were let in the Province of Ontario without tender. That question was asked by an hon. member of the opposition. The answer was "Nil," and I hope that always will be the answer, as long as I am Minister of Highways.

MR. SALSBERG: It was not always the case, before you came into power.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: You had better read some of the records. No, it was not always the case. Every contract which is let, regardless of who the contractor is, is subject to inspection. We have inspectors on the job, who do everything in the power of the department to see that every dollar is spent as judiciously as it possibly can be. We are trying to get the very best we can for the people's money.

MR. SALSBERG: Who is the largest single contractor? Can you say that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I do not know whom you would term the "largest single contractor," because we have probably ten or fifteen contractors, in my estimation, who do approximately the same amount of work. I could give you the figures in my office, but now I would make an estimate that probably half a dozen, or perhaps even a dozen, contractors might have a million dollars worth of work apiece, over the years, on all types of jobs.

Then there would be others who would have smaller amounts. It does not mean the largest contractor in Ontario would not be doing the smallest business at the moment. That might be so. The lowest bidder of all gets the job.

MR. MACLEOD: Just one question, Mr. Chairman, with reference to what the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) said. I understood the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) to say it was not always the practise to let contracts without tender. When you made that statement, did you have in mind the practises of the former Ferguson and Henry governments?

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Oh, now; that is too far back.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I had in mind the practises of former governments, not the Henry, nor the Ferguson government in particular, but former governments.

MR. MACLEOD: Including them?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I never sat either in the Henry government or the Ferguson government, but I sat in opposition to the previous government, and I remember asking on the order paper one day for a return of all contracts in the Province of Ontario let without tenders, and it was longer than my two arms.

MR. SALSBERG: That is pretty long.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, in referring to the estimates of the Department of Highways, I am pleased to see the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) in his place, because both of these departments are very, very closely tied together, when you have regard to northern Ontario.

Northern Ontario is our great playground, with fishing, hunting and summer resort areas, and unless roads are constructed, the Department of Travel and Publicity will be hampered. I know last year we have quite a large number of tourists coming into the north country, and because of the roads

I believe a number were somewhat hampered.

Early in the year, Highway No. 11, unfortunately, broke up in several places. The condition of the road was bad, but I do not believe it was as bad as reported in some of the daily papers along the Great Lakes, such as Fort William and the Sault, and down in Sudbury and North Bay. These papers have, for some unknown reason, given a very, very bad impression of No. 11 highway with the result that many tourists turned back at North Bay, many of them preferring not to go any further than perhaps Temigami.

I think that is the type of publicity which should be curbed. The papers making it were very short-sighted.

HON. G. A. WELSH (Minister of Travel and Publicity): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) a question. I trust the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) is not implying the publicity originated in my department?

MR. GRUMMETT: Oh no. I am criticizing the daily press for having made these statements.

The condition of Highway No. 11 did not warrant editorials and other articles appearing in some of those papers. I am pointing out that those papers were short-sighted in their policy. They undoubtedly did keep a large number of tourists in their own towns last year, but the net result will be a lot of those tourists will not return as far as Sudbury, North Bay and so forth this year. They were disgusted with the opportunity they had to visit the north.

Now, Mr. Minister, I am again urging that the Parry Sound-Sudbury-Timmins road be constructed. I know you have stated before this is a big project. It is, but over a short number of years it will pay big dividends. The number of tourists flocking into that area would provide a considerable portion of the cost of the road. There are great hunting, fishing and camping areas which would be opened up as well as other additional mining lands and farming lands.

Referring to the assistance given to municipalities as stated by the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), I agree with him in his policy. It has been the policy of the Government to encourage the organization of municipalities in northern Ontario, and I believe that to be the proper policy. Too long the whole north was left without any municipal organization. Some governments built roads and then never looked at them again for years. They became merely wagon trails throughout the whole north, and the ditches were filled in, grown up with tag alders and willows, and any money spent on them was lost.

Roads constructed in an unorganized municipality and handed over to the municipality for supervision and maintenance is the only way you can handle the up-building of northern Ontario. Northern Ontario for a great number of years has not received its sufficient share of road building. I know if some of the residents of Timmins, Kirkland Lake, Sudbury, Haileybury and so forth had been here and heard the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) mention the construction of four-lane highways, they would have been wondering why we were not being provided with a few more one-lane highways in northern Ontario. The construction of the Lightning River Road is a necessary step. I commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) for that road. It was a necessary construction, and when completed will open up a great area of country. I urge him to continue the construction of the Matachewan and Swastika highway. That is a stretch of road about 25 or 26 miles long, and I believe 8 or 10 miles were constructed last year. This would mean connecting up two areas of northern Ontario which would allow people to travel, say, from New Liskeard to Matachewan, and then out to Swastika instead of going back maybe 80 or more miles to get around to the same point—25 miles across would save 80 or more miles of a trip, and it is a very useful road.

In northern Ontario, our whole development depends on roads. We have the necessary attractions to offer in the way of hunting, fishing, camping and so forth, and if you will construct the roads, I know the north will pay big dividends. The hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) was referring to the north as a great mining area. We do not hope to remain merely a mining community, we have mining and lumbering and with proper development our tourist trade will greatly exceed all of the others.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks under this heading.

First, I would like, on behalf of the citizens of Fort William and the district to express our thanks to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) for the grants we received last year. The grants both in the outlying municipalities and in the unorganized sections were increased and, of course, we received a mill under this new gas tax arrangement towards paving within the city limits.

There are one or two things, however, I would like to bring to the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett). I know he is familiar with our part of the country and for that reason I will make my remarks very brief.

We have a number of people who reside at the lake-head who would like to be able to drive to Winnipeg with some degree of comfort. While there is a road, the road is, for the most part, in very bad shape. I am just going to relate for the benefit of the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) one case I have in mind: I attended the Mayors' convention last year, and while there I talked to a number of mayors who had driven up from eastern Canada. One of them was the mayor of Timmins. He left home with a new car and new tires, and when he got to Winnipeg, two of his tires were ruined. Now, I know that is a long way—

HON. MR. DOUCETT: He was driving too fast altogether. That is mayors for you, they do not look out for things.

MR. ANDERSON: To satisfy myself, although I have lived at the head of the lakes a good many years, I drove for the first time a little later up to the boundary and I found a lot of money had been spent on the road; many miles of it had been oiled. The oil, as you know, as long as it lasts, makes a pretty fair road, but when these pot-holes develop and they become a little deeper with more traffic, they constitute a very dangerous road. For that reason I sincerely hope the people will not have to wait too long to have a road they can drive on.

Many of the people who live at the lake-head when they want to go to the Rainy River district or Winnipeg, drive through the United States, and in that way the province loses whatever they might have gained in the way of gas tax, and instead of the people having the pleasure of driving through our own country, they are forced to drive through Uncle Sam's country.

Another thing I would like to mention to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), Mr. Chairman, is the need for the construction of the road from where it now ends at the east end of Shabandowan Lake to the town of Fort Frances. About 50 years ago, settlers from eastern Canada, many of them from Bruce County, by the way, settled in the Rainy River District, the Rainy River Valley; that is a long time ago, yet the people in that district today, if they want to drive to the head of the lakes, must either drive through the United States quite a lengthy detour, or drive almost to Kenora to get onto a very poor road that will bring them into Fort William. I realize it would be costly to complete the road to Fort Frances, but I do believe the number of people who live there, and the fact that time and time again these people have expressed their desire for the completion of the road, warrants my urging the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett)—while I realize the amount spent last year, if I got his figures right, was in excess of $61,000,000—just as soon as is humanly possible to have completed the road from Shabandowan Lake, where it now ends, to Fort Frances, and the road from the head of the lakes to the Manitoba boundary also; most of it is not hard surfaced at the present time. There are pieces that are.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I would like to reply to the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) that I realize the condition of the road in question. I was over it a couple of times last year, and I think those who know the length of it realize the huge job it is.

MR. ANDERSON: That is right.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We have been able within the last year to put a base on some 80 miles of it, and this year we hope to get hard surface on some portions of it, and bring other sections of it up to a high standard.

We also realize the road from Kenora to Fort Frances needs some improving. It was in the cards this year that the Pigeon River Road leading from your town to the American boundary would have repairs made to it. All those things it is impossible to do in one year, but we are on the way.

AN HON. MEMBER: Out.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I think you will agree a decided improvement will be made. As for Cochrane; last year I think we spent more money in that constituency than in any other in the Province of Ontario. The programme will take years to complete, but we are quite mindful of the needs of the different sections.

MR. GRUMMETT: The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) has stated last year more money was spent in my riding than in any other. I believe the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) will admit my riding has been more neglected in the past than any other riding.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Chairman, I would not say that. I resent that statement. I think my riding can claim that.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Are you jealous?

MR. HARVEY: It seemed to me, Mr. Chairman, most everybody referred to places situated on highways. All the concern seems to be about highways. Of course we live on a highway in Sault Ste. Marie, but in the northern part of my riding there are fairly large communities such at Hornepayne with, I think, a population of about 1,200; White River, with a population of approximately 800; Walla, on the Michipicoten branch, with a population of about 900, I think it is; and Michipicoten Harbour itself, Sinigala and Hawk Junction, all fairly large communities and all in the northern part of my riding, where people have never seen a highway. They cannot go out on a highway, the only way they can get out is by railroad.

At one time there were roads built there to link up with the Trans-Canada Highway. They are becoming quite concerned about the situation up there. They are afraid they are going to be isolated, and remain isolated, unless something is done for them.

It has been suggested that Hornepayne could be connected with Hearst, and White River with Hornepayne. I understand in 1934-35 there was a considerable number of miles of road constructed there but never coupled up.

It is a condition I know cannot be remedied in a year, or perhaps two years, but these people are worrying about what is going to come. They are interested in any Government which is going to have a long-term programme so that a certain number of miles will be done perhaps in 1950-1951-1952, in order that we will know what the future holds for these people.

I suggest, Mr. Minister, the people in those areas would be quite pleased to have some statement about the future of highways in that part of the country.

Votes 85 to 88 inclusive approved.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Are we going to proceed with these estimates? It is 6 o'clock now.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): We will rise now and resume at 8 o'clock.

MR. OLIVER: My friend is going to continue calling them?

HON. MR. DREW: I understand there are only three more votes. I think we should finish this department.

On vote 89:

MR. V. MARTIN (Nipissing): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) a question? Could the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) tell me if there is anything in the estimates with reference to the bridge on the Sturgeon River at Sturgeon Falls? I understand a site has been chosen for the bridge. Is it the intention of the department to proceed with it this year?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Of course it will not be necessary to have an amount in the estimates. It would be in the overall. We could not promise any bridge there this year due to the steel situation, whether we wished to or not.

Votes 89 to 91 inclusive approved.

At 6 o'clock the House took recess.

8 O'CLOCK P.M.

After recess:

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Department of Labour.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Chairman, in rising to present the estimates for the Department of Labour, I wish to draw to the attention of hon. members several matters which are of considerable importance in connection with the activities of the department.

As I have indicated on previous occasions, the Department of Labour is a service department, and as such its revenues do not bulk large in the budget. It is interesting to note, however, our capital and our ordinary revenues have expanded. I should point out there is but one source from which capital revenue is derived, and that is the sale of Vacation with Pay stamps. It was estimated during the fiscal year 1947-48 we would take in $1,500,000, whereas in point of fact we have actually derived revenue of approximately $3,150,000. The great increase in such revenue has resulted from increasing activities in the construction industry and from changes made in the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act whereby employees working less than a full year have been included under the Act.

For the fiscal year 1948-49, it is estimated capital revenue will rise to $4,000,000. Of course there is a counteracting factor there; this is not actually revenue, because it is all paid out by the department for the purpose of the stamps. In addition, it costs us a considerable amount of money to operate this Vacations with Pay Act.

I would like to draw to the attention of the House the operation of this Act. It requires the purchase of stamps which are sold through provincial banks from our own department, and books are sold to employers who, in the majority of cases, pay for the books themselves at a cost of 25 cents each. These are given to the employees and the employer purchases the stamps and puts the required amount according to the earnings of the employee in this stamp book. Then, when the pay period comes due as of the 1st of June these books can be cashed. We have made arrangements to cash them in the banks; anywhere in the province any bank will cash these books.

In thinking of the administering of the Act, I thought that would probably be the end of it, but it is not. These books then are returned from the banks to the Department of Labour, and the requirements of the audit department of the Provincial Government require that we in the department audit each and every one of these books, and when you have some 150,000 of them to audit, it makes quite a task, and necessitates employment which we figure this year for the summer months will require 25 young students in the department auditing these books.

A further requirement from the audit department was in order to be absolutely sure these books did not fall into other hands after they had been cashed, that we perforate each and every stamp with a machine which we have installed and which has added considerably to the cost of operating this Vacations with Pay Act, but is a great service, I think, to the workers in the province.

Our ordinary revenues also show a considerable increase. The latest figure indicates the actual amount will be in excess of $217,000 derived from boiler inspection, factory inspection and through the board of operating engineers. It is from the work of these branches that the ordinary revenues of the department are largely derived.

It is a reasonable inference, I think, to draw that the programme of industrial expansion going on in this province will result in more jobs, more security, more industrial workers. Our expanding revenues in the Department of Labour tell a tale of the vitally important role which the Province of Ontario must play in the development of Canada. I say with pride this Government has kept pace with the expanding needs of the country and has given the type of government which is necessary to ensure that this province and this country will come to the realization of its full and important development. It is axiomatic that as we in the Province of Ontario expand our resources and strengthen our economy, we are also building and strengthening the position and the prospective prosperity for the whole country.

In dealing with the revenues I have indicated they are increasing. I must report our estimate on expenditures on both capital and ordinary account have also increased. The expenditures on capital account of course are offset by the capital revenue which I mentioned a few minutes ago.

I think hon. members of this House will recognize the amount by which the estimates of the Department of Labour have increased over the past year are, in a large measure, due to the fact the commitments of the department to give good service in all of its activities have necessitated increases in staff. In addition, provision has been made for the annual adjustment in salaries for the present staff of the department. The rise in cost of materials and equipment is also a factor in causing an increase in our estimates.

I am happy to be able to report, with the exception of one or two major industries, the past 12 months have been comparatively peaceful in the field of industrial relations. The good, sensible management and labour have been evidenced by the great deal of sound collective bargaining which has gone on during the past year.

I would not have you infer from this statement the conciliation service of the Department of Labour has been inactive. A great deal of important work has been going on. The assistance of the conciliation officers of the Crown have been freely given wherever they were sought by management and labour. I pointed out on another occasion and made some comments about the staff of the conciliation officers. I think we have a staff of men probably the most experienced in that field of endeavour in this country. They have done an excellent job. I also pointed out at that time over 80 per cent. of cases involving disputes between management and labour have been adjusted and settled by the use of our conciliation services. During the past year, we found it necessary to redistribute the district of the Factory and Plants Inspection Branch of western Ontario and southwestern Ontario to provide for more frequent coverage of this highly industrialized area of the province.

A great many new industries have located throughout this province, and it has become necessary to increase the service which we must render to them. It is interesting to note during the past fiscal year plans to a total of $59,000,000 have been examined by the department, and I think approximately 80 per cent. of this work is under way. This, too, represents a good omen for our industrial prosperity and for the possibility of employment.

I am pleased to announce a special class for motor vehicle repair apprentices will be started during the fiscal year 1948-49. It is hoped up to 500 young lads will benefit from these special classes. I am sure hon. members of this House will share my pleasure in the knowledge that new opportunities and advancement in training are opening up for these young people. All in all, approximately 3,000 young people are under contract of apprenticeship in Ontario in all designated trades at the present time, and it is expected 1,100 will take special classes during the fiscal year.

Votes 93 to 100 inclusive approved.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on 101, what would the Labour Relations Board do in a case such as the shipping companies, two of whom are now openly violating all orders of the Federal Labour Board and are openly challenging the laws and the regulations, the recommendations and findings of the constituted authoritative boards? What, in a case like that, would the Department of Labour of the province do?

HON. MR. DALEY: Provincially?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes.

HON. MR. DALEY: Well, it has always been considered railways and shipping—that is, steamships—do come under the Federal authority. That has always been accepted.

MR. SALSBERG: I just want to follow that up, Mr. Chairman. Could not the department in some way make publicly known its position in a dispute of this sort, as it most naturally would in cases where the disregard for law and regulations came from the side of labour?

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman, I think the action we have taken in this House recently in passing the Labour Relations Act will bring the Federal Government and the Provincial Government into closer co-operation, and conditions such as this will be more readily handled than at the present time. As far as I am aware now, it is a Federal matter.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, on the point raised by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg); I recall a number of years ago—I think it was in 1943—there was a dispute affecting the steel industry in Canada, and it had its effect, as well, on two of the large steel plants in the Province of Ontario. The dispute in question, in a war situation, naturally came under the Federal jurisdiction, but I recall definitely the then hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Conant) offering the mediation and conciliatory services of the Department of Labour of the Province of Ontario to the Dominion Department of Labour in order to settle the dispute, so that necessary war production could continue.

If the dispute between the shipping companies and the union in question should reach a point where a strike might ensue, certainly the effects of such strike would be felt in the Province of Ontario. I know the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) would be concerned about that and would be very anxious to see that a settlement was reached, within the laws of the country. I think that is what the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) had in mind. If the Department of Labour in the Province of Ontario, under these circumstances, were to let it be known they looked with alarm on the possibility of a strike in the shipping industry, and were prepared to offer their good offices to avert such a strike, I feel that might be a contribution to avoiding a collision between the union and the shipping companies. At least, he should make quite certain the labour laws of the Province of Ontario are going to be upheld, and that management, as well as labour, is going to be held strictly accountable, as far as these laws are concerned.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman, I have expressed before that co-operation between the Federal Department of Labour and the Provincial Department has been excellent, and was there any reason to think that the Federal Government would require our services, certainly we would be most happy to co-operate with them.

Item 102 approved.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee do now rise and report certain resolutions.

Motion approved.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply begs leave to report certain resolutions, asks leave to sit again, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion approved.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 46th Order.

DEBATE ON THE BUDGET

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 46th Order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair and that the House resolve itself into the Committee of Supply. Mr. Frost.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, these are not ideal circumstances under which to resume the debate on the budget. I hope, however, before I complete my remarks we will all be feeling more relieved than we do at this moment.

I want, as is customary, to extend my congratulations to a number of hon. members who have preceded me in this debate. I have in mind the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), who delivered an excellent analysis of the budget, and the hon. member for Elgin (Mr. Thomas), who spoke in this debate. I feel, like other hon. members, that his was a great contribution, and that he gave the House an insight into agricultural problems, in a manner—

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Get going, Joe. (Mr. Salsberg.) You are not well? What is the matter with you?

MR. SALSBERG: —better than we have had of late. His address was particularly outstanding owing to the fact that he did not attempt to imitate that which is now in vogue, unfortunately, but dealt with problems as he saw them, without, as I thought, attempting to please anybody, and his speech constitutes a high-water mark in the debates of this house, in this and other sessions.

I might say, Mr. Speaker, that the list of participants in the debate seems to be extending. I was to have been the last speaker in this debate, except the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew). That was the way the list was made up last week. Since then, there has been a continuous addition of names, and I believe that is a sure sign of an election very early this summer, or this spring. In fact, I told one hon. member yesterday, when I saw the list growing, "You had better get your spring sowing done, because an election will be on you before you are fully finished; at any rate, you will have to be campaigning before the spring sowing is finished."

Having in mind the desire of the hon. members who are farmers to go back, I will not extend this session by one minute longer than I believe absolutely necessary, although I might say to some hon. members who are a bit impatient, with the 2 in our group, and with all due regard to modesty, that we have quite a value. I think we have a value to the people of this province. I think our presence here enhances their getting certain legislation which they need.

I also think we have value in the role which the official opposition plays in this House, and, in all modesty, I think we make some contribution to the Opposition to the Government.

And, Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to say I am afraid we also have a value to the Conservative Party in a most indirect, and unlooked-for fashion.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: That is good.

MR. SALSBERG: I was advised that certain people who are busy on Bay Street and King Street collecting for the Tory election fund held out the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and the member for St. Andrew as a bait, to make it known a lot of money will be necessary, because these 2 members will have to be defeated.

I want to say to the hon. members who support the Government when you get a bit impatient with us, think of the $5,000, $10,000, $15,000, or $20,000 you will want for the conduct of the campaign, and for which you will come to the party coffers for it, and we may have unwittingly and unwillingly and indirectly contributed to some of the funds, you will be getting.

MR. GORDON CHAPLIN (Waterloo South): It will not come from Russia, anyway.

MR. SALSBERG: I also think at times with conditions prevailing in the world today, the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) could almost qualify for his Government being amongst the governments which are entitled to the E.R.P., because we are here. If the worst comes to the worst, this Government could go to the United States, and say, "We have a couple of Communists here, and are entitled to the E.R.P."—European Relief Programme—and you might get it far sooner than you think.

Be that as it may, we are here and we try to make our contributions to the best of our ability in the interest of the people of the province, as we see it.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) at one time advised all hon. members to get up before the orders of the day, as often as they felt necessary, to make any refutation about mis-statements which appeared in any paper. I do not think I have ever done that, and I do not think the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) has. Simply because if we were to follow the advice of the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) we would have to get up every day to refute mis-statements, one after another, and misrepresentations, one after another. But, because of our respect for the House, and our appreciation of the time that is to be used for more constructive efforts, we have fore-gone that task.

However, on an occasion like this it might be permissible to refer to at least one or two items out of the sea of lies and misrepresentations which appear about us.

For instance, a little while back, an hon. member of this House spoke glowingly of a series of articles appearing in a Windsor paper. These articles were reprinted in a series of daily papers throughout the country, including the Evening Telegram of Toronto. My attention was drawn to one or two of those articles, and in one instance, the author of those articles makes reference to myself. He claims I attended a conference in Montreal, in January, at which certain decisions were arrived at, and he says I did that "With a tone of authority." However, unfortunately for him, I was in Poland in January, so I could not possibly have attended a conference in Montreal of which he speaks, when I was thousands of miles away. If the rest of the material contained in this series is as dependable and truthful as the references to myself, then, of course, the series is nothing but a concoction of untruths and half-truths, and deliberate falsehoods.

One hon. member of the House yesterday pulled out a piece of paper and said, "Here is an L.P.P. leaflet," which he was about to read. The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) immediately stated "That is a forgery," and another hon. member interjected saying, "Why did you not disown it when it was received?"

I want on this occasion to say that every hon. member to my knowledge, received one of these in the mail. My hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) and I received 100 each, not just 1. Mine came in a package of this sort—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: For distribution.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) seems to know all about where it comes from, and I would not be surprised. I wish he would put his forces to work to trace the typewriter where this paper was typed. We received 100 each. They are still in our room, and I want to say to this House, when I saw the bundle I told the hon. Leader of our party (Mr. MacLeod), "I think we should go into the House and expose this for what it actually is, a forgery." It was not issued by the Labour-Progressive Party.

The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) said I have too much respect for the House to say that he was wrong. I am sorry he did not do as I suggested that morning. This is a forgery, it is a falsehood, it is a concoction by a dishonest person who will concoct anything for money to earn a livelihood and to get money to keep themselves continuously drunk as the man who is responsible for this stuff, by peddling poisonous lies of this sort. I think I know where it comes from; the man was soaked in liquor for years and lost a permanent national position because of a perpetual state of drunkenness. It is all forgery.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): Why not give us his name and expose him?

MR. SALSBERG: To the hon. members of this House I want to say there is room for differences of opinion, sharp differences, but certainly hon. members elected to a responsible body as this should not fall for concoctions of this sort. It has become the fashion to offer anything to the public in the belief that the public will accept anything, and whip up a wave of indignation.

MR. W. E. DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Might I ask the hon. member a question? Would you kindly give us the man's name about whom you are talking?

MR. SALSBERG: In my opinion, the man that is responsible for this, and that I referred to, is Mr. Gladstone Murray; that is my opinion.

Now, you remember what a stir was caused in January about the "M" plan that was thrown in the face of the world as a holy gospel. Today everyone admits it was a forgery. That is not the first time forgeries were passed. The history of the British Labour Movement knows of the infamous "Zinoviev letter" which the Conservative Party passed out to the labour people on the eve of the election in the twenties and was later marked as a forgery.

I have in my hand and I use it as an example of how things go—I have the front page of the Montreal Herald for Thursday, April 8. The big headlines are; "Quebec seizes Red Guns", and the story begins with the following words:

"Premier Maurice Duplessis was reliably reported here today to be preparing a lengthy statement concerning the seizure of 500 sub-machine guns in a mining centre in Quebec's bleak north."

Now, I hold in my hand the front page of the same paper, the Montreal Herald, for Friday, April 9. This is the sub-heading:

"Report today on Red Guns."

Again, a cable from Quebec City the beginning of which reads as follows:

"Premier Maurice Duplessis will make an extensive statement on Communist activities in the Province of Quebec some time today. The Premier, it is expected, will be the first to say anything officially concerning the report on the seizure by Provincial Police, of hundreds of sub-machine guns in the mining centres of northern Quebec."

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Are these machine guns in our project?

MR. SALSBERG: You do not have to jump to the defence of your colleague, the hon. Premier of Quebec

(Mr. Duplessis). You would naturally defend him and I noticed your readiness to defend your colleague.

MR. BLACKWELL: We just want to know what it has to do with the budget of Ontario.

MR. SALSBERG: I hold in my hand now the second page of the same paper, the Montreal Herald. This time it is dated Saturday, April 10, 1 day after, and on the inside page the heading reads:

"Probe sees guns tale political putsch."

And then the sub-heading reads: "Arsenal tale scored. National union statement stalled."

"Reports that Provincial Police had seized 500 sub-machine guns in a Quebec mining centre were discounted as a political balloon today—with a Herald probe placing the blame for the buildup by silence on political manoeuvring."

These are things that become possible in this day. Now, what it leads to, of course, is rather a sad state of affairs. It leads to the experience we have had in Windsor, about which the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has, to my sorrow, not said a word—although the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) is well informed—he has not risen in this House on a question of law and order, and he said nothing about Windsor. That is what these statements and that material lead to. It also leads to a lot of fantastic things. For instance, the cry of "Communism" is supposed to explain everything, so I will read to you a couple of lines from the Northern Miner, and it is as follows:

"Gold is the symbol, the sustainer," and I repeat,

"the sustainer and the saviour of the freedom of the person, of freedom of the press and of the dignity of the individual. Gold, truly is the essence of democracy, a disbeliever in gold is a believer in Communism."

That is how far things are going. An hon. Minister of the Federal Government had the following to say on March 6, the Hon. Brook Claxton said the following:

"Advocating lower taxes, higher exemptions, more expenditures at the same time as increased old age pensions and a complete system of health insurance plays the Communist game because it creates appetites that cannot be met."

In other words, if you demand better old age pensions, that is playing the Communist game. It has reached such a stage where in the House of Commons yesterday an hon. member put on record a list of names as so-called "Communist-front dupes," and that list contains the Premier of Saskatchewan; Mr. George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail; Mr. McConnell, publisher of the Montreal Daily Star; George V. Ferguson, editor of the Montreal Star; Mr. Macdonnell, Progressive Conservative member for Muskoka, Ontario; and financial critic of the Conservative opposition in the House; Mr. Alistair Stewart, C.C.F. member; Mr. Sandwell, editor of the Toronto Saturday Night; Mr. Atkinson, publisher of the Toronto Daily Star; Mr. Kent Cooke, publisher of the New Liberty Magazine; Sir Ernest MacMillan; Mr. Dalglish, editor-in-chief of the Toronto Globe and Mail; Mayor Sam Lawrence of Hamilton. I am sorry, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) is not in the list. I am sorry the hon. Attorney-General's (Mr. Blackwell's) name is not usually found in lists of that sort; I wish it were. I mention that to show you how far things do go, and it bereaches all fantastic stages such as follows:

"King aping Socialists, imitating dictators, Premier Drew charges."

Premier Drew charges Mackenzie King with aping Socialists and imitating dictators. That is a heading in the Globe and Mail. And then, listen to this—before I give you this, Mr. Duplessis, as everyone knows, charges the Liberals in Quebec with helping Communism and the Liberal Party of Quebec charges Duplessis with helping Communism. As I read to you a moment ago, the hon. Premier of this province charges Mackenzie King with aping dictators, and lo and behold, last night I read the following:

"Women see Drew Aiding Communism."

How does that sound to the hon. Conservative members, Drew is aiding Communism?

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Where did you read that? What women?

MR. SALSBERG: This is, I believe, from the Toronto Star.

HON. L. E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): What women?

MR. SALSBERG: You wait, I am going to quote what a fine lady, who is one of the leaders of the Liberal women of Ontario, had to say.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: A Liberal woman.

MR. SALSBERG: I quote:

"By failing to co-operate with the Federal Government, the Provincial Government is doing everything possible to bring about Communism."

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): What woman said that?

MR. SPEAKER: Might I respectfully ask the hon. members not to interrupt the hon. member who has the floor.

MR. SALSBERG: In reply to the clamour from the Tory side, I understand these words are attributed to Mrs. Lorne Lee. I recall to your attention again the fact that the Drew Government is charged with doing everything, not just a little thing, but everything, to help Communism. That is how you are getting yourself involved until we reach a stage where we want to appeal to all of you, please stop helping us, just stop helping us. We will manage somehow without you.

You must realize from the instances that I brought to your attention, that the method used now is leading you into all sorts of unrealistic, fantastic realms. In your charges against people, in your treatment of issues, in your hurling of epitaphs, in your readiness to explain every problem by shouting Communism, everyone calls everyone a builder of Communism. Let us be realistic, let us discuss issues and problems as they should be discussed. I want to say to you hon. members of this House beware of forgeries, beware of false statements. They will be spread about in increasing numbers and you will do a service to your electorates if you advise them to keep their heads on their shoulders and keep their feet on solid ground and not become suckers to all the tripe that is thrown out by such a man as I mentioned before and others who will be peddling fake documents.

Now, some matters that were discussed in the budget. There was a question of immigration that a number of the hon. members spoke about. I want to say that there is general agreement in the country, I think, that Canada needs more immigrants, that this country is big and rich and underpopulated and that more people are required, and I agree with them. I disagree with all so-called theories that hard times are due to the influx of new people. We have been told that hard times are due to the influx of new people. It is just not true. This country passed through the worst crisis when its gates were locked tightest in its history. These are facts. The people that will come in will make contributions—in labour and in consumption—will not be responsible for a crisis.

I want to say further that the desire of this Government to bring in immigrants from the British Isles is a very natural desire and very understandable and one with which I find no fault whatsoever, just as I do not find any fault with the government of the Province of Quebec with its desire to bring in people that they specially desire. Just as I see no cause for alarm or dissatisfaction or concern when the population of Quebec increases and rises. When I see those figures I am happy. When I see new people come into this province I am happy at that too. There is room for both great races and for the smaller ones in this country without fearing competition or being crowded out. What is bad about any immigration scheme is the way it is handled and also the politics that are involved. For instance, I see nothing wrong with the air scheme. In observing the operation of the Provincial Government air immigration scheme in Britain I found it to be working excellently, efficiently—far more efficiently than the system I found in operation by the Federal Government elsewhere here. If there was anything wrong with it, it was that it was still too high a price to ask the immigrants to pay and I suggested to the Government in a letter from Europe that we think of chartering a ship or two to bring people over at the lowest possible price, that would enable them to have a few extra dollars left when they reach here. The storm between Mr. Howe and the Premier (Mr. Drew) is a political storm that had no justification and has no meaning except for political purposes as between Queen's Park and Ottawa. Ottawa is able to take all the air immigrants through Trans-Canada Airlines. Well, that is fine, and all prospective immigrants who want to get here by air will have accommodation, and so that is fine. What are we fighting about except in the hope of gaining political advantage on the immigration issue, in that manner.

However, so far as the provincial immigration scheme is concerned there are a few serious questions that have arisen since I returned and those were rumours and charges made that the air service is used to bring out special types of workers for certain firms.

HON. D. H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Mr. Speaker, will you give the authority for that statement?

MR. SALSBERG: I have, as a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, put it on the question paper.

HON. MR. PORTER: Well, the answer to that question is, No.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, I am very glad to hear it. I put a question on the paper.

HON. MR. FROST: Cross it off, Joe.

MR. SALSBERG: Just one moment. I have not used that issue until now and this is the time to mention it and I am very happy to hear your denial. I heard rumours from labour groups, particularly the printers around the labour temple. There were those rumours.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Who did that? Mr. Gladstone Murray?

MR. SALSBERG: The rumours I refer to were made by sincere and honest people, I am quite certain, who are not noted for spreading rumours.

HON. MR. FROST: But mistaken nevertheless.

MR. SALSBERG: A little while ago the head of a shipping company boasted he was going to arrange to bring sailors to break a strike.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: By the Ontario Air Scheme?

MR. SALSBERG: That is what he said.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is going to make charges of this kind and quote anonymous heads of companies I want him to quote his authority, tell us who it was and what he said, and it will be dealt with so far as I am concerned.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not making charges. I am stating what is in the newspapers, that Captain Meisner is alleged to have stated—

HON. MR. PORTER: Well, name the newspaper, show us the quotation, give us the date of the quotation or keep quiet.

MR. SPEAKER: I say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has the floor and if he does not care to answer your question, that is his privilege.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has been making certain charges. He has been quoting certain people who are veiled in anonymity and I have a perfect right to insist that the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) give authority instead of spreading the absurd, unfair rumours he gets out of some—

MR. SPEAKER: Just a second. May I say, if that is the attitude of the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter), I rule that he is out of order.

MR. SALSBERG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, but I repeat that I did not make charges. I did repeat what was stated in a newspaper, not for the purpose of laying charges and I stated that it was Captain Meisner. If he wants the newspaper I will be glad to check it, find it and bring it, but Captain Meisner did say that. What I want to say—

HON. MR. FROST: Well, it is completely unfounded.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, if it is unfounded I am very glad to hear that. I am not going to make an issue out of immigration. I mentioned these instances to illustrate what we must guard against in any immigration scheme and I want to continue by saying what is basically wrong with the federal scheme is that it is not a government responsibility, but that they have permitted industrialists and their agents to go to Europe and take immigrants for an industry, a plant, with the result that certain areas are becoming auction blocks for representatives of foundries and industries from Canada, who go around and pick people almost by the muscles they have, the width of his chest and so on. I am opposed to any such method. I repeat, this is federal.

I was sitting in a hotel in Hanover with representatives of firms which were picking help and I was certainly not proud of the method that the Federal Government allowed to be used. I am sorry to say that Ontario Hydro had a delegation there too going around and picking help for Hydro. I think that is wrong. I think the Federal Government should be responsible. They should permit into the country those that should come in and then give them a chance to choose their jobs to go to work rather than be hired over there. I am sorry to say further, I am not convinced that the federal method favours the victims of Hitlerism sufficiently but I think often favours those who collaborated with Hitler forces in Europe.

Now, insofar as the budget itself. I confess, Mr. Speaker, that I am not amazed that this Government and the Treasurer should strut around and crow very boastfully about their 1948 budget and about surplus of $25,000,000. I think that far from finding a cause for boasting the Government should hide its head in shame.

I submit to the members of the House that to predict a surplus of $367,000 and to end up with a surplus of more than $25,000,000 is to admit a colossal blindness as to the future trend and development in this province and in the country. I think it shows the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) to be a rather poor forecaster. I say further, Mr. Speaker, that this Government has become an heir to a good fortune which it neither created nor was aware of. It just got it.

In the budget speech in 1946, the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) used a phrase or a sentence that I would like to repeat, and I am quoting from the Treasurer's speech in 1946 in which the Treasurer said—here are the Treasurer's words:

"Let us think not merely in terms of money value, not in columns of figures, of decimals and statistics but in terms of human value of people."

Well, those are beautiful words, and that is the way I think a budget should be approached and I wish the Government had approached it from that point of view—that is, to think not merely in terms of money value but in terms of human value of people and I say if we bear in mind those words and examine the budget then we can only come to the conclusion that the Government fails to think in terms of human value and of people.

Of course, the Government was swamped by a veritable Niagara of income and with such a revenue it has thrown little bits here and there for one service or another. What else could it have done with the amount of money that flew into Queen's Park, but I say that in the face of the immense revenue and the unprecedented surplus the Government's sums which are to be contributed to human value are terribly small, niggardly, miserly and picayune. From a social point of view—that is, from the point of view of human value—this budget really indicts the Government and it indicts it of the most serious delinquency against the needs of the common people of this province. One could cite instance after instance where the Government failed the basic needs of the people in this budget.

I want to briefly touch upon at least a dozen of such delinquencies, things that they have failed to do because it was not conscious of human values and of people.

In the first place, the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) did not provide in the budget any immediate help for the hospitals. I repeat that—the Government did not provide immediate revenues, did not provide relief for the hospitals. What it offers the hard-pressed hospitals of Ontario is pie in the sky. The Government introduced a 20 per cent. tax, which will go into effect only after Ottawa drops it. In the meantime nothing for the hospitals and in the meantime the hospitals struggle, and should Ottawa not drop the tax this Government with a surplus of $25,000,000 provides no help to any hospital in the Province of Ontario that has not been given in the past. That is number 1.

Number 2. The budget provides no subsidy for milk, so as to bring down the price of milk to the consuming public and make possible the consumption of the full requirement of milk by the children and adults.

Third, the budget does not provide for sharing with the municipalities the cost of distributing free milk to the school children. The Government had more than enough in its surplus to undertake this responsibility in sharing it with the municipalities. It failed.

Number 4. This budget does not show that it has provided the necessary help for the maintenance or the extension of the day nurseries. There was money, more than enough to provide for the extension of this essential service. That human value, this thinking in terms of people, of which the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) spoke in 1946, yet with such a budget there is no adequate provision for the extension of that service.

Number 5. The budget, though showing a tremendous increased income from the sale of liquor, does not set aside even a small portion of that income for an educational campaign to teach our youth the value of moderation and to teach our older ones the effect of excessive drinking.

There was enough money for that. The liquor income was the highest, yet nothing set aside for this necessary work.

Sixth, the budget does not even provide for the initial work of an anti-alcoholic clinic out of the revenue from liquor, and I think in terms of people who have become chronic alcoholics, derelicts, for which no provision is made.

Seventh, the budget makes no provision for the sharing of the gasoline tax with the municipalities so as to ease the burden of the home taxpayer.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Salsberg) what he is quoting from?

AN HON. MEMBER: Those are his notes, I believe.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. gentleman (Mr. Doucett) knows when I quote, I so state. I am not quoting. I hold notes in my hand, as the hon. member (Mr. Doucett) also knows very well.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: What is the statement you made about gasoline?

MR. SALSBERG: It is an attempt to be merely smart and interrupt the speaker.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Oh, no, it is not. I want to know what statement you made about gasoline.

MR. SALSBERG: I made a statement, for the information of the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), the budget has no provision for the sharing of the gasoline tax with the municipalities so as to ease the burden of the home owner and the small taxpayer.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is quite incorrect. The budget provides for $16,000,000.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): You know you cannot see figures like that.

MR. SALSBERG: I have listened to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) speak this afternoon, or early in the evening, and I am fully conscious of what he said, and I remember very well, and I still repeat what you are giving is a very small amount,—

HON. MR. DOUCETT: What, $16,000,000?

MR. SALSBERG: —for certain—

HON. MR. FROST: $16,000,000.

MR. SALSBERG: —works in the city for which the city has to pay a share.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): The city pays none of the $16,000,000.

MR. SALSBERG: That has nothing to do with the fact the gasoline tax should be shared with the municipalities.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It has. That is what I say.

MR. SALSBERG: This is not shared. You are granting them something. I am speaking of sharing.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: All you have to do is ask the mayors. And I would ask the treasury benches not to get so hot and bothered when someone tells them the truth that they do not like.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It is not the truth, and you know it.

MR. SALSBERG: I know it to be the truth, and the truth only, or I would not utter it, and I want the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I disagree with you. You are saying what you know to be untrue.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I must ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to withdraw.

MR. SPEAKER: I think the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) should withdraw the remark. I do not think it is fair to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg), who is on his feet.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, if you are going to rule that an hon. member in this Legislature can deliberately, when he knows the $16,000,000 under that budget goes to the municipalities, makes a statement, and persists in the statement, after the Minister explains, that there is nothing in the budget under the gasoline tax, this House has come to a fine pass. It is untrue, and I am not going to withdraw it.

MR. SPEAKER: Well, I must say, as far as the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is concerned, if the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) does not withdraw, he may know the rules better than

I do. I do not want to carry the matter any further, but I would respectfully request hon. members to have some respect for the man who is speaking and not interrupt him so much. I do not think it is fair, that is all.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to accept the ruling that an hon. member in debate can make absolute mis-statements and be permitted to persist in them, and as one member of the Government, like the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), I do not propose to sit here, have absolute mis-statements made, and yet nothing be corrected in the record as the debate proceeds.

MR. SPEAKER: I am not in a position to give a ruling on that. I can give a ruling on it, possibly tomorrow.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is all right.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your ruling, and I want you to know I appreciate it fully. I will just let the record stand except to say, sharing the gasoline tax is generally understood—universally understood—as sharing, as agreeing with the municipalities to return a percentage of the tax to them to make use of as they see fit. This cannot be confused with making a grant for one road or a widening of a street. To call that sharing is to confuse the term, and of course to lead to confusion in the minds of people, and I submit I was right, that I did not say anything I knew to be wrong or untrue. The gasoline tax is not shared with the municipalities in that sense, and it is in that sense I said it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Now that you have got that cleared up, get on.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Or something.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has in this session unfortunately developed a technique which is not conducive to the best contribution—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: To mis-statements in the Legislature.

MR. SALSBERG: —of hon. members, and there have been other hon. members affected by that new technique.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that was delinquency number 7 as I see it from an analysis of the budget.

The eighth failure of the Government is that it does not provide for any basic and speedy improvement of the very unsatisfactory conditions in the mental institutions in this province—and I repeat, the budget does not provide for any basic and speedy improvement of a situation which is unsatisfactory.

Ninth, the budget does not provide for the raising of wages of the civil servants to a level comparable with those prevailing in the city of Toronto among the city employees, or a level comparable with wages paid in unionized industry. With a surplus of $25,000,000, that budget should have provided sufficiently to raise the wages of the civil servants so that they could live in decency. There are returned men with families employed in various departments receiving $1,400 or $1,500 a year. They cannot possibly live decently under those wages. With such a surplus, to have failed to provide an adequate wage increase is to me a delinquency on the part of the Government.

Tenth, the budget has made no provision for increasing mothers' allowances, and I submit the present allowance as given to widows and their children is inadequate and inexcusable in the face of the amount of surplus this Government is boasting of. That does not show the budget was an expression of feeling about human values or about people.

Eleventh, the budget has made no provisions for caring for the crippled and others who are totally incapacitated who because of age are not entitled to old age pensions, but have no other visible means of income.

HON. MR. FROST: $16,000,000 is on the tree for everybody, Joe.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, what the Government has done, as I said at the outset, in the face of a Niagara of revenue they have thrown little bits here and there, but none of the things I have mentioned were done adequately and fully. There is no special fund created to take care of those citizens.

Twelfth, and this, in my opinion, is the greatest of the Government's delinquency—yes, I would call it its greatest sin—is its failure, in the face of this tremendous surplus, to provide for the aged citizens so that they could live their declining years in decency. I say nothing that the Government or its spokesmen can or will say in this House can atone for this sin, the failure to provide for the aged. To keep old people on the present pension when we have a surplus of $25,000,000 is a sign of callous indifference. That is no sign of consciousness of human values, of people, as the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has so beautifully spoken in 1946.

HON. MR. FROST: Read the last paragraph of the speech this year. It is not bad on that same point.

MR. SALSBERG: I thought you put it very well in 1946, and I think the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) puts it well in words every year. That is the painful thing about it. The hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) speaks well, and I think he means well, and if he had not become a Tory some years ago, I think he would be all right, but it was his misfortune to fall in—

HON. MR. FROST: Evil ways.

MR. SALSBERG: —circumstances that made a Tory out of him, so he says fine things, but he prepares a Tory budget, and a Tory budget is not a budget prepared in terms of human values and the people. That, I regret to say, is in my opinion the shortcoming of the budget. Nothing to boast about, nothing to crow about, it is not a sign of great ability to forecast wrongly.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: But something to vote for.

MR. SALSBERG: It is nothing to write home about, to predict you will have $300,000, and then find you have $25,000,000 which you did not earn and did not labour for and did not make.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Something to vote for.

MR. SALSBERG: It is certainly nothing to boast of when a Government can be so delinquent as this in matters of human values.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to say we are entering a year which, whether we have an election or not—and I believe this Government is going to spring one, and spring it soon—is a very decisive year. Sections of the population are already deeply concerned over matters which really matter. The hon. member for Elgin (Mr. Thomas) yesterday spoke about the decline or the fear of a decline in the sale of tobacco abroad. That is a bad sign, especially when we read in the papers what the United States has written into the E.R.P. a provision to include $1,000,000,000 worth of tobacco in the so-called gift to Europe—$1,000,000,000 worth of American tobacco is going to be shipped to Europe. That is supposed to be for morale, but, as the New York Times of last Sunday said, it was to satisfy the senators from the south, just as it was to satisfy the senators from California that E.R.P. include 142,000,000 gallons of wine for Europe. Europe needs wine, tobacco, and a senator, I think from Alabama, got the inclusion of peanuts, but the amount shows it just is not peanuts, it is money.

I mention this, Mr. Speaker, because I think although the Province of Ontario has no control over the foreign policy of this country and economic planning for the future, there is a danger that some very basic sections of the economy in Ontario particularly will suffer because of planning which I think is bad planning—not by this Government, but by Ottawa. There is something in what some of the Conservatives said in Ottawa, something in what Mr. Green says: "Stop leaning on U.S., or become a satellite."

The E.R.P., the American plan, does create a dangerous situation in some basic industries in Ontario, in the tobacco industry and elsewhere. We will not solve these problems by name-calling, or by misrepresentation. To solve them, we need above everything an independent approach to these things. I said it in the House, and I repeat, Canada's trade with Britain is being undermined and greatly restricted, and I am afraid it will affect Ontario agriculture as it will certain sections of industry in Ontario.

These and other things which will spell the difference between an expanding economy and a shrinking one are the issues before us. We will not solve them by thumping the desks and shouting: "We have confidence in Ontario." It means adopting legislation to protect the workers, to increase the incomes of the working people and the farmers; it means markets for the things we grow and produce in our province. And it means not to be carried away, as so often is the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) by what he considers to be signs of great prosperity. That is not a sign for a long prosperity. Indices show tremendous profit-taking on the one hand, and an alarming shrinkage in the purchasing power of the masses of the people on the other, both indications of a dangerous period lying immediately ahead of us.

Legislation should be of a character which will increase the purchasing power, raise the wages, avoid taxation on the little people, who have had their purchasing power taken out of their pockets, avoid an amusement tax of 20 per cent., because it means taking $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 out of the pockets of the majority of the little people, permit them to buy food and clothing for that amount; raise the money for the hospitals from the corporation income taxes, where the profits are reaching a new high.

If we do that, we will safeguard the interests of the majority of the people; if we fail to do that, regardless of how good the intentions, we are heading for very unhappy times.

It will not be the Communists who will make them; it will not be our fault. It is said: "The Communists want trouble, because they thrive on it." When I hear that, it makes me laugh. The Communists are people on your streets, the workers, the farmers; they do not want hard times; they do not thrive on hard times. They want, like every other citizen, a prosperous province, full employment, democratic legislation. You will find in any such attempt they will be ready to support you, just as the hon. leader of my party (Mr. MacLeod) and myself vote for a Government measure in the interests of the people, support a measure if moved by the Opposition, if we think it is in the interests of the people, vote with the C.C.F., because most of their measures are closer to the needs of the people than those introduced by the Government. It is idle, and not always honest, to say the C.C.F. is becoming Communistic, because the Communists vote for their motion or their bill.

We will support this Government or any Government in this province or any other, to protect the interests of the people. And it is with that point of view we approach and estimate the budget; it is from that point of view we express the critical attitude we do, not because we desire or enjoy the pleasure of criticizing, but because we sincerely believe that such criticism is necessary, and such criticism is, therefore, offered on the budget for 1948.

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, in making my contribution to the Budget Debate, I wish to follow the established custom, and congratulate you on the contribution you are making to the general well-being of this Chamber.

It seems to be the unanimous opinion of the members, and it certainly expresses my sentiment, when I say that you conduct the affairs of this House with dignity and dispatch, using a judgment which is at all times tempered with geniality and patient good humour.

May I wish you many years of good health, so that you can continue to serve this province, with that peculiar skill and ability which at all times has enabled the members to feel thoroughly at ease in this Chamber, and at the same time preserved that strict authority so necessary in all legislative bodies.

From the general expressions of good will coming from members of all parties, Mr. Speaker, I am led to believe that, by unanimous consent, we could follow the practice established at Westminster, and make the office of Speaker a permanent appointment.

Mr. Speaker, it is very regrettable that since the commencement of this session some weeks ago, one of our hon. members has passed on. As in the case of the late hon. member for Huron (Mr. Taylor), the late hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Millen) can be called a casualty of public service. Although young in years, he had crowded into his short life more activity, including war service, than many men much older in years.

Our deepest sympathy goes out to the fine family he was called upon to leave.

Since I am the Government whip in this Chamber, and as I do not rise to speak on as many occasions as do the Opposition whips, I wish to take this opportunity of expressing to them my appreciation of their co-operation in arranging the speakers lists, and also for their support in the many votes during this session.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, in reference to the hon. member of St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg), he throws my list terribly out of line from time to time, when he tells me, as he did this afternoon, he will speak for 30 minutes, and then speaks for 1 hour and 15 minutes. This simply means that other members on the list are being delayed.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. members interrupted me.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. MURDOCH: This feeling is also expressed for the benefit of the most junior of all whips, the affluent and effluent member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg).

Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as there are words, words, words, coming from the Opposition benches, and quotations from this and quotations from that, I would like to give a short quotation from Shakespeare's "Macbeth":

"It is a tale, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, Oh.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it has always been said,

"that in the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love,"

but I can add to that saying, "that in the spring, a middle-aged man's fancy turns to thoughts of income tax," and I can certainly congratulate the hon. Provincial Treasurer on behalf of my constituents of South Essex, for the announcement he made, during his budget address, that no income tax will be levied by the Province of Ontario this year.

Although Canadians have only been paying income tax since 1917, income tax was first levied in Britain during the Napoleonic wars in 1799, and of course it proved highly unpopular. When the treaty of Amiens was signed in 1802, income tax was abolished. The whole nation rejoiced. Bonfires were lighted on every hill. Later, the Government added to the nation's gratitude by announcing that all income records would be burned and destroyed, every name, every figure, every document.

It is not too much to hope that at some future time we may be able to persuade our Provincial Treasurer to assume Dominion status, at which time he can abolish income tax on a much wider basis, and give cause for widespread rejoicing in Canada, from coast to coast. Yes, and burn and destroy all the records, every name, every figure and every document. We may not have bonfires on every hill, but I can guarantee a tremendous increase in revenue, in the department of the hon. Minister for Windsor-Sandwich (Mr. Greisinger).

More than half a century ago, Gladstone told the House of Commons at Westminster:

"Of all the taxes on the statute books, the income tax is the one tax through which it is possible that Socialism or Communism, or anything like them, can find an entrance to our system. It cannot be done by indirect taxation."

"Any man who did so," said Gladstone, "would be a national hero."

I can assure the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) on that basis he would indeed be accepted as Canada's national hero.

Mr. Speaker, during the week-end I visited South Essex, and what I saw will indeed be good news for everyone in the Province of Ontario. We know that in November last year legislation was introduced by radio, by the Federal Government, to the effect that there would be no more importation of fresh fruits and vegetables. Since growers were not advised of this in advance, there was no alternative source of supply, and we have been denied the health-giving vitamins contained in those vegetables.

The farmers of Essex County have already planted acres and acres of head lettuce, cabbage, and celery, as well as radishes, onions, carrots and potatoes. In the greenhouses there are millions and millions of plants, which will be planted outside when the danger of frost is over. These plants include tomatoes, cucumbers and melons. And by the end of May, the first of these products of Essex County will be rushed by truck and by train to all parts of Ontario, and beyond Ontario.

It might interest you to know that last year, and almost every year before that, many acres of lettuce and cabbage rotted in the fields, simply because imported produce has been poured into Canada, at the very time these crops have been ready to harvest.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this matter of vegetables in Essex County may not seem to be related directly to the budget, but it is the business of every Government, whether federal or provincial, to prepare budgets and introduce legislation, to give some measure of stability to the urban worker and the farmer. If primary producers are not assured of fair prices and outlets for their products, or fair wages, then we cannot have a healthy economy, and we cannot derive the necessary taxation monies, to provide even a minimum of social services.

A healthy and prosperous agriculture is an absolute necessity in the Province of Ontario.

Because of this importance, I would like to refer to marketing reports connected with the sale of South Essex products last year. And it must be kept in mind that our Federal Government must have had some knowledge, at that time, that our exchange situation was approaching a crisis.

Quoting the Windsor Daily Star, and written by Ernest Bazaire in June, 1947, and I quote:

"Tennessee cabbages moving into Canadian markets in carload lots, are causing South Essex vegetables growers to yearn for the days when the import permit system shut out importations of United States-grown vegetables, whenever Leamington produce was ready for market."

The cabbage situation doesn't look too promising.

Produce dealers from Halifax, St. John, Quebec City and Montreal are reported to have ample Tennessee cabbage on hand. In fact, carload lots of cabbage, booked to leave Leamington this week, are being delayed because people who booked them are asking for an extension of time, to allow them to sell their imported cabbage. Last year (1946), growers plowed acres of cabbage under, simply because they couldn't find a market for them. This year, marketing the crop is starting the same way.

As long as Tennessee cabbage can be had at 2 cents a pound in Tennessee, there's little likelihood of Leamington cabbage winning favour. Cabbage crates cost in the neighbourhood of 38 cents each. Put express and shipping charges on top of that, to say nothing of commissions, and Leamington cabbage costs 65 cents for a 40 lb. crate before it leaves its point of origin. The grower must get 3.3 cents a lb. to pay for the cost of cutting, packing and trucking.

Cabbage is the third crop harvested this spring which has resulted in a headache. Radishes were the first crop. Few growers go in for the radish market heavily, and there wasn't too much sleep lost over radishes. But when the head lettuce proved a fizzle, that was different.

In the Windsor Star again, under the date of July 22, and I quote:

"The bottom dropped out of the potato market yesterday morning, and scores of growers stopped digging. Buyers started the week's market by offering $1.50 for a 75 lb. bag of potatoes, to growers, f.o.b. Leamington. Farmers took a look at the skies, decided it wouldn't rain too much, and made up their minds to let them lay. A lowish trend was apparent because 10 carloads of U.S. potatoes were rolling towards Canadian markets."

Ontario fruit and vegetable growers do not ask for year-round protection for their products, but only some measure of protection during the period of their own harvest. The importance of this seasonal protection cannot be over-emphasized.

In spite of the continual hazards of both bad weather and imported produce, vegetable growers of Essex County are planning and building for expanding markets. In Essex County at the present time we have over 3,000,000 square feet under glass, and this is being added to every year. We have every reason to believe that many of these crops can be brought under marketing schemes, and the completion of the terminal market in Toronto, with proper refrigeration and holding facilities, will streamline our marketing and distributive system to the advantage of both producer and consumer.

Still speaking along agricultural lines—immediately after the Easter recess, the members of Parliament at Ottawa found that no butter could be obtained in their dining room. Quite naturally, there were violent protests by the members, and after a hurried telephone call, the necessary butter was despatched from a creamery in western Ontario. This brings us the grim reminder that during the next three or four weeks one-third of the Canadian population will have to do without butter.

The reason for this shortage is quite simple — Canadians consumed more butter in 1947 than they did in 1946, and producers produced less.

The ceiling price on butter which was effective up to 1946, suggested to dairy farmers that it did not pay to purchase high-priced supplementary feeds, especially in view of high labour costs, and shortage of that labour. During the months of July, August and September of 1947, Canadians consumed each month from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 lbs. of butter more than they did in 1946.

Consequently, storage stocks are now exhausted, and the only butter available is from current production. As soon as this shortage was anticipated, the price of butter fat to the producer was raised, and consequently the price of storage butter went up accordingly. A very profitable venture indeed for those holders of storage butter. But raising the price did not bring more butter, simply because you can't fool mother nature, and when dairy cows go dry, they stay dry for some time. And it might be added, that although dairies might be given permission to deliver milk only once in 48 hours, the labour load to the farmer will not be eased, because mother nature will still demand that cows be milked at least twice a day.

Mr. Speaker; since 1943, many words have been spoken in this Legislature about labour unions, compensation, social services, and matters of public importance, but very little about a vast army of men and women who have really performed a great public service during all the war years. I refer now to the egg producers of Ontario, especially those of western Ontario, which is the highest producing egg section in the Dominion of Canada.

"We never miss the water until the well runs dry," is very true, and we have perhaps forgotten that at all times during the shortages of war years we were never short of eggs in Canada. And these were produced at prices which all could afford to pay.

In addition to this, millions of dozens were shipped to Britain, which enabled the people there to at least remember what eggs looked like. Eggs are a very perishable product, and great credit can be given to the Dominion Department of Agriculture for the excellent service which was performed by their egg inspection branch, in assembling and routing carload lots to seaboard from all points in Canada, with the utmost despatch.

Proper appreciation should be given, too, to those scientists at Guelph who solved the many problems which had to be faced, of nutrition and disease. Here, again, a service was performed by the hard and patient toil of the farm producer.

No 8-hour day, no 5-day week, no holidays with pay, no lunch-rooms and rest periods, but early and late, 7 days every week, 52 weeks in the year, is absolutely necessary to make an honest dime in egg production. Some day those men, and women, too, will follow the lead of the dairy farmer, and give up that entirely unequal struggle, of trying to make a farm operation pay. My prediction is that we will have that shortage this fall.

At various times during the past 12 months, we have had thousands of unemployed in our larger cities, including the city of Windsor. Yet these men are very reluctant, for various reasons, to accept employment on the farm. This makes a definite shortage of agricultural labour.

The correct way of stating this is, that there is a shortage of men who will engage in agriculture for hourly wages and social security and conditions below the standards of our urban centres. There would be no shortage of farm products and farm help if returns were on a comparable basis with those prevailing in trade and industry.

The progress is slow, but through marketing schemes, modern distributive methods, and an application of scientific knowledge with regard to actual farm production, we know that farming will become a profitable and honourable occupation, with the sons carrying on where fathers leave off, instead of leaving the farms for the cities, as they are doing today.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the hon. Minister of Planning and Development for the legislation which he introduced a few days ago, to assist the prospective home owner to build his own home. This Government has always recognized that the real strength of any nation is built on the foundation of sound and secure homes.

Ever since assuming office, this Government has given substantial assistance to municipalities on a rapidly expanding scale. By taxation at the provincial level, a great relief has been given to the farmer and the home owner. The burden of municipal taxation still falls quite heavily on these two groups, but it would have been an impossible burden except for the great assistance given by this Government.

Grants to local school boards this year will exceed $33,000,000 as compared to less than $7,000,000 in 1943 when this Government assumed office. In 1948, this Government will pay nearly $16,000,000 to municipalities for roads, compared to less than $4,000,000 in 1943.

In addition to this, grants have been greatly increased in respect to hospitals, public health and welfare, libraries, and towards the extension of hydro services. All these payments have given real and direct assistance and relief to the municipalities which otherwise would have no alternative, but to assess these charges against homes and farms.

Mr. Speaker, I am very glad to notice the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) has recognized that we have a problem of shore erosion in Ontario. I would like to quote from the Toronto Globe and Mail under date of December 3, 1947:

"Expert advice on how to combat erosion along Lake Ontario shores will be sought by the Ontario Government, Planning Minister Porter yesterday told a delegation representing lakefront municipalities from Scarboro to Grimsby.

"The problem has become increasingly serious and, failing to get any assistance from the Department of Public Works at Ottawa, the municipalities approached the province.

"Mr. Porter said certain methods have been tried by states bordering Lakes Michigan and Erie and these will be checked to determine if they would be effective on this side of the lake.

"Members of the delegation suggested the gradual eating away of the shoreline possibly could be stopped by the building of staggered rows of pilings extending at right angles several hundred feet into the lake. These pilings functioning on the same principle as snow fences in that they build up drifts of sand to form a buttress, also aid in breaking up the force of the currents and waves so their effect on the shoreline is reduced.

"Some municipalities have spent thousands of dollars in attempts to solve the problem. In the Grimsby area, it is claimed, every farm on the shoreline loses about 10 feet a year. Acres of land are lost each year in Scarboro."

And again, from the Toronto Globe and Mail, dated November 10, 1947:

"The southern shore of Lake Ontario is dribbling away gradually, in some cases altogether too fast, there are property owners who, of necessity, have been forced to move summer cottages back from the threat of erosion while to others it is a case of losing the land from which they earn their living. Such is the case with the fruit growers of Clinton Township whose property borders the decaying banks of the lake.

"This rich peach land, some of the most valuable farm property, has been protected to some extent by the men who run it. Some already have spent considerable sums of money having huge rocks from the local quarry built into piers which jut out into the water.

"A recent petition signed by some 28 residents has been presented to Clinton council asking for a buttress wall that would run parallel to the shore line. The cost of such a wall running between Beamsville and Vineland has been estimated at $50,000."

Now, Mr. Speaker, shore erosion is a very serious problem in Essex County. During recent years, fine summer homes have been undermined, resulting in very heavy losses for property owners.

As well as this, on Point Pelee, over 1,200 acres of fine onion soil are in constant danger of being inundated. This would result in some 55 families being rendered homeless. On Pelee Island, approximately 60 per cent. of the farm land is below the level of Lake Erie, and this land also is always in constant danger of being flooded, with resulting heavy losses.

The problem is immense. It can be directly related to the water diversions at Ogoki and Longlac, since that diversion pours more water into the great lakes system.

It is impossible to fight mother nature, but we can co-operate and harmonize with nature. With provincial assistance, the activities of the individual property owners and various municipalities, could be co-related, and given proper direction. Erosion is a continuing process and it must be met by combined and united effort.

It will only be a matter of a few years, at the present rate of erosion, before many sections of No. 3 Highway along the shore of Lake Erie will be falling into that same Lake Erie.

We have to decide right now, to take positive action on a large scale, or suffer the consequences of untold losses in property damage, and the irretrievable loss of very valuable farm lands.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding my remarks, I would like to answer the charges which have been mentioned from time to time in this Legislature about the Whip whipping the members into line. Such charges are not only false, but utterly ridiculous.

Let me quote from today's Daily Star:

"The Leader of the Liberal Party while not believing the function of government was to run business, is opposed to privileges and monopolies. He emphasized, speaking of the Leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario that if some businesses could not be cured of this sin, they should be brought under public ownership."

That is the only reference I will make to the speech by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

Let me mention an incident that happened a few years before 1943 in South Essex. In Malden Township, 20 acres of provincial lands were being used by the sportsmen of Essex County for hunting purposes. This was the last public acreage available to the hunters in Essex County.

Over the protests of the local member of the Legislature, over the protests of the Essex County Sportsmens Association, over the protests of the Malden Township Council this property was sold for a few pieces of silver, to a wealthy Detroit individual who wanted to become the owner of a private game preserve.

This was done on the direct order of the Leader of the Liberal Party of that time (Mr. Hepburn).

Does this seem to indicate that the Liberal Party is opposed to privileges and monopolies? Such a deal as this could not happen under the present Government.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Did it ever happen under a previous Tory Government?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No, no.

MR. MURDOCH: I definitely mentioned the words "Leader of the Liberal Party at that time."

HON. MR. PORTER: Keep up-to-date. That is just another "chestnut."

MR. MURDOCH: The policy of this Government, as well as every Act introduced into this Legislature, is thoroughly discussed by the Premier, the Cabinet and the members, before being presented here. The wide knowledge of the members, who are thoroughly acquainted with the needs of their particular constituencies, is directly responsible for the progressive legislation which is passed, sometimes unanimously, by the members of this Legislature. This means that in this province, government is based on the broadest foundation of the people themselves. If I had my choice of membership in any Government, in any part of the world, I could not choose one where I would feel more proud to be a member than the present Ontario Government, headed by Premier Drew.

In 1945, when Government leaders in Ottawa and elsewhere, were predicting, and even preparing for, a recession by 1947, the Premier of Ontario with his usual energy and vision, was predicting and laying plans for an unprecedented expansion all through Ontario. With the assistance of his members, he then pursued one definite course to make those plans a successful eventuality.

The wheels of an immigration plan have started to turn, hydro has been expanded, new roads pushed forward in northern Ontario, opening up new areas, hitherto inaccessible. Forest and mine resources are now giving up their county to the skill and assiduity of Ontario workmen, providing more of those materials which give us a standard of living excelled by only one country in the whole world. And even that country has more poverty and real hardship in some sections than we have in any part of this province at the present time. Hydro conversion and the steam generating plant for Windsor are typical examples of real progress.

It was mentioned by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) during the Throne Speech debate, that he was afraid of the future. He even hinted of his own limitations to face that future.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER: (Leader of the Opposition): I do not think my hon. friend (Mr. Murdoch) should say that. I never said I was afraid of the future. The only way I would be afraid of the future is if we were compelled to live under a continuance of the present administration.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MURDOCH: The words—

HON. DANA PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): You will be afraid for a long time.

MR. OLIVER: Says you.

MR. MURDOCH: —he mentioned that he was afraid of the future. To me personally, he hinted of his own limitations to face that future. Maybe some other hon. members would not get that same reaction, but that was mine.

MR. OLIVER: You are wrong.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member permit me—

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): This man is interrupting.

AN HON. MEMBER: He is out of order.

MR. MACLEOD: I am sure the hon. member (Mr. Murdoch) will not object to this.

MR. MURDOCH: Will you speak a little louder, please?

MR. MACLEOD: I am sure you will not object to this, when you speak of limitations, may I remind you the Bible says "blessed is the man who recognizeth his own limitations." That might be something for you to consider.

HON. MR. PORTER: Will the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) give book and verse, Mr. Speaker?

MR. MURDOCH: I would like to say for the benefit of hon. members here, I only rise to my feet on a very few occasions, once in a few years. During those years I listened to other hon. members without saying a word, and I would say to hon. members opposite, if they are going to interrupt me with a question, I will answer their questions, but I prefer not to have any interruptions, Mr. Speaker, in the way of a little help with my speech. I think I can get along without it.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MURDOCH: Getting back to the subject of being afraid of the future, the remarks of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) were in wide contrast to the vision and unbounded faith which the Premier has in himself, and in the people of Ontario, and in the great future which lies before the Province of Ontario.

It was said by the Premier a year or two ago that the estimate has been made that there are 10,000 different ways of earning a living in the Province of Ontario. Many of the men, managing the various industries and enterprises, which make these occupations possible, arrived in their present positions after many years of effort in the school of experience.

Others are first and second generation men, whose forefathers spent their entire life span in the building of an industry or enterprise. Others again, are engineers or perhaps professional men, who have been educated and trained for special occupations or fields of endeavour.

But these are the men who obtain capital, and fit together the complex mass of workers in large numbers, master and overcome the problems of manufacture and production, and finally place on the market a product which they have forecasted the public, at large, will buy. We do have many in our midst who predict that we are again headed for a depression; but that view is not shared by the members of this party.

As members, we know that with the leadership of our Premier, we can meet and overcome our difficulties and problems as they arise.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding let me say my experience leads me to believe that if all citizens of Canada become politically conscious, and aroused to the real dangers which do face us at the present time, we can accomplish anything, even that which is supposed to be quite impossible, if everyone concerned has the will to achieve it.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. J. MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased I again have an opportunity of being privileged in speaking at a late hour, because it has always been my weakness to find sufficient words to express myself.

I want to say when I was first elected, I was very critical of the Government, but as time passed on, various legislation was brought in, and up until I made my announcement last week, I was still critical, when the final budget came in.

You will recall when the Speech from the Throne was read, I said a few words and mentioned at that time it was a very fine speech, it was a flowery speech, but I doubted the sincerity of the Government. But I found out since the budget was brought in, everything that was mentioned in the Speech from the Throne certainly is going to be fulfilled. I then made the move and have made the statement that I was going to throw in my lot with the Government. I said I saw the light.

Now, you will recall, hon. members, the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) the day he received his reception, said he is a Scotsman, proud of it, his ancestors were Scotch, and it was a known fact the Scotchmen were Liberals, but he says he "saw the light."

So, I am not the only one who saw the light, and let me say, Mr. Speaker, I know there are many hon. members in the Opposition right now who have "seen the light," but, due to their political affiliations, prefer to grope and stumble around in the darkness.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MEINZINGER: In this debate I want to mention a few things I have championed ever since I have entered into public life, and that is 17 years ago. The first one I wish to refer to is the old age pension. I was critical of this Government, and I was critical of other governments. When I was mayor we had resolutions passed. I was an alderman for 8 years, and we had resolutions passed, critical of the Government. I have gone through the hardships, I know the need of the poor people because I belonged to them for some 40 years, and I say without any fear of contradiction there is not a man sitting in this House who has so gone through the ranks of poverty as much as the present speaker. I am proud of it today. No one has ever given me a hand, never did I ask for a dollar from anyone from the day I was discharged from the orphanage. I was in the unemployed ranks 6 years, and I never asked for 1 cent of relief, and when I hear these men—the Communist Party and the Socialist Party—pleading for the poor people, let me tell you my experience in public life in Kitchener proves to me right to this moment these men are not sincere. They talk about "democracy," they use the word so often, but their democracy is full of hypocrisy, and that is a known fact.

I am not here to expose the party. I have given them some kind words since I have entered this House. These 2 men who belong to the Communist Party have always conducted themselves fairly well in this chamber, but let me tell you, when you get this Communist Party and the Socialist Party in a union hall or on a public platform you have not a chance in the world to put your argument over. They will howl you down, they will use every tactic in the world.

I see my hon. friend from Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) smiling. He is the Leader of the C.C.F. Party on this side of the House. The Leader of the C.C.F. Party is the man who used to come out and criticize "Joe" Meinzinger, when I was an alderman, and he was an alderman at the time. He had himself elected with some flowery speeches, but there was no sincerity in them. He stood up one night when I happened to be a member of the Relief Board, and actually went as far as to bring a mattress and a few small babies and the mother of those babies into the city council chambers and pointed to me and the children and said: "that man, Alderman Meinzinger, is robbing the milk from the mouths of those babies." I tell you the story, Mr. Speaker, to show you the insincerity of this party.

I was on the board, and we made decisions. I was in the labour ranks in those days, and I even went as far as to cut my own brother off relief because he was abusing it. That is how sincere I have been in public life. This man was criticizing "Joe" Meinzinger, of the Relief Board, for not giving this family more money. They happened to be receiving a little better than $100 a month. I let this man talk, this great Socialist—and, by the way, he has been a supporter of Tim Buck for the last 30 years, or ever since Tim Buck came into the limelight—but, when he saw the public in the City of Kitchener, did not "go" for Communism, he changed his platform and said he was a C.C.F.-er, but the record stands and he has never fooled me. When he got through telling the wide world—and they had the council chamber filled with their supporters, the Communists, and Socialists howling me down—I happened to have the information and credentials in my pocket and I waved 12 envelopes of employees of this great emancipator—12 envelopes and there was not one received more than $12 a week.

These are facts, and I have told them very often, I have told them at union meetings. The last time I told it it was at 33 King West, and this same gentleman threatened to sue me.

He came out with a statement in the press unless I retracted, he would issue a writ. I received a letter from the lawyer and I ignored it, and there was never a writ issued, and that, of course, exposed him.

He is only one out of thousands of the Socialists and Communists who are standing up and telling the wide world and the Government that we are starving the poor people, but there is not an ounce of sincerity in these people, and I say that with all sincerity, because I know whereof I speak. I have had 17 years in public life, and my hon. friend on the left here from Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) knows there have been hundreds of Communists from out of town who came to Kitchener for one purpose, to howl down "Joe" Meinzinger, whether I was mayor or alderman. Those are cold facts. But I never feared them. There was a time when I was fighting the cause for the working man and the manufacturers said I was a Communist, and when I took the straight and narrow path, and the relief rolls came out and I took my firm stand to protect my fellow taxpayers, the working men, led by the Communists and Socialists, said I was a traitor to labour, I was starving labour. But I went on the narrow path and finally became mayor and then member of parliament, and today I can say in all sincerity the only reason I threw my allegiance to the Drew Government is because they are doing a good job and a conscientious job, and the records prove all the legislation that has been brought down in this House is outstanding. It is second to none that was ever brought into this Chamber in the Province of Ontario, and I say that with all sincerity.

I would, however, suggest as far as the old age pension is concerned, you have come along, you have given an increase, you have gone as far as $40 for the needy cases. Personally, I think they are all needy cases. Picture an old person having to live on $30 a month; I do not think it can be done, and there are scores and scores of these poor people who have no relatives. They have no alternative but to go into the house of refuge. I have told that story so often and the hour is getting late. I am not going to elaborate too much. I say $40 would be a fair minimum, and I believe I have every faith in this Government, and judging by the legislation they have brought in recently, and ever since I have attended legislation here, that is probably what will come about very soon, and the sooner the better as far as I am concerned.

Referring to houses of refuge, I still say mental cases should be segregated, because it is regrettable that a man is forced in there, through no fault of his own, and has to sit alongside insane people. Those are facts. I have known insane people in the house of refuge who have been there 35 years. I have known them when they were young, when they went to school they happened to go along that road, and I know one who escaped from the Ontario Hospital at Hamilton and is in our local house of refuge for the last 30 years; everybody is afraid of him. Those are facts. I am sure this Government will look into this matter, and, as I said before, they should appoint inspectors and make some investigation and not reveal their identity until they go through the institutions and talk to some of these people.

I plead again for all poor people who are crippled and unable to work and cannot receive a pension as they are not old enough, and who have no alternative but to ask for relief. In many cases, they cannot even go down to get relief, they have to have friends go down for them, and the friends cannot explain the case. However, I have faith in the Government, that they will rectify these things from time to time.

Now, the hydro development in general. It is a great plan and one of the greatest that was ever brought about in this province. There is no doubt about that. I, for one, want to give credit where credit is due. I said in my maiden speech, I would vote for anything that was good. I can hardly vote against anything, because it is all good.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MEINZINGER: When we talk about hydro, and we have heard the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies), we have seen in the budget their estimate that hundreds and thousands of miles will be strung, and there is no doubt there will be many people "see the light" after those poles are up and the wires are strung.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MEINZINGER: Thanks for "getting" that one.

I want to pay tribute to the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar). I have criticized him on several occasions and also have given him credit. I also have spoken to some of the men who were on the tour that day, and they were highly pleased, and from what I have gathered, and from the remarks the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) has made, I think they have gone a long way in rectifying some of the conditions which existed in the past.

Segregating the youth from the old, hardened criminals is a fine step in the right direction. Many a young boy has been thrown into jail and mingled with criminals, under the old system, until he came out as a criminal, but I believe under the leadership of this Government and the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) these youths will come out educated and reformed in the future.

The hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy); I have heard very little criticism against him. Even the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), who is a farmer the same as the hon.

Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), has never been very critical, and I want to say for the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), in my riding I have had several farmers from here who interviewed the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy). They spoke very highly of him, and the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) gave them a good reception and the assurance he would do everything he could to help them along in various ways. On that particular date the delegation were asking for larger contributions for a community hall. We have heard the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) say they have it in the budget. That is a highly commendable thing.

Getting to Game and Fisheries, I love my fishing and hunting. I must say I am more or less in sympathy with the hon. Minister of Game and Fisheries (Mr. Scott), because I have been on trips of many miles in this province. Sometimes I have gone on trips for 10 days from one fishing ground to another, and let me tell you I have seen several fish hatcheries which were neglected to the point that I do not know how the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) ever hopes to rebuild them. I want to say it is interesting when you sit there and hear what the various delegations offer the fishing clubs. I was very proud at the last session I attended when the hon. Minister of Game and Fisheries (Mr. Scott) said: "Will you bear with us? We are trying to set up a programme. We have a 3-year programme at stake, and after the 3 years, if our ideas do not work out to the benefit of the fishermen and hunters we will be glad to change." I think that is highly commendable. Again I say I am in sympathy with the dilapidated condition of some of the hatcheries.

Now, the Labour Department; I am glad to hear the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) has agreed to accept the Federal Labour Code. We have criticized the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) and I think every hon. member in this House will agree that I have also thrown bouquets at the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) at times. But when I was not satisfied, I criticized. I say today he has done a good job, such as adopting the Federal Code. I think that is a fine thing. I have preached that for years and years, because when I was in industry, when we asked for more money the industrialists often said: "We have keen competition from Quebec and the other provinces, and we cannot do anything else but cut your wages." If we have a Federal code we can produce our goods and put them on the market on a competitive basis and there will not be half the trouble we had in the past.

The Highways Department has a tremendous undertaking. I want to congratulate the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett). He is doing a real job, and yet we complain. I know in my own community we have roads which are bad. I remember when I was mayor, every spring the telephone would ring and ring and ring. You cannot do these things overnight. That is the position in which the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) finds himself. You cannot build thousands and thousands of miles of highways overnight. I am surprised at some of the men from the north who criticized the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) and the hon. Minister replied with facts and figures that he laid hundreds of miles of highways through their communities. Yet they have the courage and audacity to criticize the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett). I know what I would say if I were the hon. Minister of Highways. However, I want to say he is doing a good job. I hope he follows out some of the suggestions brought out by the hon. member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin). We would like a few of these highways coming along our way, and one or two of the highways which we have need a little resurfacing. I believe the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) will give us some consideration, and I believe the hon. member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin) will appreciate anything done by the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett).

Now, the department of the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter); when I think of the time we criticized the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), I remember when the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) got up after the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) had been in office about one year, and said: "What has the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) done? He has done nothing." I never went that far. I certainly had some criticism to offer, but I believe we have the story today which the housing programme has brought out, regarding immigration, and manufacturers are receiving orders all the time. I believe he was being criticized by both the hon. members to the left and a few other hon. members in the Opposition and myself, but he was doing a job all the time, and was planning and developing thoughts and ideas to present to this House and to the people of Ontario.

When we got to the Amusement Tax Bill, I was really amused when they were discussing it. Here we have in the Opposition a cry—and I cried with them, but I am not going to cry again, I am going to be happy from now on—they cried about more hospitalization, and then, when the Government comes out with the Amusement Tax Bill, what do they do? They talk against it and they vote against it. I think the amusement tax is a fine tax. I do not want to go as far as to say we are robbing the poor working man. When the working man was paying 10 cents for a package of cigarettes he smoked them; today he is paying 35 cents, and still smoking. When we paid 10 or 15 cents to go to a theatre, we were happy; today we are happy when we go and pay 47 cents. The fairness of the amusement tax is this: there has been too much placed on the shoulders of the property owners. They took the burden, and when the depression rolled around, the Federal Government came in with a law that you can only charge so much a month for your home. Hundreds of people on relief, led by the Communists and Socialists, said: "Destroy the landlords." I can prove it, because when I was mayor I forced some of the men to go into homes when they pulled out, and made them clean up. I am a landlord, I know what happened. I only got that way by saving my pennies. I am a home owner, and I know what we went through. I never complained, I took my medicine, but it was very unfair. The landlord could only charge enough money to get his taxes and interest, let alone depreciation on the home. These boys were saying: "We are the great leaders to bring you working men out of the mud." Mr. Speaker, they put the boys further in the mud than they ever were, but this is one man they never put in the mud. I carried my own cross.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, irrespective of what party I support or what party I have supported in the past, I am one man who has never been muzzled in public life or private life, and I never will be muzzled. I am going to vote for anything that is good, and whoever likes it, o.k.; whoever does not, it is o.k. with me, too. I predict this, Mr. Speaker. I was critical. As I have said before, up until last week when I finally perused the budget, and heard the Speech from the Throne, I was convinced, and I say if they keep on bringing in legislation as they have, and amendments are made step by step, I venture to say they will never throw this Government out.

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): In rising to speak in this budget debate, this is my first speech in this House, and I represent the good riding of South Renfrew. I would like to congratulate you, Mr. Speaker, on the capable manner in which you carry out your position; you have been fair to all parties. I really want to compliment my good friend, the hon. Mr. Frost, on the good budget he has forecast. I was reeve of Renfrew for a period of a couple of years before coming up here, and the first thing I undertook to do there was to study the financial position of the town. I got a financial statement and found out how much we owed, and decided, if possible, we were going to reduce our debt by practicing economy. The outcome of the thing was, along with the 50 per cent. grant we got for our schools from the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), we reduced the taxation by $7\frac{1}{2}$ mills. Everybody was deeply concerned and they thought that was a fine sort of thing. They had been giving me credit, and I said: "No, it was not us. We carried on the same as you people, but it was our good hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) who saw fit to give us a grant to the schools that allowed us to do this." I could go on and take up some time, but I do not want to attack anybody in the House.

I am very much pleased that I can go back home and tell my electors what has been accomplished. I like to come up and make a success of my job, and I take my job seriously. I feel we have a Government for the people and by the people at the present time. I have come to the conclusion I got more for my riding—I have only been down here three years—I got more for my riding—and the hon. member ahead of me was there 16 years—and I am sure there is more happened in the last 3 years than in the 16 years he was here. We have been getting ahead with hydro and going farther.

There is 40 per cent. of Renfrew County Crown land. I am going to give one man credit—I should give the whole Government credit—but the hon. member for Kent East (Mr. Thompson), the former Minister, I spoke to him, and he said: "That is wrong; I think it should go to the real source of the idea." When I came up here there was paid my way for me. We had an old practice down there that the lumbermen ran all the elections; they contributed to both the Liberal and the Conservative parties, because those are the only two parties we had. We have no Communists down there to start with. I never heard a man open his mouth and say he was a Communist. I am proud of that. We have a few C.C.F. and a few Liberals down there, which I figure elected me, and we are able to carry on quite all right. This issue was brought up about the farmer owning time on his own land, and every elections the Liberals would promise one thing and the Tories promise another thing, and nothing was ever done. This is the first Government to start something.

In the old period 40 per cent. of the land was Crown land, and these people went right at the job and I know the way it is working it is going to be a success. It means a lot to these people down there. I say we are starting to get in hydro on a big scale. We have a couple of gangs working now, and we are going to have three. When I feel I am making a success of my job, I can go back to the people and feel satisfied it is a good job. I know we are getting some place. I can see nothing but progress.

When I come up here I feel we have a responsible Government, and I figure I am running my own riding; if I have something to suggest in my riding the hon. Ministers are always ready to receive me and the thing can be discussed. Whenever we have a suggestion to make, we take it into the confidence of the Government and we figure, as a member, we are part of the Government. My late friend who sat here in this House for approximately 16 years says he is supporting this Government because it is a strong Government. That is Thomas P. Murray. He says there is nothing wrong with this Government, it is a good, strong Government, and Premier Drew is a very capable leader. I figure that is a feather in our hat. There are other people like the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger). I am glad to welcome him to our side of the fence. I think a person has a lot of courage to get up and say what he thinks. We all have a conscience. I feel sorry for those two fellows, and I admire them, but they have their minds in the wrong channels. I have tried to convince them. They are living in Ontario and enjoying the liberties, and have their hearts in Russia. The country you live in you should fight for. Our freedom of speech is a wonderful thing. Here are these two men getting up, and I have figured they have taken about 20 per cent. of the time of this House talking nothing better than a lot of "piffle." I cannot understand. This free speech is a wonderful thing. Down in our country if a person said they are a Communist, somebody would knock him down. I want to feel satisfied, and I want to compliment the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) on the budget. We have $25,000,000 surplus. If we had a deficit, what about it? We can surely use the $25,000,000 to reduce the debt, and not leave it to people who are coming after us. I am not going to take up any more time. I am a man of few words, but I mean what I say. That is the way they felt about it when they elected me. I would like the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) to bring our roads up to a par with other roads in Ontario. I only say up to a par with the other roads. I know it is a big job. We are just asking for fair play, and I am quite sure we are going to get it with this Government. I am going home a happy man, satisfied I have done a good job and the Government is doing a good job.

MR. H. J. SALE (York South): Mr. Speaker, coming as I do from a riding which is populated for the most part by families of working men, men who work in the shops and in the factories, my interests must naturally be towards labour. I have spoken here on previous occasions at considerable length, but as yet said very little pertaining to labour. A factor which is of very great interest to me was the hon. member speaking on labour, the hon. member from Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger). I followed him, and take issue with many things he had to say. He says he sees the light. As I say, my riding is predominantly labour, which I must consider at all times. The hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger) has stood behind labour for many years past, and has been active in public life on the strength of labour, supporting the labour man. I was very much pleased to hear him say: "I have seen the light."

True, the administration is doing a good job for labour in all respects. That, I repeat, is a very important factor for me in my area. So many people, who have been so earnestly interested in labour—I am referring now to participants in various trades which have been confronted with other types of propaganda; naturally their thinking has been swayed on many occasions—have been increasingly influenced by trials and tribulations which were presented during what we have called the period known as the "ugly thirties," the depression years. In my riding they were more violently handicapped probably than in any equivalent area of the whole Dominion. Yet they come back smiling. There are many factors which can be of help and benefit to those people.

I was very pleased a few days ago to hear the hon. member for Hamilton Centre (Mr. Knowles) discussing the problem of oleomargarine. His riding is somewhat akin to mine in its nature.

I would like to suggest for a moment for the consideration of the hon. members of this House, that during the war Canada created an army, navy, and air force which was second to none in the world. Our rations were extraordinarily good. I confine my remark almost entirely to the army because that was my field of endeavour, but our rations were extraordinarily good. I do not speak of the army by hearsay. We created an army as I say, second to none, in spirit, conditions and equipment. A very substantial portion of our diet beyond the shores of Canada was oleomargarine. We still had men unequalled on the field of battle which I think rather belies any statement made to belittle the nutritional value of oleomargarine. It is a very, very broad subject, but while Canada is importing foreign butter—there is a shortage here at the moment which will be rectified no doubt—and we have the element of our working group who are aggravated by paying increased costs in all realms of the cost of living. If oleomargarine can be produced and put on the market at a lower price and have a very, very substantial nutritional value, which is proven in our armed forces, and still put on the market at substantially lower prices, it is going to be of inestimable value to our working groups and I personally do not think will in any way seriously disrupt our agricultural economy. I am open for correction on that but that is my sincere belief.

Another thing with reference to our working groups, a thing which has impressed me very, very much is the proposed development in the realm of hydro in this province. They are the most extensive projects ever proposed or ever launched in this province but I think the thing of most importance, particularly to people such as myself, representing a riding which is predominately a labour riding, is that terrific development can only mean one thing—continued employment through the next 10 or 15 years with full pay envelopes, through all the realms of industry and from that, with healthy economy in all its spheres it must go back to agriculture and they will benefit accordingly. Those are factors which are most important.

I look upon these things I know with an entirely different eye than many of our rural members, irrespective of party.

I was very interested to hear our Whip, the hon. member for Essex South (Mr. Murdoch) tonight make reference to remarks which had been made in the past. All I have to say tonight is they will very much support his remarks and very much belie any of those statements which have been made in the past. We are here, each and every one of us, to represent a riding composed of people in every walk of life, ridings varying from one to the other. Some are similar and some are very dissimilar but I think it is—and I am serious in this—our bounden duty to consider first and foremost our respective ridings and their major problems. In my riding, which I have mentioned in the past many times, I have two major problems—two only—labour and welfare.

Tonight I propose to deal only with labour and outline two points which, in the interest of my own riding, I think are rather important. So often we hear the remark that the back-bone of our economy is the farmer, that without the products our farms yield, this province and country would not hold the enviable position that it does in the world today. To that I subscribe whole-heartedly. I would like to point out to the hon. members of this House, who come from the rural ridings particularly and carry the torch of agriculture, that sometimes they are prone, if not to overlook, at least to dismiss too easily the industrial workers' contribution to our great programme.

Mr. Speaker, I would bring to the attention of the House a few of the things I think should be done to assist the ordinary working man, to bring him some of the contentment which will make this world just a little better place for him to live in.

In these days of mass production and assembly lines, anything this House can do to provide the worker with relief from the strain will be found to the advantage and credit of each and every one of us. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is not unreasonable to say that every person who works steadily throughout the year is entitled to two weeks' vacation with pay.

The Government of which I am a member has pioneered in this field by making it mandatory for an employer to grant each of his employees one week's holiday during the year with pay. It is because of such legislation I am proud to be associated with the present administration. However, I think the time has come to advance one more step and grant the worker another week's pay out of the 52 weeks in the year. I doubt if there is one hon. member amongst us here who does not take at least two weeks' vacation during the year, and maybe more. That, I think, is a very excellent idea.

However, let us consider the broader picture and be very fair in our consideration. For a man with a family, one week's holiday is hardly sufficient. If he plans to go away to a cottage or summer resort he must, in most instances, devote one day to getting there and another day to coming back, which leaves him a net of 5 days in the country with his family. That is very easy for many of us. We will go up the next week-end. But for the factory worker it is a different story. 5 days in a week for a man with a young family I do not think is sufficient. Under the present method in vogue in many of the plants and factories, while the man is on holidays his co-workers are usually called upon to carry on his work. Thus there is no tremendous extra expense involved in the granting of holidays in a great number of industries. I am sure if I worked at the bench I would be only too pleased to do just a little more to make sure my pal at the next bench should spend that much more time with his family in the country. I sincerely believe it is vitally important, particularly to the man with a young family, has the opportunity to spend as much time as possible bringing those youngsters up. A healthy summer holiday can bring tremendous benefits to any family, and in order to go away with his family very often a man must work at nights and has very limited time to spend with his family. Many of those working on night shifts must come back home, and work days, while the children are at school. That family association is of paramount importance. To me at any rate, it is the only way of life, and I would urge this Government to very seriously consider the situation with regard to further legislation on that matter. I think the time is now here when we must do something on that matter.

Another factor which is of vital consideration to my working group is that of misfortune—illness, if you will—and, Mr. Speaker, in saying these things I am sure you will realize perhaps my preceding remarks have been such as to cause one to consider I was advocating something which was somewhat contrary to the policy of my party. I do so sincerely, because of my desire to advance the interests of my constituents who work through stress and strain in places to provide a proper living for their loved ones and is a burden I must bear and consider in all its aspects.

I have another matter to which I referred a minute ago and, again, it might appear as though I am speaking contrary to the policy of the Government, but it is the question of compensation for the injured workman who is injured, through accident, while on the job.

This province has set the pace throughout the world in its care and treatment of these unfortunates. The Workmen's Compensation Act is a model which has been copied with a considerable amount of envy in many other jurisdictions. The very best of medical facilities and hospitalization is provided for our injured workmen.

However, Mr. Speaker, I believe we must not stand still and in this respect and for that reason I submit our rates of compensation should be given very serious consideration with regard to an increase. At the moment we pay a maximum of $66\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. of a man's wages, if the man is disabled while at work. In these days of inflationary costs we hear daily from all sides continued complaints about the drastic increase in the cost of living and that lies I think most violently upon the labour group. I think it is only a matter of justice to give serious consideration to an increase in our rates. I would suggest serious consideration be given to raising that rate to 75 per cent. There are dangers in going beyond that, I know, but these are not factors that we can look at and discard. There is a dangerous situation of a very definite increase in costs all across the board in the case of an injured workman when there is illness in the home all the expenses, etc. In many, many instances extra care must be secured. Little luxuries which normally would find their way into the home throughout the year are obtained to whet the appetite of the sick man. This is all done with the knowledge if he does not eat and maintain his strength his illness will only be prolonged. While his illness carries on, the family are operating under very stringent conditions. All these things mean extra expenses, and yet the need develops when the income of the family is cut by $\frac{1}{3}$ and in referring to that, Mr. Speaker, there are these extra aids irrespective of medical attention which is available. With regard to these people in my riding; they are faced with that increased cost, and reductions in income and, again, I repeat I think it is only fair that remuneration through the Workmen's Compensation be increased. Such an increase is going to present very little in the way of a problem for the industry concerned or the employer by increasing the rate of his contribution. In many instances that contribution is borne out, in the cost concerned. But I submit, Mr. Speaker, that surely any of us who believe in the three great virtues, the greatest of which is charity, could not conceivably object to a change which will mean greater comfort for injured employees.

These are problems, I agree, which are not peculiar to my riding, in any way, shape or form. They are problems which are in my riding as against many others. My riding is predominantly labour, and when I say "labour", Mr. Speaker, I am referring to real, honest labour, which has supported me in the past, and I trust still does.

They have had legislation handed down to them through this Government, which is extraordinarily fine, certainly the finest labour legislation known anywhere. They subscribe to and believe in that, but they believe in "playing the game". I think if we can "play the game" with labour in every sense of the word—and when I say "we", I am going even beyond the realm of government—if we, who are not within the ranks, can "play the game" with them, they most assuredly will "play the game" with us.

We have some very, very fine educational programmes, and the more they are extended and continued, the more they will be very definitely for the betterment of this country.

I think we can educate labour with nothing other than team-play. If we co-operate with them, and listen to them in all sincerity, I am quite sure labour will listen to us, and between the two, on the basis of collective bargaining—which the party I represent has certainly extended to them through the years gone by—I think we can go a great deal farther. We speak of "isms", "the rights", "the lefts", "the Reds", "the Blacks" and "the Pinks". I do not think labour is honestly, basically and sincerely, very much interested in them. True labour forms part of the Province of Ontario, and part of the Dominion of Canada, yes, and part of the British Commonwealth of Nations. Our labour men in the Province of Ontario, are interested in the development of our country, and of our Empire, and are very much interested in being able to say "I am part of that; I take a rightful part in that." If we can assist them in any possible way and encourage them and extend our benefits within all the spheres that it is possible within reason, I think we are going to have an even happier labour picture than we have today.

I do again commend these points to the very serious consideration of this Government, which has pioneered in all the avenues of labour, and I sincerely on behalf of my riding and my constituents would like to see them push the matter to the extreme.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. S. L. HALL (Halton): Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that it is not my intention to take up too much of the time of this House tonight. I feel that we are operating here under rather peculiar circumstances, and I am sure I wish to extend my sympathy to all those connected with this very serious accident that happened in the park tonight.

First, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) for the very able manner in which he presented the budget. I consider this is the greatest budget ever presented in this House. I remember the first budget, as far back as any hon. member in this House, at the time of the Ross Government, for $5,000,000, and during the government of the late Sir James Whitney, it was raised to $6,000,000. The Opposition at that time said that government would bankrupt the Province of Ontario, but, Mr. Speaker, the Government of the late Sir James Whitney and the Government of the hon. George Drew has always been able to accomplish the seemingly impossible thing.

The present budget is great in more ways than in dollars and cents, for its amalgamation of both effort and faith. The present Government is told by the Opposition that it is impossible to carry out the education programme of this Government.

We were also voted out of power in the 1945 election because the Opposition did not believe in immigration of the right kind and at the proper time.

Mr. Speaker, I mention these things because I wish to point out why this budget is great in more ways than in dollars. The former Liberal Government of this province saw no future for this great province, for they said that we had electrical energy enough that there would never be more needed in the years to come in this province.

I am proud to be a member of a Government that has faith in the future of this great province, and I wish to pay tribute to the people of this province for the magnificent display of their faith in the future of this province which they exemplified in no uncertain manner when they returned to office in the election of 1945 the Government of the hon. George Drew.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it would be an insult to the citizens of this province if I did not say that they played a great part in making this budget possible, for it is their faith in the future and the confidence they have in the present administration to protect their rights and administer the affairs of this province that is developing this province to an extent never dreamed of by any former administration.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote the words of one whom I consider the greatest statesman this continent ever had, the late Abraham Lincoln, when he voiced those great words:

"Government of the people, by the people, for the people."

and I believe it is the belief of this Government that is the kind of administration we are trying to give to the people of Ontario, for I believe that is the only kind of administration that they are worthy of.

Mr. Speaker, the very efficient administration of this Government through the Department of Education, administered by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has given more to assist education in the Province of Ontario than all the Governments combined since Confederation. That is an achievement which I think any Government ought to be proud of, and that the people of Ontario should be proud of. That was one of the things that the Opposition told us was impossible, but again I say, Mr. Speaker, that is another example that this present Government has been able to accomplish the seemingly impossible, that is the seemingly impossible to the Opposition in this Government.

Mr. Speaker, through the foresight of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), the farmers of this province have benefitted in no small degree by taking over the stock yards at West Toronto, known as the Ontario Stock Yards.

Those yards were formerly owned and operated by an American-financed syndicate, and all the profits that were made on those yards went to the United States. Canada did not benefit, nor did the Province of Ontario benefit in any way from the operation of those yards.

For the benefit of those who do not know what constitutes those yards, I would like to say they consist of 30½ acres, and an additional 14 acres which are owned and are reserved for future use. Under roof are 350 pens with a capacity which will handle 7,000 head of cattle. The capacity for hogs in those yards is 5,000. We have 175 pens under cover in those yards with a capacity of 7,000 hogs and sheep. The yards are served by both railways, the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific Railways, and we can unload 54 railway cars of cattle there at the same time.

There was also a large yard to unload and reload trucks, and in those yards there are 12 automatic scales for the weighing of stock. In 1947 there were handled from those yards 298,325 head of cattle, 96,954 calves, 173,571 hogs, 120,280 sheep and 1,792 horses.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak of one or two of the great benefits that the taking over of these yards has conferred on the farmers of the province. In the fall of 1944 there was a high incidence of shipping fever at the yards. It was deemed necessary by the newly created Stock Yard Board to institute a measure of control, which they did and which was put into effect on November of the same fall. Up to the present date, 122,000 head of cattle have been treated. The serum for this treatment is supplied by the Federal Government and administered by a veterinary supplied by the yards at no cost to the buyer or seller. The full-time service of a professional veterinary in those yards is supplied at no cost whatever to the farmer, and this is a service which is supplied in no other yard that I know of, not in the Province of Ontario, and I do not think anywhere in the Dominion of Canada.

The benefits derived from that service have been of great value to the farmers of Ontario, for, previous to the taking over of the stock yards, there were cattle dying both in the yards and on the farms, because the farmer at that time could buy a bunch of feeder or grass cattle which looked to be in good condition—one could not tell there was anything wrong with them—but when those cattle were got home and the symptoms showed, by the time he got a veterinary in to treat them, it had spread all through the herd and he was lucky if he did not lose more than 2 or 3 head of cattle. Today, through the use of serum at the yards, this dread disease is almost extinct. In fact, I do not think there has been one case of it in the last year, because every animal going out of those yards is treated with serum.

Also, all the cattle leaving the yards which are going into restricted T.B. areas are treated free of charge for T.B. That takes 72 hours for that to be accomplished up there, the Federal Government again supplying the serum free of charge and it being administered by our own veterinary at the yards.

I would also like to say this, that the feed costs at the Ontario Stock Yards are the lowest of any stock yards in the Dominion of Canada. All those things have been of great benefit to the farmers of the Province of Ontario, and I am sure that every farmer wishes to pass on his best wishes to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) for this very great improvement in the stock yards at West Toronto.

It is not my intention, Mr. Speaker, to take up any more of your time, but I would like to say to the Opposition, who apparently are so terribly fearful of the future of this great province, that they have nothing to worry about. Just get in step with the people of Ontario, whose faith is in the efficient and capable administration of the present Government, whose combined effort rolled up a surplus of over $25,000,000 without adding one new single tax to the people's burden in the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for this opportunity.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn, and stand adjourned until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 11.36 of the clock p.m.

MR. S. L. HALL (Halton): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the report of the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization, and move its adoption.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Mr. Hall, from the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization presents the Committee's report:

To the Honourable, the Legislative Assembly:

Gentlemen:

Your Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization begs leave to present the following as its report:

The Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization held two meetings during the present session of the Ontario Legislature on March 17 and March 24, 1948. At the first meeting, Col. Kennedy said that for the first time he was not a member of the Committee because of the feeling that cabinet ministers sometimes dominate discussions. His deputy, Mr. Graham, would be present at all meetings to answer questions.

Mr. Graham reviewed the work of his department and urged the committee when considering policy to keep in mind the necessity of improving production, of determining what should be done, and marketing conditions. At the first meeting there was a general discussion on control of warble flies, and it was agreed this pest could be controlled, if not eliminated, by proper spraying methods.

Mr. Graham said a study is being carried on about a warble fly powder now on the market and results will be passed on to the Livestock Commissioner for wider dissemination.

At the second meeting the Committee agreed to visit the Toronto Stock Yards on April 1, and later to plan a visit to the co-operative plant at Barrie. It was proposed that a trip be made this summer up the Ottawa Valley. Some members felt a more general trip should be made of the province.

At the suggestion of Mr. Thomas the Committee agreed to recommend to the Department of Agriculture that a special weather forecast be made by radio for farmers who depend on weather conditions for spraying orchards, et cetera.

Mr. Graham agreed to investigate marketing practices in flaxseed. Mr. McEwing said that flax farmers are being docked as much as 25 per cent. as a result of grading. Mr. Newman said the same thing is happening in the Rainy River District.

Mr. Parry reported to the Committee on studies and recommendations of the Select Committee on Tile Drainage Act and The Ditch and Water Courses Act. Considerable discussion followed on ditching, control and financing.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Report approved.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the Day.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, before Orders of the Day, I rise on a question of public importance.

There has arisen some question as to the authenticity of a letter entitled, "Canada, unite with the New Democracies," and there appears in the Toronto Globe and Mail of yesterday, on page 11, a newspaper report concerning matters relating to this document, and attributed to the hon. member for St. Andrew's (Mr. Salsberg).

The newspaper report reads as follows:

"In Mr. Salsberg's opinion, Gladstone Murray, one-time chairman of the C.B.C. issued a forged pamphlet purportedly seeking support for the Labour Progressive Party. While other members of the House got only one copy of this pamphlet, he and A. A. MacLeod (L.P.P. Bellwoods), have received 200 between them.

"He said the pamphlet was composed of poisonous lies, composed by a man who is in a perpetual state of drunkenness, and when asked by the honourable member for Dovercourt to name him, Mr. Salsberg said: 'In my opinion, it was Gladstone Murray.'"

The unrevised copy of Hansard, page CC-1, reports this actual statement, and I would refer hon. members to it. It commences with the words:

"This is a forgery"—
referring to this pamphlet—

"it is a falsehood. It is a concoction by a dishonest person who will concoct anything for money to earn his livelihood and who gets money to keep himself continuously drunk is the man who is responsible for this stuff, by peddling poisonous lies of this sort. I think I know where it comes from; the man was soaked in liquor for years and lost a permanent national position because of a perpetual state of drunkenness. It is all forgery.

"MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): Why not give us his name and expose him?"

"MR. SALSBERG: To the hon. members of this House I want to say there is room for differences of opinion, sharp differences, but certainly hon. members elected to a responsible body at this should not fall for concoctions of this sort. It has become the fashion to offer anything to the public in the belief that the public will accept anything. What a wave of indignation.

"MR. W. E. DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Might I ask the hon. member a question? Would you kindly give us the man's name who you are talking about.

"MR. SALSBERG: In my opinion, the man that is responsible for this, and who I referred to, is Mr. Gladstone Murray. That is my opinion."

Now, Mr. Speaker, undoubtedly other newspapers will deal with this and publish considerable about it. I would just like to bring to the attention of the House a statement by Mr. Murray that approximately a week ago in the Legislature of British Columbia—I happened to be there at the time in Victoria—a member of the C.C.F. Party, the father, actually, of the leader of the C.C.F. Party, launched out on a very vicious attack on the judiciary of British Columbia and named one particular judge as "a hanging judge." Great indignation occurred at that time both within and without the House, and the matter received very considerable comment. Before it was concluded the stellar qualities of the judge in question were also put before the public, and there was very grave suggestion of abuse on the part of the hon. member concerned, of his position.

I would not for a moment seek to suggest any hon. member of this House should in any way be restrained from using the peculiar privileges attributed to hon. members by virtue of their being elected representatives, when they speak on the floor of this House, but I do say no one should be guilty of slander, and particularly no one should be guilty of the type of slander which is based on hearsay and on wishful thinking and without in any way relating to an investigation of the truth or falsehood—of the statement before making it.

The statements I have just quoted in the words of the hon. member for St. Andrew's (Mr. Salsberg) certainly comes within that classification.

I wish now to read to the House a letter addressed to me this morning by Mr. Gladstone Murray in relation to this article and to the statement:

"According to The Globe and Mail of this morning, Mr. Joseph Salsberg

(L.P.P. St. Andrew's) speaking in the Ontario Legislature last night, accused me of issuing a forged pamphlet seeking support for the Labour Progressive Party.

"The truth is that I have had nothing to do with any such pamphlet, nor have I seen it. All pamphlets and statements with which I am concerned clearly display authorship and auspices with the address of the office of Responsible Enterprise.

"Mr. Salsberg's personal attack upon me, with the protection of Parliamentary immunity, is characteristic of communist political tactics."

Mr. Speaker, I think in all fairness to Mr. Murray and to the fact this is of very great public interest in view of the document and its relation to a party to which two representatives are elected members of this House, in view of that statement, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg), he should retract what he has said, and the slander he has caused to be published.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, might I address a few remarks?

I feel, Mr. Speaker, the reference made to what transpired in the British Columbia Legislature has no reference to the original purpose—

AN. HON. MEMBER: I cannot hear you.

MR. HARVEY. I can see no connection, and I suggest it be struck from the records. It has no connection between charges made here and the rebuttal by Mr. Gladstone Murray. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, the reference to what happened in the British Columbia Legislature be struck from the records.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before Orders of the Day, I wish to take this occasion to express the feeling of tragedy and loss which each one of us in this Legislature shares in the very sudden and untimely death of one of our members.

I believe it is the first time there has ever been an occasion when a sitting member of the Legislature was killed in an accident while the Legislature was actually in session. Only a few days ago, we paid our respects to another hon. member who had died unexpectedly. On this occasion, we pay our respects to a man who had been with us only a very short time before the tragedy occurred. For that very reason, there seemed a more immediate association with the accident than might otherwise be the case.

The late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson) was a man of very great sincerity, a man of fine character, and of genial and friendly disposition, which had made him a very real friend of all the hon. members of this Legislature, no matter what their own political affiliation might be.

First of all, I think all of us wish to extend our profound sympathy to his sister, with whom he was living, and to express the hope in some way the genuine feeling of sympathy for her may ease, even in a slight degree, the terrible feeling of loss which she has suffered.

All of us in this Legislature recognize the loss comes with particular effect upon those who were members of the party to which he belonged by sincere conviction. We know most of the hon. members of that party had been together shortly before the accident, and I think it is only right we should express to them our feeling of sympathy in the very deep personal loss they feel. In a way that was known to the hon. members of his own party, but probably not to many others in the Legislature, there was an unusually close association between the late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson) and the leader of his party in the House, the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett). Both these men had served gallantly in the first great war; both of these men happened to have had surprisingly intimate contact with a phase of that war which was not known to most of those who served through that great struggle. The hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) served in Mesopotamia with the second battalion of the Norfolk Regiment, and the late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson) served in Mesopotamia with a Highland battalion.

As we grow older, memories of those events many years ago, in some ways, assume an increasing sentimental position in our minds, and it was only natural that these two men who had shared some very trying experiences in a campaign in a distant land, should have found special reason for developing a measure of friendship and sentimental intimacy related to those events.

Perhaps also that close association was increased in a substantial degree because of the fact in that campaign it became necessary for those in positions of responsibility to understand Hindustani because of the active troops who were with that force, and for that reason with the pleasure all men share in an unusual experience of that kind, they have continued to keep fresh in their memories some of the old Hindustani expressions they learned at that time.

Therefore, in extending our sympathy to the late Mr. Robertson's sister, I think that we should also extend our special sympathy to the hon. leader of his party in this Legislature (Mr. Grummett) who, for the reasons I have mentioned, had developed an unusually close friendship and personal association with him. He was a good citizen. He was the kind of man this country needs. He came here from his native Scotland in 1926, and in all of the things he did, he was actuated by a sincere belief that what he was doing was in the best interests of those with whom he was in contact, and those whom he sought to serve. I know I express the sentiments of every hon. member of this Legislature when I say from the bottom of my heart we all share this loss in some degree, and we hope throughout the years men of the same character and of the same instincts for public service will be found to share the responsibility of the Legislative Assemblies of this country.

I would like also to express our deep regrets that the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) who had spoken just a few minutes before we adjourned at six o'clock last night, should have been so seriously injured in the same accident. While we do regret the injuries he received, I know all of us have a feeling of great satisfaction that the latest reports are very favourable for his recovery.

Insofar as estimates of conditions can be placed forward with certainty, we understand that he is beyond danger. I join, I know, with all the hon. members of this Legislature in wishing him a speedy recovery and a return to that congenial vigour which all of us admired whether on all occasions we approached the problems we faced in precisely the same way. I know each one of us here will wish to convey to Mrs. Anderson and their daughter, both of whom are fortunately here with him, our hope that he may soon return with them, sufficiently recovered to enjoy the surroundings of his own home during recuperation. He has been a very earnest member of this Legislature, and I know all of us will hope the accident will in no way impair his ability to carry on these many services he has performed.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, it is a difficult task for me to refer to the unfortunate accident which occurred last night. We, in the House, have lost a member whom I know all of the hon. members hold in high esteem. We, in this small group, have lost a friend, a man whom we knew for a number of years, and one whom we always felt was a sincere representative of his constituency. The late William Robertson sought at all time to serve the people of his constituency to the best of his ability.

He was born in Scotland 51 years ago and came to Canada 26 years ago. While in Scotland he started work in the mines at a very tender age, in fact he was in the mines when the majority of our children in Canada today are still in school. He brought with him to Canada the traditions of that grand old land, Great Britain, in staunch labour ideals as a trade unionist and as a labourer. He possessed great qualities, and we in our group at all times listened with a great deal of respect when the late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson) was discussing any problems in our caucus. He was a man who was never quick to give a snap judgment; he at all times was prepared to think a matter over calmly, and render a fair and just judgment on any subject, tempered with the mercy of his kindly disposition. I know his loss will be felt by his constituency and by his family.

To his family I wish to extend our very deepest and sincerest sympathy. As stated by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), the late William Robertson served with distinction in the first great war. He was fighting in France while just a boy, a little over 17 years of age, and later was transferred to the Indian Expeditionary Force and sent to Mesopotamia, where he served under General Maude. Then, later on, he was sent to what is now known as Palestine under General Allenby and was present when the forces marched into Jerusalem. He was a man who always looked back with fond memories on the association with his comrades of the first great war. He was always interested in recalling instances of the different campaigns. The late William Robertson brought with him to Canada a tradition for service; he naturally was closely associated with trade unionism, and felt it was his duty to try and raise the standard of the under-privileged. That was his ambition in life. At all times he was interested in social service matters. He did not speak a great number of times in this House, but I am sure all the hon. members will recollect that each and every time "Bill" Robertson spoke here, he spoke on a subject which was of vital importance to Ontario and we in this group, as well as all other groups, listened to him with a great deal of respect and attention.

Mr. Speaker, I also wish to make reference to the other hon. member of our group, the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) who was with the late Mr. Robertson when he received his fatal injuries. We, indeed, are thankful that Garfield Anderson was spared and will most likely be back with us again shortly. He has received serious injuries, but those, we believe, will not prove of a permanent nature.

I wish now to express my sincere appreciation to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) in all that he did in arranging to have Mrs. Anderson brought from Fort William. When we received the news of this accident shortly before eight o'clock last evening, it did not leave much time for Mrs. Anderson to catch the plane at Fort William. The hon. Premier Drew contacted the T.C.A. here in Toronto and arranged for a seat on the plane at Fort William, and the hon. Premier's (Mr. Drew) office also arranged to get a message through to Fort William to see that Mrs. Anderson got the plane.

Mr. Speaker, this is indeed a sad day for us and I know every hon. member in this House will feel the deepest sympathy for the family of our late hon. member for Wentworth, William Robertson.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I rise but to say that myself and those around me do concur in the remarks of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and the leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) relative to the great loss all of us have sustained in the untimely death of the late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson). I have never known, in my long experience in the Legislature, a death of an hon. member which brought such grief to the hon. members at large.

When sitting in my office last evening, after having dinner, and hearing the shriek of the ambulance siren, little did we think it was an indication to us that those with whom we had been shortly before, had been in a serious and a fatal accident.

The late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson), as has been already said, was an industrious member, one who had the interests of the community at heart, and it is typical of his industry and his concern that there still stands on the order paper today three or four bills in his name which have, as their ultimate goal, building higher still the standard of living for the enjoyment of the people in this Province of ours.

As I sit down, I want, on behalf of this group, to concur in the words of my hon. friend from South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett), to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) that what he did last night, on behalf of all of us, in arranging the details, and in expressing the great concern that was evident, is appreciated by all of us, whether we are members of one party or another. Death has few compensations, but one is it brings men who are living, more closely together, in a realization of the finer and deeper things of life.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, what the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has said, and what the leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) has said, and the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has said, expresses fully the deep regrets felt by members of this House, over the tragic death of the late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson).

It seems almost impossible, Mr. Speaker, that a man who was sitting beside me last night at six o'clock is no longer with us. Perhaps, outside hon. members of his own group, I had a better opportunity than most hon. members to know the late hon. member from Wentworth (Mr. Robertson), by reason of the fact that we have been sitting together for the past three sessions. I was always impressed by his great modesty and simplicity, and never at any time since he first took his seat in this Legislature, was he guilty of an unseemly remark or utterance.

As has been said, his addresses in the House were very brief, but always very sincere.

I was myself a witness to the great solicitude shown to the hon. members of the C.C.F. group last night by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), and by the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) who did everything in their power to share the burden of the leader of the C.C.F. party in the House (Mr. Grummett). I could not help but recall something I once heard said at a funeral of a leading citizen in Toronto, and it is this:

"Death not only is the great leveler, it is also the great equalizer."

I think the general feeling of sympathy shown by the hon. members of the Government and all hon. members of this House last night bears witness to that fact.

The late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson) had himself designated in the parliamentary guide as a "labourer." I think he was the only hon. member who gave himself that designation, and I think there is a very close connection between that designation and his philosophy of life.

As I thought of him during the night and this morning, some lines which I feel have a bearing, not only on the life of this man who is no longer with us, but also on his passing, were recalled to me, and I would like to read them to the House:

"Man's dearest possession is life, and it is given to him to live but once. He must live so as to feel no torturing regrets for years without purpose; so live as not to be feared by the shame of a cowardly and trivial past; so live that dying he can say 'All my life and all my strength were given to the finest cause in all the world, to the fight for the betterment of all mankind'."

I think that was the underlying philosophy of the late hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson).

Mr. Speaker, I join with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) in expressing our very deep sympathy to the late Mr. Robertson's sister, brother, and other members of his family. I should like, as well, to join the hon. Prime Minister

Mr. Drew and the hon. leaders of the other groups in expressing the hope that our good friend, the hon. member for Fort William (Garfield Anderson), will have a speedy recovery and be enabled to resume his duties as Mayor of an important Ontario city as well as his duties in this Legislature.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I feel I was a little remiss in referring to the work done by the different parties last night in assisting in the trying times through which we were passing. It was owing to the stress of the occasion I omitted to mention the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley). He did a great deal regarding making the arrangements, he was ever present to see what could be done, arranging transportation and so forth. I am very sorry that I omitted to mention him when I was speaking before.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): May I ask, on behalf of all the hon. members of the Legislature, Mr. Speaker, you convey to the family of the late Mr. Robertson (Wentworth) the sympathy of all the hon. members, and to Mrs. Anderson our hope that her husband will very soon be able to return home with her.

MR. SPEAKER: To the hon. members of the House, on behalf of the members of the Press Gallery, may I read a letter:

"Before the orders of the day, members of the Legislative Assembly Press Gallery desire to record in the journals of the House an expression of deep regret at the sudden death of William Robertson, Member for Wentworth. While perhaps not so well known to the members of the Press, as other members, Mr. Robertson commanded the respect of the newspapermen for his sincerity in presenting his views to the House, and the high plane of his participation in legislative debates.

(Signed)

REG. PITT, President,
NORMAN CAMPBELL, Vice-Pres.,
RICHARD SHERIDAN, Sec.-Treas."

May I also read to the House the following from the Hansard reporters:

"Mr. Speaker, may we, representing the Hansard reporting staff in the Legislature, be permitted to join with the hon. Prime Minister and hon. members of the Legislature in expressing the great shock with which we received the news of the passing of the hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Robertson), and we join in expressing our sincere sympathy to the family from whom he was taken so suddenly, under tragic circumstances.

A. G. Newall and Hansard Reporters."

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I should like to raise a matter of which I spoke with you briefly this morning, and secured your permission to raise it before the Orders of the Day.

Several days ago, just before the hour of adjournment, I raised a question as to whether the Government had in mind taking some steps to implement the report tabled at the last session from the Select Committee appointed to enquire into the rules of the Legislative Assembly. The report was tabled in the House for further consideration, but it was impossible at the end of the session, when the report was tabled, to consider it in the House, so the motion has really never been properly disposed of.

Mr. Speaker, it is obviously impossible to do anything about it at this session, and I, without knowing what the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and the Government has in mind, wanted to make this suggestion, that possibly another Select Committee might be set up before the House prorogues which would take the report of last year's committee under consideration, perhaps add to it on the basis of a year's experience, and then have before the next session of the House a report which hon. members of the Assembly could discuss and which would help us to arrive at a set of rules and procedures for the Assembly which will overcome some of the difficulties which have arisen in this and other sessions.

The only reason I did not raise this matter before was because I thought perhaps the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) would raise the question some time before the House prorogued. I know he has been very busy and under very heavy pressure, and possibly the matter escaped his attention. I think it would be a good idea if we did not allow the splendid work by last year's committee to pass by unnoticed.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it would obviously, in any event, be too late at this stage of the session to introduce any amendment to the rules at this time. The report which was tabled last year was before us, and is in the records of the Legislature and is still available. The Government did not bring forward any proposed amendment at this session, but if it were the decision to propose any amendment to the rules at the next session, it would have the advantage of the report which has already been made and which is on record. I do not think, for that reason, there is any occasion to appoint another committee to cover the same ground in view of the very extensive enquiry that was made and the recommendations which are before every hon. member of the Legislature in that way.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 41st Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 41st Order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion, that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair, and that the House resolve itself into the Committee of Supply.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in continuing the budget debate, I hope to be able to bring to the attention of the Government and the House some things which in our opinion are found in the category of constructive criticism. I think we all agree the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in his presentation of the budget, performed as usual, and quite well.

I want, first of all, to mention the $25,000,000 surplus. Many of the hon. members on the Government side have been very enthusiastic about the financial affairs of the province because we have in our financial undertakings a surplus of revenue over expenditure to the amount of $25,000,000. Many of the hon. members who carefully considered this would be willing to admit, I am sure, that in achieving a surplus this year, we are not in a unique position. We are merely the beneficiaries of the prosperous times in which we are living, and which apply not only to this jurisdiction, but to others on the same level of government and as well to our Federal parliament.

Many of the other provinces of Canada are perhaps in a less fortunate position than we are in Ontario, but have been able to show substantial increases in revenue, and surplus of revenue over expenditures. It is anticipated in the Federal Government at Ottawa, they will show quite a substantial surplus, and their ability in the Federal arena to show a good surplus is something which means a good deal to every one of us.

Speaking broadly, I think we agree the Dominion Government has great commitments. It was called upon to bear, in the main, the tremendous costs of Canada's participation in the war. The Dominion Government is responsible for the many new imposts which are necessary as a result of Canada's participation in the war, and the extent to which she participated.

So we are not in an unique position in that we have a surplus in Ontario. In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, having any surplus on the part of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) means just one thing, that he has taxed too heavily, he has taxed beyond the requirements for the provincial services of the province.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would the Dominion be doing as well?

MR. OLIVER: It might. We are speaking about Ontario now.

I pointed out to my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) the Dominion Government has commitments quite apart from those which are the lot of the Province of Ontario. They have commitments as a result of the great national endeavour for which we are all very proud.

No matter where it applies, I think the rule I just quoted is an accurate one. I recall very clearly back in 1943, when the present hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) was the Leader of the Opposition, saying these words, as quoted in the Windsor Daily Star of April 2nd, 1943. He was speaking of the surplus which was then claimed by the Government in power.

Hon. Mr. Drew said this:

"There is a strange illusion about the financial affairs of this country. A number of speakers have congratulated the Government upon showing a surplus. Before praising the Government for its surplus, the question should be asked, 'What is the surplus?' This is not a surplus which represents a business profit. The provincial Government is not making things which it sells to the people, out of which it can make a profit.

"The very term 'revenue' is in itself deceiving. The only money received by this Government comes in the form of taxes from the people. When there is a deficit or surplus, it would be more accurate and more understandable if it were simply said that the Government had taxed the people too little for the services which were being given, or, on the other hand, had taxed them too much."

I concur fully in the declaration made at that time by the present hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew). But the surplus we have at the moment simply means the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has taxed the people of this province $25,000,000 beyond the need to meet the services this province gives to its people. I do not think there is any reasonable doubt about that. When the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) stands up, and we hear him say, "I am a part of this expanding economy," and with outstretched—almost all-embracing arms, as far as taxes are concerned, proclaims to the province at large, "We are moving forward, and it does not matter how much we tax you, so long as we give you services in return."

I well remember years ago the hon. Mr. Ferguson making the same kind of argument. When we assailed the Government of that day for spending too much of the taxpayers' money, Hon. Mr. Ferguson would reply, "Well, the people are getting services in comparison with the taxes imposed." In those days I believe the budget amounted to somewhere between $60,000,000 and $70,000,000. But we move on, and our budget today contains 3 times that amount, and yet they still say, "It is all right to tax heavily, so long as we give services in comparison with the heavy taxation."

Mr. Speaker, I want to say there is a measure of correctness in that view. I think we all agree you can carry that comparison too far, altogether. Certainly you can reach the day in this province, or in any other jurisdiction, where you can tax the people too heavily, and then it would not matter, when that day is reached, what sort of services, or to what extent you give those services to the people. It would be an unsound economic policy to tax the people beyond their capacity to pay, and beyond what was right and just in the collection of revenue for the province.

There is another matter in connection with this $25,000,000—and I want to say I am not going to discuss the budget at any great length, that is, the particular aspects of it, because I consider, and I think the House pretty well considers, my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Nixon) gave a very careful analysis of the budget. It is not my purpose to delay the House in seeking to enlarge or enlighten, where it has already been capably done.

Mr. Speaker, may I point out to the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) that over one-half of his $25,000,000 surplus came from the imposition of the 3 cents gasoline tax last year. As a Liberal Party, we objected to the imposition of that 3 cents gasoline tax, for 2 or 3 reasons. The Dominion Government, which had levied that tax as a wartime measure, had relinquished the tax, and had said, in effect, to the people of the Province of Ontario, "We are relieving you of this 3 cents Dominion impost in order that you can have a reduction in taxation in the province." But the provincial Government immediately took up this 3 cents tax and placed it on the gasoline used in the Province of Ontario. I think we should agree the present impost on gasoline is just about all the traffic can bear, if not a little more. When we recognize the present 11 cents tax on gasoline actually means a 40 per cent. impost tax on that particular product, we are getting to the point of saturation; we are getting to the point where we will soon kill the goose that lays the golden egg. These things all have to be taken into consideration.

If my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) knew last year he was going to have a surplus of $25,000,000 there was no need in the wide world for imposing an additional 3 cents tax on the gasoline of this province.

We are in practically the same position in relation to another tax this year. I refer to the hospital tax. I believe, on behalf of the people of this province, the Government should say before this session ends, "Irrespective of whether the Dominion drops the amusement tax or not, the Province of Ontario will come to the aid of the hospitals of the province and see that their needs are taken care of to the extent outlined in the legislation."

I think we owe that, in these prosperous times, to the hospitals of the province.

All of us, as members of this House, have hospitals in our various ridings.

We know the precarious financial condition under which they are labouring; we know they have to have additional assistance from the provincial level in order that they can match their expenditures, and move forward in the great work in which they are occupied.

I would say to the Government, I think the people of Ontario generally, and certainly the hon. members of this House, should have from the Government, before the session ends, a declaration that "Relinquishing the amusement tax or not on the part of the Dominion Government, we are going to come to the aid of the hospitals of the Province of Ontario."

I want to say another thing I have said previously in this House, and I want to make a particular point of it, because to me it is sound business and good financial practice. Whenever you start to criticize the Government in its free-spending methods which it is employing today, you are told, "You are preaching blue ruin"; "You are peddling pessimism"; "You have no faith in the future of this province."

Well, of course, Mr. Speaker, here we do not give way to anyone in our faith in the future of the Province of Ontario. Ontario stands on the threshold of the things that are in store for her, and I think that we, as parties, together can get to a place where we have unanimity on this point, where we all stand for the advancement of this province, until she assumes her proper role in the shaping of opinions and occupies the place which seems to be peculiarly reserved for her in the economy and financial set-up of this country.

I say to the Government, and to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), I believe—and with me this conviction is fundamental—that we should have in these days of buoyant revenues—and they are buoyant—a plan whereby we should set aside something in the nature of a financial reserve, so that we can be abundantly sure, if a deflationary period arrives in this country, of meeting our present commitments for public and general services.

That is not lack of faith in the future of this province. It is taking a sensible precaution against the things which might happen in the days which lie ahead.

Mr. Speaker, may I say to the House that in an article in Life magazine, in the March issue, there appears the statement that the State of New York has set up, in a special reserve account, $623,000,000. This reserve, according to the article, is set up for the specific purpose of maintaining future social policies in the event of a drop in prices, or a drop in the way things are going.

Moreover, in the State of New York—this article goes on to say—the state government ordered a 9 per cent. cut in expenditures across the board, in order to place themselves in a strong financial position to meet any commitments which the future might hold for them.

I do not think that is an unreasonable attitude to take. I think it is a precaution we could well take, because, even if we move forward, and are able to divert any deflationary period, a reserve so established would certainly not do us any harm; it could be used for other purposes; it could be put into the Consolidated Revenue Fund, making this province greater still. If we had that money, it would be available to make sure that in Canada, in days of less buoyant revenues, the social services set up in days when things were good, could be carried forward on the same scale of social services for our people into a less prosperous period.

To hear some of the Government members talk, you would think so long as there is a Tory Government in power in Ontario, there is no danger of any kind of deflationary period, or retrogression, financial, or in any other way.

Mr. Speaker, I am old enough to recall that prior to 1934, in Ontario, we had a Tory Government, and that Tory Government was not able to turn aside the onward march of the depression we had in the 30's. Also, at the same time, we had in Ottawa another Tory Government which was not able to turn aside the threat of and actual consequences from the great depression of the 30's. So the faith of my hon. friends opposite in the supremacy of the Tory party is taken on this side of the House with a grain of salt. All we have to do to get the picture clearly is to turn back the pages of history and read what is written there.

It is a nice feeling, of course, to be so self-assured that nothing can happen while "We are in power." May I say to the hon. members on the other side of the House that you just happened to get into office and be in office at a time when things are at their best, not because you made them good, but because they would have been good in spite of you. I think you all recognize not only the simplicity, but the truth of that argument.

MR. C. D. HANNIWELL (Niagara Falls. : I wondered what Ottawa was doing.

MR. OLIVER: The hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Hanniwel) can get up on his hind legs and make a speech about Ottawa, and he might throw in something about Niagara Falls with it.

Mr. Speaker, all I have to say in that regard I have said, and I have said it from the depths of my convictions and my conscience. I do not want to be classed as one who has any doubts about the ultimate future of this province. I think that is a charge which should not be levelled against those of us who really are all working together for a common cause.

The hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) is not in his seat. I wanted to say to him that last night we listened with great interest to his mapping out of the highway programme for the future of this province. Not for the next few months or so, or for the next year or so. He would not put any stated limit on it. It was simply in the offing as part of the great expansion programme which is held by two slight strings in the air. One thing I wanted to point out to my hon. friend (Mr. Doucett) was he laid all stress on the building of 4-lane highways. He told us where those great avenues of traffic were going to be built and he eulogized the affect of these traffic arteries on the future of the Province of Ontario.

I think we all agree that the province should have highways of the very best character and of the very greatest mileage, but I want to point out to the Government and to my hon. friend (Mr. Doucett) that when you have completed building these great 4-way-lane highways, you have not settled the highway problem in Ontario. The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) yesterday laid altogether too much stress on 4-lane highways and not enough stress on what you might call "secondary provincial highways," other than 4-lane highways.

There is a great need in this province for the building of a highway system, a system which will reach out and touch and benefit all of the people of the province. I think we are in agreement on this, that many of the people in this province travel but seldom on the 4-lane ways that we have today. They want and they should have highways which would be for them an outlet for their products and an outlet for transportation in taking their products to the markets of this province, and I hope that the Government will pay more attention not only to the conception of these great 4-lane arteries but to the building of serviceable highways which will meet the needs of the great number of people of this province.

Sometimes I am inclined to think, in the building of these 4-lane highways, we are thinking too much of the tourists and those who come in from other countries, and not perhaps enough of our own people in the Province of Ontario.

I think one of the greatest assets we have in Ontario is the tourists. The time they spend here and the money they leave is of great material benefit to the people of this province. But we must not forget the highway system of this province must not be predicated solely on the building of great 4-lane roads or highways.

I want to say, now that the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) has come into his place, that he said something last night about the building of a piece of highway in Grey County. Let me say I was not greatly surprised to find that the grading contract had been let. May I say further that to my mind they are building a good highway between Allan Park and Durham, an excellent highway, with proper grading and one which will give substantial service. I do not want to feel, no matter whether a man is a supporter of the Government or whether he sits in a group opposing the Government, that he is any less likely in his riding to get highways, than a Government member. I think we are getting pretty well to the place in our way of thinking, that highways should not be built in a constituency, because its representative is a Government member. They should go rather where they are needed to serve the people of this province, irrespective of whether that constituency elects a Government member or Opposition member. That, to my mind, in our democracy, is fundamental. I think it is something we must build on and we should never lose sight of. It is all right to talk about "political patronage," but when it comes to the building of highways and services to which all will contribute, there should be no differentiation, no difference between what one riding and another gets, irrespective of whether that riding is represented by a Government or an Opposition member. I have never felt I should get down on my knees to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) for the building of highways in Grey County.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: You do not need to.

MR. OLIVER: I never felt I should.

I say this seriously because the County of Grey and every other county represented on this side of the House have made their contribution for the building of roads in this province. So, I say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) as long as he continues the policy and the practice presently employed, he will not get from us any very serious opposition.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): You are "seeing the light," too.

MR. OLIVER: Well, I am "seeing the light," but I hope it is not the same kind of "light."

I want to say now to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) in respect to the Department of Education that I asked the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) when the report of the Educational Committee would be in. I understood him to say that it was his opinion it would be in at this Session.

My hon. friend (Mr. Drew) will say something about it when he speaks. There is this point that I should make; since my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) has become Minister of Education he has made very definite and radical changes in our educational set-up as to grants and other things which pertain to education, and it would seem to me that the sooner that committee could report and the Government of the province could have the benefit of the directions and the recommendations of that report, the better. I would think, if we go on as we are, making these very drastic changes in our educational system without the advice and recommendation of this report, when the report comes in, if we are going to act on the fundamental things contained therein, it may be we will have to retrace or scrap some of the steps we have taken, and it would be much better, it seems to me, in the interests of education to have the committee make its report.

I want to say just a word in regard to tourists and publicity. The hon. Minister (Mr. Welsh) is not in his seat, and it does not matter, because I am not going to criticize him particularly.

I do want to say we have all kinds of possibilities in regard to this particular department. I would like to think that department, as one of the new departments, is one of the departments that is going to carve out a still greater picture for us, particularly in northern Ontario. Anyone who has travelled the northern parts of Ontario become instantly aware of the latent possibilities for tourists' attractions which lie in the north and the Government, of course, will have the support of all the people in building up this tourist industry to the maximum of perfection in order that we in Ontario can sell the good things we have to the people who come from other countries.

I want to talk for a minute or two about the Department of Lands and Forests, and it so happens that the estimates of the Department of Lands and Forests have not yet been considered by the House. That, it seems to me, is fortunate and I want the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) to, if he will, pay particular attention to the analysis I make of the forestry position, so that he will, when he puts his estimates through the House, be aware of what our opinions are. These opinions are not in any sense destructive; they are rather constructive and in the main should be helpful in arriving at fair decisions on these great questions.

One of the greatest resources we have, of course, is our lands and forests, particularly in northern Ontario. I always like to think of our forest reserves as harmonizing with the forest development and with the tourist development in the north and the possibility for stability, certainly insofar as the development of the north is concerned.

We have the Kennedy Report placed before us. Major Kennedy was instructed to examine the forestry conditions in the province and make recommendations thereon. This report, as all hon. members who have read it will know, is a very comprehensive one. It is a report which does not seek to excuse. It is a report which seeks to set out in graphic and concrete form definite proposals to cure the ills which have beset us, in respect to tourist policy.

The other night the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) said insofar as this report is concerned the Government was ready to implement it on the main recommendations of the report. I would suggest to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) that one of the main recommendations of the Kennedy Report was the establishment of forest-operating companies, and I do not think the Government have given the House any indication as to how they intend to proceed in the implementation of that recommendation in the Kennedy Report. The recommendation of Major Kennedy to establish forest-operating companies was, to say the least, a daring one. It is a thought-provoking solution for the great problems of our forests. I do not know whether, when it is finally fitted into the whole forest picture, it would look favourable to the members of this House or not. Certainly this proposal merits the most earnest and deepest consideration on the part of the Government, and on the part of all members of the House, and the province at large. It is, I would suggest, the main proposal in the report.

Another matter dealt with by the report is the need for reforestation in the province. I do not want to get into an argument this afternoon as to whether the Liberal Government did as much for reforestation as the present Tory Government did, or not. All I want to say is that the policy of both these Governments, up to now, is behind us, and we have to be realistic, and look into the future—we have to meet each problem as it arises, and assess the picture as it appears before us.

Major Kennedy in this report very clearly sets out the need which exists for reforestation and for the stepping up of the policy of reforestation. I think we all agree the need for reforestation is not along geographical lines. It is as needful in southern Ontario, or more so, than it is in the burned-over and devastated areas of the north. The province of Ontario as a whole is interested, as it should be, in the furtherance of reforestation. In southern Ontario we all know a start has been made; that each succeeding Government has added their little bit to the progress along the road of reforestation. But we have an awfully long way to go yet to meet the need which exists, and there is not any too much time left to meet that need.

One of the things which reforestation will help to cure in this province is the flood conditions which have been so prevalent this last year. It will help to conserve the fertility of the soil. It will help to raise the water level so as to bring better crops, etc.

My hon. friend, the Whip (Mr. Murdoch) spoke last night about the depletion of the land in his County of Essex. That is true in almost every county, and we have to show to others in this province whether we look upon reforestation as a small and insignificant thing, or as an integral part of our development, which lies before us in Ontario.

When he comes to the north, Major Kennedy particularly pointed out that, if left to the natural growth, the forests of northern Ontario would not succeed themselves, so to speak, to use a slang expression.

Large areas would have to be reforested in northern Ontario. I trust the Government has this in mind, and I hope they intend to move forward rapidly on this particular project.

There is a policy practised in forestry, in some places, of clean cutting.

I want to suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) where that policy is practised, it does seem to me—and to others as well—you can not successfully reforest an area which has been clean cut. All the coverage is gone, there is nothing to stop the snow, to hold it as a blanket, and an area that is clean cut remains clean cut. There should be something done to correct that particular situation.

Another thing dealt with extensively in Major Kennedy's report is the insect damage to our trees in the Province of Ontario. The bud worm is particularly in the fore-front in respect to this insect damage and if my hon. friends would like sometime to look in the Canada Year Book, 1947, at page 390, they would find the bud worm-infected area in Ontario is 158,500 square miles. It is hardly possible for us to appreciate the great tract of timber land which is infected by this bud worm.

Major Kennedy sets out in his report that the fire loss in Ontario has been great in the past, but we have got to the place now where we must realize fire takes a secondary position as an enemy of the forest and gives over first place to these insects. My hon. friends will appreciate that it is very difficult—and I feel with the Government in this problem—to find curative methods for combating these insects, the bud worms.

The department, from the air, has tried spreading poison down on the infected areas. Major Kennedy says in his report—and anyone who was on the scene will agree—that spreading poison from the air is impracticable. It can only be used to advantage only when the area is small in size. To go over a large infested area by spreading poison from the air is as impracticable as it is useless, because it has not been found there is any great depreciation in the amount of insects and the damage they do. I appreciate as well, this problem is one in which two levels of government are interested. It is a matter which concerns the federal administration on a level with the Provincial Government.

Of course, they are our trees and our forests and, therefore, should be our prime consideration.

Anyone who has seen these infected areas will realize the utter devastation which results. When you see hundreds of square miles of timber, some of it falling down and some of it just getting ready to fall down, it makes your heart sick regarding the future of large areas of our forests in the north. After the bud worm infects the trees, they will live and be of marketable value for 5 or 6 years, but after that period they become of no value at all and actually become a fire hazard in those areas of the north.

Mr. Kennedy finds in his report the area to the west of Lake Nipigon is the area which is most seriously affected by these bud worms. I had the privilege last year of going through much of those areas with the Liberal candidate from the City of Port Arthur, who is, by the way, a forestry engineer. I want to say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) I would like an explanation on this point: driving up the west side of Lake Nipigon, as we did in, I think, October last year, you will find on your right hand—what we saw quite plainly on what they call the “black spruce flats,” cutting operations going on, cutting and piling of pulpwood, while, on the other hand, you find this timber that is decaying, and which is very shortly to pass out of economic value so far as the province is concerned; timber which now, it would seem to me could very well be used for pulpwood and for some other purposes as the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) will appreciate.

It would seem to a layman, after looking at that picture, they should not have been cutting the black spruce swamps, but rather they should have been cutting the timber on the higher land which was going to waste, and would not last very much longer.

There may be a reasonable explanation for that condition. I am not sure about that. I hope there is, because Mr. Kennedy points out in the report, the only thing to do about this infected timber is to salvage it, and salvage it at once.

What we in this House, and the province would like to know is this; is the Government going ahead with the salvage operations, are they moving as fast as they can to clear up this situation, and to make what we can from an economic point of view out of this timber before it becomes useless; and are we, on the other hand, clearing it up so that it will not become a fire hazard in the days to come. I want the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) to talk about this matter, because I think it is important, not only to northern Ontario but to all parts of the province.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) announced a restrictive policy so far as pulpwood export was concerned. He will never find I have opposed that particular policy, enunciated by my hon. friend (Mr. Drew), but it would seem to me possibly in these devastated areas, where this timber is decaying, where it can be made into pulpwood, if it is not feasible to use it in the local pulp and paper mills, if an easement of this policy is necessary in order to market this sort of stuff which we may get off these salvaged areas, then that easement should take place.

If the timber could be used in the pulp and paper mills which are there now, it should be used there. But if for any reason they cannot use it, and it can be exported, I think it would be foolish to say we should not export this timber, even though it goes beyond the restrictive measures put into effect by the present Government.

I was interested the other night in hearing the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) say they are going to hold a conference in the month of June, of all those who hold cutting rights in the province, that is, I suppose, the pulp and paper people, the lumber people, those who take out ties and poles and mine-timber and so on—in other words, all those who use our forests to build our revenue and our status as a province still greater.

I hope that conference does take place, because there seems to be, as set out in Mr. Kennedy's report, a conclusion on his part something has to be done to protect these what you might call "secondary industries" of the north—secondary to the pulp and paper industries.

At the top of page 42, Mr. Kennedy says:

"This province has not held its former place in the national picture. In 1908 Ontario produced 92 per cent. as much lumber as all other Canadian provinces combined, excluding British Columbia. In 1944, the corresponding percentage was 31 per cent. If we are to have a balanced economy, decline must be checked and the trend reversed."

Mr. Kennedy goes on to point out the need for all this lumber, these poles, ties and so on, is very great in the Province of Ontario now. They are needed in the mining industry, and in the building industry. One of the prime requisites of our building industry is, of course, lumber, and it does seem to be going backwards when this province imports far more lumber than it exports. We should not be in this position, as Mr. Kennedy points out.

One of the solutions, as Mr. Kennedy saw it, was to deal with the problem directly with the pulp and paper companies, particularly in respect of the type of concession or agreement they had with the province. Some of these agreements, as hon. members will probably know, give the pulp and paper companies the right to cut pulpwood only, and other concessions give the companies the right to cut pulpwood and logs and other timber as well. Mr. Kennedy finds this:

"It is submitted that too many of Ontario's saw logs are located on pulpwood concessions, both domestic and export. If the lumber industry is to continue to exist, these logs must be diverted to it instead of being converted to pulp and paper, for which smaller logs serve usefully well."

Mr. Kennedy's major recommendation in respect of that particular problem is, in some way, it be made abundantly clear the logs and the times and the pole timber on these limits held by the pulp and paper companies be made available for saw logs and ties and poles and all the other things I have mentioned.

To me, as a layman, that sounds reasonable. It seems to me if we are going to have a balanced economy, so far as forestry is concerned in this province, we must make sure the various elements which go to make up this great forest industry are served equally and fairly from the resources of this province and we should not, under any condition, give to the pulp and paper people anything in the form of a monopoly over these particular species of timber; they should be made, as Mr. Kennedy sets out, available for the mills and for those who take out timber in poles, et cetera.

I have said these things this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, because I am particularly interested in them. I am in farming in Grey County—

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to interrupt, but since the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has indicated he desires it to be constructive, I wonder if he could indicate to me any lumber company which he knows to be having any difficulty in obtaining its supply of logs.

MR. OLIVER: On that particular question, Mr. Kennedy is not specific. I take it he means the general picture so far as the lumber industry is concerned. I would think it would apply generally. I do not want to be destructive about this; I want to say things which I think will help, because the Government no doubt will be doing more things in respect to this report, and all hon. members of the House should study the report and say what they think of it.

Mr. Speaker, I have nothing more to say at this time. It has been a little more difficult than usual speaking this afternoon, but let that be as it will, we must go on, we must conduct the business of the province and the one who is not with us, I am sure, would say we should carry on and do the work which is set before us.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, this debate has covered a reasonably extended period, and has covered a fairly wide field of discussion. There are some remarks which have been made by other speakers previously to which I will refer, but first I would like to deal with the remarks of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in regard to some aspects of the forest industry which he has just mentioned.

He has spoken in the latter part of his remarks about the problem of the areas which have been infested by bud worms. He refers specifically to Mr. Kennedy's recommendation in regard to the cutting of those infected trees, while the wood is still marketable. It may interest hon. members of the Legislature to know the Government has acted on that recommendation; this year there are 102 logging camps operating in the Nipigon area where there is the great concentration of bud worm infestation.

Since he has informed us he was in that area last year, he will doubtless recall one of the islands of the west shore of Lake Nipigon which was very badly infected. To carry out this very recommendation in that area, which is the centre of the infestation, the island was recently put up for tender, and tenders were received and the island will be cut this year, so the recommendations in regard to the cutting of logs where that can be carried out as a practical possibility, is already under way.

I do want to say, in regard to lumber, there has been a very considerable change since the time Mr. Kennedy made his report. Today the lumber situation is vastly improved, and actually the department has at present no record of any complaint from any lumber operator as to his inability to get lumber, except from one company from which we would receive complaints now, ten years from now and a thousand years from now if the same company is in operation, and I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows the name of the company to which I refer.

MR. OLIVER: You can name it, as far as I am concerned.

HON. MR. DREW: I think he knows it quite well. I think the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) remembers the name of that company very well. That company, I may say, is not short of logs for any reason connected with any matter of policy of this department. There is available to it by the ordinary business procedure—and I underline "ordinary business procedure"—all the logs it requires for its operations. Therefore, when I asked the question as to any company which might need logs or which had indicated a need for logs, I was actually asking for information, because that is the only company of which we are aware, and I would not regard its complaints as legitimate at this time in view of information in our possession.

I want to concur most completely with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) when he expresses his opinion as to the value of the Kennedy report. This report represents by far the most complete and comprehensive examination on our forest resources and the problems associated with forestry which has ever taken place in this province, or anywhere else in Canada. Today that report is regarded as a standard textbook in every province, and outside of Canada, on the methods which will best deal with many of the problems of forestry.

As I indicated a few days ago, the Government has already decided, as a matter of policy, to put into effect most of the recommendations in that report. I pointed out at that time that there were two major recommendations, apart from the problems of reforestation and ordinary forestry, were export of unprocessed pulp logs and the limited cutting in areas which can only be regarded as high grade. I recalled to the hon. members that on October 2nd last, I had announced a stated policy of the government and the details of that policy in regard to the export of unprocessed wood and that in the early part of this year I had announced the policy of the Government in regard to the insistence upon the cutting of all types of wood in those areas where cutting operations are taking place.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has said he does not see how there can be a high level of reforestation where there is clear cutting. That is a problem of scientific forestry which is actually a matter of stated policy. So long as there are trees deliberately left for the purpose of re-seeding, natural reforestation takes place in those areas and upon a better basis if there is clear cutting than if you leave the concentration of seeds from the lower types of wood. That is now set out in an effective policy of the Department of Lands and Forests.

In regard to the insistence upon the effective practice, the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Scott) I know will go into this with considerable detail when he is taking up his estimates.

I do want to refer to the operating companies mentioned by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and suggested in the Kennedy Report, and I would point out the setting up of the operating company was a recommendation of a method to deal with a particular problem; the problem was to assure the full use of all wood in an area that is being cut, now that new scientific developments have made it possible to use every type of wood in the industrial production. As to whether these operating companies are the solution or not, I agree with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that such a decision must depend upon a practical examination of the best methods by which this practice can be put into effect. Let me say that the position of the Government is positive, without any shading in any way, that we are going to insist on all types of wood being properly cut in those areas where cutting is taking place. As to the method by which it can be best assured, the government has not yet decided, for the very reason indicated by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), namely, that we do propose to examine this from a practical point of view to see how this can best be done. As indicated already in the Legislature, there will be a conference in June of representatives of all those engaged in these operations and in this activity, so that we may have the advantage of their advice in reaching a decision as to the method which will best carry that into effect.

I want to speak only for a moment about a point raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) as to reforestation. There are, of course, two types of reforestation; one, natural process which takes place so long as the seed trees remain and the conditions have been left in such a way that it can be done naturally, and also by leaving seed trees, as I have indicated, in areas which are being cut; and the other is planting trees.

I think it may be a matter of interest to know that in the last year of the government of which he was a member, 11,000,000 trees were distributed from the nurseries of the province; whereas, this year there will be 15,000,000 distributed. I do not want to leave any misunderstanding as to what took place in that case. The raising of seed trees is not something that can be done over night and I am not suggesting for one moment that these nurseries emerged since we took office or while the present government has been in office. It has been a long-scale development over the years and we are expanding as rapidly as possible the number of production nurseries for this very reason, but as everyone knows a tree, even in its smallest stage, takes a long time to produce. This is something, no matter what our desires may be for speed and efficiency, which must be limited by the ordinary routine of nature. I can assure the hon. members that the government is expanding this activity as rapidly as possible and will continue to do so.

In regard to the scientific method of dealing with forest infestation other than by actual cutting, I might say the research branches have been expanded and we have, of course, the advantage that through the Research Council there will be greater co-ordination in the many fields of research of that kind.

To return to reforestation and what has been done, I would point out only by way of comparison to indicate the extent to which we are going forward with the recommendations of the Kennedy Report, the last budget presented by the Government of which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was a member, for reforestation was $226,000, whereas the budget for that same purpose this year is $728,000.

MR. OLIVER: You do not seem to be getting any trees to justify that increase.

MR. DREW: The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will realize trees do take some time and 15,000,000 trees is quite a few trees; and there are two new nurseries which will provide the basis for many millions more in the years ahead.

I want to deal with the point made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition about the service. He quoted my words of 1943 when I said, "There is a strange illusion about the financial affairs of this Government." I never said truer words. There was constantly a strange illusion of the affairs of that government in every aspect of their activities, and it is only since we took office that it has been possible to place the business affairs of this province upon a basis where we can say with any certainty the figures actually represent the business position of the province at the time.

However, I want to say in the conduct of the affairs of that government they had the advantage of many loyal civil servants, most of whom are still serving in the same offices and the same capacities, and they had the advantage of the handling of those funds, at any rate, on a basis which was above reproach and which did unquestionably produce the surpluses mentioned.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) however, has overlooked the fact that the surplus which this Government reported of $25,000,000 was used for the purpose of reducing the debt of the province and by doing so the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was carrying out effectively the very idea suggested by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) when he said the government should put itself in a position where it can meet any uncertain conditions in the days ahead.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, there is no way in which the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) can more effectively put this provincial government in a position to meet any uncertainties in the future, than by reducing the debt when conditions are good so the credit position of the province is in the most satisfactory position possible in the unhappy event that, at any time in the future, we should again go through the uncertain periods we did in the past.

I am not for one moment suggesting—and the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has not suggested—that it is within the power of this Government—excellent though it is—to stem the tide of a world-wide economic storm. I do say the efficiency of the Government in its various departments has a great deal to do with the position of the province and the ability it will have to meet such a storm, if such an event should occur. I do not think anything could possibly give the people of this province more justification for confidence in the ability of this government to meet a test, great or small, in the years ahead, than to see the administration of such business-like methods which are making this provincial government strong in its capacity to deal with events of that kind if they should unhappily occur. I can only express a hope that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will have a copy of Hansard forwarded to Ottawa so that his remarks in regard to the undesirability of surplus may be read, marked, learned and inwardly digested by those who will presently be passing on their surplus there.

I want to speak briefly on the gasoline tax. This government did apply the gasoline tax, which had been previously imposed by the dominion government. It is not a small tax, it is true, but it is strange, however, the number of people, who do not find it limiting their desire to purchase gasoline. Perhaps it should be examined in a sense of reality which discloses to us that the motorists pay eleven cents to use our excellent highways for a distance of twenty miles; a pretty low toll for the magnificent facilities we have in most parts of the province and for the facilities which will be available when the great programme, which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) regards as visionary, is fulfilled.

There was a point in the hon. Leader of the Opposition's (Mr. Oliver) speech which I felt expressed why he need not be worried, because he said the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) was projecting his plans into the distant future, and left the thought that probably the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) could not safely do so. I think the hon. members of this Legislature know the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) can project his plans far into the future with complete confidence that he will be there to do the job.

I want to mention also the remark made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) about the fact that the dominion government had in effect said, "we are taking this off, so the province of Ontario will have its taxes lowered." In spite of the very high degree of co-operation which we can demonstrate, I still repeat it is the responsibility of this government on behalf of the people of Ontario, and not for the dominion government to tell us what we will do and what we will not do. I notice a new note of enthusiasm on the face of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver)—and as I indicated before, I always do get a certain amount of satisfaction when results begin to show themselves. I am happy to find he is becoming more enthused with what we have in this province, and I enjoy the evidence of the good educational work we have done in that respect. I want to mention the difference between the position of this province and the state of New York, which indicates a reason why this province is not in quite the same position to have a surplus as is the state of New York. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows that during the war the preceding government, with my concurrence as leader of the opposition, agreed to give up the main taxing powers of the province in return for an annual payment, because of the argument which was put forward then, that with the centralization of control necessary for war production, it was desirable to have a balancing centralization of financial control at the same time. There was complete agreement amongst all the hon. members of this legislature as to that course.

But, the state of New York and other states of the United States did not make any such arrangement and the result was that every state in the Union had its tax incidence applied to the enormously expanding production based upon war expenditure. Remember, if we had stayed in those tax fields and those taxes had been applied to war production, we would have had enormous surpluses in this province, but voluntarily, as the gesture of co-operation in waging the war, this province gave up those taxing powers for the war period. I want the hon. members to remember that, it was only for the war period. The reason that was done was not because of the desirability of the practice, but because it was demonstrable that through the necessity of going into new jobs of war production, control of the raw materials and things of that kind must necessarily be exercised by the dominion government in a way which would not be practical or desirable in peace, and it would be desirable to have the highest degree of centralization of production and finance under these emergency conditions. When that was done, the hon. Minister of Finance, on behalf of the dominion government gave a most solemn and unqualified undertaking that the moment the war was over, plans would be made to return the provinces to the position they had been in before that agreement. This was not only a verbal undertaking, but a statutory undertaking was given that at the end of the first fiscal year following the cessation of hostilities, the provinces would have returned to them their taxing powers undiminished; and yet today we find ourselves in the position where we have not yet been able to persuade the dominion government as to the desirability of recognizing that solemn obligation, and they are charging us with obstructing co-operation when all we have done at any time is to say, "There is your undertaking; observe it, and then let us sit down and reach a new agreement which will be in the best interests of all the people of Canada."

I dislike repeating these things over and over again, but I can only remind the hon. members once more that in spite of all the propaganda disseminated by every propaganda device available at the present time, to the effect that Ontario and Quebec have prevented co-operation, that it was this government which made the first proposal for a conference and it was upon the basis of our proposal, a conference was called, but it was upon the motion of the dominion government the conference was adjourned on May 3, 1946, with the statement that it was only for the purpose of examining the proposals then before them, and since that time we have been urging the dominion government to reconvene the conference, which it is their obligation to do, in the general interest of all the people of Canada.

I would like to refer to a remark made by the hon. member for North Cochrane (Mr. Habel) in this debate. I refer to the rather surprising statement which he made when he said that Mr. Duplessis and I were walking arm in arm together.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Of course you are. There is your picture. Certainly you are.

MR. DREW: Yes, certainly; I have no doubt it is a very good picture. He sought to leave the implication there is something improper in that. May I say to the hon. members of this Legislature and leave no doubt, that I will be happy to walk arm in arm with Mr. Duplessis in the interests of this province, at any time. As Premier of this province, I have had many contacts with him during the past three years. I have dealt with no man in public life who has extended a greater measure of co-operation to this government and to the people of this province than has hon. Mr. Duplessis. Through that co-operation, we now have under way on the Ottawa River the greatest power projects ever developed between the two provinces. In all negotiations he has always recognized, very properly, his first duty to the people of Quebec, but he has met the legitimate requests of this province in a spirit which might well be taken as an example throughout the whole of Canada of good inter-governmental relationships. The co-operation between the governments of Quebec and Ontario has covered a very wide field. We have been able to make satisfactory agreements, not only for the construction of new power plants on the Ottawa River, but also for additional supplies of electric power over and above existing contracts. We have established a wide measure of uniformity in different fields of taxation, and there has been the closest co-operation between such related departments of government as mining, lands and forests, highways and so on.

The Governments of Quebec and Ontario have at all times, since the meeting of the Dominion-Provincial Conference, in August, 1945, held similar views in regard to the importance of respecting the constitution which made this country a nation in 1867. On no single occasion, either at the first meeting of that conference or at the meetings which followed, did either the government of Quebec or the Government of Ontario express any opinion or put forward any proposal which did not recognize the desirability of general agreement to provide those services which will elevate the living standards of all the people of Canada, wherever they may live.

It is only necessary to examine the statements made in different provincial Legislatures this year to realize how disillusioned are some of those governments which submitted to the terms put forward by the dominion government without consulting the provinces. The governments which a year ago hailed the purchase price of their taxing rights as the dawn of new financial security for the provinces, are, in a number of cases, now forced to resort to new forms of taxation to meet their current financial requirements.

I believe the time is not far distant when those provinces which did give up their most important taxing rights for a fixed payment, without any compensating advantages, will come to the decision that the refusal of the governments of Quebec and Ontario to submit to such terms, actually saved our federal system, without which there can be no sound basis for national unity in Canada.

For such measure of success as we have had in preserving our constitution, I am very proud to have my name associated with that of the head of the government of Quebec (Mr. Duplessis). I think all the hon. members of this Legislature should welcome the high degree of co-operation which has been established and should express the hope that the measure of co-operation between these governments will be expanded and strengthened in the years ahead.

I regret any attempt should be made to criticize that co-operation. Before Confederation these two provinces were one. Our history follows a parallel course through many long years. One of the most important questions before all of us today in Canada is whether we will fan the embers of past misunderstandings, or seek in every way we can to find a broader basis for co-operation and friendship, with the common purpose of building a stronger and more united Canada, within which every province, and everyone in them will share the many advantages and opportunities which Providence has placed at the disposal of this great nation.

I do not in any way object to the suggestion that we "walk arm in arm." I in no way object to any emphasis upon the fact that these two governments today find it possible to carry forward their co-operation on so wide a field. Having said that, let me make it equally clear that at no time has this province indicated any unwillingness to establish as high a measure of co-operation with any other provincial government in Canada. On the contrary, at the very time we put proposals forward jointly between these two provinces in regard to our own internal taxing arrangements, we extended proposals for the same measure of co-operation to every other province in Canada. I believe what has been accomplished between these two provinces forms the ideal pattern for future co-operation in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. Speaker, I want to deal for a time with some of the remarks made about the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and the situation in this province.

The budget speech itself has dealt very effectively with the huge developments which are under way, and has indicated just what this government plans. I am not going into any detail as to the criticisms made in the main Budget Address on behalf of the Opposition, by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), but I do want to express very great interest in one part of the speech which the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) made.

He read into the record a letter which he had written to Dr. Hogg, who was then Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, dated February 24, 1942, when the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) was Acting Premier of Ontario. In that letter he explained to Dr. Hogg his great concern lest we face a shortage of power in this province. I think the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) can very properly say he showed a commendable appreciation of the danger, which was obviously not shared by the hon. Premier for whom he was acting at that time.

The interesting thing about that letter is he wrote it to Dr. Hogg, as Acting Premier; not as a private member, or member of the government, but as Acting Premier, emphasizing the need for doing something right away. Then he went on, and read the letter which is quoted in Hansard, and which I need not repeat, and after reading the letter he said:

"I may say, Mr. Speaker, although Dr. Hogg had spoken at the Electric Club just a few days before, his health was in such a condition at that time that by the time my letter got to his office, he was in Nassau."

I interjected the comment, "We had the same difficulty," and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) went on to say:

"Yes, I appreciate that. I have not been one who unduly criticizes the hon. Premier for what he has done, although I did suggest he might have done it in a different way."

And then he went on to say, "It was a difficulty which was embarrassing at the time."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe there is quite an important disclosure in that letter. The Acting Premier was concerned about the impending shortage of power, and he wrote to Dr. Hogg, but before the letter got to Dr. Hogg's office, he was in Nassau, and I assume, as in my own case, without the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) knowing anything about it.

He nods support of my remarks.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): That is right, Mr. Speaker. I agree that Hansard does not get the nod on the paper.

HON. MR. DREW: That is right. He wrote a letter to Dr. Hogg without knowing that he had departed for Nassau, and did not receive the letter at that time.

I had the same experience. The difference was I did not regard that as establishing a business relationship which could continue. Dr. Hogg was ill at that time, and continued not to be in good health. When this situation arose early last year, and we found ourselves confronted with the situation where Dr. Hogg was in Nassau, and I found he had left without leaving any instructions to his engineers about the available supply of 100,000 horsepower which could be drawn from Buffalo simply by turning a switch, I felt, following earlier difficulties—and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has referred to the difficulties they had—the time had come when his lack of good health made it advisable there should be another chairman.

There is one point, however, I do want to clear up. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has suggested the way it was done was not the way it should be. I think the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will recall, when I remind him, I wrote to Dr. Hogg, stating in the most courteous terms, the fact that the course of events had made it impossible to do anything else but suggest he resign. Mr. Speaker, he could have resigned on the grounds of ill health. He himself had stated that to be a reality—and it was a reality—without any acrimonious comment of any kind, had he not seen fit himself to disclose to the public the letter had been written, and to himself precipitate the unfortunate discussion which took place. If he had accepted the letter in the spirit in which it was written, and tendered his resignation on the perfectly proper ground of ill health—which was very real—there need have been no suggestion of unpleasantness of any nature.

Mr. Speaker, I only say this now because even in my desire to avoid conveying any unpleasantness to Dr. Hogg, I do not propose any longer to leave this matter in a position where hon. members of the Opposition continue attacking me for the manner in which I conducted this matter.

I repeat, unfortunate though the discussion may have been, any acrimonious publicity which attended that event was entirely the responsibility of Dr. Hogg himself.

Mr. Speaker, I now want to clear up one other point. When it is suggested Dr. Hogg's resignation might have been dealt with in another way, I think perhaps it may not be sufficiently understood by those by whom the statement is repeated—as it is repeated quite frequently by various hon. members of the Opposition—that Dr. Hogg was dealt with upon a most generous basis, which was in no way similar to the very improper manner in which the preceding government dealt with Dr. Gaby, an able engineer, who was dismissed without any opportunity to explain his position, and by the fact of the dismissal, denied any pension in spite of the very large contributions he had made to the pension fund of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

It was neither our desire, nor at any time our intention, nor has the result followed, that Dr. Hogg was deprived of one cent of pension. By virtue of placing this upon the basis of a voluntary resignation, he was able to avail himself of the pension scale established by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and Dr. Hogg is in receipt of a pension for life, not from this government, but from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission under their established pension system, of $7,457.60 per year. Do not let anybody say again that Dr. Hogg has been unfairly dealt with.

Dr. Hogg, on his own statement, was unwell, and unable to fulfil his duties, but there would have been no word of what I am saying now, had he not precipitated the discussion in the first place, and had not hon. members of the Opposition continued to project this matter into the open arena.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): May I ask the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) in what way what Dr. Hogg precipitated the discussion? I have never seen anything attributable to him which justified the action which was taken.

HON. MR. DREW: Do you believe the Toronto Daily Star found in the crystal glass that Dr. Hogg had been asked for his resignation.

MR. NIXON: He might have got it from your office. Things have come out of the Premier's office before. I remember one time when one of your predecessors sent a very handsome cheque by way of back salary to a former Premier, but before he got the cheque, the announcement came out in the papers.

HON. MR. DREW: It was not my office.

MR. NIXON: It was the Prime Minister's office.

HON. MR. DREW: I assure the hon. members it certainly did not get out from my office. The letter was passed directly from me to Dr. Hogg, and no one outside of my office, except Dr. Hogg, had any knowledge of the letter, until the story of the impending resignation appeared in the Toronto Daily Star.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Is it not possible that somebody might have betrayed a confidence, and Dr. Hogg not be responsible for it?

HON. MR. DREW: No, I would say I have not had confidences betrayed, because I have no Communists in my office.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: I have placed this matter on the record so that the hon. members of the Legislature may know exactly what the situation is.

I regret—and I say this most sincerely—more than I can say, that it has become necessary to say this, but the necessity for doing so has been caused by the repeated attacks on the way we dealt with Dr. Hogg, and the imputation he had been dealt with unfairly.

I said something about Communism a moment ago, which was not any idle remark thrown across the floor of the Legislature, but represents my own opinion of everything connected with Communism. I want to deal with that subject for a moment, in view of the strange spectacle we have had in this free Legislature of the amazing defences of the practises of that vile system in these past few months in other lands—oh, not from you, Mr. hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

MR. OLIVER: That is just a mannerism of mine.

HON. MR. DREW: I thought for a moment you feared I was referring to you.

MR. OLIVER: No, go ahead, if you want to.

HON. MR. DREW: I want to indicate just how real this threat is, and the kind of thing which is happening, so the hon. members may understand something of the nature of these activities and why every hon. member of this Legislature, except the Communists, should be on his guard against the kind of things they are doing. I only wish it were possible to think we might find others "seeing the light." There have been Communists who have seen the light in other countries, and in this country, and have abandoned their Communism.

Looking across at the two hon. members who, in so many ways, can be so pleasant and who unquestionably have great ability in the particular field in which they have recently been devoting their activities, it seems difficult to associate with them all the evils of as dangerous and vile a despotism as this world has ever known. They have seen fit to proclaim their faith in that despotism—of course described by the euphonious name of "democracy" in their case—they have proclaimed their faith in that system and we heard a further defence of it only last night.

I want to emphasize this afternoon one particular type of activity which is going on today against which I think every one of the 86—other hon. members of this Legislature should be guarding very carefully. We have been welcoming into this country since the war thousands of displaced persons of different nationalities. A very large percentage of these people, when they come here, are unable to speak English and for that very reason are peculiarly subject to the propaganda attacks of the Communists of their own racial background. When the trains leave the coast carrying D.P's, if it is possible for them to get on board, Communists of the same nationality get on there and seek to poison their minds before they get to the place where they are going to work. I should imagine every hon. member of this Legislature recalls one group of D.P's with very commendable common sense, kicked two of these Communists off the train when it got to North Bay a short time ago, and I hope they were firm and accurate in their action.

We are encountering this in many ways. We find for instance applications being made for so-called "cultural and educational organizations" by these Communist groups. They want to get behind the veil of a corporate body which will not disclose their names—names like Magnusson and Hill and others. Then, under this innocent veil they move in and start distributing their carefully planned Communist propaganda. I have seen many communications indicating the vigorous objection of these people who, through their own contacts and their family contacts, hate with a hatred we cannot understand, everything connected with that vile word "Communism." They, with the memories of their families murdered and of the cruelties of that despotism, have naturally objected on their arrival in this free country to the receipt of propaganda literature of that nature. But it does not stop there. Since the war, Communists of different racial backgrounds have not hesitated to threaten new arrivals in this country with what will happen to their people back home unless they support the Communists here and unless they stop their anti-Communist activities.

Let us remember, we have in this country many thousands of Poles, and only an infinitely small percentage of the Polish population in this country has anything to do with Communism. The overwhelming majority of the Poles in this country are fine, decent citizens who really believe in democracy, but they have received threats about what will happen to their people back home unless they stop their attacks on this vile doctrine.

We have in this country, many, many thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands, of Ukrainians, the overwhelming majority of whom hate Communism with an intensity which can only be shared by those whose family conditions make it possible to understand in personal terms the full reality. Some of them, as well, are being threatened by Communist Ukrainians with what will happen to their families back there if they do not discontinue their activities.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Where is the evidence for the sort of thing you are talking about?

HON. MR. DREW: I will give you one example. This happens to be one of a number.

This appeared some time ago in a publication known as Novosti which is the Communist publication of the Serbs here in town. In Novosti a letter was published from the National Front in Grab, directed to a particular Serb here who is decently and honourably and vigorously attacking everything connected with Communism and what is happening to the people in his own country.

This letter indicates the kind of things they do. This, remember, was no personal letter written to the editor of Novosti, this was a letter from the official local organization of the Communists in the home community of this man, named Ivan Hercey. I have no doubt you will find in your records he is one of those of whom you do not approve.

MR. MacLEOD: Never heard of him.

HON. MR. DREW: Check up, you will find him there.

I would like to give an example of the sort of things these citizens of our country who come out and try to tell their own people and our people who need to be told, just what the reality of Communism is and to what these people are subjected. These are the closing paragraphs of that letter in Novosti, published from the official organ in the local Communist publication:

"You can freely go to Fascist meetings, but it won't do you any good. We will never allow Paveliou, Macek and other Fascists to rule our country. Such agitators as you have destroyed many of our Communists, urging them to go to war—to death.

"Fascists with your relatives have done much harm to our people, and if they ever try it again, we won't leave any trace of them, not even a rooster to crow."

That, Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of this Legislature is the threat conveyed to a citizen of Ontario through a Communist publication here in this town, in his native language.

"It is easy for you to bark in Canada and the United States, but come over, Hercey, then we will show you. Ours is a just national government, but it is also unforgiving to national traitors, Fascists and killers, et cetera."

Then, it closes with this loving term:

"Many regards to our comrades, male and female, from Macedonia in Canada.

National Front in Grab."

Mr. Speaker, that is only one of the examples of the reality coming from this area which the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) visited a few months ago and returned to all that freedom on which we pride ourselves, to defend here in this Legislature last night this vile force with which he is associated.

Repudiate that evil form of despotism, and men who care for decency would not refuse to shake hands with either one of you, but any man who understands what this force is and who knows you know what it is, is forgetting what you are associating with if he extends to you the friendship to which men who love democracy are entitled.

Now this is the reality. As you go back to your ridings, those of you who do not believe in, but hate this kind of thing, be sure you tell those fine citizens of Polish, Ukrainian, Roumanian, Hungarian, Bulgarian, Yugoslavian, Czechs and other European nationalities now under the Communist yoke, this is a free country, and if they get threats from any Communist in this country, to go to the local police and have a charge laid right away.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: Tell them above all this is a free land and if they submit to threats of that kind to contribute to or assist these Communists, either under the open name or under false fronts, they are not in any way protecting their people back home, they are only contributing to the extension of that godless doctrine which is being spread over such a large part of the world today.

Each one of us has a job in this respect. In the riding of almost every hon. member here there are citizens of these nationalities. Encourage them in every way you can to think of themselves, not as new Canadians alone, but to think of themselves as people who have chosen Canada of their own free will; make clear to them what all the rights and the privileges and the protection really means which this free democracy of ours actually furnishes. There is a real job to be done to combat here in our own land these threats being extended shamelessly into Canada by the agents of Moscow.

Mr. Speaker, I have come to the end of my remarks, except to say I certainly concur in all the enthusiasm expressed by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in the position which this province is at the present time, and in the financial affairs of the provincial government.

You will now be called upon to vote on the budget, following this extended series of addresses going back to the day when he presented the budget here in the Legislature.

A vote on the budget is always a vote of confidence in the government. I repeat, as I said before, this is, however, not merely a vote of confidence in the government, it is a vote of confidence in the future of Ontario, which will benefit so greatly from the provisions which have been made so wisely in that document.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

The House divided on the amendment.

AYES: 17

NAYS: 54

The amendment negatived on division.

The House divided on the motion.

AYES: 54

NAYS: 17

The motion approved on division.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the Chair, and that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion approved.

House in Committee, Mr. Reynolds in the Chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Department of Lands and Forests.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I wonder if my honourable friend (Mr. Scott) is not going to make a general statement on his department, outside of the estimates.

HON. H. R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): This being not a department of word speaking, and there has been a lot of words this afternoon.

MR. OLIVER: I do not think we will take that. Each hon. Minister is responsible for his department. We have not considered any estimates. Surely we can have from the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) of Lands and Forests something in the nature of a résumé of the operation of his department.

HON. MR. SCOTT: The legislation that we have introduced shows that we are following the recommendations of the Kennedy Report, and I am sure the hon. member (Mr. Oliver) has travelled across the province, and the favourable things he has been hearing about the activities of our department would assure him that everything is going well.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Is that all you have to say?

HON. L. E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Read the report.

Votes 103 to 107, inclusive, approved.
On Vote 108.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): Mr. Chairman, I would just like to refer to a situation in connection with Kelvin Island on Lake Nipigon. I am not certain whether I got correct information from the department when I was in there. I would like to see a survey made as to the preservation of the cariboo, and the cutting—

HON. MR. SCOTT: Mr. Chairman, the chief of our Wildlife thinks if the cutting is done carefully, proper supervision made of the cutters to make sure there are no illegal activities, and if it is done during the summer months, which in his opinion is best, there should be no harm caused to this herd of cariboo. I can assure the member that my wild-life specialists are going in there to make sure before the operation starts.

Vote 108 approved.

On Vote 109.

MR. NIXON: I was wondering if the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) could not give us some information about this Air Service Branch, how it has been developed and what your plans are for the immediate future. It has always been of great interest to this House. I think we should have some information on that.

HON. MR. SCOTT: Well, Mr. Chairman, in answer to the hon. member's question, we started the season last spring with 30 aeroplanes. We lost 2 through accidents, leaving us 28 aeroplanes at the end of the season last fall. However, in conjunction with one of the larger aircraft factories and the officials of our air service they have worked out the plans of a new 'plane which is now under production. We will have 4, we expect, by the 1st of May, and before the summer we will have a total of 12 unless something unforeseen develops at the plant that is manufacturing them. These 'planes have a capacity of about 6 men. They are built to our specifications, and can carry materials for fire-fighting. Their wing-spread is wider, enabling us to land in more lakes than our conventional 'planes will land in.

In connection with the recommendation of Major Kennedy that we should look into the possibilities of helicopter use, the hon. members will remember that we had 2 come here last winter to put on a demonstration. The department hired 1 of those this summer. We put it out on actual tests in connection with fire-fighting, etc. We found it worked out very, very satisfactory. The only thing we are not yet satisfied is that it is bug-proof, and before we put the province to an investment of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000, as will be necessary, we will have to look into it further. The range is shorter and we would have to have more posts across the province. It requires different pilots and we would have to train them and would have to train an entirely new staff of mechanics, and for the time being we are going to keep our eyes open and as developments come along we will continue this system of renting, making sure it is suitable for our service and when we make sure the bugs are all ironed out and we are safe in investing the funds of the province, then we will do so.

Votes 109 and 110 approved.

On Vote 111.

MR. NIXON: Is this approximately what was paid out in these bounties last year?

HON. MR. SCOTT: Yes, approximately the same.

Votes 111 and 112 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Department of Reform Institutions.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): Just before we leave that—I know I am perhaps a little out of order here—I was wondering if the Minister in view of the fact that he did not make any remarks at the opening about this department, would he care to give us any indication as to what his department might have in mind to meet problems of duplication. Major Kennedy's report felt you could not surmount this problem without the cancellation of the present system of licensing. Well, you have mentioned 2 things. Do you mean in woods operations or particularly interested in drives on the river?

MR. ROBINSON: Let us stick to the duplication for now.

HON. MR. SCOTT: That comes under his recommendation for the formation of Crown operating companies. Of course, that river driving goes back to the old Upper Ottawa Improvement Company, which worked out very satisfactorily when they were using logs 12 to 15 inches in diameter. Now, whether some system of river improvements company on the Nipigon, which is particularly the one you refer to, would work out, I would prefer to give it a little more study and examination on my own part before making any commitment.

MR. ROBINSON: Could you give me something further on the duplication of services in the woods, various companies in cutting, single purpose in operation?

HON. MR. SCOTT: Single purpose operation, that is one thing that the department will stop. All kinds of timber will be taken out.

MR. ROBINSON: You believe it is possible under the present licensing system to achieve that end?

HON. MR. SCOTT: Where there is a will and determination to do things of that nature, nothing is impossible.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Page 100, Department of Reform Institutions.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Mr. Chairman, I would like to say something about the Ontario plan. The plan I think is very well received throughout not only the Dominion of Canada but in other countries as well. The objective, of course, is rehabilitation of the offender. That is the main object. The method is, first, scientific study and diagnosis; and the second is classification, and that is only limited by the number of institutions which we have. The third is education, which is academic, vocational, industrial, physical training and recreation. Number 4, after care. We are looking after that as we go along, and in our different institutions you will see what we are doing. Fifth, selection and training of staff. Sixth, employment of specialists, and seventh, ultimate abolition of gaols by the establishment of industrial farms to provide useful work and training.

Now, first, I will say something about our Brampton institution. Army huts at Brampton, open February 3rd, 1947, 300 acres of land at the Brampton Institution.

The superintendent is a former school principal, and is doing good work at Brampton.

The inmates, or the "students" as we call them, number about 160, their ages range from 16 to 21 years, inclusive. We have been considering the advisability perhaps of raising the age limit to 22. We started at first at 20, and by raising the limit perhaps we might bring in a few more for this special training.

There is academic training, which is compulsory. Every boy there must take that academic training. We have three teachers along that line. We have one full-time physical training and recreational instructor.

During the year we admitted 274 boys, students, to that school, and we discharged 155. There have been only 7 of the 155 re-committed. That is 4½ per cent. failure so far in the Brampton institution, which I think speaks well for the work which is being accomplished by the superintendent and his staff at that institution.

Many of the boys request they not be given parole, but be allowed to remain at Brampton in order to complete their studies there.

If the hon. members will bear with me, I would like to read a few excerpts from letters received from the students.

The first one is from a chap who was in the radio department, and it says:

"Jones is paying me $35 a week, 5 8-hour days, and I think a raise is coming through pretty soon. He seems to be quite pleased with my work, and thinks I am doing pretty good. Some time when you are down here for a week-end, drop in; I would like to see you."

Here is an extract from a letter from a student in the machine shop, written to Mr. Raaflaub. He says:

"Well, Mr. Raaflaub, I sure miss working with you. I know now what a real friend is. I never had any real friends before, and I want you to know just how much I appreciate all you have done for me and the others. You say that everyone should have a goal to shoot at, and if I can become half the man you are, I think that I will have accomplished a great deal."

MR. MACLEOD: Is that about you?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, it did not say anything about me. You were very anxious to go up to Brampton to see the school, but you were not so anxious to say the work was carried on in a successful way.

MR. MACLEOD: I did not have the opportunity.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You would have found some fault. You would say some of the hammers did not have the proper kind of handle—

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I never said anything of the sort.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Don't try to get me off the track. I do not mind fellows like you. I have been up against them for a long time, practically all my life.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) was reading, and it was a perfectly proper question which I put to him, asking if the letter was addressed to him.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I explained it was to the machine shop instructor. The first was to Mr. Graham, the superintendent. None of these is to me. I am not looking for any praise at all—

MR. MACLEOD: I did not suggest there would be anything wrong with such a letter.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, you made your remark in all innocence. Of course there is nothing wrong in it.

MR. MACLEOD: You are far too belligerent.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: One would almost think you are a minister's son.

MR. MACLEOD: How do you know I am not?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I believe you were at one time. I do not know how you drifted away.

Mr. Chairman, here is a letter written by one who was concerned about another chap. He was afraid he was on the wrong track. This says:

"I do not know if you know about Simms or not, but the last time I heard of him he was not working and was heading for New York, which to me sounds like trouble. Some people do not appreciate anything that is done for them, and I know he owes you a lot of thanks for what you have done for him."

Here is another letter addressed to Mr. Graham, the superintendent:

"Everything is going fine with me. I have a good job and like it very much. I am on the assembly line of refrigeration. The work is clean, and at present I am making 70 cents an hour, and in about 2 months, after we double production and plant, I will be head man in my department, which will give me much more pay. The manager informed me of this. The plant just opened last May, and started in production in August.

"My stay at Brampton has helped me a lot in my work, Mr. Graham, and also in life. It has given me the courage to go ahead and fight until I cannot."

Those are the nice things we are getting from the ex-students in this new institution which we established at Brampton.

I would like now to give you a few words on the different institutions, so that you will have an idea, before we come to the estimates, of what we are doing.

MR. NIXON (Brant): Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) permit an interruption? How are these boys admitted into Brampton? Through what procedure?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I was coming to that, but I will give you the information now, inasmuch as you are interested, and have had past experience.

There is a committee in Guelph composed of the psychiatrist, the assistant superintendent, the superintendent of the boys' school at Bowmanville, the superintendent of the boys' school at Galt, and a physician. They compose a committee, and when the boys come into Guelph they appear before this committee, and they are questioned regarding what trade they would like to follow, or what industry in Guelph, if they are to remain there. Then the committee looks at their case histories, which they get from what were the juvenile courts, or from the magistrates or judges.

The committee forms its opinions as to whether a particular boy would be suitable, if he comes within the age range, for the Brampton institution.

That is how they are chosen, and they never get a second opportunity. We have had very few escapes. If we do, and they are recaptured, they do not go back to Brampton again; they go to another institution.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) mind answering another question on that point? When they are admitted to the Brampton institution, are they admitted there without regard to previous records, that is to say, do you permit the intermingling of boys, those who have previous prison records, and the first offenders?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: When you speak about "boys with previous records," a boy might have been in juvenile court, and is out on probation. Some people might say that would be called a "case history." We do not like to use that against him. We want to give him a chance. Of course, if he had been a boy before the courts for stealing cars or things of that nature, or escaped from some other institution, we would not want to put him in there to destroy the morale of the boys in the Brampton institution. We have to be careful in that way. It is left entirely to the committee, as I mentioned before.

Now, in regard to Guelph. I say it is one of the most modern institutions in Canada. I think perhaps I would go a little farther, and say it is the most modern institution in the world.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I have never seen anything to beat it. I have visited all the institutions they would permit me to in different countries, the British Isles, Europe and the United States, and I do not know of anything more modern than Guelph. We have 945 acres, and a staff of 240 looking after a population of 800. We have only 399 cells to look after 800 people; the remainder are in dormitories.

It is a mistaken idea to say they are first offenders at Guelph, because they are not. If they are under 21 years of age we do not think it is fair to send them to Burwash. At one time some of the boys under 21 years of age were sent to Burwash, but we do not do it today, we keep them in Guelph; if they are under 21 years of age, even if they have some previous time.

We have trade training, we have six academic teachers; the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will realize this is quite a change when they did not have any teachers unless some person happened to be there who had, perhaps, been a school teacher and had a fairly good education.

I remember when I first visited Guelph there was one man who was a doctor and had gotten into trouble. He was looking after some of them, teaching academic work. Now we have 6 teachers.

Last year, just to give you an idea, we had 16 boys in the entrance class, and when I say "boys", the average age was 19 years and 6 months. That meant some of them were up around 30, to bring the percentage down. We had 16 of them, one of whom was paroled prior to the time the entrance examinations were tried. He went up into part of Bruce County and tried his examination, and he passed. Of the other 15, 8 got first class honours and the other 7 passed; we did not have a failure in the 16 in Guelph Reformatory.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: If that is not worth while, I would like to know what is. Even if there is some little disturbance in some other institution, if we are getting along with the young people at Guelph, the first offenders and the boys under 21 even if they are second or third offenders, I think we are accomplishing a great deal and are not wasting our time there.

Last year our revenue from the different factories—you know we have industries, farming, dairying, hog raising, greenhouse, gardening, abattoir, cannery, woollen mills, furniture factory, marker plant, tailor shop, laundry, carpentry, bricklayer—last year we took in $864,000 in revenue from the Guelph institution, and we estimate the revenue this year at $1,101,500. We are above the estimates we made last year, and I think we will be above again this year, too.

Coming to Mimico, this is an institution for older men and short-term men, mostly from Toronto jails. We do bring some of them from Hamilton, but not very many. They are nearly all from Toronto jails because we had an agreement with the City of Toronto when we took over the Langstaff property for a mental hospital, we would look after the short-term prisoners at Mimico, and that is what we are doing. We have 458 short-term prisoners at Mimico. They are all in dormitories, I think there are just 3 cells, or something like that, otherwise all dormitories. They are more alcoholics. Alcoholics Anonymous have been doing splendid work. They have been coming into our institutions, getting in touch with the men there and I must say they have been getting results. We are going a little farther ahead, to make a study; we are going to have our superintendents make a study and see if we cannot help more of those people to a greater extent than we have been doing in the past.

The main industry in this institution is brick and tile manufacturing, structural of course, floor, agricultural tile, farming—hog and poultry raising, dairying and milk which is supplied to the hospital at New Toronto.

The revenue last year was $96,500. We have improved our plant, and we have some new machinery and expect to have a revenue of $131,500 for the coming year at Mimico.

Of course it is not necessary for me to tell you, you have been reading and are no doubt familiar with the statements last year we had a champion cow so far as milk was concerned, in the world. I just got a report today, handed to me, where this same cow, although last year it had the misfortune of breaking into fresh clover and as our farmer members will know, this set her back a little, nevertheless, we are pleased to be able to report Reta Roberts, number 464395, finished her third 365-day record on March 31, 1948, with 33,412 pounds of milk, 1,148 pounds of fat, with an average test of 3.44.

On June 17, 1947, she milked 160 pounds in one day. We were offered, in fact I have a standing offer now for this cow at Mimico, of $7,000. We have no milking machines there, and these "old crocks" as some people call them are looking after this herd at Mimico. They come back to know how they are getting along, not looking for more time, they call just because they are fond of the cattle there, fond of farming, and, after all, there is a lot of them who just got off on the wrong foot and are not bad fellows.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): She must be a wonderful cow.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, she is a nice beast. You should meet her.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

AN HON. MEMBER: He would be left holding the bag.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: When I come to this next institution, no holds are barred. The only thing we want is one at a time and no hitting below the belt, and when you break, break clean—those are the rules.

Here we are at Burwash. This is for repeaters, over the age of 21. We have 150, that is an average of about 150 there, who have served penitentiary terms. We have them from Sing-Sing, from Stony Mountain, from Kingston Penitentiary, from all the outstanding institutions in the world. I think we have a few of them there, and I must say in fairness to the chaps who have been in those institutions, they are not the most difficult to handle, they have learned by experience the better way to do is carry on the best they can until their time has expired, and in the meantime, perhaps pick up a little trade and build up their health and their mind. They are well fed, of course, regardless of what you may say.

We have a staff there of 220. We have an increase of 35 over what has ever been there before. The present population is 713; we have just 168 cells, the balance being in dormitories.

We have 2 full-time medical officers and a surgeon from Sudbury on call at any time to perform operations. We have 2 assistant superintendents beside the superintendent, and 2 registered nurses, a well-equipped hospital, 6 full-time physical recreational officers, a part-time dentist, a new 3-room school, a trained staff, a new trade training building now being equipped, 3 full-time counsellors for inmates. The main industries are lumbering, cattle and sheep raising, dairying and farming. We have staff houses under construction, there has been difficulty getting materials. The hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) has been doing the best he could. We have homes for 70 families at the present time and are wanting to add homes for 60 additional families.

The public school is to be enlarged. We have quite a village there, having 220 employees, and we have to enlarge the public school. It can only accom-moderate 75 pupils and we will have to go up to 160 pupils.

Revenue last year was $185,000, and we think we are going to raise that to $195,000 this year, provided we have good weather and plenty of moisture.

Mercer Reformatory, you ask me about that reformatory—yes, it is an old building, well-equipped, well looked after. Miss Milne is a wonderful superintendent and her assistant, Miss McGraw, also. We have a population of 157 there, of course, some of them have been there quite often. They are repeaters, but we have very little difficulty handling them and getting along.

Personal laundry for other institutions is the main industry there, that is, I mean for Government institutions. A factory for garment manufacturing is operated. Last year we placed there the first academic education, with 3 teachers, a teacher of physical training recreation and modern hair-dressing is taught there. Here is a very important thing, with an average population of 157 last year we took in a revenue of $191,000. We think this year we will take in $242,000.

Of course, you will remember last year I announced we would be establishing a new building out in the country, a convenient distance from the City of Toronto, because that is where the greater number of the inmates come from. We had looked over a property which we thought was satisfactory, but some person did not like to have us locate it there so we had to look for another, and we have another location which I think is going to be satisfactory. We will be able to sell the Mercer, the old building on King Street, a large institution, to some manufacturing industry or to the City of Toronto, and perhaps get sufficient money to build a new institution outside.

We have been going into scientific study, the chief psychologist is setting up techniques at Guelph and he has been working also at Burwash. He has tested almost 2,000 inmates up to the present time.

We find when a psychologist is working with those who have to be disciplined, those who have broken the rules, and consellers are working with them also, we have very little difficulty. This is cutting down our punishments and our disciplinary rules, as it were, considerably.

We have staff training at Guelph. We have 8 courses. We trained 159 officers at Burwash. We had 9 courses, that was basic training, largely, at Burwash. We trained 112 officers. At Guelph we had 5 courses for cooks. We trained 19 cooks for the different institutions. For physical instructors we picked out 18. We had 1 course and had 18 men in that course to spread over our different institutions.

Of course, our plan is to have more institutions, more effective classifications; abolition of the county 37 jails and 8 jails in the district. There is no doubt reduction of the larger institutions will come in time as we have more institutions.

I am sorry hon. members from the north country are not here just now when I am on this subject. There is a new institution at Monteith in northern Ontario. The hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) will know about it; I did not notice the other hon. member had left.

At Monteith which was opened in May, 1947, we have 744 acres there. Of course we have not had very much opportunity to do much farming so far, but we will during the coming years. We have 100 prisoners from northern Ontario jails there at the present time.

That is the institution which you have read about in the Montreal Standard, the Winnipeg Free Press, and also in the Timmins paper, particularly in the Timmins paper what a prisoner said after he had been released.

We have no bars on the windows, and no cells. The guards have no guns, and there is no ammunition around the place at all so far. Unless we run into trouble that is the way it will continue. There are 100 men there in a wide-open institution, carrying on all the different work that is required there.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Have you any industries established at Mon-teith, except agriculture?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, we have not. We hope to, but we have not, so far.

In regard to Neys: That was opened in October. We have 102 there. That was to relieve the jails in the lakehead district, and the western part of the province, Port Arthur, Fort William, Kenora, and points like that.

We took over the prisoner-of-war camp. We have no farm land. We are just dismantling the buildings, and we intend later to establish a farm further up in the north-west, somewhere in the Rainy River district. The hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Newman) is not in his place, but he asked a question a few days ago in the House, and I might say we have picked out a location near Fort Frances, on the Rainy River, and that is where we will establish, after we dismantle the huts, and move them from Neys.

The next is on the Rideau, at Burritt's Rapids. We are dismantling the huts at Cornwall, and moving them to Burritt's Rapids. That will look after the county jails in eastern Ontario, Pembroke, Perth, Ottawa, L'Orignal, Cornwall, and up to Brockville. That one institution will look after all the prisoners from all the county jails in that district. We hope, however, to have another one in that district, in the very near future. We are dealing with the Federal Government in a proper way, and I think we will have another one there very shortly. It will be somewhere in central Ontario.

MR. NIXON: Has my friend made any statement regarding the one in Brant County at Burtch.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I did say it would be within 100 miles of Hamilton. Some person put it in the paper, where it was going to be. There is nothing to hide about it. That is where it was. That is the property for which we are dealing now. Of course, there were many protests from people in Brant County. I had a letter from the county council of Brant, telling us they had read about an industrial farm to be established, and they asked me if I would place the first one in Brant County, and then when we did, they objected. It makes it very difficult for us to satisfy them.

The next is the branch at Burtch. That will be opened very shortly.

Then the next is the Galt branch, for boys 14 years and under. There we have 60 acres of land, and we have 122 boys, all under 14. We have a staff of 50, and a programme mainly academic, with 6 teachers. Of course, we have the boys out for vacations during the summer for 2 or 3 weeks. We have physical education, sports, games, bugle band, sea and air cadets, instructions in piano and music appreciation, and weekly musicales.

In regard to religion, the boys attend at the town church and the daily chapel in the school.

We have gardening, shoe repairing, manual arts, woodwork, and sheet metal. That is for the little boys.

Now we come to Bowmanville, where we have 300 acres of land, good herds and sheep and hogs. We have 175 boys, 14 years and over, with a staff of 72. We have academic up to grade 10, and vocational, including agricultural, animal husbandry, poultry, machine, sheet metal, shoe repair, barbering, automotive, and woodwork.

We have physical training, with a modern gymnasium and a pool.

We provide after care by 6 placement officers, supervising over 500 boys on parole.

Now we come to Cobourg, the school for girls, one of the finest to be found in the country. There are 2 large residences, McCook and Strathmore, located on beautifully landscaped ground on Highway No. 2, east of Cobourg. Any of the hon. members passing there will see a sign along the road "Ontario Training School for Girls." Go in, and ask for the superintendent, tell him who you are, and that you would like to see the institution. Talk to the little girls in there, and see how happy they are. We have 100.

We have as the superintendent one whom I think is outstanding in any institution, Miss Isabel J. Macneill, O.B.E. She was formerly a commander of the WREN training ship at Galt. Miss Macneill was one of two ladies during the war who reached the high rank of commander. The other was at head office, and Miss Macneill was the only one on a ship, who received the high honour, and also the O.B.E.

We have there all the different teachings. You hear some criticism of the girls being afraid to meet the people outside. It is said they do not know what is going to happen to them when they come out. Some lady said the girls were scared and wondering what it was like to be outside. She did not tell you we won the softball championship for that district, and the girls from the training school were playing on the team. She did not tell you they go to a show every Saturday; they put on a play in Cobourg for a professional women's organization, and there was $150 taken last New Year's night at a play put on by the girls. They come up here to try their examination in the Conservatory of Music. We had 33 try the entrance from the Cobourg School, and 32 of them passed. I see some people from the Department of Education here. I wonder if they can find any school in the Province of Ontario with a better record than that, 32 out of 33 passing the examination.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: (St. Andrew): You should become Minister of Education.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh no. This is no joking matter. We want to do everything we possibly can. While I myself have not been in touch with this work over a period of years, I have spoken with those who have, and they tell me the success with which we meet in connection with these little girls is wonderful, girls who were wayward at one time, but who saw the error of their ways, many of them married and happy, some of them mothers, and all good citizens of our country. If we can accomplish that I really think we are doing something.

MR. MACLEOD: Is that the institution which was criticized in an article in Liberty?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, this is the institution. Maybe you would like me to tell you something about that.

A lady called into my office one day and said she wanted to write a book on "Women without freedom." I said, "I do not know how you would get much down there at the girls' school at Cobourg." She said, "It is nothing personal, and there will be no names mentioned, but I want to go down there because I want to write this book; I am not going down there to criticize the school, because I do not know anything about the school, and never had anything to do with one."

However, when she found it might perhaps help her to sell the book, if she ever got it out, she apparently thought it would be a nice thing to go to a meeting of—I think it was the Women's Institute, or something like that—and speak.

After she had spoken, we immediately got in touch with Mrs. Ross, who had been on the school board in Toronto for a number of years, and several officers of that organization went down, and I suppose the hon. members have read what Mrs. Ross said, that it was "The most fantastic statement I ever heard of."

The little girls wrote us letters wanting us to write to the newspapers and tell them this lady did not know what she was talking about.

MR. MACLEOD: How old are these girls?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: They run up to 16 or 17. There may be a couple who are younger. She said, "We keep them there until they are 21." Nothing is farther from the truth, because the average stay is less than 1 year.

This lady went down in order to have something to talk about, and she saw these 100 little girls, who were not there because they had attended Sunday school twice on Sundays. She threw her pocket book on the floor, as if she was looking for them to do something, and she said the superintendent made the little girls sit on the floor until they told who took the $10 out of her pocket book, which she herself threw down, tempting them to do what they did. She did not tell them that at the Women's Institute.

MR. MACLEOD: Do you think she did that deliberately?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You are asking me?

MR. MACLEOD: Well, I thought so.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Judge for yourself. There are some funny people in this world.

MR. NIXON: Did she check the contents of the purse as soon as she picked it up?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We have a training school board, with Dr. Lewis as chairman, a separate school inspector for the city of Toronto, and a professor in the University of Toronto, and Mrs. Sanderson, the wife of Dr. Sanderson, who, prior to her marriage was a public health nurse and a social service worker. How can these people make trips down to the institution, inspect them, and come back and give us a good report, if some person who does not know anything about the schools, and admits she does not, goes down and criticizes these people who are doing such a good job?

MR. MACLEOD: May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) this question? When these people come to you and ask for permissions to go into institutions like that, do you not try to get information about them? Do you let irresponsible persons go in and get material for articles?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am glad to hear you say that, because I learned a lesson. A gentleman made a request to go into the Don Jail and the Hamilton Jail, and he was politely told by my deputy that these were institutions which were going to be torn down and disappear, and he should go to some of our newer institutions, and let us know what he thinks of those. I cannot believe he was there for any good purpose, when he wanted to inspect the Don Jail and the jail on Barton Street in Hamilton.

MR. MACLEOD: Who was the man?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Well, it is just as well not to mention his name. They are floating around all the time, and they like themselves pretty well.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I wonder, since it is approaching 6 o'clock—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I will be glad to go ahead, because I have only just got started.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: May I just finish this part?

I want to say a word now about the parole board, because there have been misunderstandings by a lot of people about the duties of that board, and some people have written articles in the press, which has led prisoners to believe the Parole Board could deal with prisoners under definite sentences. All they can do is to recommend ticket of leave to the Federal Government. That is all they can do, in connection with definite sentences. It is the indefinite sentences with which the Board of Paroles deals, and they have been dealing with them very successfully. For the past 4 years they have been assisting the Federal Government in dealing with tickets of leave. I think the Board of Parole must have used very good judgment, because 84.8 per cent. of those paroled were satisfactory. That is a pretty good record, 84 per cent. successful, due to the attention to duty of the Board of Paroles.

At 6 o'clock the Committee recessed.

At 8.00 O'CLOCK P.M.

After recess:

On Vote 172.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) was evidently anticipating some unkind remarks from this quarter of the House, and I am frank to say I was rather surprised by his very belligerent remarks as he introduced his estimates.

I want to begin by expressing my appreciation to the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) for accepting a suggestion which was put forward at the last session that hon. members of the House be afforded an opportunity of visiting some of the institutions over which he has jurisdiction. I was one of those who availed themselves of the opportunity of visiting the school at Brampton, and I want to assure the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) when the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Creighton) spoke of that visit a few days ago, the rest of us who accompanied him felt he was speaking for the entire delegation and that he was expressing the appreciation of all of us.

So far as that school is concerned, I must say I was very much impressed with the work being done there, and the serious effort being made to reclaim those boys and return them to society as useful citizens. That is the only institution under the Minister's department I have had an opportunity to visit, and I happen to be one of those hon. members in the House who has had no inside experience so far as penal institutions are concerned.

AN HON. MEMBER: Not yet.

MR. MACLEOD: "Not yet," says the hon. member. I hasten to add, however, about 31 years ago I did spend a week-end in Bow Street jail in London, England, as the result of being absent without leave. The recollections I have of that institution make me hope the prisons in Ontario are an advance over the conditions as I recall them in Bow Street jail at the tender age of 15. I did not enjoy it a bit; as a matter of fact,

I was told I occupied the same room as Dr. Crippen, the man who became famous as a murderer way back in those years which you can remember.

On Item 172, Mr. Chairman, I just want to query the item for travelling expenses. I see you have there $19,000 estimated for 1948-49 as compared with $3,500 in 1946-47, but during that period you spent $9,800. I was wondering why there was an increase of $10,000 for travelling expenses.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Is that No. 2?

MR. MACLEOD: That is No. 2.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: "Travelling expenses, $19,000" this year.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, this year, but—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We overspent that this year. It cost us $14,000. With the new institutions, our figures this year went up. We had to draw more money, $14,000. We are asking for $5,000 more.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, I am just calling the hon. Minister's (Mr. Dunbar) attention to the fact last year the estimate was $3,500 for travelling expenses.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, $7,000.

MR. MACLEOD: I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: $7,000 last year.

MR. MACLEOD: Two years ago? $9,000 spent last year?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: $14,000. We are asking for $19,000 this year.

MR. MACLEOD: Is that under Item 2?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, No. 2.

MR. MACLEOD: According to the figures I have before me, it was $9,800 in 1946-47. I guess the figures you have are probably 1947-48.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh, yes, I thought you said 1947-48.

MR. MACLEOD: No, I said 1946-47.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, 1947-48.

MR. MACLEOD: You say there is an increase?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, we could not possibly go by 1946-47. We have many more institutions and staff, and we could not compare travelling expenses with 2 years ago. We spent $14,000 in 1947-48.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes. Then, before I sit down, Mr. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), may I take this opportunity, 4 or 5 days late, to extend my very sincere congratulations to you on having attained your 70th birthday last Sunday?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Thank you kindly.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Vote 172 approved.

On Vote 173.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): On 173, we have the amount for the Parole Board. I am sorry to say, in my opinion, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) did not utilize the opportunity to explain to the House more fully the steps which are to be taken to improve the work of the Parole Board. In fact, I have the feeling the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) could have spent more minutes profitably on the report which was tabled in this House on the recent events in Burwash. It was an important report, and certainly this was the time to deal with it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Did you wish to speak on the Parole Board, as you started, or on Burwash? We will come to the Burwash Reformatory. The estimates are there and you can talk on them, but is it the Parole Board you want to talk about?

MR. SALSBERG: In that report presented by the Commission, one of the chief criticisms in it by Professor Jaffrey was on the Parole Board. I will quote a few lines from sections of the report as it was printed in the Toronto Star:

"Dealing with parole, Dr. Jaffrey reported: 'Complaints against the Parole Board were frequent and bitter. The operation of parole was clearly a matter of sharp frustration to many inmates. While all the criticism was directed at the Parole Board, some of it refers to the parole situation itself and the conflict between courts and parole boards, of which the inmate becomes the victim.

" 'A second part is directed at the board itself, and its method of conducting hearings.

" 'A third part refers to the lack of information about parole and the resulting confusion. The inmate cannot find out where he is at and what he can do about it. Through it all, runs the confusion on the part of inmate and board alike as to the operation of ticket of leave by the remission branch.

" 'The whole operation of parole is confused and conflicting. This confusion breeds a large amount of frustration and bitterness in the men at Burwash.' "

I submit, Mr. Chairman, these are strong words about a very important aspect of our penal institution and about the problems which lead to the unhappy circumstances which necessitated the appointment of an investigatory committee, or a commission, and I would like to hear from the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) at this time what steps, if any, are being taken to do away with the situation which Professor Jaffrey describes.

In his remarks, as I recall, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) said late this afternoon, the committee and the Parole Board "worked successfully," it is "using good judgment," et cetera. That is in conflict with the part of the report which I read to you and it obviously is the opinion of the professor, who made the investigation, an important problem.

I think we should hear as to the steps taken, and the plans you have for the remedying of this situation.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, I read that. I was quite surprised, too, when I read it. There have not been very many changes in the Parole Board. They have had quite a lot of experience, and I think they are outstanding men.

When I enquired I found Professor Jaffrey had not been over to the parole office to talk it over with Captain Dix, chairman of the Parole Board, and the different officers. They had been up once during his time at Burwash, it is true, dealing with some parole cases, and the Inspector of Prisons for the Province of Ontario has never yet seen Professor Jaffrey. I conclude what you are telling me is what the prisoners say.

Do you think for one moment all the prisoners would be satisfied because they were not given paroles, and do you think the board is responsible? Take for example a man—and here is what the Parole Board is up against—who has served a term, perhaps 2 terms, in penitentiary; he has committed an assault, and according to the Act he can only be sent to Burwash for 6 months and an indeterminate sentence after that. They investigate in the city or town or county where this assault has been committed, they know the facts and the record is before them. They may write down on the charge sheet, "no parole recommended." What is the Parole Board going to do?

The Parole Board, I think, is acting in good faith. It is composed of very fair citizens. Captain Dix, who is the chairman of the Parole Board—it is the first time there has been a permanent chairman—an ex-clergyman, and a very successful one, I understand. In the report, you will notice the professor said he was not inclined to think the secretary and the parole officer should be one and the same person. I want to tell him they are not. Mr. Trumbell is the secretary. He is a lawyer who has been in the department for a number of years. Captain Dix is the chairman, and the chief parole officer. The gentleman who made the investigation did not agree with that; he thought it might become a "vicious practice" to have the same man chairman of the Parole Board and chief parole officer.

I have organized quite a few things in my life—my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) was complimenting me on reaching my 70th year. I did not agree with Professor Jaffrey, and I think I have a right to disagree. I think the chairman of the Parole Board is the very man to be head of the parole office.

They go into a case, and consider it from all angles. He has the sheet there, and the record of the prisoner, and why should he not work with his parole officers in looking after this prisoner, when he is chairman of the Parole Board? I cannot see anything vicious about that, to my way of looking at it.

So far as Judge Balharrie, of the juvenile court, Ottawa, I think he is a pretty fair fellow; he is an ex-controller, ex-mayor, and has been judge of the family court for a number of years. I think Col. Wallace Buntin, of the Salvation Army, from Toronto, is a fairly sound man.

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear hear.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: He has had a lot of experience in dealing with men. Mr. W. R. McConnell is an experienced man, and Mr. G. S. Horgan, our latest acquisition to the board, is a young lawyer in Toronto. He enlisted with the Irish Regiment as a private, and came back as a company commander, so he must have had some experience in dealing with men.

Miss Melrose, who has been in the office for a great number of years—I think 20 some years, if I am right—is the lady representative on the Parole Board. I am not ashamed of the people there.

MR. MACLEOD: Do you have psychiatrists on that board?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, we have not. Did you hear what Charlie McCarthy said to Bergen 2 weeks ago, when he asked him about psychiatrists? He said, "What is he?" He said: "Bergen, did you not understand that?" "No," Bergen said, and Charlie replied:

"He is the fellow who can look at my foot and tell me there is wood in my head."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) surely is not serious when he offers that as a commentary on psychiatry.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No. You were so gentle. You are not trying to put me on the spot at all?

MR. MACLEOD: No, I am just asking a question.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You would not do anything like that.

MR. MACLEOD: I never do anything like that.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You are so nice and gentle, you have just been taught, you know, to try to get people into trouble.

MR. MACLEOD: No.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am not comparing you with that. I just asked if you had heard the joke about it.

MR. MACLEOD: But, Mr. Chairman, I was quite serious when I asked the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) if there was a psychiatrist on the Parole Board.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, there is not, and there is not going to be. Is that fair enough?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: I think that is a reflection on your attitude toward penal reform.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, we have them in the institutions, not on the Parole Board. The Parole Board is not considering whether a man is mentally fit and so on; that is for the psychiatrists in the institution to decide, and to segregate them, and if necessary, send them from one institution to another, if he has to be taken from one of our institutions to a mental institution. That is not the fault of the Parole Board.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I am sorry—

MR. CHAIRMAN: What number?

MR. SALSBERG: The same item we are discussing. The Parole Board. I am sorry the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) in replying told me of a whole lot of things that he disagrees with me. I did not express an opinion. All I did was to read what Professor Jaffrey had to say in his official report tabled in this House on the Parole Board. I was suggesting the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) should at this time say something about it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Well, I have told you—

MR. SALSBERG: Instead of that, he told me he disagrees with me, and he named the members of the Parole Board to me. I do not know them and have absolutely nothing against them. I am not criticizing them even.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I have absolute faith in them, and they are not going to be changed, so do not worry about it.

MR. SALSBERG: I was asking the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), and that is permissible. I do not know why the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) gets excited—I asked him, in view of the official report presented to the Government, and through the Government to this House, what he had to say. Now then, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) has said—

AN HON. MEMBER: He told you.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) said he disagrees with the recommendation—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I did not say any such thing and you know it. You cannot put words in my mouth.

MR. SALSBERG: I am trying to find out what you have to say about Professor Jaffrey's remarks. You spoke in reply, and now I am trying to assume what was said, and you say that is wrong. What do you say? Let us hear it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I said there is the board, I named them. That is the board, and that will remain, if you were to talk all night.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I am not suggesting the board be changed. I am merely asking the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) to be very specific and say whether he agrees with the criticism contained in the report, and if so, what he and his department intends to do to remove the conditions which the professor cites. That is all.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I told you the same board was going to continue.

MR. SALSBERG: Then, Mr. Chairman, I am correct in concluding the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) rejects the opinions—

MR. CHAIRMAN: That is your opinion.

MR. SALSBERG: —of Professor Jaffrey insofar as it concerns the Parole Board. He disagrees, then, there is anything wrong with the method and the procedure; he disagrees this is a cause of irritation, frustration and difficulty, and he tells this House he will proceed as he has until now. Now, if that is correct—and that is correct—then, I am sorry to say he only convinces me again of the—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am beginning to think he is one of yours.

MR. SALSBERG: I am glad there is a record here.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): You are easily convinced.

MR. SALSBERG: I am very glad there is a record here, and your remarks, such as the last one, are being recorded.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh, say, not so.

MR. SALSBERG: I am now more than ever convinced the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar)—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: In the Tribune? Are they being recorded in the Tribune?

MR. SALSBERG: —is not suitable to head the Department of Reform Institutions.

AN HON. MEMBER: That is your opinion.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: "Atta boy."

MR. SALSBERG: I said that a year ago, and I say it now.

HON. MR. FROST: What is the use of arguing with you, then, your mind is made up?

MR. SALSBERG: I believe if the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) were to go over the record and see some of the statements made by the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) in this House, his face would turn red with shame, because in his administration he has that to contend with.

HON. MR. FROST: I can assure you he is not ashamed of it.

MR. SALSBERG: Then I disagree with the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew).

MR. CHAIRMAN: You have asked a question—

MR. SALSBERG: I am sure if he were to read pages 140—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You are away beyond the question.

MR. SALSBERG: —And 141 of last year.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Carried.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not carried. I am speaking on an item. I beg your pardon, Mr. Chairman, I am on my feet.

MR. CHAIRMAN: You have to stick to the question.

MR. SALSBERG: I am on the floor, and I am discussing the item which provides funds for the Parole Board.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) has answered you.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) has not answered me satisfactorily.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is the only answer you will get.

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): It may not be satisfactory to you.

MR. SALSBERG: I say the remarks of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) just made, prove he is not the type of person to head up—

HON. MR. PORTER: What has that to do with the item?

MR. CHAIRMAN: That is your idea. Just take your seat.

MR. SALSBERG: It is my idea and I express it. I think in the face of a report presented to the House by one appointed by this Government to investigate the Burwash situation, in which a whole section is devoted to the problem of the Parole Board, if the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) can merely get up here and say he will make no changes and reject the finding of an expert whom he appointed, then all I can say is, either he disagrees completely with what the commissioner has found, or he is unwilling to change, and I say, Mr. Chairman—and I do pray for your indulgence in this matter—

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am all right for a little while.

MR. SALSBERG: I know you are. I say in all earnestness to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), through you, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) I think is a good Minister of Municipal Affairs—

MR. CHAIRMAN: We all do.

MR. SALSBERG: But I think the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) will serve this province well if he gives the portfolio of reform institutions—

AN HON. MEMBER: To you?

MR. SALSBERG: —to another member of his cabinet or some other supporter of the Government. And I will say why. The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) can get up, and just because I mentioned the name of the commissioner, he objected and comes back and says he must be "one of yours." Last year I accidentally and unintentionally mentioned the name of another gentleman who was in the press at the time, a certain Mr. Edmundson, and the record shows on page 142 of the Proceedings last year, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) coming back—and I quote from that page:

"Mr. Dunbar: You should know, you are quite close to him."

I replied that I never saw the gentleman, merely used his name because the Globe and Mail and other papers were writing about him at the time.

And I suggest the findings and the recommendations of a commissioner appointed by the Government to investigate the serious situation, should receive—

MR. CHAIRMAN: Just a minute, please.

MR. SALSBERG: —at least consideration; and the attitude of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) displayed—

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: I asked a question of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) and got no reply.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Carried.
Vote 173 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, before this is disposed of, the suggestion has been made that I would be performing a service to the province if I withdrew the portfolio from the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) who is now Minister of Reform Institutions.

I want to say most emphatically there certainly will be no change in the portfolio.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: For the very excellent reason that the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) has performed a service on behalf of this province which I believe has commanded the respect of every right-thinking person in this province.

Sometimes it is undesirable to deal in superlatives. The simple fact is our organization for reform in this province today is regarded as a model by the rest of the world, and the idea of the establishment of a separate department of reform institutions and the completely new concept of reform came on the initiative of the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar), who is going to continue to occupy that office for some considerable time.

The report which has been mentioned, was a report dealing with the particular case in which there were some very trying incidents. The statements in that report, torn from their context, may be interpreted in a different way than they should be interpreted as part of the whole report.

The fact is, we have throughout this province, not only larger and older established reform institutions, but as those who have had the interest to learn by personal enquiry will have found, we have at Brampton an institution unique, so far as I am aware, anywhere in the world.

We have, moreover, an attitude of reform which is bringing to this province people engaged in this activity from the United States, from Europe and elsewhere who have all gone back and placed on record their admiration of what has been done.

One thing that neither the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) nor I, nor any hon. member of the Government has at any time suggested is to claim this system is perfect. There have been mistakes, there were mistakes at Burwash and steps were taken, and taken very promptly, to deal with the fundamental requirement which was a change in administrative direction. Everyone who knows anything about organization, that is useful organization, from the point of view of administration, knows perfectly well the first step in reform in any place where you find difficulties is to place someone in charge who knows how to handle that particular job. That is what the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) has done.

The recommendations in the report were not wasted, they were not ignored. We are dealing with the whole broad problem of reform and far from any thought of expressing the criticism or withdrawing a portfolio, I can only say what has happened in the past in the Department of the Reform Institutions leads me to the belief we were extremely fortunate in having the hon. Minister who is giving that department his services.

Vote 174, 175 and 176 approved.

On Vote 177.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, on Vote 177, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) dealt with the Mercer Institution in his preliminary remarks, and it seemed to be his view that just as soon as better accommodation can be obtained he would favour abandoning that particular institution and create in its place something which is more modern and up-to-date.

Just pursuing that a little further, do you have any plans in mind which would lead to the confirmation of that good end in the next year or two?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, we had a location picked out last summer but there was some objection to it. We have another one not far from Toronto which I think will be satisfactory. We feel, by getting rid of that building and six acres on King Street some day, we will have sufficient funds to build a really up to date institution.

Vote 177 approved.

On Vote 178.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, I just want to say a few words on Vote 178. The Industrial Farm involved here, is in my riding, as the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) realizes. I was glad to see an investigation made, but I am wondering if it was a successful one and how complete it was, because since then I have received a number of letters. I am advised if I quote them I must read them into the record or at least give the names of the people I got the letters from. I would hesitate to put their names on record because a number of them are guards and some of them from ministers and even a priest.

I went through some of these letters recently, and I numbered some of the complaints; they seemed to be all-inclusive. I will not say they are all justifiable complaints. Again, I want to say, I would like to take a trip in there. Unfortunately, I have never been in, although we discussed that some time ago on a humorous basis. I say now, in all sincerity, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) if some time in his spare time he would not drop me a line when he is prepared to go in, if it is humanly possible, I would like to go in.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Why don't you go in any day?

MR. CARLIN: I would like rather to go in with you and meet some of these people with you.

These are some of the complaints. See if you recognize them. I have some of the letters concerning housing accommodation. I have a letter here stating there are several houses without any modern facilities at all and one guard wrote to me and says he is living in one of these houses, has been a guard there for some twenty years. You perhaps would know who that would be.

Lack of variety and poor quality of food: I asked one guard if that were so, and he said there is a lack of variety but it is being properly prepared, but there is a lack of variety.

Adequate medical attention; I think a doctor brought that to my attention, even a member of the clergy said there was some complaint by guards and even by the prisoners. One thing many guards brought to my attention—perhaps that is because of my union office—was there was violation of hours of work. How accurate that is, I do not know. Another complaint is that the prisoners are treated better than the guards. That was brought to my attention by these guards who quit here last fall to go to Sudbury and I had an occasion to talk to them.

Recently I received a letter to say that Professor Geoffrey did not do the type of job they thought he should have done. One thing he could have had was a proper investigation and proper meeting with the guards themselves who had been there for ten or fifteen years. He never met them but paid more attention to the prisoners themselves and took more pains in listening to them than talking to the guards who had made it their life's work and had their hearts in their job.

I conclude by saying I really mean it, I would like to go in there with you some time, if you would drop me a line setting a date two weeks in advance, I would be happy to go in there and meet some of the people; I think that would be fairer to you.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I think your request is very reasonable. I would like to answer each one.

Regarding the houses; we have 70 families, some of these have not running water, but they are very comfortable. They are four and six-room homes for $7.50 a month. That is pretty reasonable. You know when you go up to the others up to $12.00 and $15.00 and the higher ones, the seven-room house is $27.50, that includes of course, lighting and things like that, but the other $7.50 is a cheap house.

Last year we had an estimate for sixty new homes, that is 15 four-plex homes. The hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) is not here today. He has some completed but they are still working on them. He found difficulty getting supplies last year or he would have had 130 homes there. That would have made them about right for the number of married guards there at that time. There are a few more now and we are going ahead. We have some others dismantled at Monteith and made into apartments. We have made several apartments during the winter bringing the army huts down from Monteith. You know, we have a housing problem all over the county and I think we are getting along fairly well up there.

Now, the food; we would have nothing to do with that, only for the single guards. We have nothing to do with married guards; they look after their own food. The single guards, of course, board at the institution.

Here is what they would get for breakfast. You can go down and pick them out; there is a book there you can look at it and see exactly what they get. I would like you to listen to this. Here it is for April 15th, Monday: rolled oats, milk, one fried egg, two rashers of bacon, bread, jam and tea. That is breakfast.

Dinner: Green pea soup, hot roast beef, pan gravy, cream potatoes, green peas, vanilla pudding, marble cake, bread, tea and water.

Supper: Salisbury steak, creamed potatoes, buttered turnips, cottage pudding, bread, tea and water.

That is one day. You can go and see them and find out. You will remember the guards who left when the trouble occurred up there and you will remember the Salvation Army officer who had been there a number of years, who said there was no trouble with the food. The guards who come down said the food was fine. Some of these guards who came down here were not the best class of people. We sent one up to Guelph on a course and we found by his own words when he made a report, that when a boy he ran away from home and joined the Foreign Legion. He deserted the Foreign Legion and joined the Merchant Navy and when the war came he deserted the navy and, because we needed men, he got on as a guard in Burwash. That is the man who was reported as being drunk. That is the man who caused the trouble, and whom the professor reported had been drinking on duty. That is the man who left what he thought was a sinking ship, but it was not so badly down as he thought. That is the recommendation he had. That was much different than the guard who was spending his holidays in the United States, and when he heard of the trouble at Burwash wired to my deputy and wanted to know if his services were required, and reported back in a couple of days.

We had eleven men at Guelph taking courses and they reported to Burwash for duty, to help, and see what they could do. What a difference from those men who left the ship when they thought it was sinking after they had done their best to sink it.

The hours of work; there is not any man working over eight hours a day except the men looking after the livestock, and they are not working more than 48 hours a week. As I explained, we cannot find any horses or cattle that do not require to be fed on Sundays, so we have to have some men working. Then they will have two holidays if they work for two days following one another. I think they are pretty well pleased with that way.

You say the prisoners are better fed. The single men get the same as the prisoners. You said the guards were of poor quality and low mentality, some of them. There might be some, but at the same time we have men there 25 years getting their buttons for civil service, being 25 years at Burwash in the service, and not a black mark. I am not going to say they have low mentality and are not fit and proper men to be guards. I do not think that is fair.

Another thing, the former superintendent, Mr. McJannett—the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) knows him quite well—was alone during the war looking after that large institution and made a splendid job of it. He is a Civil Servant and cannot come out and defend himself, but I will defend him. If there is blame to be taken, I will shoulder it.

Mr. McJannett asked to be relieved; he was not well. We gave him some holidays, before he asked to be relieved, and we put in an Assistant Superintendent who had never been there, to give assistance to Mr. McJannett who had the misfortune to fall and break his arm. One of the newspapers said that is no excuse, but it does weaken a man. I want to say Mr. McJannett was one of the most faithful, conscientious superintendents we could have in any institution. The only thing is I am sorry his health is not now as it was then. He is still working in the Department. He made a wonderful job at Burwash during those war years and got along well. I want to say he is a credit to the Civil Service.

I would be glad to go in some time with you during the summer. We will go in there and look it over, but you know how it is; you are in a labour union. With 220 men there, there is bound to be dissatisfaction. There will be men not doing the right thing and the other fellow finding fault with him. The main thing is to adjust the difficulties as we meet them. If you have a police force or a fire department, you are bound to have one fellow jealous of the other chap getting a promotion. And now we have two superintendents doing the work Mr. McJannett was doing before, and things are going along very, very nicely. Do not think, before that trouble, we were not aware we had to do something and were endeavouring to do it.

In the month of July, I went to Guelph and talked with Mr. Brown who is the superintendent, and asked him if he would go to Burwash; if he felt he had experience to handle it and he said he did. My deputy and myself thought it would be too bad to break up that combination at Guelph. We thought we had better wait until Mr. Ayres got more experience in the north and could come down to Burwash. He was on the way down when the trouble arose. Had he been there probably the trouble would not have arisen. I want to assure you we were aware we had to do something and were trying to do it, trying to get the right man, and it is not always an easy thing to do.

Since I came into this department all the superintendents have been promoted, all the senior sergeants, every one, has been promoted from within the ranks. We have not gone outside for anything. We have given the men who have worked 15 and 20 and 25 years there the opportunity of coming up. That is the programme we are going to follow.

Vote 178, 179 and 180 approved.

On Vote 181.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): On 181; will that be a permanent institution?

THE HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, it will.

MR. NIXON: Have you a big agricultural lay-out?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: There are three farms, 450 acres. There is a lot of rough land back of there. We can do a lot of work and will look after all the jails from Cornwall, including Cornwall East.

Vote 181 approved.

On Vote 182.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I would like to ask the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) how the salaries of the inspectors and the teachers are arrived at. I believe the majority of them have been drawn from the ordinary public and high schools of Ontario. I was wondering if their salaries are comparable with the salaries which are received for teaching in the schools. The reason I am asking is, as you know, the ordinary public schools and high schools close down for a certain period during the Summer holidays, whereas in your institutions they will keep teaching throughout the whole year. I was wondering how the salaries are compared with the salaries received by those men while in training for this profession.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We try and keep them in line with the other salaries.

Last year we paid their way to go out, and take special courses, gave them $100 allowance. We are going to have fifteen of them this year given special courses. We will spend $100 apiece for them.

I will give you an idea; Mr. Eastaugh is a superintendent who started with Galt, he is over Galt and Bowmanville, he gets $4,000; Mr. Rickard, assistant superintendent, $3,000; Mr. Little, assistant superintendent, $3,000; Mr. Brown, placement supervisor, $3,000; Miss M. Lane, Mercer, $2,140; Mr. J. D. Frazer, Senior Third, $1,940; others, training guards, start by getting $1,440; north of Parry Sound they get $1,540. Anything in the county represented by the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) get $100 more. That just went through last year, the $100 more than the south, on account of the higher cost of living in that country.

MR. GRUMMETT: What is the annual increase allowed to teachers and instructors in this class?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I think it would be about $200, some of the higher ones $250. To guards and others, unless they change and go to sergeants, it is $100, if they are changed to Senior positions, $100 a year.

Vote 183 and 184 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Department of Education, page 131.

Before we proceed with the detailed votes, I would like to say a few words about one or two aspects of the estimates for the Department of Education which I think might perhaps best be made at this time.

First of all, I would point out the cost for education has very greatly increased and the largest part of the cost for education, as will be seen on page 31, is the large figure for legislative grants to the school boards, which has risen this year to a sum substantially in excess of $34,000,000.

One of the things which has greatly added to the cost of education is the backlog of construction of new schools resulting from the fact that during the war it was necessary to suspend most building activities of that kind, desirable and important though they were.

In view of the fact that the legislative grants not only constitute a percentage of the cost of education, as education, but also a percentage of the costs of construction, the amount of legislative grants has necessarily risen along with those increasing costs. One can readily understand why these costs are becoming so heavy, when I tell you that with the termination of the war plans for new schools were presented to the department for approval having a total value of more than $60,000,000, and during the current year, 1948, there will be built in the Province of Ontario schools costing over $22,000,000—in this year alone. That indicates the scale of the physical structure which is being created for education.

A remark was made today that, with the very radical changes which have taken place in our educational programme, there might be some danger of finding ourselves in a position where we had made it difficult to adjust ourselves to the recommendations of the report which will be forthcoming from the Royal Commission on Education. I can assure the hon. members of the Legislature that in everything we are doing, we are adhering very strictly to the basic principles upon which our educational structure was set up. I feel sure, even with the very great advances we have made, nothing has been done or will be done which will tie the hands of the department or present any serious difficulties in acting upon the recommendations of that commission when they are received.

I would like to mention one aspect of this construction which I think is worth bearing in mind. To an extent that may not generally yet be realized, there has been a complete and fundamental change in the general plans of school construction throughout this province which are going to leave their impact upon our whole school structure in the years ahead.

I can recall many examples of school design in this province which today are copied in text books on school architecture throughout the world. The hon. members will recall that early in 1944 we appointed a committee of outstanding architects, who were instructed to obtain all the information they could in regard to modern methods of construction, and make recommendations which would be a guide to school boards, which were called upon to build new schools.

I think the most striking example of the new type of construction which has emerged from those recommendations is to be found in the Greer Memorial School in Muskoka. I hope any of the hon. members driving up the main highway through Muskoka will stop and go inside that school, where they will find every modern application of design employed in the simplification of structure, and in the improvement of lighting, ventilation, heating, and general facilities, with such unique but rather simple innovations as folding walls, and cupboards which are built to take care of the children's cloaks and books, and things of that kind, in recesses which occupy no unnecessary space.

Amongst the new continuation schools, I think one of the most remarkable is in the riding of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McEwing), and I am sure he will recall very well the circumstances accompanying the construction of the school. The school in Drayton had been burned, and in consultation with representatives of the local board, we suggested this should be an experimental design, and as a result of that experiment, they have a continuation school, the surface of which is substantially more than one half glass, and in this structure they have one of the model continuation schools in the province. I can think of many others, as most of the hon. members can.

This is a fundamental and decisive change in school design, which will not only have a great effect on the facilities for teaching, but which is going to make possible the realization of the full advantages which accrue from the larger school units, where a number of smaller school areas are combined to give, within one school, the added advantage of a number of teachers who can specialize in particular subjects, and in that way give better opportunities for education.

I think, above the advantages of the structural changes, is the tremendous improvement in morale, not only to the pupils, but to the teachers themselves who, in that way, are brought together in groups and are able to work out their problems in consultation, and also, through the very fact they do bring a larger number of pupils together with several class rooms, find they are able to avail themselves of a number of the new aids to education in the form of technical devices of various kinds, moving pictures, and things of that nature, which help very greatly.

After all, in the end, we can build the finest schools, equip them with the finest technical equipment, but fail to give good education unless we have highly-qualified teachers who are interested in their work and who really love that vitally important profession.

Part of the increase in the cost of education is made up of a very substantial increase in the salaries of the teachers of this province. I would not suggest the teachers have yet reached that point we all hope to reach, but there have been, as every hon. member will know, very substantial increases, which are very desirable, and I think it would provide some measure of satisfaction to the hon. members of this Legislature to know that, although in the United States today there is a serious and a very dangerous shortage of teachers, in this province there is not a single class room closed because of our failure to supply teachers.

The number of teachers teaching with temporary certificates, which it became necessary to introduce during the war, is steadily diminishing, and in a very short time undoubtedly the regular standards will be fully in operation.

I can assure the hon. members that a very small number of teachers in the province are not now fully qualified, and I would like to say of those who are teaching with less than the full certificate, that far from feeling any sense of criticism, I think we all should be greatly indebted to those people who have come forward at a time like this, to give their services, when those services were greatly needed.

Education is something which never reaches perfection—never will. I hope we will, however, have an opportunity to make very important advances, when we have the advantage of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Education. It was stated today that it had been a long time since this commission began to meet, and that everything should be done to have the report as soon as possible.

May I point out this commission is composed of men and women who have given their time voluntarily to one of the most public services ever undertaken in this province. They came from all over Ontario, and represent different denominational points of view, and many occupations.

The Commission is under the chairmanship of one of the ablest jurists in this country, a man who for years has devoted his talents and his energy to the subject of education. Mr. Justice Hope, as chairman of the Commission, is in charge of its deliberations and of the procedure, and will determine, together with the other members of the Commission, the time at which it will be possible to make their report. Hearings continued until a few months ago. They have received an enormous mass of evidence from many different groups in many different parts of the province. The task before them is gigantic. I have been informed they are working on breaking down the evidence and on the report itself, from the point of view of building up the material and getting ready to proceed with it.

Everyone who has been engaged in any activity of that kind will realize the almost staggering task which confronts them in dealing with millions of words of evidence, in digesting it, in allocating the findings on different subjects, and reaching particular conclusions, which make it possible for them to proceed with the heavy task of reducing this to carefully-written form, in a document which will become a milestone in our educational history.

I am in no better position than any one in this Legislature to say when the Commission will make its report, beyond the fact that I am greatly interested, as everyone is, in the earliest possible presentation of the report, consistent with the desire of everyone of us for the most comprehensive and careful examination of our problems, which we possibly can have. I hope it is not beyond the realm of possibility that, through the careful study and good judgment of those who are on that Commission, we may be able to receive a unanimous recommendation which would be something which would be of enormous advantage to all of us in this province.

There have been indications publicly that since they closed the hearing of evidence, they have been working steadily, and for that reason we should be able to expect within a reasonable time the presentation of the report itself.

Referring back to the comments I made last year when I expressed some hope that it would come earlier, I would remind the hon. members that, in their judgment, the commissioners reopened the hearings because of the requests they had received for the opportunity to present further evidence. I cannot help but feel they must have been convinced, on very good evidence, that it would not have been desirable to indicate any unwillingness to hear these further points of view, which were placed before them.

However, they have definitely closed the hearing of evidence, and are working on the breakdown of the evidence, and such parts of the report as they have been able to reach. Therefore, I think we are in a very different position than we were last year.

I would like to recall the fact that the last Royal Commission on Education was held in this province considerably more than 100 years ago, and it was upon the findings of that Commission, that our basic educational structure was laid, which was adopted as the educational system for this province under the British North America Act, in 1867, having been, of course, in operation for many years before that.

It is noticed in regard to every one of these commissions, whether the Royal Commission under Sir Cyril Norwood in England, or the Harvard Commission in the United States, or any of these educational commissions, of necessity took considerable time to perform their tasks. Far from feeling they have delayed any part of their work, I can only express my amazement that busy men and women have been able to spare as much time as they have, throughout the years they have been engaged on this work, and I think all of us must be deeply grateful to every one of them for the unselfish services they have been giving to this important work, something for which I feel all of us will ultimately benefit very much.

Mr. Chairman, I want to come to one other subject which will not emerge distinctly in any part of the estimates, but which is one which is the subject of very frequent public comments, and which I think calls for some explanation.

It is likely I have been remiss in failing to explain this particular aspect of our educational system in more detail. Possibly, when any of us are engaged day-by-day in fairly intimate contact with some work, we forget that others are not aware of the things which seem to us quite obvious. That is true in every occupation, whatever it may be.

In this connection I want to refer to what may be described as "temperance education."

In complete good faith, and with no other purpose than to make constructive suggestions, it has been stated on different occasions that this Government has failed to recognize the necessity for temperance education. That is not correct. I certainly am not in the slightest degree critical of anyone who has made that statement, because I am perfectly frank in admitting that on no occasion which I can recall, in the Legislature, did I find the occasion to discuss this subject in any measure of detail.

The fact is that in the schools of this province there is very extensive and very sensible temperance education. There is education of that nature in the elementary schools, but naturally on a more limited scale than in the secondary schools. In the secondary schools this subject is dealt with from a very practical and realistic point of view, as part of the broad education on health, which is given under careful instruction and with the assistance of well-designed text books.

The text book in the secondary schools of this province, which includes numerous references to the use and the problems of alcohol, is "Good Health," and it may be a matter of special interest to the hon. members of the Legislature to know that one of the co-authors of that very excellent book is Dr. J. T. Fair, Deputy Minister of Health of this province. I can think of no one better qualified to deal with a subject of this nature than a man who not only possesses the highest level of professional qualifications, but also the very widest practical administrative experience in the problems of health.

Throughout the book are many positive statements dealing with the effects of alcohol in a way that can leave no doubt about the positive approach to the teaching of temperance—real temperance—and the avoidance of excesses, and the recognition of the very real dangers in the consumption of alcohol.

I will mention a number of headings under which this subject is discussed, such as "The effects of alcohol on the body and body temperature in relation to health," "The effects of alcohol on the brain and nervous system," "The effects of alcohol on the vital processes," "The effects of alcohol on the special senses," and "The effects of alcohol on personal behaviour."

There are also instructional details in regard to the relationship between "alcohol and accidents," "alcohol and athletics," "alcohol and poverty," and "alcohol and crime."

I think the hon. members will agree the subjects I have mentioned embrace the broad field of the effect of alcohol with relation to the individual and to the broader contacts of people within society.

One of the reasons it may not be more generally realized this instruction is being given, is the fact we do not segregate instruction on this subject, as though it were something entirely separate from our ordinary life.

Upon the basis of careful judgment and well-reasoned arguments, it has been decided it is very much better to teach the lessons of temperance as part of the broad field of health, instead of separating it and putting it as something completely aside, which perhaps from a psychological point of view would defeat the very purpose of the instruction which is being given, because, after all, the reality is that in this life we lead, so long as the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages is legal, it is one of the composite factors of our daily life, and the experts who teach on this subject and use this means of instruction felt it was a more rational process to incorporate this teaching as part of the broad teaching of health, than to segregate it as though it were something in a separate compound, into which people went for that particular purpose. I cannot fail but agree with the decision they made, and the common sense of that approach.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): Would my friend tell me how long that book has been available?

HON. MR. DREW: I will get that in a moment.

After all, we have not started within the past few months or the past few years to deal with this subject. This is one of the oldest problems affecting human beings. Even long before the Christian era in history, the records indicate this has, at all times, been a social problem of very considerable importance.

I do not suppose there is any such thing as a perfect answer to those who designed the pattern of this course, designed it with careful study of the lessons of the past, and with a very extensive appreciation of efforts which had been made along the same lines in other jurisdictions.

In this book are simple but emphatic statements. To indicate they are positive, may I give you one of many statements appearing throughout this book:

"There can be no doubt as to the effects the liquor habit has upon the nervous system of drivers . . ."

that is referring to the relationship of "alcohol and accidents."

". . . these effects are quite unpredictable since liquor acts as a narcotic."

It goes on from there and makes statements, very definitely, of caution in connection with alcoholic beverages, with which I agree entirely.

Other statements throughout the book are equally positive. The thing I would like to emphasize is, as in every other case, this is simply the text book from which the teacher is expected to expand and, the instructions to teachers are not only permitted, but they are advised to expand those instructions, and in the summer courses which we have given for the past two years for the purpose of refreshing teachers' training, and also bringing together some of the teachers who have not their complete certificates, emphasis has been placed upon the wider study of this subject, which will qualify these teachers to expand this teaching.

In addition to that they have, of course, a bibliography from which they can draw splendid lessons, to illustrate each of these points.

Mr. Chairman, may I say in answer to the question by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) this book was authorized in September, 1945. It is one of the new text books we have brought into the schools. I was not sure of the exact date, when the hon. Leader (Mr. Oliver) asked the question. I admit I do not know at what particular point a great many of these books come in, without checking the details.

I can thoroughly understand the deep concern of people throughout our province about the abuses in the use of alcohol, and I think it is right and proper that our youth should be told particularly, and emphasis should be placed upon the desirability of restraint and of real temperance.

I do want to say, however, that at no time since I assumed office has any suggestion been placed before me by the Ontario Temperance Federation or any similar body, that it was a practical possibility to consider prohibition as an answer to this problem.

In fact, prior to the introduction of the new legislation in this province two years ago, the representatives of the Temperance Federation stated quite frankly, when they met me, they agreed prohibition could not be considered as a practical approach to this problem, and the object of legislation and administration should be to design laws which could be enforced, which would permit the sale of alcoholic beverages as legal beverages with adequate penalties for enforcement of the legislation.

That is the course we have followed and while I do not wish to depart from temperance education, I wish to indicate some of the statements which are made in regard to this subject both in regard to our failure to give any education on this subject and in regard to the actual situation within this province, are not based upon the actual facts. I do not question the sincerity of those who make the statements, but for that very reason, it would perhaps be well for me to indicate in what way some of them are wrong. I have sought to give you a brief outline of the practical and realistic temperance education which is being given in the elementary schools, but naturally, more extensively in the secondary schools, because naturally, it is a very vague problem in that earlier stage.

I have also sought to indicate to you the way in which the teachers are not only permitted but encouraged to expand the instruction beyond the bald statements in the text books.

Some very alarming statements are made. The statement has been made, there is something strangely inconsistent about a Minister of Education concurring in the changes in the liquor laws of this province which were introduced last year and which became effective on April 1st, as all of you will remember. You will recall this Government decided the consumption of spirits as distinct from beer and wine had reached a point and was creating such abuses in hotel bedrooms and elsewhere that the time had come to recognize that people were buying and consuming it and to seek to remedy, or cure the problem to some extent, by providing for sale by the glass which would bring the people out of bedrooms and into the open.

Hon. members will recall, insofar as the basic changes were concerned, the changes which went into effect under the new system on April 1st, related particularly to spirits, because beer and wine had been sold by the glass before that time. You have seen some very challenging statements in the press, quoting people as recently as only yesterday to the effect that the consumption of spirits is mounting at a tremendous rate in this province.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it relates to this whole question of temperance when I tell you the contrary is the truth. Remember, this new method of handling the sale of spirits by the glass began on April 1st, last year, and I have just received the exact figure for the first 11 months. I think hon. members of this Legislature will be interested to know, instead of an increase in the consumption of spirits since April 1st, last year, for those 11 months, there has been a decrease in the consumption of spirits of 55,784 gallons. That, I think you will agree, is a very substantial figure indeed and is, I believe, the first positive evidence we have been able to show of the real and practical attempt to guide our people toward a temperate approach to this problem, and which can be greatly advanced by sensible advice and sensible guidance in these places from which that may be naturally expected to come.

If every child were brought up with a complete sense of self-discipline and self-respect and high personal ethical standards, we would not need to be worried about any one of them if they were surrounded by a sea of alcohol.

The test is not the presence of these things, the test is the measure of self-discipline, self-control and ethical restraint possessed by the people themselves. From the very beginning of recorded history, it has been demonstrated you cannot make people temperate, nor good merely by putting words on the statute books, but rather, the way to improve the standards of living in any community is to elevate the personal standards of the people themselves and to provide them with the greatest safeguard any human being can have from any temptation whatever it may be.

Above all, let us not pretend the only temptation and the only dangerous temptation is alcohol, because there is intemperance of many kinds—intemperance of eating, intemperance of living in many ways, and, above all, intemperance of language. I think it would be highly desirable if those who sincerely seek to impress upon our youth the desirability of real temperance, would themselves give an example of temperance in all things by the use of temperate language as well as by an example of temperate conduct.

I think also the time is overdue for each one of us to emphasize the fact, that neither here in Ontario nor in the wider area of Canada, nor in any country, can parents leave their children to the state and expect the state to bring them up in the way they should go.

The centre of our civilization is the home. Unfortunately, tragedies strike, and there are cases where children are denied the advantages of parental guidance but those, after all, represent a relatively small number of cases. If the parents in every home in this province were teaching proper personal standards and giving a sense of self-discipline and self-restraint, fewer laws would be needed, fewer occasions for punishment would arise, and there would be fewer demands for legislative restrictions of any kind.

While agreeing with the aims of those who seek to reduce many of the tragic consequences of the abuse of alcohol, I do, nevertheless, believe there are many cases in which their time might be more advantageously employed in seeking to impress upon the parents the importance of instruction at home in these things rather than seeking to impose upon the state the double burden of passing ordinary administrative laws and making up for the failure to give that basic instruction upon which society must really depend.

Unquestionably there is much to be done, but at least the figures I have given are encouraging to the extent for the first time in many years there is a substantial and positive decrease in the consumption of spirits. Through these instructions in the schools, through a rational and realistic approach to this subject, much can be done to develop a better sense of discipline, high personal standards and real restraint by the acceptance of greater responsibility within the home itself. It is all part and parcel of one great problem, and I believe every one in this Legislature is seeking, in some way, to advance temperance, although perhaps at times, the definition of that word may differ.

I prefer to take the accepted dictionary meaning of the word temperance. It does not mean prohibition, it means moderation, it means self-control, it means self-discipline, it means a standard of personal conduct that is imposed by a recognition that each human being must be their own guide in the end. Whether we differ in detail at any point, I think we can all agree that education which will elevate the ethical standards of our people, give to them a sensible appreciation of the dangers of intemperance in any field, is the desirable feature of our education, and it is for that reason I have taken so long to deal with this subject, which will not appear under any separate head, but which does draw a very large sum from these expenditures on time which is devoted to that of teaching.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I was wondering with respect to that $34,000,000, if my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) would give us the breakdown as to the part that applied by way of grants to new construction, and the part to the school boards for education itself.

HON. MR. DREW: Yes, if the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will let us pass on to other items for a moment, I will come back to that and will ask the officials to let me have this information.

Votes 35 to 40 inclusive approved.

HON. MR. DREW: I might explain to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) the figure is approximately $4,000,000 for construction.

MR. OLIVER: Out of the $34,000,000?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: And could my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) enlighten me as to the percentage paid by the department on new construction? For instance, on a new school costing $100,000, what would the provincial government pay as a grant, what would you pay; or how do you figure that out?

HON. MR. DREW: I am afraid I would have to take the whole schedule, because it is exactly the same percentage as on the approved cost of education. It starts at 35 per cent. in the cities of 100,000 and over, and goes on up from there to 90 per cent., and in some cases, through special conditions, it runs as high as 95 per cent. The percentage is precisely the same for the cost of physical construction as it is for the grant.

I might explain to the House this is a very extensive scale of grants worked out in detail for each type of community and each type of education. They are to be found in the printed regulations under the Department of Education. I will be very glad to send a copy to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): May I ask the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) the date of the issuing of that regulation?

HON. MR. DREW: 1948.

Votes 41 and 42 approved.

On vote 43:

MR. OLIVER: Would my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) say a word on community programmes? What does that entail?

HON. MR. DREW: That is really one of the most interesting developments which has taken place in this province in the past three years. As the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will recall, we started first of all a recreational branch of the Department of Education, then we set up an adult education board. After that had been going for two years, we found the two really interlocked so much we brought them together under the Community Programme Branch, because of the fact the community programmes embraced both adult education in various forms and recreation.

Just last Friday I attended the annual conference of the representatives of the community programmes branch and the recreation centres, and this indicated something of the scope of the work. They came from every part of the province.

The Department of Education pays for the cost of the organizing of it, and they make an annual grant to each of these recreation groups, then the local community organizations support that and conduct activities in a very wide field.

For instance, the conference took place in Oshawa and the Oshawa recreation group were putting on a demonstration of what they were doing. In addition to the ordinary physical recreation, they were teaching art, leatherwork, handicrafts of every kind, woodworking and all those things which are designed to give to the person who has passed school age a better appreciation of a full life and to make their spare time, not only really enjoyable, but actually productive.

There have been tremendous advances in this in the past two years, and the conference which took place last week demonstrated the fact this is a very firmly settled programme in an increasing number of communities in the province.

MR. NIXON: In connection with that very vote, vote 40, item 24, this is really getting into rather sizable sums of money.

HON. MR. DREW: Yes, it is.

MR. NIXON: There is $100,000 for training in citizenship for adults. Just how would that be used?

HON. MR. DREW: That relates back to something I was saying earlier today. There are, at the present time, more than 150 classes in citizenship being actively conducted in this province. One of the reasons that grant has been increased so much is the fact in this case, with the co-operation of dominion authorities—or rather shall I say with our offering of co-operation to the dominion authorities—we have assumed the responsibility of setting up classes for instruction in English to those who come to Ontario from other countries than the United Kingdom or English-speaking countries.

This is today very, very important work. We have classes for displaced persons of Polish, Ukrainian and other origins which are being conducted for this purpose and, as you will realize, the setting up of special staffs of that kind does cost a good deal of money.

MR. OLIVER: And the whole cost will be borne by the province?

HON. MR. DREW: In these cases, yes. All that special instruction is borne by the province. Other classes are conducted by school boards or industries, in conjunction with the province.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) who is in charge of those classes, say, in Toronto?

HON. MR. DREW: Which classes?

MR. SALSBERG: The citizenship classes. Are they under the department directly or through the Toronto Board of Education?

HON. MR. DREW: No, it is under the department, but Mr. E. C. Cross is the director of the branch which deals particularly with this subject. He is highly trained and specially qualified.

Votes 43 to 45 inclusive approved.

On vote 46.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): On 46, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) would outline briefly some of the courses which are taught at these schools for the blind at Brantford?

HON. MR. DREW: You mean the general field of construction?

MR. CARLIN: That is right.

HON. MR. DREW: First of all, the problem is to teach lip-reading and two or three preparatory years are required to establish the preliminary stage of lip-reading, speech production and the use of language as a means of actual expression. From that point on, there are regular public school courses to grade 9. There is an entrance class each year, and this year the average age of the entrance class was just over 16. They have vocational training—carpentry, printing, agriculture, shoe-making, commercial baking for the boys; dressmaking, cooking, they have a beauty parlour, a commercial course for girls; they have religious instruction and, of course, the general recreational training which is open to those with that limitation.

MR. M. T. ARMSTRONG (Parry Sound): Mr. Chairman, might I refer back to 37? May I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) what is the summer camps vote for $50,000?

HON. MR. DREW: 37?

MR. ARMSTRONG: Vote 40, item 37.

HON. MR. DREW: These summer camps are for the purpose of teaching camp counsellors. As hon. members of the Legislature know, there are ever-increasing numbers of boys' and girls' camps throughout this province. Service clubs, various community organizations and local bodies of various kinds are making arrangements to permit children to go to camp. One of the great requirements of those camps is trained counsellors. It calls for a high measure of skill, which is not often recognized, and the purpose of these camps is to give to picked young men and women from different communities the opportunity to go through and become counsellors for the local camps, or rather, for the camps which are operated by these local bodies.

MR. MACLEOD: That means, then, actually, there is nothing in the estimates to provide camping facilities for children?

HON. MR. DREW: There are, of course, camp facilities, but those camp facilities are really for the purpose of teaching those who can in turn be useful in the still larger number of camps. There is no question about it, there are not a whole series of camps operated by the Department of Education for the children of the province, but the purpose of these camps which are operated by the department is to provide trained personnel who will make those other camps safe for the children who go there, and that in itself is an extremely important task.

Also, these summer camps have been available to elementary and secondary school teachers for the purpose of giving the same type of instruction, having regard to the fact so many of them are carrying on this work. However, there is, of course, very practical assistance given by the province to other camps. Besides these camps, assistance is given and special grants are being paid by the department to 141 camps at the present time. I believe that is the practical approach to this, because one of the greatest things is to get a local sense of responsibility in relation to the children in the community and enthusiasm behind it. We make special grants to the camps, but these camps which we actually own and operate—and when I say “we” I mean the Department of Education—are camps for instruction of instructors.

MR. MACLEOD: You would not have any figures available at your fingertips which would indicate the number of children in Ontario who are taking advantage of the facilities in these 140 camps? It is rather a difficult question, I know.

HON. MR. DREW: If they are available, I will have them for you in a minute. I am not sure whether they are.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I am very much interested in what the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) has told us about the training facilities for counsellors. Does that mean a privately-operated camp, or an organization which operates a camp, could choose people, youngsters, from their ranks and send them to the facilities the department supplies so they get training to become competent counsellors?

HON. MR. DREW: Well, actually that question does not arise in a great many cases, for the simple reason the model pattern for camps has definitely been established by some of these camps which have been in operation in Ontario for some time, but the fact is all non-profit camps—and these 141 are non-profit camps—may send young men and women to the camps owned by the department. They are not open except under any special arrangements which have not yet arisen for those in what you might classify as the profit camps, that is, those operated actually on the basis of substantial payments which cover operating costs, and, presumably, provide some profits.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick) : On that point, I take it, Mr. Chairman, these estimates for the coming year indicate a further considerable expansion in the work under this heading, do they not, Mr. Minister (Mr. Drew) ?

HON. MR. DREW : Yes.

Vote 46 approved.

ON Vote 47.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant) : In respect to 47, I was going to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) to what extent this problem has continued to be assisted by the municipalities? At the time of the war when the authorities requested the School for the Deaf at Belleville for air force purposes, many municipalities undertook to assist to a very great extent the teaching of the deaf in their local communities through auxiliary classes. I was wondering if, after the institution was again opened, the special classes were continued in the local municipalities.

It did seem to me at the time like a very interesting experiment. After all, the children would need to face the day when they must come out and mingle with their fellow citizens in the ordinary activities of normal life and possibly the training of the deaf may be carried on outside the institutions even to better advantage than within the walls of the institutions.

HON. MR. DREW : Special classes have been continued in almost all the large cities when they were set up during the war and are an integral part of the whole system.

MR. NIXON : It has relieved Belleville to a great extent.

HON. MR. DREW : Yes, though it is fully occupied.

On Vote 48.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition) : What is the break-down of the financial arrangements between the province and the Dominion? How much does the Dominion pay and how much does the province pay?

HON. MR. DREW : As a matter of fact, the Dominion pays this until September 1st and then withdraws from it. If you will wait a minute, I will get you the details. We can come back to it a little later.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods) : I would just like to ask a question on the same item. The $150,000 for provincial scholarships. I wonder if you have them at hand? What number of scholarships are provided in the O.A.C.? I was asking the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) the other day whether he had anything in his estimates for scholarships in the Ontario Agricultural College and he said that would appear in the Department of Education estimates. We just have the figure $150,000 which covers all scholarships. I wonder if you could give us some idea how many scholarships are provided for students who want to enter O.A.C.?

HON. MR. DREW : Approximately 600 scholarships altogether.

MR. MACLEOD : You do not know how many of these would be in O.A.C.?

HON. MR. DREW : Actually for the purpose of academic clarification, O.A.C. is regarded as part of the University of Toronto, although it is really administered from the department. I think I can give you those figures in just a moment—unfortunately I have not the division before me. There were 427 granted to the University of Toronto in which $90,250 was paid, and some of those would be for the Agricultural College. I could get that and have that available. I must admit it is not broken down in the figures I have before me.

Vote 48 approved.

On Vote 49.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North) : I would like to say a word or two under this heading of legislative grants in connection with this particular school in my riding and of which the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) spoke earlier in his remarks.

It is some time ago since this school was built, and I guess possibly it has passed the experimental stage now, but being one of the first schools of that type which was built, our community happened to be the one who now finds it necessary to suffer under the penalty of mistakes made in the experimental work. I am pleading now. I think they should have further assistance in the way of grants, in stretching the grants or something, because they are going to be saddled with some expense which they should not have had, if it had not been an experimental project.

There are a number of things which are not satisfactory. I have refrained from making any public statements until the thing is proven entirely and I am only doing so to see if this thing can be remedied and no further schools or communities represented by any of the hon. members here might suffer the same thing that they did there. They have a very fine school, there is no question about that, and it was the intention of being so, and they have everything modern. Unfortunately, some things have happened in the construction of it that makes it very difficult for those connected with it. The result headed up to bout 2 years after it was constructed the whole school board resigned and they found it necessary to hunt a new school board.

Here are 1, 2 or 3 of the difficulties they have run into. You mentioned there was a certain percentage of draught in all the rooms. There are no storm windows of any kind and it is found that the heating system is inadequate to heat it in the cold winter. The people cannot sit near the windows, there is too much draught and the heating system is not strong enough at all. I am not blaming the educational department, do not think that. I think the architect was wrong in some of the things. They cannot heat it near the windows, it is away out of proportion to what the architect recommended.

It is a one-storey building with a very heavy roof, supposed to be non-conductive of cold and waterproof and all the rest, frost-proof, and required very heavy roof. As a result, they built very heavy beams in the rooms to carry the roof and in the classrooms which are unfortunate enough to be situated so that the beams are cross-wise, the sound effect is so bad the teachers have difficulty in making the pupils in the back rows understand what they are saying. You may think that is strange, but it is a fact. The acoustics are very bad.

There is a very fine auditorium, one for which we hoped for great things. It has these very heavy beams much larger than in the classrooms, and the same thing happens there. They more or less hoped to hold all their community gatherings in this particular room. It is a gymnasium and auditorium. The result was here only about 2 months ago they had a musical festival practice and got up at the school and before they completed it they had to take it to the old town hall to put it on for the sound effects.

Now, those are some of the things we are labouring under. I know in the age of progress some of these things cannot be helped, but I think the architect should have known enough about it to avoid these things.

There were some mistakes made in the building of it. There was a mistake made by the contractor. It required quite a bit of drainage system. There is no basement and you must drain for the school and the furnace pit, but the foundation was put down about 30 inches below the drain, but they found out the tip for the furnace was not drained out and it required 20 inches more. Evidently the foundation was that much lower than the territory permitted, according to the architect's plan. So they have had a problem which has cost—

HON. MR. DREW: Those drains have been fixed.

MR. McEWING: Yes, but the school is lower. I do not think the cost of the drains cost the school any more, but it has the effect of settling the school down and they have had that necessary expense in getting the ground down to compare with it. The contractor levelled within so many feet of the school and it left a pit around the school and they had to get a bulldozer in to move the clay back and now most of the ground lies that shape around the school and they have a water trough.

They have done the best they can, but these things have cost and will cost the school board in the future considerable money. The only reason I am saying these things, I think they should have further assistance and I would not like the same thing to happen to any other community experiments in a new school. It is a very fine building, but these things have happened and I think they should have greater assistance. Something will have to be done with the heating. I would like if the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) would consider giving some further assistance.

HON. MR. DREW: I will give consideration to it, but I cannot help expressing some surprise at a representative sitting here for 6 weeks and then asking this be considered. I think this gives you an indication of some of the difficulties encountered from time to time from a Minister's point of view. We have over 7,000 schools in this province and only 365 days in a year and if every other hon. member felt it was necessary to wait until the debate to discuss something in the ordinary way, we would not get very much business done.

I will take up and everything which has been recorded in Hansard and they will be examined carefully because this department is always seeking to do that, but I can only again express surprise at a picture which presents such apparently trying circumstances should be brought to my attention in this way.

MR. McEWING: Is this not the right place to discuss it?

HON. MR. DREW: I would have thought, with all the difficulties which are apparently being encountered, it might not have been a bad idea to let me know about this before.

MR. McEWING: I thought possibly some of the board had.

HON. MR. DREW: You have been here frequently and you have never mentioned it.

MR. McEWING: They never mentioned it?

HON. MR. DREW: It has never been placed before me.

MR. McEWING: The whole school board resigned.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): I did not know we had passed 49, the very large grant for public and separate schools, $33,200,000. I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) is quite satisfied with the way those grants are working out in some of the municipalities. There does seem to be an alarming increase in the local municipal tax rate notwithstanding the very large sum of money in respect to the grants. In Mimico they seem to have worse difficulties than I have known for some years, if ever. They seem to claim out there under the system of grants the poor are getting poorer and the rich are getting richer and it would be more satisfactory in this particular instance if the grants were made more on the basis of the system per class room as they are in the rural districts rather than the basis of the population of the municipality. Frequently the wealth of a municipality may be in quite a different proportion to the population. I think it must be giving the department a good deal of concern in view of the very large sums being now spent as to the manner in which it is working out in some municipalities.

HON. MR. DREW: Naturally this is a matter of very great concern, or shall I say, a subject that calls for very constant and most exact attention by the department, but, quite frankly, a statement is made—I do not mean you are making the statement—which sometimes is not correct. There are a few cases throughout the whole province where very real problems do arise.

The hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Martin) has one very real problem in his riding which is the result of a rather peculiar situation, where a small community gets inseparated, and by becoming inseparated places itself in that level of grants different from the position it would have been in had it remained a rural area. There are some cases of that kind where it is not a case of them getting left but it is a case of them not getting as much as they might have got under another system.

That does in itself seem unsatisfactory. On the whole, and with a surprisingly small number of exceptions, I am satisfied the system is working extremely well, and particularly in the ordinary rural areas.

There are, however, very real problems which arise and it will be recalled I said when we started these grants, this was, quite frankly, the preliminary stage and they would have to make a thorough statistical examination and also an examination of the general methods the Royal Commission on Education could recommend to us and which would be suitable. I might remind the hon. members we adopted this plan as a plan which could work within the existing legislation instead of attempting to change the legislation. We sought to avoid the very thing the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) quite properly pointed out. We sought to avoid making a change in the fundamental statutory structure, we may create real difficulties in adjusting ourselves to such recommendations regarded as acceptable; but I will say I believe the system of supervision and checking makes as sure as can be within the realm of human accuracy a proper use of the money which is expended. I can only repeat the mere handful—I mean that literally—of unusual cases as the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Martin) will admit, there may appear to be some more advantageous results in one area than another, but that it is working out satisfactorily.

I think it would be unwise to change the structure when we have some reasonable hope to assume we will be able to tackle it on the new basis of the recommendation before us.

Vote 49 approved.

On Vote 50.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Item 23. Regarding the position put forward tonight by the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) on the subject of temperance, namely, the starting point of temperance education should be in the home, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) not agree that $1,000 grant to the Temperance Education Association, a public body carrying on extensive temperance education in the province, a bit small?

HON. MR. DREW: That is not an allocation for temperance education. That is an allocation for the preparation of certain special material. Actually, the expenditure on temperance education, if it could be broken down, would be a very large figure indeed. This is for the special supplementary material, and simply put in there under that heading.

As I explained before, the very substantial amount of time which is spent on temperance education in every secondary school throughout the province, and to a more limited degree in the primary schools, is part and parcel of the whole education and cannot be segregated, in view of the fact it is incorporated in the general training. I hope no one will take from this, the expenditure in this province is $1,000.

MR. MACLEOD: I was not doing that. I began by saying I was in complete agreement with the argument which you put forward in introducing your estimates. I took the $1,000 grant to be a grant to the Ontario Temperance Organization. You do not give the Ontario Temperance Federation any money at all, do you?

HON. MR. DREW: No, there is no special grant.

MR. MACLEOD: Will you explain "Temperance Education Association?" I am not familiar with it.

HON. MR. DREW: It is an association which has for some time been preparing material for the schools as a basis for essays on temperance, and this has been going on for some years, and they have other activities, but this grant is for the limited purpose of providing for written material on the subject of temperance which can be used in the schools as a basis for essays by the pupils.

MR. MACLEOD: Can you tell us who is the director of that organization? Who is the chairman of it, or the personnel?

HON. MR. DREW: The president is the Rev. J. V. Mills, and the secretary, Mr. E. P. Steart.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): We got away from Vote 49 quickly. I thought my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) was raising another point on this vote.

I was particularly interested in item 6 of Vote 49, the community programme physical fitness and recreation was $123,000. Is that the vote under which you assist municipalities, municipal council sets up the local recreation board or commission which is responsible for the local expenditures for recreation and then they apply to the department for a percentage.

I think it is 33 per cent. you pay in the case of a salary to the recreational director, and a similar percentage on the expenditures of equipment and so on. Does that come out of vote $123,000?

HON. MR. DREW: That is the vote which takes care of setting up these local recreation groups.

MR. NIXON: How many municipalities or localities have come in line?

HON. MR. DREW: 85.

Vote 50 approved.

On Vote 51.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): The grant towards the physical culture, physical training, is only given when it is under the direction of the school board, is it not?

HON. MR. DREW: No. Representatives of the local groups get together and set up one of these community groups, and then when that is in a position to take care of this type of work, they then apply to the department for the approval and it is approved, first of all by the municipal council and then by the department, and then operate under this. This is past the school level, this is a combination of recreation and adult training.

MR. OLIVER: In item 26, of Vote 50, that apparently is a new vote. I wonder if you could tell me what that is for?

HON. MR. DREW: This is really a grant which has been given before, but it was given under a different name. It was under the title of community life leadership. It has now been changed to the present title. The grant is the same.

MR. SALSBERG: As this is practically the last item, item 50 deals with the grant to cultural and other institutions. I would like, with your permission, to say just a word or two. I am glad to see the increases in these grants being made. However, I would like to suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) to consider an extension of grants and an increase of grants particularly to the cultural institutions which have a contribution to make to the cultural life of the province as a whole. I am aware of the beginnings made in the purchase of a painting by an Ontario artist, at least once a year. I am always glad to think I had a little bit to do with that.

For instance, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra is an important institution, and we have not yet got into the habit of considering such an institution as a public responsibility, as is the case in the Old World where the operas, theatres and philharmonic orchestras are considered the responsibility of the state or the municipality or the province. Here, we are still in the position where heart-rending appeals have to be made for a few thousand dollars to save the life of an orchestra, and for art work to be carried on and so on.

I merely wanted to make this observation to the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) since most of these items do come under his department, to undertake a greater extension of financial grants to institutions of that sort. I think the public will go along. I doubt whether there will be any serious criticism and in the long run we will strengthen the basis of the cultural life and accomplishments in the province.

HON. MR. DREW: I do not disagree on this occasion with the comments of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg). I believe there is much to be done in the advancement of cultural training and I am most anxious that it be advanced in a practical way. Actually, very substantial strides have been made to an extent which can only be appreciated if one visits some of these community centres about which we were speaking a short time ago. A very real development is taking place along the cultural line within these groups and that is as important a part of their purpose as the physical recreation end for the enjoyment aspects of it.

We are stepping up musical and art education in the schools. One of the things which has been a very successful development of the past few years, has been the arrangement of concert groups which go around to different communities. During this last year, under the Department of Education, concerts were given in 26 different centres, which were attended by more than 60,000 persons, of whom one half were pupils. They paid an entrance, which was not a large one, but nevertheless, it was a paid entrance.

Fifty-five young artists who were actually amongst the students themselves, took part in these programmes, and from the fact of their going out and putting on these musical programmes, is developed a measure of self-confidence and interest which is the next step toward some of the things which are taking place in connection with musical education at the conservatory, in conjunction with the university. Perhaps it is only a beginning, but for the first time in this country there is an opera school in conjunction with the Conservatory, and this affords wider opportunities for training in instrumental music, singing, and so on.

How quickly we can advance, or how successful we may be, we cannot say. At least, the idea is to build a complete pattern under which the schools will develop their musical and cultural training and be able to advance to a higher level. These have made very definite advances in the programmes in both musical and art centres.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest to the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) that in next year's estimates, in line with what he has just said, he might include a grant to the Gaelic Society. I raised this point last year. Those people are really doing a magnificent piece of work, in an effort to maintain, develop and expand the Highland culture in the Province of Ontario. There is a very estimable gentleman in the civil service, in the Department of Highways, who is playing a leading role in the development of that very work, and I think the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) would be true to his own Scotch background which I heard him claim not so very long ago, if he gave encouragement to this group of people which at one time constituted perhaps the basic culture in the Province of Ontario.

I understand it is possible for an organization like the Gaelic Society, or the Highland Society to approach the Department of Education under some of the sections we have dealt with, and perhaps get a grant, and I appeal to the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) if such a request is made, he forget for the moment I happen to be a Scotchman and give them a little help.

HON. MR. DREW: When we are talking about music or art, I am quite prepared to accept in the spirit in which it is put forward any suggestion of this kind, and I certainly will not exclude consideration of anything that is put forward.

MR. NIXON: Before we leave item 51; I rather hesitate to ask this question in view of the somewhat surprising repercussions which followed my sincere representation last year that McMaster University might share in a sum of some $4,000,000, which was not really the taxpayers' money, but came from an outside source.

I noticed an announcement concerning the creation of a new institution to be known as the University of Hamilton—

HON. MR. DREW: Hamilton College.

MR. NIXON: —which might qualify for provincial assistance. Would that have to be created by an Act of this Legislature, and when may they be expected to qualify for provincial assistance.

HON. MR. DREW: It is Hamilton College. It is already incorporated.

MR. NIXON: Just by letters patent?

HON. MR. DREW: That is right. They have their letters patent. The subject has been under consideration. In fact, I met the board of governors of McMaster, and of the new Hamilton College and the matter was very fully discussed with them. They concurred in the views I expressed, that the whole question of the development of a new faculty, which admittedly would, from the beginning, be requiring state assistance, should be examined with the idea of developing a rational plan throughout the province, which would avoid either unnecessary duplication or the development of a faculty in one place, where they might already be adequately supplied some place else, and the understanding is we are to have a meeting of the administrative and academic heads of the university for the purpose of discussing this whole subject, so we can estimate the probable attendance level of that university, and examine the whole financial situation. It would appear at the moment that certain faculties are likely to have a higher proportion of students than others in relation to the ultimate expected fields of employment, and my understanding is we all agree it is desirable we establish a pattern of this kind with the understanding we shall meet shortly and discuss this whole subject, and the boards were not in disagreement with the fact that Hamilton College be considered at that conference.

Items 51 and 52 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Department of Tourists and Publicity, page 107.

HON. G. ARTHUR WELSH (Minister of Travel and Publicity): Mr. Chairman, in rising to present to the Ontario Legislature the Estimates for the Department of Travel and Publicity for the fiscal year, 1948-49, I am mindful of my position as spokesman for Ontario's fourth largest industry from the standpoint of monetary return and one of even greater importance in the providing of employment to our people, and a tremendous market for farm produce, right at their door.

There is no need at the present time for me to recapitulate all of the reasons why the Government has seen fit to create a separate department to administer and give direction to this extremely important industry. A few months ago I had the opportunity of listening to an excellent address delivered by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), who showed a strong awareness of the importance of tourism in our national and provincial scheme and of the role which my department has to play. I take this opportunity to extend belated congratulations to the hon. member for Grey South (Mr. Oliver) and although not agreeing with many of his conclusions to compliment him upon his presentation of the case for tourism.

At the same time, I would be remiss, I think, if I were not to express to this Legislature my own personal appreciation and that of officials of the department for the interest and co-operation shown by the hon. members, irrespective of Party, during the short time that we have been in existence. You have been a very tolerant and forbearing group and during the birth pangs of a department, for which no precedent exists elsewhere in Canada, I have observed a marked inclination on the part of all of you to give us an opportunity to show what we could do. Your attitude has placed upon me, as Minister, a responsibility of which I am much aware and I can assure you of the determination of myself and departmental officials to conduct our affairs in such fashion that we shall never see the day when the welfare of this vitally important industry is dictated by considerations other than of its own best interest.

Last year, as most of the hon. members perhaps know, we enjoyed the greatest volume of tourist visitors to Ontario in the history of this province. This was our second consecutive record-breaking year, eclipsing by a substantial amount the number of guests whom we entertained in 1946. To give you some idea of the numerical importance of this industry, during 1947 there were more than 18,000,000 border crossings by Americans into this province—equal to more than 4 times the population of Ontario. It is true that some of these remained only a few hours, but notwithstanding the shortness or the length of their stay, all left something with us which added to the wealth of our country and province. Ontario continues to enjoy a predominant place in Canada's national tourist picture. In 1947 more than 60 per cent. of all U.S. tourists entering this country came through Ontario ports and although some of them, it is true, continued on into our neighbouring provinces, the overwhelmingly greater number remained to enjoy the unparalleled facilities which a bountiful nature has granted us.

I might mention at this point that although we are of necessity primarily interested in "selling" Ontario to our visitors, we do everything possible to stimulate their interest in other provinces as well. All of our Information Centres maintain stocks of literature and maps of our sister provinces, and our information clerks endeavour to keep the larger picture in mind when discharging their duties. Obviously, it is good business for us in contacting an American visitor at, say, Windsor to prevail upon him to continue on through Ontario, perhaps to Montreal and the Gaspé, rather than to take the short-cut through Buffalo.

In this connection, I may say that we have worked in close co-operation with the official Government travel agencies of the 8 other provinces as well as with the Federal Travel Bureau at Ottawa, and the great transportation companies. During the past 2 years we have been able to meet with representatives of all these agencies for a full and frank discussion of tourist problems, and as a consequence I am confident that today all of us are receiving a greater return for the money which we spend in tourist promotion and development than ever before.

As an indication of the co-operation which we have solicited and received, I might tell you that at last October's National Tourist Conference, our department suggested that the Canadian Government Travel Bureau restrict its advertising to certain general fields, leaving other fields entirely open to the provincial bureaus. This suggestion was received favourably by all in attendance. Its implementation means that our Canadian Government Travel Bureau will advertise Canada, generally, in all the expensive mass-circulation publications in the United States, leaving the way open to us to concentrate our advertising in those regions relatively close to Ontario from which we might normally expect to draw the greater amount of our patronage.

In this connection, each province, together with the Canadian Government Travel Bureau and the two major railways, carried out an exchange of advertising plans well in advance of the opening of their respective campaigns, so that each would know what the other was doing. As a result I feel that this year Canada's tourist industry will receive the maximum benefit from the money being spent to encourage individual visitors.

It is not my intention to weary you with a detailed summary of all of the operations of my department, but there are a few points in connection with each branch which I feel might well be drawn to your attention.

Reference has already been made to the question of publicity. This year we are asking for an increased vote for publicity purposes. One reason, of course, is that all of the things which we use in advertising the province have increased substantially in price during the past 12 months. Our printing costs more, as does the newspaper and magazine space which we buy. These, however, are only 2 aspects of our publicity operations. We are building up, somewhat slowly to be sure, a library of motion pictures for distribution throughout the United States and Canada, depicting the various tourist regions and their attractions. Within the next few months we will be releasing 2 exceptionally fine movies dealing with the Lake-of-the-Woods region and the Nipigon and Lake-head regions. In passing, I may remind the hon. members from northwestern Ontario that our department is fully alive to the importance of the sections which they represent in the development of our tourist industry, and we are currently endeavouring to work out with some of the large air-lines a co-operative programme to induce prospective visitors from the eastern United States to make use of the fine new facilities which now exist to transport them in a minimum of time from their homes to some of our most delightful recreational areas.

Our publicity activities take many forms. For instance, we will continue the extremely effective United States Editors' Tour this year, and have issued invitations to 2 editors from each of 12 states to be our guests for a 10-day period during June, at which time they will have an opportunity to see for themselves what Ontario has to offer in a vacation sense. Last year we supplemented this tour with a trip by a group of outstanding travel and outdoors editors representing some of the great metropolitan newspapers of the United States. The group of 8 assembled in Toronto and then literally fished their way across the province to the Manitoba border and back. The publicity returns which we secured from this activity were enormously in excess of the relatively small outlay required. During the past winter, our department was represented by a travelling emissary who visited all of the trailer camps in the State of Florida screening our motion pictures, distributing our literature and answering enquiries. It is quite obvious that people who vacation in Florida in the winter are splendid prospects for travel to Ontario in the summer, and by means of this activity we have been able to contact many thousands of our most promising potential customers. I may tell you that this entire activity cost the taxpayers of Ontario $600 for a 4-month period.

Our information branch, which is responsible for the handling of all travel enquiries as well as for the operation of the tremendously successful tourist reception centres at border points, is presently in the throes of coping with the greatest volume of enquiries in our history. Last year, as I indicated, was a "record" season. This year we are receiving enquiries at the rate of twice the flow of 1947, and this despite the reluctance and apprehension felt on the part of many of our prospective visitors as a consequence of the Federal Government's "austerity" announcement of last November. A cornerstone of our policy is to forward an individual reply to every person who writes to us. This involves considerably more work than the mere matter of filling an envelope with some pamphlets and a mimeographed letter, but experience has shown that the personal contact is extremely important, and when we follow this up with a friendly welcome at one of our reception centres, the impression is inevitably favourable.

On the subject of our reception centres, I may tell you that this year we will have them operating at Sarnia, Windsor, Fort Erie, Niagara Falls, Homer, Lansdowne, Prescott, Sault Ste. Marie, Fort Frances, Kenora-Keewatin and Pigeon River, the last-named being the final link in this chain. During 1947 we had approximately 250,000 parties of American visitors who stopped at these centres for assistance and information, and I am convinced that the favourable impression which our representatives make upon the visitor when he arrives in our midst, is one of the principal factors in the great "repeat" business which we enjoy from year to year.

I should like to digress at this point to clarify, if I can, a matter which has been very much in the public eye lately; namely, the relationship of the tourist industry to the alleged depletion of our fish and game resources. Many careless words have been spoken on this subject, some of them quite recently. We have determined through interviews with non-residents at our reception centres that a very small percentage of our visitors are actually interested in fishing and hunting. I do not mean to suggest that this is not an important group economically, because statistics indicate that the angler and hunter proportionately leave as great or greater a sum of money with us as any other group. But, I would like to point out that the numbers of persons attracted here solely for angling and hunting is a very small portion of the total of tourist visitors.

Our department has been extremely careful not to overstate the case in the advertising appeals which we make outside the province. We have never suggested to sportsmen that we have illimitable resources of fish and wildlife. In planning our publicity we seek the guidance of the responsible officials of the Fish and Wildlife Division of the Department of Lands and Forests, and we are thus able to emphasize those things which we have in abundance and play down those which we have not.

Our development branch, which is concerned principally with improving the standards of tourist accommodation and facilities, carried out a programme of inspection of all Ontario resorts during the 1947 season. Contact was made with operators and they were advised in detail as to what they must do in order to comply with the regulations which become effective April 1st, of this year. Our department was quick to realize that you cannot legislate good camps and fair standards into existence. With this in mind we will shortly distribute to the tourist industry of Ontario a tourist operators' handbook which will cover in a general way the basic principles of good resort or camp operation and give the needed guidance to the many hundreds of new operators who have entered the industry during the past few years. It is our intention during the next 12 months to produce additional brochures, each written by an authority on the subject who is personally familiar with actual operation problems.

During the winter, which is drawing to a close, we inaugurated a new activity in our winter promotion branch, which has been the cause of considerable favourable comment. With the co-operation of the two large railway systems, we set up machinery to receive snow reports from all of the principal skiing centres in the province and to channel these out to newspapers, radio stations, and other interested parties. This was a most effective way of drawing the public's attention to Ontario's suitability for winter recreation, and the benefit received from this activity was far beyond the relatively small amount expended for this. In addition, we operated 2 highly successful schools for professional skiing instructors at Limberlost Lodge and at the Lakehead. Purpose of these schools was to train our own people to give proper instruction to visitors seeking it, since the fact has been established that the ability to secure tuition is one of the major factors in dictating the choice of a winter resort. Last year we had more than 40 ski tows in operation in Ontario, as compared with 20 during the 1946-47 season. This represents to my mind substantial progress, and I know of several splendid resorts in the province which for the first time in history will be open for winter business next year.

During the past year, a new branch has been added to the department—the Division of Public Information. This division has the responsibility for co-ordinating and supplementing all Government publicity advertising and information services, and I think that the hon. members will agree that this is a move which has been long overdue. One of the functions of this branch is to produce material of public interest of a character not normally covered by the daily or weekly press. I yield to no one in my admiration of the job being done by our Ontario newspapers, but the type of information which we are able to distribute through the Government Service Bulletin is such that would offer but limited appeal to a newspaper whose readers are highly concentrated in a certain district or area. The Bulletin is intended to inform the people of the services which its Government has to offer, and the remarkable growth in circulation since its initial publication last August attests to its value. The information which it provides is scrupulously edited to ensure that it contains no content of a political or controversial character, and I would welcome suggestions from any hon. members as to how this service might be improved.

In conclusion, I would earnestly solicit your favourable consideration of the estimates which are to be presented to you. It is true that in the aggregate (as was pointed out by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) 1 year ago, and again in his recent radio broadcast) they do not represent a large sum of money in comparison with the requirements of most of the other departments of Government. Let me give you my assurance that the funds which you make available under these votes will be as carefully expended as possible and will provide to the people of Ontario and to Canada as a whole a return far in excess of the few thousands of dollars that are represented here.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Votes 185 to 190 inclusive approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) Department of Planning and Development.

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to deal specifically with the various branches of the activities of this department. I have explained on other occasions the nature of the work which is being carried on. That work is progressing in all these lines of activity. However, I just wish to say something for a moment about the new branch of activity which was added to this department during the last few months.

In doing so, I would like to emphasize one aspect in particular of the immigration programme which is, perhaps, the most important feature of it.

As hon. members are well aware, and as they have heard on many occasions before this in the House, this Government carried out an air-immigration plan which commenced on August 2nd, 1947, under which more than 7,000 immigrants from the British Isles were brought to this country. However, in spite of the fact the air travel aspect of this immigration plan was a very distinctive feature of it, and a very novel feature nevertheless in many respects the more important and the more fundamental aspect of it was it was an experiment in selective immigration. It was perhaps the first movement on a large scale of people by air for the purpose of immigration, and also the first real large-scale experiment in selective immigration on a sound basis.

Partly because we were faced with certain special problems in arranging for transportation by air, it was necessary to organize both in Great Britain and in this country, not only for the quick, ready and convenient clearance of immigrants for the purpose of making air travel available to them, but also for their speedy accommodation and placement and for their satisfactory settlement in this country. In the first place, of course, we have been guided by the consideration, in selecting immigrants the dominating factor should be the opportunity which they show for quick and ready employment when they arrive at this time. That, in itself, required considerable organization. But that is not the more important feature of this. The more important feature is that in selecting immigrants, an attempt was made to select people who would become permanent settlers in this country; that settlement was the main objective, and immediate employment merely one step toward that goal.

I may say, in carrying out this policy of selecting the only standards applied were standards which had those two objectives in view—employability and the likelihood of permanent and satisfactory settlement and citizenship in this country. In discussing the prospects of employment here, every immigrant had available to him the fullest possible information as to what sorts of employment were open here, and when he arrived in this country he had also available to him immediately the fullest information of where he might go to get the sort of position, or the sort of job, he sought.

In every case, every immigrant was perfectly free to choose between the various openings which lay before him. Moreover, he was perfectly free to choose where he wished to go to settle, whether in the Province of Ontario or, in some cases, in some other province in Canada. It is true, some of these immigrants have found in one way or another there were openings for them in other provinces as well as Ontario. There were no strings whatsoever attached to their movements, and there were no strings attached to their employment. They were free citizens as soon as they arrived, just as if they had been born and brought up in this country.

That is the very basis, we think, of a sound immigration programme, and I think it is the secret of the success of our endeavours to carry out a selective immigration programme.

In spite of the fact that our special arrangements, which were made for air transportation of people from the British Isles, have come to an end, nevertheless we have succeeded in establishing, as a result of our experience with this air transportation, and as a result of some of the necessities which arose from that, something which is much more far-reaching. We have established a new system for dealing with immigrants at both ends—both in the Old Country and here. We have also established a system for dealing with many of the later problems which arise when people come into this country, and as strangers in this country, have many questions which they desire to have answered, and many problems in which they require some assistance in solving. In being in a position to render service of this kind, we have made it possible to settle many people much more quickly and much more satisfactorily than if all these matters had been allowed simply to take their own course.

In addition to the services which have been accorded to the persons who came out by air, we have also done very much to assist in a similar way in the reception and placement and the establishment of many more people who have come here by sea. We have made special arrangements with the railways; and with the various ocean lines which have brought people destined for Ontario, and we look forward during the coming year, not to any contraction in immigration but with increased shipping space which appears to be forthcoming. We look forward to a substantial increase in the number of people who will be dealt with in this way.

In addition to those from the British Isles, who will be coming to Ontario by ship, will be between 8,000 and 10,000 Dutch agricultural workers. Our organization is also at their disposal, and, indeed, at the disposal of any immigrants who come here under our auspices, or whom we know in advance are coming here destined for this province.

With that brief outline of some of the numbers involved in the programme which we have carried out and intend to continue, and, if necessary, to expand, I submit these estimates for your approval.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Votes 124 to 127 inclusive approved.

On Vote 128.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I just want to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) a question. In connection with the subject of special efforts to attract immigrants, does the department undertake any large-scale settlement schemes in the north? When this matter was before the House, a couple of years ago, I think it was the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) who spoke about the great possibilities of large-scale settlements in the north—agricultural settlements, that is—on a community basis, where a few scores of families, or a few hundred, will live in communities and enjoy community life as a result.

From the British Isles, as I was able to observe, it was not easy to get manual labourers or mechanics to come in the numbers this department wanted to attract. I know the department tried to attract that type of worker; I know of efforts made in Scotland and elsewhere to attract that type of worker without the success expected, though some did come, but I imagine there would be a possibility of attracting people from there and elsewhere by a large-scale and Government-assisted colonization scheme of the sort the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) spoke of a couple of years ago. I imagine it would come under your department, Mr. Minister (Mr. Porter), and I am wondering whether you had as yet reached the stage of planning that direction, rather than having agriculturists come and take up whatever farms are available, or in some cases, taking up new land.

HON. MR. PORTER: Will you please put your question; what is the question?

MR. SALSBERG: I am sorry the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter), at this late hour, does not get it. My question was whether your department is undertaking any developments for the establishment of agricultural colonies in the northern part of the province in a manner such as was suggested to this House by the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy).

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): He is getting completely confused again.

MR. SALSBERG: About 2 years ago that suggestion contained the idea of large-scale clearance of land, settlement of communities, et cetera; I imagine that would come under your department.

HON. MR. PORTER: Well, since I do not recall the remarks of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) 2 years ago in that connection, I am afraid I cannot answer that question.

Vote 128 approved.

MR. SALSBERG: That is one way of getting out of it.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I am wondering if my friend (Mr. Porter) could tell me, going back to Vote 127, item 5, what costs and expenses are there in the transportation of immigrants. What would that be?

HON. MR. PORTER: If I may elaborate somewhat on that item, perhaps I had better explain that our immigrants who came out under the air plan paid £67 each for their passage. £65 represented each man's share for the plane—£65 times 40, that is the number each plane carried, was the amount which had to be paid to the aviation company.

In addition to that, there are expenses in connection with going to and from the airport, busses had to be arranged, and at this end, a system had to be arranged to bring people from the airport into the reception centre. There were also incidental expenses in connection with ticketing, and so on.

This item is to cover the estimated costs of transportation of that kind in Canada, from Malton to the centre. That is really off-set by the money which is collected in fares at the other end, which goes directly into the treasury, and is not shown as an off-setting item here. It really is not an expenditure of money which is not off-set by revenue.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, do we have a quorum?

MR. CHAIRMAN: Yes.

MR. MACLEOD: I thought I might be out of order.

HON. MR. PORTER: Never.

MR. MACLEOD: Forgetting what the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) said 2 years ago, and taking the point of departure from the prophecy made by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) a few days ago, that this province is going to double its population in the next 10 years, which is a very desirable thing which I am sure everybody in this House would welcome, although I do not see how that can possibly come about unless the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) makes a contribution there, too—I do not mean as an individual, but by actually working out a well-planned immigration policy. It seems to me a well-planned immigration policy for the Province of Ontario, extending over a period of 5 years, would certainly envisage placing of a substantial number of people on the land in northern Ontario.

There are vast areas to be developed. Most of the experts in this field, like Dr. Steffanson, tell us that today the move is north. With that thought in mind, does not the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) think it would be a good idea in line with the immigration section of his department, to try to secure some tens of thousands of farmers, maybe some of them in Scotland and other parts of Europe, who could be brought here and be assisted by the Government of Ontario to take up land and develop more extensive agriculture in the northern part of Ontario?

What plans do you have in mind?

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Might I draw the hon. member's (Mr. MacLeod) attention to Vote 16, page 17, under the Department of Agriculture, item 3, "Services and expenses in connection with agricultural work; clearing, breaking and draining of land; farm settlement; district veterinary services; grants and such other expenses necessary for the development of agriculture in northern Ontario as may be directed by the Minister of Agriculture: $750,000."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. PORTER: I just want to say, if the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) will ask a simple question, I will be very glad to answer it, but I have had three questions woven into a long speech, and I find it difficult to make a simple answer.

MR. MACLEOD: That is very easy.

HON. MR. PORTER: As far as the other hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is concerned, I cannot make head or tail of what his question was.

MR. MACLEOD: I am afraid it must be your Presbyterian mind that is not working, because my question was very simple. In line with the proposed projects of the Government—

HON. MR. PORTER: That is not a question.

AN HON. MEMBER: What is the question?

MR. MACLEOD: One dense person at a time is enough, I do not want to take on 2 or 3. My point is, in the budget of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost)—

HON. MR. FROST: There is an item of $750,000 right there.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, but that is money; what I am talking about is people, the people who can be brought here to Ontario to settle on the land in the northern part of this province. Does the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter), in line with his general plan on immigration, have in mind the bringing of a substantial number of farmers to take up land in either the northern part of Ontario or any other part?

HON. MR. PORTER: Well, I stated there were between 8,000 and 10,000 Dutch farmers coming out during the next few months.

MR. MACLEOD: They will be put on the land?

HON. MR. PORTER: They will go on the land. Some of them may go to the north, and some of them to the south. That is an answer, I think, to your question.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I do not think we would be spending $750,000 unless it would be about some people.

MR. MACLEOD: The point is, there are a lot of people in the Province of Ontario today, and some of them coming from the Province of Quebec, who are colonizing in northern Ontario, and are getting assistance from the Government.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Well, they are nice people.

MR. MACLEOD: But if what the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) was talking about in his speech the other day is sound, then I think we have to go far beyond that, and actually seek out acceptable immigrants who will come to Ontario from the British Isles.

HON. MR. FROST: That is what we have been doing with the air scheme. We have been bringing people here.

MR. MACLEOD: That is only 7,000.

HON. MR. FROST: We are only just starting.

HON. MR. PORTER: We are just starting. There will be 8,000 to 10,000 Dutch farmers coming in here to settle on the land.

MR. MACLEOD: That is as far as your plans go at the moment?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh, no.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is all the shipping space we can get. There are 40,000 who want to come out from Holland.

MR. MACLEOD: 40,000 want to come to Ontario?

HON. MR. PORTER: I would think so.

MR. MACLEOD: And if you can arrange with the Federal Government to get shipping space for those people, you are prepared to have 40,000 Dutch farmers come to Ontario; is that right?

HON. MR. PORTER: If we can arrange with the Federal Government to get shipping space, will we have 40,000 coming to Ontario? Is that your question?

MR. MACLEOD: Yes.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know that anything depends upon any Federal Government arrangement for shipping space. I simply point out, when you ask your question, that between 8,000 and 10,000 Dutch farmers will arrive here during the summer months. That is as much shipping space as the Dutch farmers can get during those summer months.

MR. MACLEOD: But if your co-operation with the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe reaches the stage where he will assist you in getting additional shipping space, then you are prepared to accommodate another 30,000?

HON. MR. PORTER: That is a hypothetical question.

MR. MACLEOD: It is not hypothetical. You say there are 40,000 Dutch farmers who are prepared to come to Ontario.

HON. MR. PORTER: I did not say they are prepared to come to Ontario. I said I had no doubt they would come to Ontario if they had the opportunity. I do not know what they have in mind. All I said was there were 40,000 Dutch farmers in Holland who are ready to leave Holland and settle in other parts of the world, and most of those people would be willing to come to Canada if they could get shipping space to come here.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, so that being the case, if you could reach a satisfactory working agreement with the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Howe) and the Minister of so many other things, to provide shipping space, you could actually put those people on the land in the Province of Ontario; is that correct?

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not answering a question that is quite aside from reality. The reality of the position is that about 8,000 to 10,000 can physically come here. Our plans and preparations are made in view of what the reality of the situation is, and not upon some hypothetical possibility which may or may not come about.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Department of the Provincial Secretary.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): In presenting the estimates for the Department of the Provincial Secretary, may I refer the House to the variety of subjects which are covered in that department?

The department is divided into 2 branches, one dealing with companies, and the other with commissions. Under commissions comes the civil service, Ontario House, Office of the Speaker, the Legislative Assembly, the Office of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, the King's Printers, Ontario Research Commission, Social Security and Rehabilitation Committee, and miscellaneous requirements.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) has dealt with the principal concern of Ontario House in the past year, that of immigration, and, to some extent, that of trade and industry, and other activities of Ontario House, leaving the public relation aspect of the work, and service to Canadian businessmen and travellers. I shall not spend time on that subject other than to deal with such questions as may arise.

I should like to direct my remarks to the civil service, which seems to me to be a subject which deserves some time of the Legislature.

Mr. Chairman, as the civil service is assigned to the Department of the Provincial Secretary for administrative purposes, the estimates of this department which we now have to consider include provision for the Civil Service Commission—Item 133, and the Ontario Public Service Superannuation Fund—Item 143. It is appropriate, therefore, to give the Legislature some view of the civil service generally.

As the Civil Service Commissioner says in his report, which has just been presented to the Legislature, the year ending March 31, 1947, marks the completion of a 30-year period of personnel administration in the provincial service.

Prior to 1918, when the first Civil Service Commission was appointed, there had been no system for dealing, in a uniform manner, with the problems of appointment, transfer, promotion and salary revision in the various departments. Many civil servants were designated by titles which bore no relation to their duties, while the salaries paid for the same type of work differed greatly in each department.

The first report made just after the first Great War refers in these words to conditions and times which were not dissimilar to the present:

"Conditions have been removed further from the normal during this fiscal year. . . . This has been directly due to the effects of the war. . . . Throughout the year the cost of living kept moving upwards. . . . The unsettled state of affairs generally has had a disturbing effect on the Public Service. . . . Considerable credit is due the employees of the Government who, in the face of difficult conditions, have carried on successfully the duties assigned to them."

Mr. Chairman, in many ways the conditions which exist now are parallel to those just mentioned. In particular, it is appropriate that recognition should be given to the loyal and effective service given by the great majority of the employees of the Province of Ontario during times which have been unsettled and unsettling.

Many people have the unfortunate habit of mind of criticizing civil servants. These critics often seize on an instance of dilatoriness or inefficiency as an excuse for presenting the public servant as one who lives, without undue exertion, at the expense of the taxpayer. The truth is that there are as many, if not more, able and conscientious workers in the public service than there are in any large organization. Personally, I have nothing but praise for the vast majority of those who serve the people of Ontario in the many departments of the provincial Government. Among our senior officials are many very able men whose capacities would bring them greater financial rewards in private business. In my short time as Provincial Secretary I have heard of many cases in which larger salaries offered from outside have been rejected. These men and women, who put money in a secondary place to the public service which they can perform as employees of the province, deserve our thanks and merit all the efforts which we make to improve the terms of service and retirement.

During the 4½ years which this administration has been in office, it has followed the principle that efficient government depends upon securing, not only capable but the best qualified people for the many technical and responsible duties which the permanent service now performs. For this reason the Government's efforts have been directed towards making the public service attractive and secure. This has been demonstrated by many constructive actions, and I shall mention them only briefly.

First there is the restoration of regular promotions,

Secondly the incorporation into salaries of the wartime cost-of-living bonus; thirdly, the complete revision of the compensation schedules—a 2-year labour—which was finished in 1946; the substantial improvement of the superannuation and service provisions; and, finally, the establishment of methods of joint consultation.

In these constructive moves the Civil Service Association of Ontario has played a very important part. The untiring efforts of its officers in all matters which would improve conditions and term of service have been effective in bringing many reforms to the attention of the Civil Service Commission and the Government. The co-operation of the association generally in the operation of departmental councils, the joint advisory council and the Board of Review, has provided a solid base on which these efforts at joint consultation and administration could be built.

It is understood that the association now comprises in its membership over half of all the civil service. The Government naturally looks to the association, on many occasions, to express the views of the service generally.

Although the employees of the Liquor Control Board are not civil servants, strictly speaking, they come under the superannuation plan of The Public Service Act. This association took an active part in promoting the interests of its members during the recent revision of The Public Service Act.

Mr. Chairman, I think mention should be made of those with long service. I am sure the members of this House will approve the action of the Government in tendering a complimentary dinner last December to those civil servants who had completed 25 years of service. Their common achievements in the public interest over a quarter century are a bond of interest which unites them in an organization called "The Quarter Century Club." Membership in this club is a very real badge of distinction. To signalize that distinction the Government provides each member, as he qualifies, with a gold badge bearing the coat of arms of the province.

There is one other association of civil servants which merits special notice, namely the Civil Service War Veterans Association. As its name indicates, it is an association of the many veterans of the first and second World Wars, who are in the Ontario public service. They are an active group and broadly interested in the welfare of the service, as well as in the special cause of the veteran.

More than 1,200 Ontario civil servants enlisted in the second Great War. Their return to the service has been effected and is now completed to the satisfaction of themselves and of the Government.

The recruitment of new staff to fill vacancies created by the war years, and to meet expanding peacetime functions of the various departments, has gone forward steadily. In this recruitment the present Government has declared itself in favour of giving preference in employment to veterans, and has followed this policy.

This is demonstrated from the following figures showing the percentage of veterans among new male employees entering the public service in recent periods, as follows:

Period	Percentage of Veterans —Male employees
Fiscal year ending March 31, 1946..	Over 80 per cent.
Fiscal year ending March 31, 1947..	82 per cent.
Year ending Decem- ber 31, 1947	74 per cent.

These percentages would be even higher if they did not take into account certain junior positions in which young men and boys, younger than any veterans, are engaged.

The policy declared and practised, as above mentioned, has been given written expression in the Regulations made under the Public Service Act of 1947, which provide as follows:

“Where the qualifications of applicants for any position in the Civil Service are equal, preference shall be given to those who were honourably discharged or retired from active service in His Majesty’s Forces in respect of the (a) War of 1914 to 1918; or (b) War of 1939 to 1945.”

I should like to finish my remarks on the Civil Service by referring to a letter written yesterday to the President of the Civil Service Association of Ontario, in which the Government’s view on the question of a cost-of-living bonus is set forth. This is addressed to:

“R. C. Johnston, Esq., President, The Civil Service Association of Ontario, 897 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario. Dear Mr. Johnston:”

I shall read only the relevant parts:

“In our view the revision of the schedules of compensation in October 1946 produced a classification of grades and salaries which is in the main sound and satisfactory. We do not believe that it is in the best interests of the Public Service to apply any temporary expedients, such as a cost-of-living bonus, when it is still impossible to determine whether or not the sudden rise in living costs does in fact represent a continuing trend.

“On the other hand, we recognize that a constant review of particular grades and schedules of payment is necessary to meet changing conditions. A number of such revisions have been made in the past 6 months and further revisions are in process. The Civil Service Commission has been instructed to consider and make its recommendations on any application for change which is properly brought to its attention. To enable the commission to perform this duty more satisfactorily the new Public Service Act, which came into force on March 1, 1948, provides for 3 commissioners instead of 1, and the Government proposes to fill the positions by appointing 1 commissioner experienced and trained in personnel work, who will be able to devote his full time to review of the schedules, and a third commissioner qualified for and with the duty of promoting the efficiency of the service generally by such means as removing duplication as between departments, assisting in the proper allocation and transfer of staff, and such like.

"You will appreciate, of course, that the system of regular annual increases in pay, combined in many cases with promotion, for all those whose services have been satisfactory and who have not reached the top of the grades which are open to them at the time, is going forward as planned. These general increases in pay throughout the civil service took place on April 1, 1947, and are again being made as of April 1, 1948, and in fact have been completed for a good part of the service and will be reflected in the April cheques."

Mr. Chairman, that is the explanation of the position of the Government.

MR. NIXON: What was the date of that letter?

HON. MR. MICHENER: That was written yesterday, to the president of the association.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Michener) if there has been any intimation as to how the Civil Service Association reacted toward that letter?

HON. MR. MICHENER: Not as yet, Mr. Chairman. The letter was delivered today and was timed to conform with a general meeting of the association which I believe was called some time ago for this time.

MR. MACLEOD: I think the letter should have gone a couple of weeks ago, so that we would know how they feel about it.

Vote 131 approved.

On Vote 132.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, on 132, I see an item here "Provision for reproduction of coat-of-arms in plaque form, $10,000." I thought that was prepared a few years ago. I have one of them at home, which I got from somebody. Are you going to go in for mass production of the coat-of-arms?

HON. MR. MICHENER: That is the purpose. It is not an expenditure which would be unrecoverable. The purpose is to produce the plaque in quantity, and make it available for public sale to travellers and tourists, and, of course, the item would be recouped by the sales, not by this Government but through ordinary commercial channels.

MR. MACLEOD: And even make a little profit on it.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I hope so.

Vote 132 approved.

On Vote 133.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on 133, I am obliged to say that the letter just read by the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) could hardly be considered satisfactory to those hon. members of the House who are concerned with the wage levels of the Civil Service. My colleague, the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) asked why the letter was not sent a couple of weeks ago so we could have the reply by now from the Civil Service Association, and I whispered and said, "They do not want to have the reply, and that is why the letter was sent so late."

HON. MR. DREW: That was a typical comment.

MR. MACLEOD: Is it true or not?

MR. SALSBERG: I have in my hand a page from the official journal of the civil servants, the Civil Service News. It is a page from the issue of October, 1947, in which the civil servants speak very frankly about the seriousness of the salary situation. I will quote a couple of lines from that article in the Civil Service News—or rather, I would say, from an editorial in the Civil Service News.

The quotation is as follows:

"Aside from certain statutory increases in April, 1947, the last adjustment of salaries for the civil service of Ontario was made as at January, 1946."

The editorial goes on to speak about the serious problem which civil servants have to make ends meet, in the face of rising living costs.

I will quote from another section of the same editorial, from the official organ of the Civil Service Association, which says as follows:

"If reliable evidence is required that salaries in the service are too low, what better can be submitted to the Government than the statement of Major-General Kennedy, in his report as Royal Commissioner on Forestry. On page 97 of his report, he states—" and they are now quoting Major-General Kennedy:

"It is only because of the sense of duty and a love of their work that many members of the staff stay in their positions. However notable gaps have occurred in the service even in recent months, despite improved salary schedules. If the service is to protect and maintain a high-calibre personnel, it must be placed in the position to meet the competition of industry.'"

That is the end of the quotation.

I believe this statement from the official journal of the association pretty well explains the serious problem which the civil servants are up against. Those who have quit their jobs or have no particular love of the service, leave, as in the case apparently of the Forestry Department, and I am basing myself solely on what I have quoted from the journal.

One does not have to go far to seek evidence. I want to say that my experiences are undoubtedly duplicated by all other hon. members. I have had people in the service come to me—I assure you I did not seek them out—

HON. MR. DREW: Your assurance does not mean anything.

MR. SALSBERG: I assure you they came to me voluntarily. I want the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), who seems to shake his head, to believe me when I tell him that. I do not know whether they go to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) or not, but I am sure they go to most hon. members.

HON. MR. MICHENER: You do not send any of them on to me.

MR. SALSBERG: They tell me they cannot make a living. I had 2 young men in the service, whose names I do not know, and I did not ask their names, only yesterday in this chamber. I was working here in the morning, and they came in and spoke to me about the problem, and I take them as an example. They said they are getting around $1,500 a year, both are returned men, both have families, and they cannot make ends meet on that salary. And that is true.

HON. MR. FROST: What classification are they in? Let us not talk about nebulous things.

MR. SALSBERG: I resent that—

HON. MR. FROST: Listen to the question, what classification are they in?

MR. SALSBERG: I am on the floor, and I am speaking.

HON. MR. FROST: The fact of the matter is this—

MR. SALSBERG: I am on the floor, and I do not want to be interrupted, and I resent the implication I am speaking about "nebulous things." I spoke of 2 civil servants who came in to speak to me.

HON. MR. FROST: Tell us what their classifications were?

MR. SALSBERG: They were not making a living, and could not get enough to support their families.

HON. MR. FROST: What classification are they in?

MR. SALSBERG: I don't care what classification they are in—

HON. MR. FROST: No, you simply blather and talk nonsense.

MR. SALSBERG: I say the basic minimum is too low.

HON. MR. FROST: You are simply blathering and talking nonsense.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not "blather." You cannot ask a man to support a family on $1,500 a year. The basic figure is too low. When the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost)—

HON. MR. FROST: That is just pure bologna.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: On what section are you speaking? Of what hon. Minister were you speaking?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) spoke in this House, and he questioned the figure I gave of 57 cents an hour.

HON. MR. FROST: You were wrong about that, as usual.

MR. SALSBERG: He said they were getting 63 cents an hour, basic. I replied, and repeat again, that is less than $29 a week.

MR. CHAIRMAN: That has nothing to do with this item.

MR. SALSBERG: I beg your pardon, I am talking about the item which deals with the Civil Service Association, and that is absolutely a correct item on which to raise this point that, according to the figures of the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) himself, employees in this building are earning less than $29 a week, and they are married men.

MR. CHAIRMAN: We have had all that.

MR. SALSBERG: I know you have, but they are still not getting more money.

MR. CHAIRMAN: All right.

AN HON. MEMBER: Oh, sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: I will not sit down. I know what I am saying. The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) can sit there and behave in a rather awkward way, and it is very awkward, his behaviour is, and I am sure that all hon. members who observe his behaviour will agree with me that it is very awkward.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: On what section are you speaking?

HON. MR. FROST: What do you want to say?

MR. SALSBERG: Did you ever stand up in this House and ask for an increase in wages for the Civil Service, who are not receiving enough to live on and support their families?

HON. MR. MICHENER: What particular item in the schedule is the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) complaining about?

HON. MR. FROST: He does not know what he is talking about.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: He does not know who spoke to him.

HON. MR. FROST: No, he does not know who spoke to him, or what classification these men were in. He is simply talking nonsense.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. members sitting in the treasury benches are trying to avoid the issue, and trying to act smart.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, go ahead. You do not know what you are talking about, anyway.

MR. SALSBERG: In reply to the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener), I want to say that I am referring to the schedule which covers men employed in this building who are receiving 63 cents an hour, a salary inadequate for the support of a family.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is objecting to practically every item in the schedule. The service are well paid, and the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) knows it. His idea is simply to stand up and talk a lot of nonsense.

MR. SALSBERG: That is not right. I was reading from the official journal of the Civil Service Association.

MR. CHAIRMAN: We have got that. Now go on.

MR. SALSBERG: They have not got the wage increases and I charge the Government with failing to provide funds to pay a fair and decent minimum wage for the civil servants.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Chairman, I am and always have been very willing to make an investigation, if an individual case is brought to my attention. If any such is brought to me, I will be glad to consider it, but unless he has some specific case for consideration —

MR. SALSBERG: I gave the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) a moment ago this specific category of men working in this building, and paid according to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) 63 cents an hour. Is that satisfactory? Is that a living wage?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is not relevant at all. You said somebody spoke to you as you were snooping through the corridors.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, don't be a smart aleck. After being away all day, you come in at 11 o'clock and act like a smart aleck.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I have here the printed classifications of all the positions in the public service, and the salaries which are paid. To what item does my friend (Mr. Salsberg) refer?

MR. SALSBERG: A man employed for cleaning this building.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Only one man employed to clean the whole building?

MR. MACLEOD: Oh, just keep quiet.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, do not be ridiculous. You are not even juvenile, you are infantile. At this hour, you seem to go back.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Do not try to dominate me.

MR. SALSBERG: I would not even attempt to.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, since the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has the book in front of him—

HON. MR. FROST: These are just the estimates. It is the same book you have. We have no advantage over you.

MR. MACLEOD: I say it would be a good thing for you to remember that at one time you sat over on this side of the House, and your behaviour when you were in the front row, could not stack up against the behaviour of the people who sit on this side of the House today.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, our behaviour is very good; it is all right.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: He is a gentleman; the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) said so.

MR. MACLEOD: I have said so a good many times.

MR. SALSBERG: I have said so, too.

MR. MACLEOD: If the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) would sit 3 seats away, and not be corrupted by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell)—

MR. CHAIRMAN: We are on the Provincial Secretary's (Mr. Michener) estimates.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, that is right. The hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) has a schedule in front of him, and my colleague, the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has said, and the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) has not denied that there are a large number of people employed in this building, married men, with families, who are getting $1,500 a year. I do not care what their classification is. The fact of the matter is they are married men, some of them are veterans, and they are getting $1,500 a year, and yet the hon. members of this Legislature, afraid of poverty, unable to meet their expenses, voted themselves a very substantial increase of $1,000 a year at the last session.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: So did you.

MR. MACLEOD: How can you expect these people who are working for a miserable wage like that, to have any respect for the Legislature which "ups" its own salary by more than one-third, but keeps these people living on a starvation wage.

HON. MR. FROST: You are going to be as bad as your colleague in a minute, if you keep on.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Perhaps some of the hon. members are overpaid.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You are doing better than he (Mr. Salsberg) did, anyway.

MR. MACLEOD: My colleague (Mr. Salsberg) has been "kidded" by experts. You should not try to "kid" him.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I am not sure that any question was asked, but may I say that the average rate of pay for the entire service is $2,100 per year.

MR. MACLEOD: That includes Deputy Ministers, and everybody else.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Just hold your horses a minute. I am answering your question, if I can determine what the question is. When we make a comparison of salaries, which you receive as hon. members of the Legislature and the salaries paid to different grades in the service, I suppose you are suggesting everybody should get paid a uniform sum, a starvation wage, such as is paid in Russia.

MR. MACLEOD: Oh, now, try to remember something better is expected of a Rhodes Scholar. Try to put yourself on the proper level.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Don't be a Gladstone Murray.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I am not reminding you of that fact. I do not make any pretension on that score. I recall the definition of a Rhodes Scholar, "a young man who has had a bright future", and I will leave it at that. I do not think it has very much to do with the question.

MR. SALSBERG: We are referring to a minimum wage.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I am saying your argument, apparently, is that everybody should be paid the same wage, and I do not accept that.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, no one, so far as I know, has ever advocated in this House that everybody in the Province of Ontario should receive the same wage. I am not suggesting for a moment that the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) and the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) should receive the same salary as the man who runs the elevator. I am not suggesting that at all.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Well, that is something.

MR. MACLEOD: But, I do say a Government that professes to believe in elementary justice, and which keeps people on the pay-roll—married people with families—in a $1,500-a-year category, regardless of what they do, should be thoroughly ashamed of themselves.

HON. LESLIE H. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Chairman, let me say this to my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod), or friends opposite—

MR. MACLEOD: We are both your friends.

HON. MR. FROST: When this Government came into power some 5 years ago, it found the Civil Service schedules in a positively deplorable condition, and I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will admit that.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Admit that?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: Oh, come now.

AN HON. MEMBER: Let us broaden it out.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, let us broaden it out and get into a real fight in a minute.

MR. OLIVER: That is all right.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): We will act as referees.

HON. MR. FROST: I can tell you, that was the situation before the day my hon. friend the Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) took office. We had a very complete revision of the whole thing. What happened was the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) and others took every salary schedule in Canada, provincial and dominion, went over them carefully, and revised the classifications and categories. Months of time were spent with the civil servants themselves. The whole situation was revised, the cost of living bonus was incorporated into the salaries, and, Mr. Chairman, I want to say tonight, the Province of Ontario has, by and large, the highest and best paid Civil Service in Canada, and particularly in the lower classifications.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: No, you have not.

HON. MR. FROST: It is true we have not some of the $15,000 and $20,000-a-year men here. Perhaps we should have, because we have just as good men in the higher classifications as any place in Canada, but the fact of the matter is, the whole thing was revised and I can say this to hon. members, by and large, the Province of Ontario has the best paid Civil Service in Canada.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is only since 1943.

MR. SALSBERG: No, it is exceeded in the City of Toronto.

HON. MR. FROST: Before 1943, it was about the worst.

MR. SALSBERG: It is only because in the City of Toronto they formed a union, that is what they did. And that is what the provincial civil servants should do. Unless they do that, they will never get a living wage—not out of you.

AN HON. MEMBER: For goodness' sake, be quiet.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, I would say to the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) if we have the best paid Civil Service between the 2 oceans north of '49—

HON. MR. FROST: Go down to Ottawa and see what Mr. King pays to people down there.

MR. OLIVER: Let me finish, please.

HON. MR. FROST: I just suggest that to you.

MR. OLIVER: What I was going to say, if we have the best paid civil servants, it is a wonder the civil servants do not appreciate it.

HON. MR. FROST: They do.

MR. OLIVER: Does my hon. friend (Mr. Frost) know the civil servants met tonight in a meeting in this building and demonstrated their reaction to the hon. Provincial Secretary's (Mr. Michener) letter to them?

HON. MR. FROST: Did they go to you first?

MR. OLIVER: I was surprised the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) did not have the information but here it is, and I can read it if you want me to.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Sure.

HON. MR. FROST: What I want to say to my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) is this, among things we abolished was political hiring and firing which were rampant during the time they were in office. That is one for the book.

MR. OLIVER: You should wipe the smile off your face when you say that. Let me read it. The heading is, "Civil Service Association of Ontario".

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: To whom is it addressed?

HON. MR. MICHENER: From what are you reading?

MR. OLIVER: Sit down and I will tell you. Can't you be patient for a moment? I said, across the top of the page is, "The Civil Service Association of Ontario", and it is a press release—

HON. MR. FROST: By whom is it signed?

MR. OLIVER: —marked "immediately".

HON. MR. FROST: By whom is it signed?

MR. OLIVER: It is not signed at all.

HON. MR. FROST: Then it must be like the Communist document.

MR. OLIVER: Oh, I do not think so.

MR. SALSBERG: See.

MR. OLIVER: I think you will find this is a genuine release.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Who took the responsibility for doing it?

MR. SALSBERG: Will you fire him?

HON. MR. FROST: We would like to know the real truth.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): You asked the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) to read it. Let him read it. What is the matter? Are you afraid of it?

MR. OLIVER: I think I will read it, and maybe collectively, we can take responsibility for it.

"The provincial civil servants meeting in the Parliament Buildings, April 15,"— that was last night—

"were outspoken in regard to their dissatisfaction with the lack of Government action in regard to the salaries and the cost of living bonus. Motions adopted with applause were as follows. First:

'that the officers of this association approach the Government and ask immediate recognition of the Civil Service Association of Ontario as the bargaining agent of the employees of the Provincial Government of Ontario' which was passed with only one dissenting vote—

MR. SALSBERG: Hurrah for the dissenter.

MR. OLIVER: That is getting pretty close.

"The second motion passed unanimously read thus:

'that if within one month after the date of meeting between the officers of the association and the representatives of the Government, the Government does not agree to recognize the Civil Service Association of Ontario as the bargaining agent of the Ontario civil service as a whole, a mass meeting of all Civil Service employees be called in the City of Toronto, with the branches of the association throughout the province given an opportunity to hold prior meetings, for the purpose of considering affiliation with an outside organization'."

MR. SALSBERG: Hurrah.

HON. MR. FROST: Who signed that?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: May I ask the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) whether he is advocating that, or not?

MR. SALSBERG: What has that got to do with it?

MR. OLIVER: That is beside the point entirely as my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) knows.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh, no.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, it is.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Would you like to see it happen?

MR. OLIVER: You are going to get yourself all worked up.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am not getting in trouble. You are. Go ahead.

MR. OLIVER: I am all right. At the beginning of this discussion, I asked the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) if he were aware of what the reactions to this letter to the association was. Now, I am reading what the reaction apparently is, embodied, as it is, in the resolutions which I have read. I am under no compulsion, as my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) knows, to state what I think of this.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You can always duck an issue if you want.

MR. OLIVER: I am not "ducking any issue," my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) is a past master at ducking issues, if it comes to that.

I can leave the matter there on that section, but my hon. friend, the Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) talking about the highest and best paid civil service, and then they meet and pass such resolutions—

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Since my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) has been so kind as to bring this unknown information to my notice, I would like to ask him just how it came into his possession, from whom, and at what time?

MR. NIXON: None of your business.

MR. SALSBERG: Ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). He has men to find out.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I would like to know by what authority my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) is delivering this to me and where he got it.

MR. SALSBERG: The important thing, Mr. Chairman,—

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: I will not sit down, Mr. Minister of Labour.

MR. CHAIRMAN: You will sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, on your instructions, but not on those of the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley).

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Chairman, I have asked a question of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and would like to know if he is going to answer it.

MR. OLIVER: I want to know from my hon. friend (Mr. Michener) by what right he asked me a question of that character. I read the release, and I think you will find it is authentic and genuine, if you look in the papers in the morning.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Perhaps you can help me out tonight by telling me where you got it?

MR. OLIVER: Perhaps you know. I will leave it at that.

MR. SALSBERG: The important point is—

HON. MR. MICHENER: I was responsible for sending the communication to the Civil Service Association, and I expected to get the reply.

MR. OLIVER: I thought you would have had it.

HON. MR. MICHENER: What is the answer to my question?

HON. MR. FROST: Are you the spokesman for them?

MR. SALSBERG: The important point is this, having raised the subject of the salaries of the civil servants, your spokesman tried to give the impression civil servants were happy and satisfied and that the issue I raised was not a real one. Now the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has really helped—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Has he made them any happier?

MR. SALSBERG: —by making it clear, abundantly clear, what the attitude of the civil servants is in this matter, and I say we must conclude the Government is falling down in its most essential task—

HON. MR. PORTER: Is that a question you are asking?

MR. SALSBERG: —of providing a living wage for the civil servants of this province.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman—

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Mr. Chairman, just one thing—

MR. CHAIRMAN: All right.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Which is it to be?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I will take either one.

AN HON. MEMBER: Are you looking for a fight, Mr. Chairman? If you are, you picked the wrong one.

MR. CHAIRMAN: He was the first up.

MR. MACLEOD: Don't worry.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I will worry. First thing you know, I will be inclined to go home.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, no, we have business yet.

MR. MACLEOD: You will give me credit for having a lot of respect for you and I will not tax your patience.

MR. CHAIRMAN: All right, what is the question?

MR. MACLEOD: I am simply going to ask a very simple question.

HON. MR. FROST: Is that a question or a declaration?

MR. CHAIRMAN: Wait a minute; is it against the Government?

MR. MACLEOD: I suggest, Mr. Chairman, a Lindsay lawyer would not know the difference between a question and a declaration.

HON. MR. FROST: I might surprise you.

MR. MACLEOD: I want to say this to the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener), in my judgment he deliberately withheld the letter addressed to the civil service, so that its communication to them would coincide with the introduction of these estimates in the Legislature and so that hon. members of the Legislature would be in total ignorance as to what the reaction of the civil servants would be.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I suppose my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) also will credit me with having fixed the time at which the meeting of the Civil Service Association today was to take place, and also arranging for the estimates of my department to be called at the same time as that meeting was taking place. I am flattered with the credit of omniscience that is given me. However, as my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) says, it is only in his judgment. I will leave it at that.

MR. HABEL: Mr. Chairman, the very brief remark I wanted to make is this, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) said since 1943 they have abolished political hiring and firing.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right, you fired 150 war veterans the first month you were in office.

MR. HABEL: Just a moment. They have taken a very nice device to do it. Instead of firing a man today, what do they do—and I know what I am talking about? They give a man a transfer from his home district to a far-distant district so as to make sure he cannot accept the transfer, and of course, having no other recourse, has to resign. In fact, this is done on the request of prospective candidates, and I can vouch for what I say there.

No, they are not doing any political hiring. What do they do? They have as a vendor of a liquor store, for instance, a farm implement agent. Besides that, they have a man who is a partner in a construction company digging ditches for this very Government. And they are not doing any political hiring or firing.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a matter of great public importance. I said my hon. friend's (Mr. Habel) party, when in office, fired 150 war veterans in the first months they were in office. You fired 500.

MR. NIXON: Make it 10,000.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, shame on you for doing it.

MR. NIXON: Absurd.

HON. MR. FROST: You fired 500 war veterans.

MR. NIXON: No.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): I say shame on both of them. They are both guilty.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Sit down.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I just want to put this question—

HON. MR. PORTER: A question?

MR. MACLEOD: —to the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener).

HON. MR. FROST: A question or a declaration?

MR. MACLEOD: This is a question.

MR. CHAIRMAN: You made a bargain.

MR. MACLEOD: In the light of everything that has transpired here tonight, do you not really have guilty consciences?

HON. MR. FROST: Certainly not. Votes 134 to 136 inclusive approved. On Vote 137.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, I see in Vote 137, number 8.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It should be 135.

AN HON. MEMBER: Don't go back, Walter (Mr. Reynolds).

MR. MACLEOD: I see in Vote 137, number 8, an item of $2,000, "Legislative Committee for Art Purposes." I believe the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) explained last year that this money was appropriated in the hope you would one day capture the Laird of Bannockburn Farm and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) and do them down in oil. Well, the years are slipping by and we have in the corridor the benign countenance of Mr. Conant looking down on us and yet we are deprived of the handsome face of the former hon. member from Elgin County (Mr. Hepburn) and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). Is there not something we can do about that?

HON. MR. FROST: Ask the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) to explain; he is right here.

MR. MACLEOD: Have you addressed any communications to the former hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Hepburn) asking him to come and sit here, for execution in oil?

MR. CHAIRMAN: 137.

MR. MACLEOD: That is a question, Mr. Chairman, and the hon. Minister (Mr. Michener) is going to answer it?

AN HON. MEMBER: What is the question?

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Chairman, what I would say to my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) is that he heard the report of the committee.

MR. OLIVER: I wonder if we may go back to 134 for a moment, the last 4 items? "Air delay expenses," "Acquisition and alterations of immigration building," "Booking services, air passengers"; what about all that expense?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is what it cost us to try to do business with the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. FROST: That is the money we lost on it.

MR. OLIVER: I think I would rather have an intelligent answer from the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener).

MR. MACLEOD: You will never get it from that corner.

HON. MR. MICHENER: On the contrary, intelligent answers are forthcoming to intelligent questions, and as my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) is an intelligent man, I will be able to deal with it.

The air delay expense arises because of weather conditions which delayed the take-off of flights. That expenditure, Mr. Chairman, is due to the expense of looking after the passengers of 'planes when they are unable to take off for one reason or another at the appointed hour. You have heard explanations earlier in the session of some of the principal causes for that delay, and the provision is obviously necessary as long as the possibility of that delay continues.

That is the one item. Does my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) want to know the cause of the further 3 items?

MR. OLIVER: The further 2, yes.

HON. MR. MICHENER: The next item, $17,000, relates to Rainbow Corner. As my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) knows, the system there is to provide all of the services which an immigrant requires to qualify him to go by air, including arrangements for his ticket, transportation of his luggage, medical examination—all of those facilities are made available to him in one place at one time—so that instead of the cumbersome arrangement that is otherwise available and which takes perhaps a month to qualify an immigrant to come here, the whole thing is done in one centre, Rainbow Corner, in the course of a day.

That space has been used by the province at very little expense up to the present time, and I may say has been made available for the immigration officers of the Dominion Government at no expense to them. Obviously, if we are going to continue the service we have to pay for it in time. This provision is for alterations which are being paid for partly by the province and partly by the owners of the lease.

MR. OLIVER: What about the $40,000 in the next item, "booking services, air passengers"; is that in relation to the answer you gave?

HON. MR. MICHENER: That is a bookkeeping entry, because as the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) explained, each immigrant in the air transport scheme paid £2 over and above his passage for booking costs. We pay those booking costs out and get them back from the immigrants, so it is really a bookkeeping entry—no expense involved.

Votes 138 to 140 inclusive approved.
On Vote 141.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, on 141, "social security and rehabilitation committee," what is this committee, what does it do, and why does it need $25,000?

HON. MR. MICHENER: The answer, Mr. Chairman, is very simple. This committee was set up to assist in the rehabilitation of war veterans. It was the province's contribution to that rehabilitation. It was an auxiliary service to the very substantial provisions which were made under the Department of Veterans' Affairs. While the character of this work has changed, and is changing, there is still need for the exercise of that department.

MR. MACLEOD: Does this committee work in co-operation, or does it have any liaison with similar services maintained by the city of Toronto, its Veterans' Bureau at the City Hall?

HON. MR. MICHENER: This committee, in co-operation with the Dominion Government, has exercised a general supervision over the citizens' committee to which my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) probably refers. In each centre, a citizens' committee was set up to assist them in doing their job. This committee arranged 6 regional conferences for the 2 or 3 past years at which the citizens met and consulted and learned the most effective ways of carrying on their rehabilitation work, so that in this sense, it has to do with the work of the Toronto committee, in fact a representative of the Toronto committee sits on the Rehabilitation Committee.

Vote 141 approved.

On Vote 142.

MR. MACLEOD: On 142, Mr. Chairman, what is the "Government hospitality fund"?

MR. CHAIRMAN: That is for the election.

MR. MACLEOD: It is too little. But what is that Government hospitality fund used for?

HON. MR. MICHENER: I think it is self-explanatory, Mr. Chairman. This is to provide hospitality or entertainment to distinguished visitors, whether in groups or as individuals. One example coming to mind is when the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Rt. Hon. Mr. Hugh Dalton was the recipient of the hospitality of the Province of Ontario at the expense of that fund.

Votes 142 and 143 approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Department of Welfare.

HON. WILLIAM. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, before considering the welfare estimates, I feel I should make a clear statement on the operation and expenditures on public welfare since in the debates before this House, hon. members have expressed considerable interest in welfare matters but have for the most part concentrated on old age pensions. Old age pensioners represent the greatest number of persons of any of the categories receiving assistance. It is also true that old age pensions represent the largest single item of expenditure. I should nevertheless wish to remind this House that there are several other categories of assistance provided through the department.

On previous occasions, I have taken the opportunity on the public platform and in this House to refer to the fact that assistance provided through the Welfare Department, including such distinct categories as mothers' allowances and old age pensions, is, in fact, a public assistance programme. The special name or category merely distinguishes a particular type of assistance within the general programme.

The point of distinction then comes only where there is a differential in payment. At the present time, mothers' allowances are paid 100 per cent. by the province. This covers complete administration and grants. Old age pensions are administered by the province under Dominion legislation and regulations, paid 75 per cent. by the Dominion, and 25 per cent. and full cost of administration by the province. In order to clarify further this distinction, mothers' allowances, then, are completely within the jurisdiction of the province, without regard to other levels of government. Old age pensions, on the other hand, are provided through a Dominion Act, which is enabling legislation and, in effect, the Dominion says to a province, "Here is what we will do, provided you do certain things." But the province, in accepting the Dominion's offer, obligates itself to administer the assistance within the terms stipulated by the Dominion legislation and regulations.

The general-public assistance programme, or unemployment relief, in which the province participates, has for some years been provided only for unemployables. In effect, this creates another category of assistance. The method of financing differs from the others, in that it is shared on a 50 per cent. basis within certain regulations as between the municipality and the province and is administered by the municipality.

May I emphasize then that provincial participation in unemployment relief at this time is participation in providing another category of assistance to a specialized group, in this case the unemployed.

These definite distinctions should be kept in mind. There may be arguments as to whether assistance should be granted by one level of government in preference to another, but so long as the basic principle of providing such assistance is that of supplementing the needs of people, although there may be categories, there can be no radical change in the method of applying a yardstick to measure the need.

While, as I have previously remarked, comments in this House have been generally concentrated on old age pensions, it is my obligation, as Minister of the department, to assure that those monies available for the operation of the department are distributed as equitably as possible to the various categories, having in mind the necessity of meeting, insofar as possible, the increased living costs being faced by the persons who require assistance.

With these factors in mind, then, I propose to analyse some of the programmes in operation within the department and indicate to this House those points at which some considerable improvement has been made.

As I have already indicated, unemployment relief should, in effect, be termed "general-public assistance." In any programme of categorical assistance, there will be a certain specified number of people who do not fit the requirements of the specific category. Accordingly, any programme of categorical assistance must be underpinned by a general programme. That general programme is shareable unemployment relief. In large measure, those persons receiving such assistance are physically or otherwise handicapped in such manner as to preclude their taking any sort of work which would enable them to earn a living. It follows, then, that they must have a sufficient amount on which to live, since they cannot take gainful employment under any circumstances.

The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) mentioned unemployment relief assistance, but only 1 item of that assistance, namely food allowances. I would emphasize at this time that all shareable allowances for persons in receipt of unemployment relief have been increased. These cover food, fuel, clothing, shelter, special home care and household necessities. In the department there has been a definite attempt to encourage the raising of relief schedules for any particular recipient up to a point where the aggregate monthly allowance will approximate as nearly as possible the necessities for a moderate living standard.

To indicate something of the increase in such assistance, I would cite the fact that, as of March 31st, 1943, there were 18,977 persons receiving this type of assistance in the province, at a total provincial expenditure for the year of $1,482,252. As of December 31st, 1947, there were 18,333 persons receiving such assistance. The total approximate provincial expenditure for the year 1947-48 will be $1,783,823. Thus a 3.4 per cent. decrease in the number of persons has resulted in a 20.3 per cent. increase in expenditures for this purpose, or to limit the reference to food, I may illustrate by a family of 4 persons. In unorganized areas a family of 4 persons on unemployment relief today are eligible to receive allowances for food 137.8 per cent. higher than the same family would have received in 1943. The average for the same family of 4 across the whole province would be 78.6 per cent. higher than in 1943.

Mr. Speaker, I submit these figures not only indicate a creditable effort on the part of this Government to meet the needs of this particular category of people requiring assistance but also indicate that the Government is well aware of its obligations to implement and develop a proper system of public assistance basic in any total security programme.

Mothers' allowances, as the name implies, are a form of assistance provided for a mother with children to enable her to supplement any income she may have in order that she may maintain a home for her children. From its inception, the principle of mothers' allowances has been to provide supplementary assistance. Every case is set up on a budget and dealt with according to needs.

When this Government came into office, it promised that it would increase mothers' allowances. A constant and very careful study has been made of the needs of persons in receipt of mothers' allowances, and adjustments in the rates of allowance have been made from time to time.

As of March 31st, 1943, there were 7,982 beneficiaries on mothers' allowances, with 16,535 children, or 24,517 persons. To provide assistance for these persons the total expenditure, including fuel, but excluding medical services, was $3,504,568.02. As of the present, there are 6,277 beneficiaries with 12,941 children in receipt of allowances, or 19,218 persons. The total expenditure for the past year, including fuel and supplementary allowance, but excluding medical services, is estimated at $3,487,517.57. While these figures show a 21.61 per cent. decrease in the number of persons dependent upon mothers' allowances, they also indicate a 26.95 per cent. increase in the amount of allowance being paid per person.

These figures represent a substantial increased payment for mothers' allowances in this province.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I might state that some hon. members have mentioned in this House specific cases in which they contend certain allowances do not meet the needs in those cases. Previously, in this House, I have suggested that I would be very pleased to receive any specific complaint with respect to a particular beneficiary on mothers' allowances. I repeat again that we would be pleased to have brought to our attention any particular case where the mother's income is not sufficient to maintain her family.

Several hon. members have referred to the necessity for a special type of pension for handicapped persons. In this connection, may I say that reference was made in the Speech from the Throne to this problem in the following words:

"Preliminary steps have also been taken to inaugurate a system of rehabilitation for handicapped persons." I would emphasize that word "rehabilitation."

There is in operation, under the Old Age Pensions Act, at the present time, a system of pensions for a specific type of handicapped person. I refer to the blind. It will be noted that this assistance is provided under the Old Age Pensions Act and is known as the Blind Pension. Insofar as handicapped persons are concerned, that word "pension" seems to represent a barrier. I am advised that, at the present time, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind is very much concerned over the use of the word "pension." I am further advised that this organization is rather anxious to see a change in the legislation, which would provide in lieu thereof Blindness Allowance. It is apparently an accepted fact that there is a psychological effect on the person who is handicapped, which creates in his mind an attitude that he is one of society's cast-offs. The very word "pension" seems to imply that the person is "put on the shelf." In actual fact, it is well known that many blind persons and persons handicapped in other ways may provide useful services in the community. Many of them have to be trained and encouraged to take up occupations which they can perform. Apparently those who are close to the problem feel that many blind persons tend to rest on their oars immediately they receive what they interpret as a pension. It is now considered advisable that a blindness assistance allowance should be made, without relationship to other income, in order that such persons would be encouraged to rehabilitate themselves and, upon their arriving at a point where they are self-supporting, such blindness allowance would be diminished or removed.

I personally have not sufficient knowledge of the problem to speak from experience or with authority. I can only take as an authoritative view the expressed opinion of those who are dealing daily with these problems. If, then, there is an argument against the granting of a pension, as such, to persons handicapped by blindness, I would submit that there is an equally strong argument against providing a pension, as such, for persons suffering from other handicaps.

There is no argument against providing assistance for handicapped persons. Such assistance, however, should be related to a whole programme of rehabilitation for those persons who can be trained to perform useful functions. Any assistance programme should supplement and provide the medium for such training, as well as provide an allowance for those for whom it was clearly indicated there could be no benefit from such a training programme.

For some time my department has been studying this problem, particularly as it affects incapacitated persons. An arrangement has been made with the Workmen's Compensation Board, whereby the facilities of that board are available for certain physical rehabilitation training. This preliminary work is providing a considerable body of information upon which a future well-integrated programme of assistance and rehabilitation for this group of people may be developed.

In addition to the rehabilitative aspects of the programme, there is already in operation a provision whereby assistance may be granted to persons who require special home care, up to an amount of $40 per month. Further measures are in the process of being drafted to provide, in co-operation with municipalities, an allowance for incapacitated persons.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that such an approach to the whole problem of dealing with the handicapped is much more logical and basically sound than to provide any over-all pension scheme which would ignore the principles of rehabilitation.

As indicated in the early portion of this address, most hon. members who have made comments on public welfare have concentrated on old age pension. Accordingly, I propose to dwell at some length on the matter of old age pensions, in order that this House may have a complete understanding of the present situation.

An hon. member of the C.C.F. group, in referring to old age pensions, stated he agreed that old age pensions was a federal matter. To emphasize this fact, may I again point out that old age pensions are paid under federal enabling legislation. No province established the basic principles of the Old Age Pensions Act or regulations. These are entirely federal and, I believe, generally recognized as such.

It is, however, unfortunate that the word "pension" was used to distinguish this type of assistance. The legislation, as it was drafted in the beginning and as it is presently operative, is a form of categorical public assistance and is not a "pension" in the real meaning of that word. In more recent years there has been injected into discussions of this subject an entirely new term known as "social security." Any social security programme envisages, as a part of such a scheme, old age pensions, which would definitely be a pension and not public assistance. So long as any argument contends there should be an old age pension, the argument is valid and this Government has for some time advocated the introduction of an over-all pension programme for the aged without a means test. Such a programme is long overdue and it is my contention that it should be founded on a contributory basis.

The province, however, is not justified in entering the basic pension field. Such a provision should be made available for all aged persons in the Dominion at a specified age through the Federal Government. At the present time, however, the existing legislation does not provide for such. I repeat the present programme is a form of public assistance. The basic amount of pension is set by the Dominion Government. It is the same general scheme that was in operation in 1943. At that time, the basic pension set by the Federal Government was $20 a month. There was, on the part of both the provincial and Federal Governments, an application of a very rigid means test.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) well knows the basis of granting pensions those days. I need not remind him of the system which required the children of a pensioner to fill out a form, indicating their yearly incomes. On the basis of this information, it was determined that the son or daughter should be contributing a specified amount to the maintenance of his or her parents. Arbitrarily this amount was computed as income, whether the pensioner received it or not. Accordingly, his pension was reduced or otherwise, as such hypothetical income would affect the amount of the basic pension.

I need not remind this House that, under the Dominion regulations, in those days, a pensioner might have a total outside income of only $125 per year, or a total annual income (pension and other sources) of $365 per year.

Even this limited amount of $125 a year outside income was subject to a very rigid means test, as evidenced by the fact that approximately 12,000 out of a total of approximately 58,000 pensioners at the time received only part pension. In contrast, although there are now over 72,000 pensioners, only approximately 1,800 are receiving part pension.

In 1943, the Government, of which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was a member, and in fact I believe Minister of the department at that time, provided a provincial supplement. It is usually considered that this supplement was $3 per month. Actually, the supplement was 15 per cent. of the amount of pension for which a pensioner was eligible. He received his $3 per month only if he was eligible for the maximum basic pension of $20. If he was eligible for anything less than $20, he received less than $3 supplement. I wonder whether $23 was deemed sufficient in 1943 when the present Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was Minister?

Realizing this amount was inadequate, the present Government later in 1943 entered into an agreement with Ottawa to add a war appropriation of $5 per month, which amount was shareable by the Dominion and the province on the regular 75/25 per cent. The supplementary allowance, as provided by the previous Government, was continued on the same basis and computed on the $20 per month basic pension, making a total with full bonus of $23.

By amendments to the Old Age Pensions Act (Canada) in 1947, the Federal Government definitely included the basic pension the $5 war appropriation, and added thereto a further $5, bringing the total basic pension up to $30 per month. We immediately entered into an agreement to assume the provincial 25 per cent. of this basic pension of $30 and have repeatedly stated if the Federal Government had set the basic pension higher we would have assumed our 25 per cent. share.

It should be pointed out at this time that the new Federal Act and regulations made thereunder, considerably changed the means test as it had hitherto been applied. In the first place, the allowable outside income for a single pensioner was raised to $240 a year, making it possible for a pensioner to have a total income of $600 per year (pension and outside income). This one factor immediately made eligible thousands of persons hitherto excluded from pension. In addition to this specific change, the means test in general was considerably modified, modifications which, I may say, had been advocated by this Government.

For the benefit of the House I might give some idea of how much at present a person may have in cash and still qualify for a full pension:

Old-Age—Both 70 years	Full Pension	Ineligible
Single, widow or widower
Male ..	$2,263.59	$5,284.00
Female	$2,602.00	$6,130.00
Married with unpen- sioned spouse	$7,009.00	$10,264.00
Married, both pensioners	$3,754.00	$10,264.00
Blind: (Both aged 21 years)
Single, widow or widower
Male ..	$7,351.44	$14,702.88
Female	$7,781.38	$15,312.76
Widow or widower with child:
Male ..	$11,685.57	$19,037.00
Female	$11,965.48	$19,246.86
Married—sighted unpen- sioned spouse	$17,862.54	$25,303.63
Married—both blind pen- sioners	$12,901.80	$27,784.00

In an attempt to acquaint all hon. members with these changes, I sent to each member of the House a brief, outlining the salient points of the changes. In that brief, it was indicated it was now possible for a married person, who has an unpensioned spouse, to receive full pension when he owned his own home and he and his unpensioned spouse had total liquid assets, in addition, of approximately $7,000. It is also possible for a married couple, both pensioners, to have over $3,000 liquid assets, own their own home, and still both be eligible for full pension; or a single person to have over $2,000 liquid assets and still be eligible for full pension.

I draw these matters to the attention of the House because they have a distinct bearing on the question of provincial supplementary allowances, which I shall mention later. In the meantime, I am sure it will be obvious to all hon. members that the increased income and the lessening of the means test would have one inevitable result, namely, an increased number of applications for pension. New applications increased from the time of the introduction of the new Act from approximately 900 per month to the present approximately 2,000 per month. This increase in itself taxed to the utmost the staff of the department.

There were an insufficient number of qualified investigators for the increased load and an insufficient number of inside staff and lack of floor space to accommodate additional staff.

When it is realized it requires approximately 6 months for an investigator to become competent and takes additional months to train inside staff, I believe hon. members will appreciate something of the administrative problem faced in the department in attempting to cope with this tremendously accelerated problem. I submit the staff has done a magnificent job and is to be highly complimented, working, as it has, under extreme handicaps.

I am free to admit the difficulties and have only to refer to the fact that if the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will recall the difficulties faced by the department in adding the 15 per cent. provincial bonus in 1943 he will be in a position to realize some of the problems under which we have been working during the last few months.

In order to attempt in some measure to meet and deal with this accelerated problem, we have installed modern mechanical punch card tabulating equipment, a system which is facilitating the dispatch of cheques. It has taken from June, 1947, to the present time, to get this system in operation and even yet it is handling only approximately 50 per cent. of the load; the remainder is gradually being transferred.

Notwithstanding the many difficulties, we are gradually overtaking the backlog of new applications and, at the present time, such applications as are in the department for the most part represent those received within the last month and a half.

The effect, then, of the changes made in the federal legislation, changes which this Government readily accepted, has been two-fold; first, to increase the basic pension to $30 per month and, second, to make many more people eligible for a pension. There has been a further change, in that most persons formerly eligible for only part pension have become eligible for full pension.

In the light of these changes, it became necessary for the Government to determine the policy to be followed with respect to provincial bonus.

It was recognized that, as a political expedient, it would be much easier to pay a flat rate bonus across the board to each pensioner. However, the Government has a responsibility to the people as a whole. In the administration of welfare services that responsibility resolves itself to providing, in so far as possible, for the needs of the people and not expending money for welfare services where there is no need apparent. So long as I am Minister of the department, I propose to administer the department in such a manner as to provide insofar as possible for the needs of people, irrespective of the political implications. I quite agree it would have been much easier, both politically and from the standpoint of administration, to grant a bonus across the board.

However, in the light of what I have said about increased income allowable, I think, Mr. Speaker, it will be evident to all members of this House that many thousands of persons are now eligible for full old age pension who have appreciable outside income. As a matter of fact, out of the last 600 cases granted old-age pension, approximately 25 per cent. had cash assets of $1,000 or over. Any equitable system of providing a bonus under a public assistance programme then would be based on the granting of assistance to those persons who had a definite need.

Again I must emphasize that the whole system of old age pensions at the present time is one of public assistance. Public assistance presupposes providing for the needs of the persons, not on a flat rate pension basis, but on a basis of supplementation.

In introducing the cost of living bonus up to $10 per month, based on need, we recognized that $30 was inadequate for certain pensioners. We therefore established a system on the same principle as Unemployment Assistance or Mothers' Allowances, which enable the province to pay a supplementary amount on a basis of individual need. This basis of individual need cannot be ignored. If there were in existence an over-all social security system, there would still be a requirement to underpin that system by a programme of supplementary assistance based on need.

The allowances as set up were on an experimental basis. Certain changes have already been made. Notwithstanding this, it was necessary to have regulations to assure uniform and fair handling of all cases. Because no form of public assistance can be granted with complete equity according to a specific measuring rod, the Commission has been given certain discretionary power where exceptional need is shown. Ignoring for the moment the increase in applications, it was necessary to review over 60,000 old age pensions to determine eligibility for the bonus. Extreme cases, when brought to our attention, receive priority. Notwithstanding this, there was added to the staff, over and above the burden of dealing with new applications, the additional burden of reviewing existing cases.

All cases have not yet been reviewed. 58.19 per cent. of the cases have been considered for bonus. It is estimated that the balance will be reviewed in the next 3 months. All new applications are considered for bonus at the time the application is being dealt with. After the complete review of existing cases, there will not be a great deal of extra administrative work entailed in the application of this principle. The difficulty, at the present time, is in reviewing existing cases.

In order that there may be a perfectly clear understanding of the way the application of bonus is working out, the following will give a picture of the situation as at March 27, 1948.

I have said that 58.19 per cent. of the cases had been reviewed. Of the number reviewed 17.06 per cent. were granted provincial bonus. The average of bonuses granted is $5.73 per month or the average of monthly payment to those receiving bonus is $35.73. 82.94 per cent. were found to be ineligible for the following reasons:

Pensioners receiving free shelter	2.67%
Pensioners paying $10.00 or less monthly for shelter	24.12%
Pensioners paying $25.00 or less monthly for board and lodging	31.61%
Pensioners receiving free board and lodging	2.76%
Pensioners having assets in excess of the regulations	9.57%
Pensioners having income in excess of the regulation	8.40%
Pensioners living in a Charitable Institution	3.60%
Pensioners originating in other Provinces21%
Total	82.94%

Each case is subject to review at any time either because of changed conditions under which the pensioner may find himself, or as a result of additional information which indicates needs of exceptional nature as they relate to a particular pensioner.

The interest of the C.C.F. party in old age pensioners is very timely. In the province in which that party was in power there was nothing done with respect to providing a bonus until very recently. My information, on a very good authority, is that the province has undertaken the payment of $5 per month bonus but there is a means test. The means test consists of paying only to those pensioners whose total income does not exceed the maximum income allowed by the Old Age Pensions Act of Canada. The Province of Saskatchewan is not paying a bonus to every old-age pensioner. In addition, that province did nothing for 6 months, and only very recently has it made an announcement of policy.

Several hon. members, in referring to the matter of old age pensions, have indicated that $30 per month is not sufficient for old-age pensioners to live on. I was glad to hear the hon. member from Wellington North (Mr. McEwing), in referring to the need for a pension for handicapped persons, say: "You are providing old age pensions for certain percentage of people who are not seriously in need of it, but it provides for them a fair standard of living and I would not wish to deprive them of it." Aside entirely from the expressed views of the hon. member for Wellington North (Mr. McEwing), this government has expressed its willingness to pay its 25 per cent. of an increased pension provided under the federal legislation which will be applicable across the whole dominion. I suggest that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) might well press the federal government for such increase. In fact I feel he should press in view of feeling that their present pension is inadequate.

Mr. Speaker, may I say that the principle of applying the bonus in Ontario follows the established principles laid down in the Federal Pensions Act of providing assistance to the aged on need. I may further state that the experience of my department would indicate that complaints by and large are not coming from the old age pensioners, a very small percentage of whom have indicated dissatisfaction when the full matter was explained to them in the light of their particular circumstances. I submit that the questions raised in this House are for political purposes only, and have no relationship to the sound principle underlying the provision of the bonus.

In conclusion, may I say that the record of this government is there for all to read—a record of progress and improvement in welfare services, a record of increased expenditures in this field, which are reflected in increased assistance to the persons requiring that assistance. For the year ending March 31, 1943, total provincial expenditures for the Welfare Department were listed as $9,589,307.92, whereas for the year 1948-49 the estimates provide for provincial expenditures of $16,934,519.00, an increase of 76.6 per cent., which I submit, Mr. Speaker, indicates that this government has increased to an appreciable extent, the assistance it is providing through the Department of Welfare, and will continue to keep abreast of individual need. The regulations are flexible, and may be changed, and, Mr. Speaker, we invite hon. members to bring individual cases to our attention as we are endeavouring to meet the needs of the individual who requires public assistance.

Finally I would say we should not be swayed by sentiment of political expediency, but must retain sound judgment in the administration of public assistance to assure the alleviation of hardship and provide for a moderate standard of living, at the same time fulfilling our responsibility as the custodians of public funds, which are secured only from one source, which is the public purse, keeping in mind the importance the encouragement of thrift and initiative will play in our future development.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Mr. Chairman, just as a matter of correction, the one reference the speaker made about the "hon. member for North Wellington," saying he approved the $10.00 across the board, requires correction; that was said by the hon. member for North Waterloo (Mr. Meininger), his new brother-at-arms.

HON. MR. FROST: You are not guilty?

MR. McEWING: I think it was Hansard which made the error.

On vote 151:

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Just a few comments on the lengthy statements made by the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow), to which all of us listened with deep interest, because the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is one of the Ministers in this Government who enjoys the personal respect of all hon. members in the House. He is a very estimable gentleman and I must say that on the few occasions I have had reason to approach him on specific cases, I have had very prompt replies to the representations I had to make, whether the people got their pensions or not is another matter. At least he is very courteous in his relations with hon. members of the House without regard to their party affiliations and I want to pay the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) that tribute.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I think we took care of most of them, did we not?

MR. MacLEOD: No.

AN HON. MEMBER: You couldn't do that.

MR. MacLEOD: One man I spoke to you about a few days ago and whom you are still investigating because, apparently, he had a little money in postal savings and you have to track that down before he gets a pension.

AN HON. MEMBER: You wouldn't blame us for that, though?

MR. MacLEOD: He is a man 70 years of age, who had a very serious accident and is unable to work and is now a charge on his daughter. I want to say, though, in my judgment the policy of this government with respect to old-age pensions is not something which the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is called upon to bear. The policy with respect to old-age pensions is set by the "Big Three"—or four or five—who sit in the front line Treasury benches.

HON. MR. FROST: Indeed it is not, it is set by this man back here, and a good job he makes of it too.

AN HON. MEMBER: Best old-age pension system in Canada.

MR. MacLEOD: You set the policy and the other junior Ministers of the Government have to carry it out whether they like it or not.

HON. MR. FROST: That is just what you think.

MR. MacLEOD: That is what I know. Now, I feel the statement made by the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is very unconvincing. I could not for the life of me see how the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) could, in good conscience, applaud those remarks. I just cannot understand it, because you have a Presbyterian background you are supposed to have a conscience. You are supposed to have been raised on the Westminster Confession.

MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. MACLEOD: But you certainly have strayed far away from it.

HON. MR. FROST: No, I am not the one that back-slid, you did.

MR. MACLEOD: Now then, I say to the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) that every old-age pensioner of the Province of Ontario in the 70 and over category, should be receiving this $40 a month.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I suppose he had no way of spending it? What would he do with it? Would you give the extra ten dollars to the lady who was giving her money to the church—the woman living in Toronto in the $40,000 house and giving her money to the church?

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): What church?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Never mind the church; would you do it?

MR. MACLEOD: Just a minute—

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): No.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: You know it is nonsense to argue. I would not say anything if I were you, after giving three dollars on a means test.

MR. OLIVER: That is more than you gave her.

MR. MACLEOD: If you will keep these gentlemen quiet, Mr. Chairman, I will proceed.

HON. MR. FROST: Shame on you.

MR. OLIVER: You took the $3 off.

MR. MACLEOD: Is that what they did?

MR. OLIVER: That is what they did. $3 on the means test.

AN HON. MEMBER: What are they giving?

HON. MR. FROST: $10 on a means test.

MR. TAYLOR: Neither one of you has done anything. Let us get going.

HON. MR. FROST: You fellows have not a leg to stand on.

MR. TAYLOR: I will show you what a real government can do, in a few minutes.

HON. MR. FROST: Have you been in Saskatchewan? $5 on a means test, and for a whole year they gave them nothing.

MR. CHAIRMAN: One at a time, please.

MR. MACLEOD: You see, if there was any logic in your position, then you might just as well carry it another stage further and say we should not have a basic pension at all, that we should only give it to elderly people on the basis of need and we should not even have a $30 a month pension. It does not make sense. If you are going to have an old-age pension, then it should be set at a pension which enables the aged citizens of this and other provinces to live in something approximating comfort and decency. What is the picture in Canada today?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: What is it in Russia?

MR. MACLEOD: Well, now, listen—

AN HON. MEMBER: He does not like that.

MR. MACLEOD: What can you do with a backward-obscurantist person like the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) who likes to make interruptions. A man representing a riding made up of intelligent people conducts himself in this House like an adolescent who is suffering from arrested development.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Why don't you sell Uncle Joe The Idea?

MR. MACLEOD: You better go out and get de-watered.

AN HON. MEMBER: We need a dictionary.

MR. MACLEOD: What is the picture in Canada today?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: What is the picture in Russia today?

MR. MACLEOD: Out in British Columbia all the old-age pensioners over 70 received $40 a month, do they not, in British Columbia?

AN HON. MEMBER: With certain reservations.

HON. MR. FROST: Tell us about the reservations.

MR. MACLEOD: What about the reservations you have here?

HON. MR. FROST: Tell us about the reservations.

MR. MACLEOD: In the Province of Alberta, all old-age pensioners receive $37 a month.

HON. MR. FROST: With certain reservations.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, brother, talk about reservations, wait till we get down to Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST: All right.

MR. MACLEOD: In the Province of Saskatchewan they received $35 a month.

HON. MR. FROST: On a means test.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, just as in Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST: On a tighter means test than in Ontario.

MR. TAYLOR: What is their means test?

HON. MR. FROST: You have to be pretty mean out there to get anything.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Then we get down to the province with the expanding economy and the $25,000,000 surplus, and we find the government, as my hon. friend the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has said in a radio speech a week or so ago, putting these old people "through the wringer" twice, in order to qualify for this miserable $10 bonus.

HON. MR. FROST: That is just some of us.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. King puts them "through the wringer" first.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is the way he always acted.

MR. MACLEOD: Then the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) takes them to another wringer and puts them through again. Then, when you have them pretty well flattened out, you decide whether you are going to throw them another ten dollars. Now, Mr. Chairman, the hon. members on those treasury benches would like to give the impression that only the C.C.F. and the Labour Progressive Party and a few left-wing Liberals over here—

AN HON. MEMBER: Where are they?

MR. MACLEOD: —advocating—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Which ones are they?

MR. MACLEOD: Well, the hon. member for Cochrane North (Mr. Habel)—

HON. MR. FROST: Is he a left-wing Liberal?

MR. MACLEOD: —advocating this $40 a month pension—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: He is swinging back to the left again.

MR. MACLEOD: Listen to this: I had given to me in this building a couple of days ago, a communication from the Tory-ridden City Council of Toronto, a council made up almost completely of either Torys or Tory-minded Liberals—

AN HON. MEMBER: It is a forgery.

MR. MACLEOD: —with a couple of Labour-Progressives too, sitting in there, trying to introduce a small element of common-sense to the proceedings. Well, here is the letter:

“Dear Sir:

I forward a copy of a resolution having reference to an increase in the basic rate of old-age pensions, et cetera, which was adopted by the City Council of the City of Toronto at its meeting held on April 5, 1948.”

Here is the resolution of the Tory Mayor, Hiram McCallum, and a Tory City Council, and what do they say to you?

HON. MR. FROST: This is the basic pension, is it, you are talking about?

MR. MACLEOD: Now listen:

“That whereas the rising cost of living has brought hardship and want to those depending upon the old-age pension of $30 a month;

And whereas hospitalization, medical, dental and optical care that now provided for aged pensioners is proving a costly charge against taxable property in the Ontario cities;

Therefore, be it resolved that the City Council hereby petitions—”

These are your people speaking to you—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh, no.

MR. MACLEOD:

“—petitions the Drew Government to immediately raise the basic pension to $40 a month to all eligible pensioners without a means test.”

HON. MR. FROST: Did they send that to Ottawa?

MR. MACLEOD: That came to me.

HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

AN HON. MEMBER: It must be a forgery.

MR. MACLEOD: Listen now—and why did not the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) get up and read this instead of standing up as an advocate for Gladstone Murray, and why does not the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter)—

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): I will tell you why, if you will give me the floor for a minute.

MR. MACLEOD: Now then—

MR. ROBERTS: Don't ask questions if you don't want answers.

HON. MEMBERS: Let him answer: let him answer.

MR. MACLEOD: Listen—

MR. OLIVER: Quiet please.

HON. MR. FROST: Are you afraid of the answer?

MR. MACLEOD:

“And further, be it resolved that the Province of Ontario supply free hospitalization, medical, dental and optical care to all pensioners and at no cost to the municipalities;

And that copies of this resolution—”

HON. MR. FROST: That is being done.

MR. MACLEOD:

“—and that copies of this resolution be sent to Premier Drew and all the local members of the Legislature.”

HON. MR. FROST: Did they send it to Ottawa?

MR. MACLEOD: This is signed:

“Yours truly,

J. W. SOMERS, City Clerk.”

This is no forgery. I am prepared to hand it over to the Hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and let his sleuths examine it.

HON. MR. FROST: Let me say this to the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod)—if Ottawa will raise the basic pension to $40 a month, we will pay one quarter of it.

MR. NIXON: Why don't you go and see him?

HON. MR. FROST: No, it is up to you.

MR. MACLEOD: You see, you "hand it out," but you cannot "take it."

HON. MR. FROST: You will not listen. You are afraid to listen.

MR. MACLEOD: I have been listening to you for so long, and so often, over the past four years, that my eardrums are punctured. You just can't keep still for a minute. Now, surely the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) and the hon. Provincial-Treasurer (Mr. Frost) are not going to argue that somebody was boring from within to put this across?

This is a resolution which came to the city council of the City of Toronto, from the city council of the City of Windsor. The council in the City of Windsor passed it and sent it out to all the municipal councils in the Province of Ontario.

HON. MR. PORTER: What about it?

MR. MACLEOD: You would not understand anyway.

HON. MR. PORTER: Not any of your questions.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Will the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) permit a question?

MR. MACLEOD: No.

HON. MR. FROST: You cannot "take it"; you cannot "take it."

MR. CHAIRMAN: Go on.

MR. MACLEOD: To permit the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to ask a question is simply to sit in this Legislature for the next two hours.

HON. MR. FROST: It will not take 15 seconds.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Will the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) let me explain, in regard to this resolution.

MR. MACLEOD: Here is a dangerous—

HON. MR. PORTER: He is out of order, anyway.

MR. MACLEOD: —motion passed by the Tory-minded council, one of the most Tory-minded councils in the Province of Ontario, coming out flat-footed and saying the government under Mr. Drew should increase the old-age pensions to $40 per month—

HON. MR. FROST: It does not say that at all; it does not say that at all.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes it does. That is exactly what it says.

HON. MR. FROST: No, it does not. I will tell you this, if the dominion government—

MR. MACLEOD: Let me read this resolution and we will see what it says:

"Whereas the right of the municipality has brought hardship to those dependent on the old-age pension of $30 a month, and

"Whereas hospitalization, medical and dental care, and optical care, not now provided for the aged pensioners has proven a costly charge against taxable property in all Ontario cities;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that this city council hereby petitions the Drew Government to immediately raise the basic pension to $40 a month, to all old-age pensioners, without a means test."

HON. MR. FROST: Do you not know that the basic pension is a matter for the dominion government to fix.

MR. CHAIRMAN: This is getting away beyond the item. Never mind what Toronto wants or Windsor wants.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, be fair in this.

THE CHAIRMAN: What have we to do with that?

MR. MACLEOD: You have been interrupting me ever since I have been on my feet. I would have finished five minutes ago if it had not been for your interruptions.

MR. CHAIRMAN: We are not going to sit here all night listening to you.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, let us be fair.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am being fair. I know what you are talking about. You do not.

MR. MACLEOD: I certainly do. You are being very unfair and it is out of character for you.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Speak to this item.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) introduced his estimates with a very extended statement covering his department, and I say it is in keeping with the rules of this House for any hon. member to rise when these estimates are placed before the House, and discuss the subject matter of the address of the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow).

MR. CHAIRMAN: Absolutely, but stick to this.

MR. MACLEOD: I am pointing out to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) that the advocacy of $40 a month old-age pension is not confined to the opposition groups in this House, but is extended—

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. Have I the right to speak?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) should sit down while the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) speaks.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If he does not sit down, I will call Mr. Speaker in, and settle this thing. I am not going to sit here all night.

HON. MR. FROST: My point of order is this, Mr. Chairman; I think I should point out to my hon. friend (Mr. MacLeod) that he is talking about a basic pension of $40 a month. The Province of Ontario has no right to raise the basic pension. That is fixed by the dominion government, and we pay 25 per cent. of it.

When the dominion government, in the days of my hon. friends opposite, were paying $20 a month, we made an agreement to pay 25 per cent. of that, and we did pay the 25 per cent.

Finally the basic pension was raised to $30, and we paid 25 per cent. If they raise the basic pension to $40 a month, Ontario will pay 25 per cent. of that. I make that offer right now.

Further, on the point of order, Mr. Chairman, I may say that these expenses are all being paid by the Province of Ontario, and do not cost Toronto or any municipality in Ontario a nickle.

MR. MACLEOD: Now, Mr. Chairman, to continue: The new old-age pension legislation, which the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) has described tonight came into effect on the 1st of May. Is that right?

HON. MR. FROST: The 1st of July.

MR. MACLEOD: Was it not made retroactive, coming into effect on the 1st of July, but made retroactive to the 1st of May?

Up to that time this government was paying $9.25 of the $28 pension, that is to say, including the bonus.

When the pension was set at $30 on a 25/75 basis, the share of the Ontario government was thereby reduced to $7.50. Is that right?

HON. MR. FROST: No, it is not. You are wrong, as usual.

MR. MACLEOD: On a pension of $30 a month?

MR. FROST: But on the other figure, you are quite wrong.

MR. MACLEOD: On the $28 per month you were paying the sum of $9.25 per month.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, everybody was not getting $28, so you are wrong again.

MR. MACLEOD: No, I am not wrong at all.

MR. SALSBERG: He knows you are not wrong.

MR. MACLEOD: My statement is this, that since the 1st of May this government has been saving $1.75 per month on every eligible old-age pensioner in the province.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh no, you are wrong and you know it.

MR. MACLEOD: Over 70 years of age.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You are all wrong again.

MR. MACLEOD: No. You have been saving $1.75 per month. I pointed out a week or so ago that the total supplement you are paying to a limited number of people who have qualified for this $10 bonus, compared with the $1.75 per month that you have been saving on each old-age pensioner—if I had the figures before me, I would demonstrate that the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) of the Province of Ontario has actually been making a profit at the expense of these old-age pensioners.

MR. CHAIRMAN: That is not here.

MR. MACLEOD: Oh yes, it is.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Speak to the Estimates.

MR. MACLEOD: I will sit down in just a minute.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Make it fast.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) throws figures around at random. He stated in his address that his statisticians had informed him it would cost $212,000,000 to do what was proposed in the resolution. If we are to take his figures as correct, it must mean there are 353,000 persons over 65—

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: 354,000.

MR. MACLEOD: That is about one in thirteen persons, with five times as many as the number over 70 now receiving the old-age pension. Frankly, I find these figures are very hard to swallow.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We do not care whether you do or not.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: 215,000 estimated over 70, and 354,000, over 65.

MR. MACLEOD: I hope your figures are accurate.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We do not care whether you accept them or not.

MR. MACLEOD: If you say—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You have been throwing these figures around. Play around with your own figures, for a change.

MR. MACLEOD: When I accepted the figures of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in the conspectus, I got an awful tongue lashing by the hon. member for Elgin (Mr. Thomas) who addressed his remarks to me, when he should have been addressing them to the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) because they were his figures.

In taking my seat, I want to say the policy of this government toward these old-age pensioners over 70 years of age is an absolute disgrace, and nobody knows that better than the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

HON. MR. FROST: Nothing would ever satisfy you.

MR. MACLEOD: You know perfectly well you are paying less money to the old-age pensioners in this province, than is being paid in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

HON. MR. FROST: Wrong again.

MR. MACLEOD: In these provinces, they are receiving $40 in one, $37 in another and $35 in another.

When we get the complete figures from the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow), I predict that not more than 10 per cent. or 15 per cent. of the present old-age pensioners will be receiving your $10 bonus. Maybe less than that.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: How much did they get in Russia?

HON. MR. FROST: They do not let them grow that old there.

MR. MACLEOD: How any self-respecting hon. Minister of this government can stand up and justify a callous policy like that, passes all understanding. You ought to be ashamed of yourselves.

HON. MR. FROST: Go to the Saskatchewan—

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Chairman—

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, oh, here we have Saskatchewan.

MR. TAYLOR: Yes. You have been “yapping” about Saskatchewan all night. Now we will give it to you.

I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) what he does for the old-age pensioners in Ontario? Does he give the old-age pensioners medical, dental and optical care, including all medical expenses, appliances, and so forth, such as wooden legs? How much do you give? I will tell you how much. I have a case in point, of an old-age pensioner who went into the hospital. He is getting $30 a month. Before he could be admitted, his sons had to come forward and guarantee his hospital account. His boys had to pay $125. They get all that in Saskatchewan. You have been “yapping” all night about what we do in Saskatchewan, and now I am telling you.

HON. MR. FROST: Tell us about the $5 bonus.

MR. TAYLOR: They are giving the $5, where you are giving $1.57, according to your own figures.

HON. MR. FROST: Tell us about the pensions out in Saskatchewan.

MR. TAYLOR: Just keep quiet for a few minutes. You estimate in your estimates $1,333,655 to take care of the special provincial pensions? That is your estimate? You gave us the figures the other day. You had 70,859 old-age pensioners. The only way we can do this is by average, because—let me interject right here, that I had one of the first questions on the order paper, asking for that information, which is not yet forthcoming from the Department. Why, I do not know.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): They must read the estimates over, first.

MR. TAYLOR: Were you ashamed to answer that question?

HON. MR. FROST: No, indeed. A very fine answer has been given tonight by the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow).

MR. TAYLOR: One thing I can do is to break your figures down in percentages, and I say that 70,859 old-age pensioners divided into the amount of money—

HON. MR. FROST: That is pure nonsense.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Let the hon. member (Mr. Taylor) finish.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Yes, let him get it off his chest.

MR. TAYLOR: Will the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) keep quiet. I kept quiet while he was talking, and I will ask him to do the same thing. You have been “barking” around here for years, but I am new at this game. Give me a chance.

I think the figures average $1.57, which you are paying under that wonderful promise of $10. You are not paying hospitalization, nor medical, dental nor optical care, all things they get in Saskatchewan.

While I am on the subject, I appreciate the difficulties which the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) finds himself up against.

I am inclined to agree that it should not be called a "pension." You are speaking about "pensions." I do not think that is the right word. The word "pension" should apply to cases like the gentleman to whom the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) referred, Dr. Hogg, who is getting $7,400 a year. Of course that is all right, because he contributed to it. This amount here should be called "charity" or "alms," or something like that.

One of the worst features of this whole thing—and the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) in quoting his budget said that 38,000 and some odd of these cases had been reviewed. I would like to know just how they were reviewed. Were they done by the mass-production method?

Here is a letter, and I suppose they just ran off 38,000 of them, and some clerk punched in the names. This letter reads:

"Dear Sir or Madam"—

It is one or the other, apparently—

"It would appear, upon reviewing your circumstances as indicated by reports on file, that your eligibility for provincial bonus is doubtful.

"Under the terms of Regulations governing the provincial bonus, a supplementary allowance may be paid in the case of a pensioner who is paying more than $10.00 a month for his shelter, exclusive of his board, or, in the case of board and lodging, if he is paying more than $25.00 per month.

"If neither of these circumstances exists but there is some extraordinary situation being faced by a particular pensioner, not common to a great many pensioners, special consideration may be given with respect to that extraordinary situation.

"If you feel that your circumstances have not been clearly placed before the Commission, a review of your case will be undertaken in the light of such matters as you may wish to draw to the attention of the Commission.

"Your very truly,

Ontario Old Age Pensions Commission."

HON. MR. FROST: What is wrong with that?

MR. TAYLOR: Mr. Chairman, can you not keep the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) quiet?

That letter is sent out to these 38,000—

HON. MR. FROST: What else would you do?

MR. TAYLOR: Keep quiet until I finish, and then you can talk all you like.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Do you not understand that?

MR. TAYLOR: Probably all these people are not as bright and educated as the two hon. Ministers (Mr. Frost and Mr. Blackwell) sitting in the front row. They brought these letters to me—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Which "two" do you mean, in front of you or behind you?

MR. TAYLOR: You are just like a jack-in-the-box, jumping up and down, every once in a while you spring up. These people all made applications for the extra bonus—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We already have that.

MR. TAYLOR: Just a minute, please. They got these letters, and immediately they thought "My gosh, my pension is cut off."

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: They must have belonged to the C.C.F. party.

MR. GRUMMETT: They all do, in the north.

MR. TAYLOR. I still have not had an answer as to when I may expect an answer to the question on the order paper. I know the information is available. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) had part of it, when he brought down his budget.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL. Do you suggest your constituents cannot read that simple form?

MR. TAYLOR: We have no lawyers up there to interpret it for them.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Are you suggesting your constituents cannot read that simple form?

MR. TAYLOR: I suggest you make some enquiry in your Welfare Department amongst your investigators, and find out their views.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It sounds so simple to me.

MR. TAYLOR: Make some enquiries among your investigators, and you will find out a lot of things.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I should hate to say that my constituents—

MR. TAYLOR: Oh, you come from a bunch of bright boys. There are no old-age pensioners in your riding. I don't want to say anything more about this.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is all right by us.

MR. TAYLOR: Mr. Chairman, I apologize if I did get over-heated. I did not like some of the insinuations people make about throwing things into a pot here, and having it boil over.

HON. MR. FROST: What does that mean?

MR. TAYLOR: Saskatchewan does not do this. They have a means test—

HON. MR. FROST: The people of Saskatchewan—

MR. CHAIRMAN: Saskatchewan is not in these estimates. Stick to the estimates.

MR. TAYLOR: I am through, Mr. Chairman. Thank you very kindly for your courteous attention.

HON. MR. FROST: My friend has given quite a lengthy explanation, but it just resolves itself into this—

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrews) What item are you speaking to?

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor)—

MR. SALSBERG: What item in the book?

HON. MR. FROST: I am speaking on the same point the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) was speaking on, whatever that might be.

Let us get this thing cleared up. In Saskatchewan and Ontario they get the same basic pension of $30 a month. In Saskatchewan they give a $5 bonus on a very tough means test.

MR. TAYLOR: What is the means test in Saskatchewan?

HON. MR. FROST: That is what I am asking you. In Ontario they get $10 right across, so let us just say "hurrah" for that.

MR. TAYLOR: If you do not know what the "means test" is, do not make such insinuations.

HON. MR. FROST: You are telling us what that government does—

MR. TAYLOR: They have a good government, and you will know it next June. One of the things in their favour is they are not cluttered up with a lot of Tories, we have two or three of those things (indicating two hon. members) up there, but no Tories.

Items 153, 154 and 155 approved.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, before this item is closed, I would like to say a few words, but I do not want to get into any argument.

May I now carry on? You are neutral, Mr. Chairman. You have no party whatever.

Mr. hon. Minister (Mr. Frost), while the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) was speaking, he extended an invitation to the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) to go with him and examine the Burwash Industrial Farm—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Voluntarily?

MR. GRUMMETT: Oh, absolutely. I am voluntarily extending an invitation to the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) to come to Cochrane South, and I will take him around amongst some of the old-age pensioners whom I know, and I can assure him right away that he will not find any of them living in $40,000 or $50,000 houses.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I agree with that.

MR. GRUMMETT: I can show him old-age pensioners living in houses that cost no more than $300 or $400. They have been crowded into the poorest shacks. In my own municipality, seven or eight of them have banded together and have pooled their pensions, and they live in a very poor shack, without any of the ordinary conveniences of life, and they are simply existing in that manner. I would like to have the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) see these people.

Also I would like him to go out into the country where a large part of our old-age pensioners seem to retire whenever they reach the stage in life where they cannot work any more.

As the coroner I have quite often gone out to look at the last remains of a number of these old people who have frozen to death, and died away back in the bush.

I can well remember one instance, not so long ago, being with a couple of young provincial police officers, and we went out to investigate the case of a man who had died alone, and as we were removing the body from the shack, one of these provincial boys turned to me, and he said, not in very parliamentary language, "What are you doing? What are you, a member, doing for these old-age pensioners?" When officers see what is going on, they know the conditions of our people.

I think if the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) would make a trip to the north, and go around amongst these people, he would then know the greater need they have for assistance. You cannot see the full need by visiting the old-age pensioners who live in well-built buildings here in the city of Toronto.

You have to get out into the areas where they are living, under a much different condition of life than they have in the cities, and I hope the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) this summer will come to the north country, and I shall be glad to accompany him on a trip through my riding.

On Item 156.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman—

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Chairman, may I just say a word.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) will speak, and I will follow.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I may say, in regard to the invitation by the hon. member for Cochrane, South (Mr. Grummett), that I appreciate his problem up there. Up until now the north country has been a young man's country, but it is now becoming an old man's country. When I was up there last fall I noticed a great many old shacks along the road, with elderly people living in them. I think the great need in the north country now, with the more elderly population, is some sort of a modern institution in the Cochrane district to take care of these people, and I hope the municipalities will get together in the Cochrane area, and take advantage of the offer I made available last week.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, on Item 156. I want to say that despite the discussion which went on earlier on this item, this House cannot pass this item without feeling, as I think it should feel, it is a party to a crime against a considerable section of the people. No amount of laughing or "kidding" or interruptions will alter that fact, and by our failure to change the pensions we are committing a crime. I say, Mr. Chairman, it is cruel to make a laughing matter out of this, too.

HON. MR. FROST: Are they treated cruelly out in—

MR. SALSBERG: —absolve yourself and the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) from this charge—

HON. MR. FROST: Are they treated cruelly in Saskatchewan? You are always talking about that.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not acquainted with or interested in Saskatchewan.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, shame on you.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You are supporting them now.

MR. SALSBERG: I am interested in the old people in Ontario: that is what we are discussing.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Yes, that is what we are discussing.

MR. SALSBERG: And I want to say public opinion is overwhelmingly in favour of a pension above $40 a month. The Gallup Poll in April, 1947, has shown those who favour a pension up to $20 are 1 per cent.; those who favour $21 to $30 are 12 per cent.; those between $31 and $40 a month are 21 per cent.; $41 to $50 a month, 27 per cent.; $51 to $60 a month, 15 per cent. And now, be prepared for an alarming thing—those favouring a pension between $61 and $99 a month, 13 per cent., and those who favour a $100 a month old-age pension, 6 per cent. In other words, 61 per cent. of the people, according to the Gallup Poll, favour a pension anywhere between $40 and $100 a month.

MR. CHAIRMAN: All right, that is not in here at all.

MR. SALSBERG: But, Mr. Chairman, you and I always—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is what he is complaining about.

MR. SALSBERG: I have in my hand, Mr. Chairman—

MR. CHAIRMAN: You stick to what is in here.

MR. SALSBERG: I have in my hand a document issued by the department.

MR. CHAIRMAN: What department?

MR. SALSBERG: The department of Public Welfare.

MR. CHAIRMAN: What has that to do with this?

MR. SALSBERG: On the item before us on public welfare, it is a question of old-age pension, Mr. Chairman, so I am quite in order—and, for the information of hon. members who may wonder what card I have received, I have a card which some wise person sent over and which says: "Your story has touched my heart," and so on. I hope it was touched; I mean to touch it, that is why I am speaking, and I want to say the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) in my opinion, would want to do the right thing.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We all do, Joe.

MR. SALSBERG: The fault lies on the cabinet collectively. This bulletin issued by the department says—and it was issued last fall—"Re old-age pension," and then it explains the operation of the pension payments under the new arrangement, and it says:

"Under the amended Act, old-age pensioners may have yearly income as follows:

(a) An unmarried sighted person—$600 including pension."

HON. MR. FROST: That is fixed by the dominion government, you know.

MR. SALSBERG: That is $11.50 a week.

HON. MR. FROST: That is fixed by the dominion government.

MR. SALSBERG: I am aware, Mr. Treasurer, that the dominion government is fixing it.

HON. MR. FROST: Why blame us then?

MR. SALSBERG: But your government can increase it, and you do not.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh yes, we do.

MR. SALSBERG: That is the crime.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh yes, we do.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not defending Ottawa, and I believe old-age pensions should be entirely a federal matter.

HON. MR. FROST: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: But I say, whether it is their fault or your fault, that gives no bread to the old-age person who is expecting to live on what you give him, and what we must be concerned with is that he has bread. I say to this government there are old-age pensioners who deny themselves bread. It is easy to cite isolated cases, I believe, who have children who can help. I am not talking of these marginal cases, I am talking about the average person, who, having reached the age of 70, and having no one, has to prove his rent has been increased in order to qualify to get $40 a month.

HON. MR. FROST: My hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg) knows there is a great difference between the standard of living in Ontario—

MR. SALSBERG: I know there is a difference,—

HON. MR. FROST: — and the cost of living—

MR. SALSBERG: —but I suggested there were—

HON. MR. FROST: Wait a minute, let me ask my hon. friend (Mr.

Salsberg) this: He must admit in this great big province of Ontario there are some greatly differing costs of living. In Toronto here, for instance, where about 20 per cent. of the population live, you have a very high cost of living. When you move out of Toronto to a place like Markham, it is much less. There is a variation between Lindsay and Peterborough, and those things have to be taken into consideration; and I know my hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg), when he really gets down to not making a speech, but being fair about this thing, he knows the means test here which the provincial government has introduced in connection with the $10 pension is absolutely sound, and it will fit onto the scheme some day when we get an enlightened government at Ottawa that will bring in a basic pension for everybody at 70 years; then the province's scheme will work perfectly. He knows that.

MR. SALSBERG: I am fully aware of the different standards.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, let us talk sense for awhile.

MR. SALSBERG: Of course it may be cheaper in Markham than Toronto—

HON. MR. FROST: Of course it is.

MR. SALSBERG: —but greater Toronto has close to a million people, and not knowing the conditions in Markham—and I do not want to speak about things I do not know—

AN. HON. MEMBER: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: But, knowing conditions in Toronto, I say from my own experience and contact with pensions, there are pensioners in Toronto who have not enough food, and I say even if you give them $40 a month, that is less than $10 a week,—

MR. ROBERTS: How many names have you given to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow)?

MR. SALSBERG: —they cannot live—

MR. ROBERTS: Why not sit down and give somebody else a chance? You get up there and shout and yell. How many people from your own riding, how many names, have you given the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) here who asked $40 a month and been refused? Let us get down to practical sense. I represent a riding which I suggest has as many problems as yours, and I will say this, I have had no applications whatever which have not been dealt with fairly by the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) right up to a maximum of $40, where it was apparent it should be given.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: I challenge the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) to meet me and discuss this problem in his own constituency.

MR. CHAIRMAN: All right, I will agree to that.

MR. SALSBERG: Any time he wants to.

MR. ROBERTS: I can deal with my own constituency.

MR. SALSBERG: Let us discuss it when we have a whole evening, and before the people.

Mr. Chairman, I say under those circumstances even if they are given $40 a month in the city of Toronto, if they live alone, they cannot but deny themselves food.

MR. ROBERTS: Why don't you tell us how many?

MR. SALSBERG: Go to the mine owners on Bay Street—

MR. ROBERTS: How many have been refused you by the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow)? Let us be practical.

MR. SALSBERG: The Bay Street mine owners—

MR. ROBERTS: How many were there?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: There were some which the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is very closely attached to, which sent in a list of 12 or 15 names, and I am informed there are 2 of those cases which we were not able to deal with and give them the maximum allowance of $40.

MR. CHAIRMAN: There you are.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know about that, and I am not concerned—

HON. MR. FROST: You do not want to know.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is the whole trouble.

MR. SALSBERG: What I am concerned about is the basic and unalterable and undeniable fact—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: And immutable.

MR. SALSBERG: —that the overwhelming majority are not receiving $40, and I say in the absence of the figures the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) was asked for, we are justified in concluding, as my colleague (Mr. MacLeod) has, the government is making profits on the new arrangement. The basic fact is, the vast majority do not get $40, and I suggest even if you gave them $40 a month in Toronto, they would still have to deny themselves food and other little things which are essential in life, and that it is as easy for an old-age pensioner to prove he is entitled to $40 as I said elsewhere, as it is for a rich man to pass through the eye of a needle—that is how easy it is. It is impossible almost, under the present restrictions.

Therefore let there be no doubt as to the net effect of what we are doing. I know it is late, and this could go on for a long time, but I believe the people of this province—

HON. MR. FROST: Are pretty well satisfied.

MR. SALSBERG: —have no two opinions about it. All I can say is, every hon. member should feel duty-bound at least to get up and express that wish of the majority of the people, as proven by the Gallup Poll on what we should do. We are not doing it, and it is more than negligence, it is a crime, in my opinion—a crime, and I do not want to be in a position where I stand and talk down to anybody.

MR. CHAIRMAN: You do pretty well. If you do not stop, we will have to stop you, that is all.

MR. SALSBERG: I know. That is what hurts, and I have to stop by saying it is on the conscience of the government.

MR. MACLEOD: They have no conscience.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Why not vote against them and put them out?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) whether there is any agreement between himself and his colleague and the other groups here that they should take over the entire charge of the opposition and do all the work.

HON. MR. FROST: The Liberals have not said a word. They must be well satisfied.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Chairman, to show you there is at least one pensioner in the province who is satisfied, let me read this letter which came in today, dated at Malton, April 12.

"Dear Sir,

Thanks very much for your letter. My husband received his cheque for $6 extra money for February and March about the 7th of April. To date I have not received my cheque, but it will probably follow in the mail. As your staff has so many cheques to issue, I often wonder the cheques appear so promptly.

"Again thanking you, I am,
Yours sincerely . . ."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: That is one letter out of 73,000.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: We get dozens like that every day.

Vote 157 approved.

On vote 158:

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, before you pass on to the next item, I want to take a minute. I want to raise again a case which I spoke of a few days ago. I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) was out of his seat at the time. I do not have his name, but his name is carried in Hansard, and I want to repeat again as I told the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow), I had the receipts, and I still have them with me, and I will submit them to you.

This man pays $15 a month for rent, $10 for fuel, $2 for water, $1.50 for light, making a grand total of $28.50. Up until the time I got the additional $5 after writing you, Mr. Minister, and getting an additional $5, he had $1.50 a month to live on for himself and his wife. He is over 70 and she is 68 or 69.

Now, as it stands, he has $6.50. He is a man who dedicated all his life to the development of Canada, and I am amazed, I may say, before I sit down, how hon. gentlemen can laugh at this.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: "Gentlemen" is the word.

MR. CARLIN: Hon. members can laugh about this. I wish I had a picture of tonight to take back to those old people. I am sure it would make them happy.

HON. MR. FROST: We are just laughing when we look over at you, that is all.

MR. CARLIN: Perhaps so, but the matter we are discussing at this moment, concerns the lives of old people who have reached the time of life and have built a Canada fit for you and me to live in, and now we laugh and make little of the whole matter.

I want to say to my hon. friend, the Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) I too would like to see you coming up to Sudbury—and I believe you will come to Sudbury and meet some of those old people, and see some of their needs. Here is one man whom I have already told you about, living in Garson, Ontario; that man does not live in a house—someone mentioned houses valued at $400—he lives in a root-house down underground, so he does not need to heat it early in the fall and late in the Spring. There are a number of such people in northern Ontario and all over this province.

Votes 158 and 159 approved.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, we have now come to the end of the department and the shouting and the tumult dies, and I would like to get a little information.

I see there is vote 156, item 4, the following information set out:

“Old-age pensions and pensions for the blind in accordance with the Old-Age Pensions Act—$6,922,900”; that is sub-divided into “Old-age pensions—$6,749,000,” and “Pensions for the Blind—$173,900.”

Then referring to vote 159, item 1, we see “old-age pensions and pensions for the blind in accordance with the Old-Age Pensions Act—$21,249,120,” sub-divided into “Old-age pension $20,719,100” and “Pensions for the Blind—$530,020”—what is the distinction between the two items, Mr. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow): I do not just get the reason for showing two items.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The first item is the provincial share, the 25 per cent. of the old-age pensions, and the pensions for the blind; the other is the capital amount we receive from the federal government.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): I move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee rise and report progress.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Are we going to pass the Prime Minister's estimates?

HON. MR. DREW: No, it is standing over until tomorrow.

Motion approved.

The House resumes, Mr. Speaker, in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply reports that it has come to certain resolutions, and seeks leave to sit again.

Motion approved.

HON GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment, I have already spoken to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and he concurs in the view I have expressed that it would be desirable to meet at 11 o'clock in the morning, so we may advance the business of the day.

I understand there are no committee meetings.

Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn and when it adjourns, it stands adjourned until 11 o'clock this morning.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 2.20 of the clock a.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: The Honourable J. DE C. HEPBURN

FRIDAY, APRIL 16, 1948

11 O'CLOCK A.M.

SPEAKER: Hon. J. de C. Hepburn.
And the House having met.
Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.
Presenting reports by committees.
Motions.
Introduction of Bills.
Orders of the day.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, may I present to the Legislature the first report of the Liquor Board of Ontario for the period January 1, 1947, to March 31, 1947, and

The 40th Annual Report of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, for the year ended October 31, 1947.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I wish to inform the hon. members that arrangements have been made for a bus to be at the front door of the buildings at 12.30 tomorrow to take those members who wish to go in that way to Mr. Robertson's funeral in Hamilton tomorrow. We are informed that will afford plenty of time to get there.

I discussed this matter with the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett), and it was suggested that the hon. members who will be going by bus—and, of course, the bus will bring them back—give their names to Mr. Murdoch, if possible, by early afternoon, so he may make the appropriate arrangements. There are, of course, a number of hon. members who will be going by car. The bus will hold 35, and I think that will be adequate. If not, the matter can be further arranged.

I should add, in fairness, when the Toronto Transportation Commission was approached in regard to providing a bus, they immediately said they wished to provide the bus without any charge to the hon. members, as a courtesy to the hon. member who was so highly respected by all of us.

May I repeat, the bus will leave the front door at 12.30, and I would again ask the hon. members who will go by bus, to give their names to Mr. Murdoch.

It might perhaps simplify it a bit if each group would determine the number of their own members who are going, and through their own whips give the necessary information to Mr. Murdoch, inasmuch as certain hon. members are of necessity not now in the chamber.

Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I wish to table answers to questions 1, 8, 12, 13, 19, 25, 27, 32, 39, 46, 50, 55, 58, 59, 61, 62 and 63. May I say, Mr. Speaker, there will be further answers later in the day.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, regarding the answers to questions. I noticed in the votes and proceedings at page 249, in answer to question 28, the salary of the Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission is $14,000,000 a year. Is that not a little steep?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: We are awfully generous, but not quite that much. I would not challenge criticism quite to that extent.

MR. NIXON: I think maybe it is a typographical error.

HON. MR. DREW: I would think so, very definitely.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I feel it is desirable I deal with another matter, in view of the likelihood we will be proroguing shortly, because, after all, it is not only the government and the government's supporters, but all members of the Legislature who are greatly affected by and interested in the welfare of the civil service of this province.

I think it is neither desirable for the members of the civil service nor for the hon. members of this Legislature, whom they serve as a whole—not merely the hon. members of the government—that matters of importance relating to the civil servants should not be left in doubt.

There was a good deal of discussion last night in regard to this subject, much of which was premised on a quite obvious disregard of the actual situation.

One of the things which was put forward was the suggestion there had been some design and deliberate delay on the part of the government in expressing its position. Frankly, I was not surprised at the suggestion, coming from the source it did. The truth is there is a very close, friendly and continuing contact between the officials of the Civil Service Association and the other civil service bodies, and the Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener), in whose department these activities fall directly. The officials were well aware of the position of the government through constant discussions, but very properly for the purpose of stating in written form the position of the government, a letter was communicated to them in the ordinary way, as would be done in any businesslike relationship.

I read in the press this morning there was a meeting of the Civil Service Association last night, and they are placing before the government a rather insistent request that the Civil Service Association be recognized as the exclusive bargaining agency on behalf of the civil servants of Ontario. In the alternative, if that is not granted, they will seek the services of some outside organization.

I think it would be unsatisfactory for the civil servants and for the hon. members of this Legislature, the representatives of all the people of Ontario, who are the employers of the civil servants, if we prorogued without the government having made quite clear what the situation is in that respect.

First of all, let me correct certain very improper impressions which were conveyed in the statements which were made. Far from the civil servants of this province receiving little consideration from this government, the fact is this government has established a civil service system which had never even previously been contemplated in this province, and which is today second to none in the whole of Canada.

At the time we took office, one of the things we had undertaken to do was to establish a measure of confidence in the minds of the civil servants. They serve the people of this province so loyally, so faithfully, and so very well, that we desired to establish a measure of confidence in their minds, which would contribute not only to their own sense of security and well being, but also enhance the efficiency of their work on behalf of the people who are their employers. That has been done.

Under the new Civil Service Act, never approached in its breadth of scope and in the measure of security it affords, we have laid down a pattern which gives to every civil servant a clear picture of his position, and the right to have his position protected by means set forth in the Act.

There have, during the years since we took office, been not only substantial increases in the total paid to the civil servants of this province, not merely upon the gross payment, or payments to all the civil servants, but upon the average payments to the civil servants of Ontario.

I am not suggesting for one moment the civil servants are over-paid. I do say, however, that in an orderly, rational way, the needs of the civil servants have been recognized, and a system has been established which, having regard to the long-term continuity of their employment, is in keeping with the general practice in this country, and may I say the salaries of the Civil Service in this province are as high as any in Canada, including those paid by the dominion government.

As was indicated by the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener), there are continual readjustments to be made, and these are being made from time to time within different categories, as the needs of the different groups of civil servants are put forward. This is a progressive and continuing process, which will continue within the very sound and progressive legislation which now gives the civil servants a perfectly clear understanding of their right, and the protection of their positions. That is always, in common with all services, subject to a proper compliance of very necessary limitations upon the activities of civil servants.

Having listened to some of the statements which were made last night, one would think we were sitting idly by, with no recognition of the needs of the civil servants. The fact is, on April 1st, just about 2 weeks ago, there were increases to the civil servants of this province of over $1,000,000—no insignificant sum. Under our method of payment, most of these increases will be included in the cheques which they will receive in the middle of the month, under the system which is well known by all the hon. members of the Legislature.

That is the measure of recognition this government is giving to the needs of the civil service in an orderly, well-conceived, and well-defined Civil Service Act, well-administered by a gentleman who has demonstrated his sympathy and understanding by the very things he has done for the needs of those who have served the people of this province so well.

With that background, I come to a statement which was made, which I do not criticize. On the contrary, I commend those civil servants who take an active interest in the general welfare of all civil servants, and I wish to say most emphatically the Civil Service Association has done great work on behalf of the civil servants of this province, and they have at all times been working continuously, since we took office, with the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener), and the other members of the government, in a legitimate advancement of their interests.

It would be, however, unfair to that Association, which has done so much for the civil servants—and I do not think it would be fitting so far as the hon. members of the Legislature are concerned—if I were to leave this in doubt for a single day.

The government will not recognize the Civil Service Association as the exclusive bargaining agent, for reasons already stated very clearly some time ago to the Civil Service Association.

The relationship between the government, as the executive body of the whole Legislature, is not one of ordinary industrial relationship. It is an entirely different relationship, and I do not know that the broad relationship between civil servants and government has ever been better put forward than by that very great democrat—and I use that word with a small "d"—Franklin Roosevelt, when a very similar proposal was placed before him while he was President of the United States.

Since I am so completely in accord with the words he has expressed, and since they are expressed better than I could hope to express them on this occasion, I would like to read them into the record as indicating the view the government holds, and which it has expressed earlier very fully in the letter to the civil servants.

This is what President Roosevelt said on this subject—

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Can you give the date of that? Is there a date on it?

HON. MR. DREW: I will get the date. It is not on the top of the clipping here, but I will be very glad to get it for my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver).

"The desire of government employees for fair and adequate pay, reasonable hours of work, safe and stable working conditions, development of opportunities for advancement, facilities for fair and impartial consideration and review of grievances, and other objectives of a proper employees-relationships' policy is basically no different from that of employees in private industry. Organization on their part to present their views on such matters is both natural and logical, but meticulous attention should be paid to the special relationships and obligations of public servants to the public itself and to the government.

"All government employees should realize that these conquests of collective bargaining as usually understood cannot be transplanted into the public service. It has its distinctive, insurmountable limitations when applied to public personnel management. The very nature and purpose of government make it impossible for administrative officials to represent fully or to bind the employer in mutual discussions with government employees organizations. The employer is the whole people, who speak by means of laws enacted by their representatives. Accordingly, administrative officials and employees alike are governed and guided, and in many instances restricted by the laws which establish policies, procedures or rules in personnel matters.

"Particularly I want to emphasize my conviction that militant tactics have no place in the functions of any organization of government employees. Upon the employees in the public service rests the obligation to serve the whole people, whose interest and welfare require orderliness and continuity in the conduct of government activities. This obligation is paramount."

That quotation, I think, expresses the broad principle which has not been sufficiently recognized.

The government has already on an earlier occasion indicated that this statement is in accord with its views and has presented that statement to the civil servants some considerable time ago.

The government believes particularly in the rights of civil servants to know what their position is, how it will be carried forward, and that the details of government, which is government for the people, be carried forward in an orderly manner under the very confidential and unusual relationship which exists between the administrative representatives of the people and those who are the employees of the people themselves.

That is the position the government takes. The government has indicated its desire to further the interests of the civil servants by the legislation it has passed, by very, very substantial increases since 1943 and by an increase of over $1,000,000 from April 1st last in the pay received by the civil servants of this province. Therefore, the government will not contemplate the creation of an exclusive bargaining agency and will certainly not contemplate recognition of any outside organization beyond the realm of the Civil Service.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day there was another matter which I have already presented to you, but which I would prefer to defer. So we will proceed now with the orders of the day, and I can bring the matter up after we have disposed of them.

41st Order.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 41st Order, second reading of Bill No. 89, an Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Begin.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Begin, I move second reading of Bill No. 89, an Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Mr. Speaker, I may say in regard to this bill that section No. 1 seeks to reduce from 7 to 3 days the waiting period following a disability. Of course, one must remember this is not a great change from the waiting period as it exists and it does not mean any loss to the claimant, as he is paid from the first day, but at the same time it would prevent stretching his absence to a longer period to qualify for compensation.

The second section increases the payment from 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. to 75 per cent. This bill, we claim, would be a fair compromise between existing conditions and the bill as presented by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) last year and which, as far as I understand, is on the Order Paper this year.

We feel that asking for 75 per cent. we are asking for a fairer basis. We understand when a man is drawing compensation he is not liable to pay income tax on his compensation revenue, and that he is also taken care of inasmuch as hospitalization is concerned. Therefore, having these things in consideration, we are glad indeed to sponsor such an amendment to the Act, claiming we are certainly doing it in good faith, in order to provide for a fair compromise to give the working man what he is entitled to.

As it is today, they have to wait for 7 days. If the man is injured, he may be injured slightly and might be able to go back to work after 3 or 4 days, but naturally it is human nature to try to qualify for compensation by staying out of work for 7 days. We think, rather than hinder the good work of the Compensation Board, we should help in preventing cases like that from happening.

It is a known fact also, in certain cases, doctors themselves will advise the injured man if he returns to work within the 7 days, he will not get his compensation, so we are helping the working man and also helping the Compensation Board as well.

I was glad indeed to read in Hansard the other day, there were even some Conservative hon. members who were ready to support such a bill. I am sorry some of them are not here this morning. I wish they were, because it might well be the government will decide to support the bill. I hope it will.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I think we have a rather unique situation before us. This bill, as you will notice, is an improvement in the Workmen's Compensation Act; it is moved by a Liberal, seconded by a Conservative, and the C.C.F. are prepared to support it.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, this bill is somewhat similar in context to Bill 107, introduced by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin). While it does not go as far as our Bill 107 goes, we in the C.C.F. are prepared to support it.

The Compensation Act should be amended, and we are prepared at any time to accept half a loaf rather than no bread.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I feel at this time I should make a rather complete statement on compensation as I see it, after having had it under my jurisdiction for the last 5 years.

I would like to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, this Act which came into effect January 1st, 1915, had certain purposes behind it which led people to realize an Act of this kind was necessary. The worker at that time had no protection whatever. If he were injured in industry, he was "on his own," unless he chose to take court action against his employer, and very few people at that time were able to finance an action. Unless it was definitely established his accident was the result of the employer's negligence, he got nothing. The result was you had hundreds and hundreds of disabled people around the country drawing absolutely nothing for their injuries.

This Act, therefore, was designed to protect the employee, to give him protection without the necessity of court action. It also protected the employer against court action, and in the event somebody in his employ had been negligent, which resulted in a great disability and might have financially ruined the employer, the benefits in this Act were designed to protect both.

It was designed so the employer would pay all the money. All the money paid in from which compensation is paid, is paid in by employers. I would like to make this point right here—and I have so argued with many employers—they do not pay this money at all, they simply collect it for the Compensation Board, because, in my opinion, it is added into the costs of the products and the merchandise sold, and in fact is paid by the general public.

At any rate, the employer pays in all money to the Workmen's Compensation Board.

At that time it was considered fair, for the employee to make a contribution, and in the original Act, his contribution was for 50 per cent. of his wages—that is to say, he only got 50 per cent. compensation at that time as the benefits he would receive. That was later changed so that he would get 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent., some years ago. This demonstrates the Workmen's Compensation Act is not a social security; it is not social legislation; it is simply a way by which workmen will be assured of sustenance if they become injured, whether by their own fault or not.

It might be interesting, in that relation, to know that of 183,000 accidents last year, only about 20 per cent. of them were actually attributed to operations of machines. A great many of them were accidents such as slipping on an oiled floor. It can be demonstrated a great many of the accidents which occurred in the actual operation of machines, were due to negligence on the part of the injured person, because in these high-speed days, men attempting to do more than they actually should, remove safety devices and ignore them, with the result the accident rate remains very high.

At the time the Act was designed, provision was included in it to establish the Accident Prevention Associations in all classes of industry, of which there are 8, segregating industry and lumbering, and electrical and transportation and other types of industrial activity. These safety associations are directed and manned by industry, but paid for out of the Workmen's Compensation Fund. The whole purpose behind the Workmen's Compensation and the Safety Associations which are set up is—and I am just going to quote the slogan of the Workmen's Compensation Accident Prevention Association:

"So that in the end, the worker shall live longer to enjoy the fruit of his labour, that his mother shall have the comfort of his arm in her age, that his wife shall not be untimely a widow, that his children shall have a father, and that cripples who were once strong men shall no longer be a by-product of industry."

With the exception of 1 or 2 jurisdictions, our rates in the Province of Ontario are as high, or higher than, any other place. In some states in the United States, rates may be slightly higher, but with this qualification, Mr. Speaker, the benefits do not continue for the lifetime of the injured person, or for the lifetime of the widow, but only for a stated period, so there is no comparison with the benefits, even though the initial rate is higher, with the benefits which accrue to our people in this Province of Ontario, because if a man is unfortunately killed, his widow receives a pension for her lifetime, or until such time she may decide to remarry, in which case, and at which time she gets approximately two years' pension in a lump sum.

Our services, Mr. Speaker, are more elaborate and I say—and I think I say it boastfully—and are more efficient than in any other place in the world. Our interpretation of the regulations is more generous and more humanely administered, and broader in scope than in any other place I know.

For instance, our clinic at Malton: I recall inviting hon. members of this House last year to take time out to visit Malton. It is unique in the world. There have been clinical services given for quite some time. On assuming this office and getting an actual picture of conditions, I found we had an establishment on Victoria Street. We were bringing men in from all parts of the province, housing them under very difficult conditions, to the best of our ability. Boarding houses which we could find were very unsatisfactory; men after receiving their treatment were loitering around the streets because they had nothing else to do, and I found the whole system was very unsatisfactory.

I investigated the possibilities of building a place where we could take care of these people. However, conditions of labour and the material situation being what they were, we had to pass that up for the time being.

In the meantime, or subsequently, Malton became available. After looking it over, we decided it would suit our purposes very well, and arrangements were made to establish a complete unit out there. There is at Malton a population of injured men all the time of between 200 and 300; there is a very efficient staff of nurses and medical men; there is fine cooking facilities, men are fed and their quarters cleaned, and it is, as I say, bringing creditable comments from all parts of the world, because people are coming here to see it in operation.

That is one of the things we give which does not show in the percentage in money which we pay to the injured workman, and because of that, if a single man today receives 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. after having been injured—and that 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. is tax free—and he is required to go to Malton, or hospital, which reduces his other expenses, so he is then getting over 100 per cent. in actual value.

I would like, Mr. Speaker, to read into the record some of the things which this government has done to eliminate injuries and to make the Workmen's Compensation Act even better than it was.

One of the first acts we did was to cover all operations of provincial government departments and operations of all municipalities. These departments and municipalities were covered under Schedule 2, but there was no obligation—it was not compulsory—with the result if a man employed by a municipality or the provincial government or any of its commissions, was injured and his foreman or his employer decided for some reason he did not like this fellow, he was inefficient or careless, he simply would not recommend him for compensation and he got none. That happened in a great many cases.

We decided that was unfair. If a man was working for an employer and was injured, it was his right to receive compensation. Therefore, we corrected that. We found a great many people in the province were not covered at all by the Act, and we have continuously increased the numbers of people who receive the benefits of this protective Act.

We have taken in the hotel employees, and the employees of restaurants where 6 or more people are employed. It is easily understood you must have some sort of a limit because we cannot hope to assess and collect from every little lunch counter and "hot dog stand" or whatever it may be, so we put a number limit in that one category.

On the other hand, we eliminated the number limit for bakeries and dairies, because there are some who have very few employees, and we thought they should be covered.

We covered all wholesale stores and warehouses.

We covered the operations of all hospitals and sanatoria and the operation of office buildings, which added to the list of those who would have the benefit of this Act, in number of employees to over 100,000, and an increase in the number of employers by 15,000—that is, new employers.

We increased the widows' pensions to $50 a month, from $40 to $45 to $50.

We increased the children's pensions from $10 to $12 per month.

We increased the minimum weekly compensation from $12.50 to $15. This means if the 66⅔ per cent. of a man's earnings do not reach $12.50, or did not previously, he would have received a minimum of $12.50. We have made that $15.

We authorized payments of $100 per month for total permanent disability where earnings would have set a pension at less than that amount. If a man is permanently disabled, and the percentage of his earnings would not make him eligible for $100 a month, we put a minimum of $100 a month, for that permanent disability.

We placed the control of medical aid of Schedule 2 employers under the board. For instance, by Schedule 2 employers, particularly the railroads, had their own doctors stationed all along their lines, and the service was not satisfactory, and the employees have been placed under the medical aid, of the Workmen's Compensation Board, which permits a man to secure his own doctor, and assures him the benefits of the very finest medical aid which can be obtained.

We authorized the purchasing and repairing of all artificial appliances which were necessary as a result of compensable accidents during the time the Act made no provision for such appliances. People who were injured, and lost a leg or an arm, had to buy these appliances themselves, and it weighed very heavily on them, and at one time the board used to buy them and deduct from each cheque a certain percentage toward the recovery of this money. We eliminated that, and we furnish these appliances now, to all these people.

We authorized the payment of medical aid which may now or in the future be necessary as a result of compensable accidents during the period of the Act when medical aid payments were not authorized. There was a long period when there was no medical aid. Today we have the very finest system of medical aid to be found anywhere.

We amended the schedule of industrial diseases, as follows:

"Any other disease peculiar to, or characteristic of a particular industrial process, trade or occupation."

We pay for those diseases which can be characteristic of a man's particular occupation, and may I bring to the attention of the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) that silicosis comes under that. We are paying for silicosis, if silicotic dust is found to be the cause of a man's disablement.

We instructed the administration policy in connection with hernia, which instructed the board to allow all cases where the type of work was likely to cause hernia, even though the medical or other evidence was not specific that the hernia was caused by the employment. This resulted in slightly more than 8 out of every 10 hernia cases reported to the board being allowed.

The difficulty had been with this injury, to establish the fact that a man did receive a hernia as a result of his activities. We took the doubt out of it, and unless it can be definitely established it was not the result of his work, he is compensated, and we are now paying over 85 per cent. of hernia cases, which are reported, where previously there was only 20 per cent. paid.

We instructed the administration to pay for aggravation of pre-existing conditions. For instance, a man has a certain condition, and his injury aggravates it; we give him credit for that percentage which our doctors can attribute to the accident aggravating his pre-existing condition.

We instructed the administration to compute compensation payments on the basis of a man's earnings for the 4 weeks preceding his injury, or for the shorter period, if he has not been employed for the month, or for a workman engaged in the same type of work for the same employer, if the workman was injured in the first hour or so of his employment. This was a change from the previous policy, where compensation payments were computed on the mean between the average for the 4 weeks and the 1 year preceding a workman's injury. This meant an overall increase in weekly compensation payments of roughly $2.

We instructed the administration to use 7 calendar days for the period of lay offs before compensation payments could be made. Such calendar days to include the Saturday and Sunday, even though the place of a man's employment did not work on those days, and to count the day of the man's injury even though he was paid his full wages for this day. This, in reality, brought the waiting period down to 4 days, and 3 days if there was a legal holiday in that particular week.

If a man is injured some time during the day, he is paid for the full day. If his injury is such it keeps him out of work for a longer period, his payments date back to the day he was injured, so he will lose absolutely nothing.

In addition, at this session we have passed a further amendment which has taken care, for sure, of the rescue stations, so that they will be maintained, and we have brought the widows who formerly—even now before the date this Act comes into force, in July—got $40, and $45, up to $50, and the $10 for the children, has been raised to $12 for each child.

It is one Act which seems so simple, but it means approximately $5,000,000 to reimburse the fund, and put the Act into force.

MR. MACLEOD: That leaves $20,000,000 out of $25,000,000.

HON. MR. DALEY: Now, Mr. Speaker, I have endeavoured to give you a picture of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and draw it to your attention, to refresh your memory, and those of the hon. members of this Legislature as to what has been done in the last five years to correct things which were wrong with the operation of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

This resumé is necessarily brief, but I think it does point out to you that this government has the operation of the Workmen's Compensation Act under continuous survey. We have corrected many injustices, but so far, even yet, the Act is not perfect. But we do feel it is the responsibility of government to see it is administered sympathetically and generously, that the benefits are as high as possible, and the costs maintained as low as possible, because it is big business, Mr. Speaker; approximately $20,000,000 last year paid out in compensation, which is assessed upon the industrial activities of this province.

We also feel it is our responsibility to keep this fund actuarially sound.

The government cannot accept the proposed amendment to the Act.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: Just one moment, Mr. Speaker. Since the bill before us was moved by the hon. member of the Liberal group (Mr. Begin), and has already been seconded by one who has since become a Conservative (Mr. Meininger), and since the C.C.F. group has declared its support of it, I rise to leave no doubt in anyone's mind that we are in favour of this bill to increase the compensation payments to 75 per cent.

In just a moment or two, I want to cite an example, as to why we should do as the bill suggests.

A week ago, a young girl, not quite 17, came to see me. She was working in a plant, and was switched to operating a punch press, and this girl lost 4 fingers of her right hand, the second day of operating this press. When she came to see me she brought the following complaint, that while she was ill and incapacitated, the compensation was not, of course, sufficient to keep her going. She had to pay her board, and so on.

The firm sent a representative to her house, and left a cheque for $50. Before she returned to work, they gave her another $10, a total of $60.

She went back to work, minus 4 fingers, and after the first week's work, the most astounding thing happened. I am sure the hon. members will not believe it possible, but the firm deducted from her first pay envelope $10, on account of the advance of $60. So after returning to work, and working a week, the girl had $11 and some cents left in her pay envelope for her first week's work.

I know this is unusual behaviour on the part of a firm, but I cannot believe a firm doing a thing like that, deducting \$10 out of \$60 from a girl who had just lost 4 fingers. It does show this much, the 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. we now pay is not sufficient in ever so many cases, where there is no other support but the compensation.

What the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) has said about the Act is, of course, true. This Act did stand above many other compensation schemes elsewhere, but that does not mean it is satisfactory, or good enough, and I suggest the bill's proposal is very mild, and it seeks to "up" it from 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. to 75 per cent., and I think the government should change its mind, and vote for it.

HON. MR. DALEY: I would like Mr. Speaker, to say to the hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. Salsberg) I do not think it should be disclosed here, but I think he should tell me the name of the firm. I can hardly credit such action.

MR. SALSBERG: I will do that. I found it difficult to credit it myself.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before we come to a decision on this particular amendment to the Workmen's Compensation Act, I want to say to the hon. members of the House that, in my judgment—and I think a careful perusal on the part of all the hon. members will enable them to agree—we should reach the conclusion that this seeks in a moderate way to reach an improvement in the Workmen's Compensation Act, as it affects those who are injured, and eligible for compensation.

We have had in the House previously, amendments which called for the elimination entirely of the waiting period, for increasing the compensation allowable from 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. to the full 100 per cent. We have felt in our approach to that particular type of amendment, we were going much too far in offering our support to a measure which embodied these far-reaching proposals.

But, this amendment we have before us today, as the hon. member for North Cochrane (Mr. Habel) has said, is to reduce the waiting period from 7 days to 3. I do not think there can be any particular objection to that proposal.

The proposal is to raise the compensation from 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. to 75 per cent. I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) will agree that an increase of that magnitude will increase the levy but very little on those who pay compensation rates. I do not think it is enough for the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley), to say "We have in Ontario the best compensation law in the Dominion, and we pay the highest rates, save one, of other jurisdictions." We want to make progress in this type of legislation. We want to give the fullest measure of protection possible, compared with the risks encountered, and I think we can, as a body in this Legislature, give our support to this particular amendment and in doing so not hurt the stature nor the stability of the Workmen's Compensation Act, nor those who are affected by it.

I would appeal to the hon. members of the House to let us make this moderate move forward and add to the benefits of those who are injured in their work in the plants and industries of this province.

MR. VICTOR MARTIN (Nipissing): Mr. Speaker, in speaking in support of this bill, from some personal experience in the retail lumbering business since 1927—in a small way of course—I would just like to say there are many cases I have known where men would not receive any compensation, but, through the doctor, waited for 7 days to elapse. I think if we passed this bill we would be doing all right. I do not think the companies' rates would be raised, or if it were raised at all, it would not be by more than $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1 per cent., and perhaps not even that much, because the abuse that is being made of the 7-day waiting period would offset the 3-day waiting period, because I know of a number of cases, who, have waited instead of going back in 3 days. Had they gone back in 3 days they would not have been paid, and would probably wait the 7 days, to get the compensation. And you cannot blame them.

I think, however, it is a very small departure. I do not think it will raise the compensation rate one bit.

As far as the 75 per cent. of the wages is concerned; I believe it is a good move. Personally, I am not in favour of 100 per cent. at the present time, but we have to move on as time goes by. If you paid 100 per cent., it would be just as abused as the 7-day waiting period. You would be bound to have abuses.

I think we should vote for this bill. I think it is a good measure, and all the employees are looking forward to a little increase in compensation.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, may I say just one word on this question?

This is legislation in which I have always been very much interested. It is true, I seconded the motion, and I would do so again, irrespective of the party with which I am affiliated.

I have had considerable experience in these compensation matters in Kitchener, and I have seen a great many hardships.

I do want to say this government, as outlined by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) has done and is doing a tremendous job.

I remember the days when as a lad I worked in a furniture factory. For instance, a man would be working on a planer, which had no guard on it, and he would have 3 or 4 fingers cut off, and would never receive 1 cent of compensation. Later, when they compelled the companies to erect guards on these machines, and an accident occurred, the foreman or the supervisor would swear under oath it was the employee's fault, that he did not have the guard up.

I know, when I was first elected chief magistrate of the City of Kitchener, I had to call the attention of the department to this matter, and we sent officials down, and they were refused access.

But this government today has proven conclusively, in black and white—it is in the Act—they have done twice as much as the previous government. I am not saying this because I have switched my affiliation; I am saying this seriously, and the Act will prove we are right. The outline given to us today by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) proves that. They are going a long way out on a limb to help the workers, and I am going to support the bill. If there is anything we can do to help the men hurt in industry, I think we should do it.

I am glad to see, in conclusion, we have not the controversy on this matter, which we had last year.

MR. SPEAKER: Call in the members.

HOURS OF WORK AND VACATIONS WITH PAY ACT, 1944

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 42nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 33, An Act to amend the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944. Mr. Habel.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Mr. Speaker, I take pleasure in moving second reading of Bill No. 33, An Act to amend the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944.

Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading I must say in all earnestness we did hope this amendment would come early during the Session from the government side of the House. In fact after 2 weeks of sitting I introduced the bill. We were expecting the government would take it upon itself to do so.

This bill provides for 1 week's holiday with pay after 1 year of employment, and then 2 weeks' holiday with pay after 2 or more years' employment.

In Section 2, the employer decides when the employee is to take his vacation, and it must be given in 1 whole period and, as heretofore, within 10 months of the end of the working year.

One will understand this section is very important because, when an employee wants to take a holiday, especially if he is fortunate enough to have his holiday in the summer, and wants to take his family to a summer resort or wants to visit relatives in a different part of the province or the country, he must have at least 2 weeks. With only 1 week, he is not provided with sufficient time to undertake such a journey.

With respect to Section 4, the percentage in the case of the vacation after the first year of employment shall not be less than 2 per cent., and of course must be 4 per cent. for a vacation of 2 weeks.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, we feel we are not asking too much. We feel we are simply asking for something which is coming to the working people. One must keep in mind the trend of the times. More and more we are developing summer resorts; more and more, people are travelling in cars—and by the way, if I may digress, I might say it might be beneficial to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) because the tax, of course, will increase if we give workers 2 weeks holidays—but after all, the working man in many cases has a family and every human being will understand that a working man is entitled to the same things as a more wealthy man, and to have a little vacation once in a while. What is the use of a working man having only 1 week's holiday if he cannot take advantage of it for travelling and to give some pleasure to his family and to himself?

That is why we should give him 2 weeks' holiday. It is only fair, and if I may repeat, we are surprised this bill did not come from the government itself. I hope, at least, they will admit our request for this amendment is only a fair one, and will vote for it.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, it seems surprising to me that the government of the Liberal Party, with which the hon. member (Mr. Habel) has been affiliated for many years, never did any of these things, but when the present government came into power, they at once, realized the working man should have a week's holiday.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Give them credit for waking up now.

HON. MR. DALEY: We have given that. There were automobiles on the road before 1942, and there were parks up north where working people could have gone before 1943.

I like to see people get 2 weeks' holidays with pay. In some cases they are getting it by collective bargaining, but to make it mandatory on every person in this province, including the little persons in a small town with one or two employees who is just barely getting by, and to say to such men: "You have got to give those people 2 weeks' holiday with pay," I think is going too far.

Mr. Speaker, I think where collective bargaining can be established and 2 weeks' holidays secured, that is all right, but as for mandatory provisions, I think this government went as far as it can go in providing that every man or woman who works gets a week's holiday with pay.

With respect to section 2, "The employer decides," and so on, I cannot see any change in that. The employer decides now. That is in the Act.

MR. HABEL: But we have added that the two weeks be given in one period.

HON. MR. DALEY: I do not think anybody would give holidays in any other way. He has to give them a week's pay and I think he gives them their holidays in that way.

As for the percentage of vacation pay, 2 per cent.; it is 2 per cent. now of course, and if you were going to have another week you would have to have the additional money for that week. We feel we have made some very good forward strides in labour relations. We have given the work week, the hours of work; we have secured for the workers of this province an 8-hour day and a maximum of 48 hours a week; that is, we brought the prevailing hours from 60 to 70 to 48 hours, and we think in this period of high costs, this inflationary period—where no one knows whether the trend is going to be up or down—this government feels we have gone as far as we can go at the present time. Therefore, we must oppose this amendment.

MR. HABEL: Mr. Speaker, before putting the question, the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) said while I was a member of the government which was in office we did not do anything about that. I might well remind the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) that I said there was a trend of the times, and that it had to be followed.

HON. MR. DALEY: All this did not happen in 5 years.

MR. HABEL: May I say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley), when I was 14 years old, I was working 11 hours a day for 90 cents a day, and I hope he does not intend to go back to that time. We must follow the trend, and I claim that 2 weeks is only a fair period.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Do you think you are the only one who worked for that? Don't be silly.

MR. HABEL: Mr. Speaker, another thing I should say, relating to the bill, the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) said we did not do anything about it, but he will have to admit at least that we as a government certainly gave the working man of this province The Bargaining Act, which you, as a party, opposed.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You gave them the rawest deal they ever got. That is what you gave them.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): You are only saying that to hear yourself talk.

The amendment negatived on division.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 43rd order, second reading of Bill No. 107, an Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Carlin.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 107, and Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Mr. Speaker, the bill we are about to debate is not entirely a new measure, and hon. members will recall it has been put before this Legislature on 2 previous occasions, and I trust, Mr. Speaker, there may happen to be some truth in the saying that the third time is the charm, and it will come to pass the government will accept this bill.

It is only because I believe this bill is one of the most important bills to come before this Legislature that I speak on it at all. The primal purpose of the bill is to make happier in some way and more secure the lives of that section of our people who are so often completely lost sight of, the industrial casualties, the men who have got caught in the industrial machines of the nation and have become crushed.

The hon. member to the left of me here (Mr. Davies), as I recall, the other day urged the government to do something for the crippled people of this province. I felt at that moment like joining him in that, and only the rules of the House prevented me from doing so at that time, instead of joining him at this moment in urging that we do something for those people.

Needless to say, Mr. Speaker, the byways and highways of this province are strewn with the wreckage of industrial people who have become caught in the wheels of industry and their bodies crushed. Wherever you go you see them, particularly in the mining industry, because it is a hazardous industry. There you will see men with limbs broken, limbs completely removed or lost, men blind and maimed and crippled. The first charge against any government, which is worthy to govern, is to care for its young, its old, and particularly its crippled. Any government which will live up to that responsibility will stand to be commended. Any government which does not, stands to be condemned, and I maintain this government does not look after the needs of the crippled people and particularly industrial casualties.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of introducing this bill is to see if something cannot be done for those people. The purpose of this bill is outlined here in the explanatory notes. Number 1 does away with the 7-day waiting period. Number 2 would increase the present rate of compensation, that is, the 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. of the worker's earnings to 100 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, I would be an incurable optimist if I thought this bill was going to pass, after watching a bill which would give less to the injured workman being killed by this government. So I feel no matter how long or how loud I might speak, this bill is doomed to death anyway. But, Mr. Speaker, one day I trust and I believe there will be sitting in the Legislature a body of legislators, a body of people of good will, which will have as its objective doing things for the needy people—not for the rich—for the needy people of this province; and such a bill as this one you are about to vote down will become the law of the province.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I think by explanation of the attitude, and the responsibility, of the government in connection with workmen's compensation have been clearly outlined, and how we are continually examining the bill to improve it and remove injustices. We cannot accept this bill.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, one part of the explanation the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) gave on a similar bill presented by an hon. member of this side (Mr. Habel), I am not willing to accept, and that is where he makes the charge that the industrial employees remove safety devices. I am positive the industrial employees will resent that charge. I want to say that I have worked in industry all my life, and I know they do not make a practice of removing safety devices.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the hon. member (Mr. Harvey) is endeavouring to do. I pointed out that of the number of accidents, approximately only 20 per cent. were attributed to the actual operations of machines, the balance of about 80 per cent. being accidents such as falling down stairs, slipping on a slippery floor, and various other ways in which men are injured. I also said that it is not always the responsibility of the employer, because the law requires that certain safety devices be on machines. The Factory Inspection Department checks on that, and there is supposed to be—

MR. HARVEY: Carry on; what did you say after that?

HON. MR. DALEY: I had an Act passed here this year to give us power to correct a certain activity in connection with what they call the "guillotine" machine, because in order to have two people working on it, it was sometimes found that one part of the safety device was removed. I did not make that as a general statement, and you know I did not, but man being what he is, in an effort to increase his production he sometimes gets very careless and does things he should not do in connection with things which are put there to protect his safety.

Those are not the exact words I used, but that is the story, and you know men as well as I do, because you have worked with them; and men will do things, and that is the cause of some accidents.

MR. HARVEY: Never in my life, Mr. Speaker—

MR. SPEAKER: Might I say to the hon. member (Mr. Harvey)—

MR. HARVEY: —have I known a man to remove a safety device.

MR. HABEL: Might I put one brief question to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley)? This is in relation to a matter pertaining to compensation; it is information for which I am asking in all good faith.

Would it be possible for a company doctor, a Canadian National Railway doctor, for instance, to be used at times by the board to act on a revision board? Could a thing like that happen?

HON. MR. DALEY: To act on what?

MR. HABEL: Revision boards—referee boards? Would that happen?

HON. MR. DALEY: You mean appointed by the Compensation Board?

MR. HABEL: Or used by the Compensation Board—hired by the board. Would a thing like that happen—a company doctor being used as a referee doctor?

HON. MR. DALEY: To deal with their own case?

MR. HABEL: I would not say with their own case, but hired by the Compensation Board as a referee doctor.

HON. MR. DALEY: Well, it could be. I mean, after all, a doctor is a doctor, and if he has the standing, I do not know why you would say, because he happened to have some connection, he would not be impartial in making decisions.

I have confidence in the professional people of this province, and a man has a right to go to his own doctor.

MR. SPEAKER: Let us get back to the second reading of Bill No. 107. We will have no further discussion on this.

Call in the members.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 44th order.

LABOUR RELATIONS BOARD ACT, 1944

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 44th Order, second reading of Bill No. 109, an Act to amend the Labour Relations Board Act, 1944. Mr. Carlin.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 109, an Act to amend the Labour Relations Board Act, 1944.

Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of this bill, I can only reiterate what I said just before recess.

It is not a new bill to this Legislature, although certain changes have been made to meet the conditions which have arisen. The things embodied in the provisions of this bill are provisions which have been asked for by organized labour down through the years. Each year representation is made to this government by the 2 organizations which represent, collectively, all the organized workers of this province, and all of the things in some way or to some degree or other, which they have asked this government to legislate, we feel, are embodied in this bill, in principle at least.

One of the fundamental changes, I should say, in this bill from the existing bill, P.C. 1003, 195, is this simple and legitimate and reasonable principle that a vote must be taken upon the request of 25 per cent. of any group of employees. Under the present set-up, a vote to be taken must be on the basis over 50 per cent. of all of the employees affected. I maintain, Mr. Speaker, that is very unfair. It is really discriminating against one of Canada's greatest bodies of people, her workers, and that is why this provision is embodied in this bill, to make it possible, if any given group of workers desire a given union as their bargaining agency, all they need do is apply to the government, and if they can show 25 per cent. of the given employees in the plant apply for certification, they can get it on that basis.

A vote will be conducted and 50 per cent. or over of those voting will be considered proper, and the union so applying for certification would be certified on that basis.

Secondly, if a majority of the employees eligible to vote actually vote—I repeat, in this instance, because I think it deserves emphasis—the majority of those voting would determine the union to represent the employees for the purpose of bargaining collectively. This amendment would correct the present unsatisfactory condition, under which a union may be certified, as I said a moment ago, if a majority of all of the employees in the unit vote.

Three—it would further provide that every collective bargaining agreement should, at the request of the trade union involved, contain a check-off and maintenance-of-membership clause, and any employer refusing to include such clause in an agreement would be guilty of unfair labour practice and subject to a penalty of not less than $25 and not more than $10,000.

We feel that is a reasonable request. I know there is great opposition in this nation to the check-off, and that various arguments are used. In my humble opinion, none of them is justifiable. The one argument which is used perhaps the strongest and the most often, is the one that it is undemocratic. Well, I think if the majority of workers in a given plant desire to have a check-off provision in their agreement, there is nothing undemocratic about that. Of course, I know it will be argued, "How about the minority group?" but I submit, Mr. Speaker, the government which takes over power as you have across the way here, represents the majority, and all we can do, as a minority group, is to comply with whatever legislation you bring down; and we do that.

I think it is most democratic if a majority of any given people request check-off provision—or whatever they may request—so long as the majority want that and it does not affect others adversely, it should be theirs for the asking. That is not so today. The only way we can get the check-off is through one of two methods. One is to get the employer who, in some instances, does believe in it, as they did at International Nickel Company in Sudbury, where they sat down and got such provisions in our first bargaining agreement which was signed with that company; the same with Falconbridge Nickel Company. But there are other companies where we have sat down, but though we could show in some cases 90 per cent. of our membership had signed check-off slips stating they wanted their dues deducted, the employer would still say: "But I am not going to give it to you," and in many instances, and, in fact, practically all, this same type of employer would say: "We are only giving you what the law compels us to give you." What are the results in that case? You have plenty of illustrations, plenty of practical applications of what that means, not only to the workers of the nation, not only to the industry, but to the people of this nation as a whole.

We need not go back far to see just what that means to a people.

In Kirkland Lake in 1940, a strike ensued over the basic issue of union security—union recognition, I should say, in that case—a strike which lasted for some 3 months. I will not dwell on that, because it is history. There have been other strikes since, the strike of the great steel works in Hamilton particularly. That was one of the major things which precipitated the strike, the check-off and maintenance of membership. Who here among us will forget the Ford strike, when union security was the issue? Since that was established down there, I think the records will prove there has been comparatively little labour trouble.

In Sudbury, where we have established it, we have had no labour trouble, and we do not contemplate labour trouble, particularly over that single issue which has caused so much labour strife.

There is a reason for it. To working people, union security is the security of the individual. Without the security of his union, he has no job security. They can dismiss him, if his union is not strong enough. That is the reason why companies hesitate to give union security, because they hesitate to see a union getting strong. They can find cases which, in their opinion, are not justifiable but which, in the opinion of the workers involved, are quite justifiable. Other companies definitely do not look at it that way, and where we have collective bargaining agreements, they learn to appreciate the value of union security.

I said there was a lot of opposition today, but there are people in all walks of life who support the check-off and all forms of union security. Among them are lawyers, doctors, priests, ministers and people from all walks of life. A great attorney who may be known to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) no doubt has heard of him and likely has known him—

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, may I ask you a question? Is this a talk on unionism, or what? I was a little late coming in. What does it mean?

MR. CARLIN: I have introduced a bill. It is on unionism.

AN HON. MEMBER: Bill No. 109.

MR. CARLIN: The late Clarence Darrow, who was quite a student of labour relations and a great philosopher, in speaking of union security in his book, "The Open Shop," had this to say:

"In reality, the open shop only means the open door through which the union man goes out and the non-union man comes in to take his place. The open shop furnishes and always has furnished, the best possible means of destroying the organization of working men."

"The closed shops are the only sure protection for the trade union agreements and the defence of the individual worker."

That quotation was from his book, "The Open Shop," by Clarence Darrow.

There are others. I said there have been lawyers, great doctors, great statesmen, who believed in union security and believed in it in a proper sense. They are not influenced by workers alone, they are not influenced by industry alone, but they are great statesmen and they believe in unionism, and they believe to believe in it properly and to breathe life into the meaning of that word, then they must support union security.

I have here something I would like to read into the record in support of my argument on union security, and particularly do I read it because I know there are some people who will defend vigorously the minority right when it comes to union security even if you have 99.9 per cent.—if that were possible—of the men in your union, there would be still employers and people in high public office who would say it was undemocratic to force that lone man to pay his share for the upkeep of the union.

This is what the Reverend Bishop Shields, of Chicago, has to say:

“Organized labour has contributed far more than any other agent to the economic security of human living. Even those who have not, nor will not join the ranks of organized labour have profitted immensely from labour’s heroic sacrifice.

“What right has any man to profit from the painful labour, the immeasurable sacrifice, the vast expenditure of time and money, made by others, without making some reasonable return for the great benefits which accrue to him through their generous efforts?

“Does not good sense, common decency, and just dealing require that the non-unionist assist those to whom he owes so much, by joining their ranks and by contributing his share to the security, the well-being and the happiness of his fellow workers?

“If organized labour should collapse tomorrow, these non-unionists would find life much harder, working conditions far less tolerable and wages generally reduced.

“In these premises, have they no obligation? Only the utterly false, the lazy and the cowardly can think so.”

Those are the words of the Reverend Bishop Shields of Chicago. I could go on with any number.

You know labour’s position. Every hon. member in this House when he rises makes some appeal to labour, perhaps for their votes, but I say the appeal to them should be on a more sincere basis. Labour for the past several years has been asking for the very things embodied in this bill of mine; check-off, the basis upon which a vote will be conducted, the basis on which certification will be granted, and many other clauses. I am not going to take up much more time except to say again, it is not only labour that is talking union security, and I put emphasis on that because I feel that, remove the security clause of this bill of mine and I believe it would get plenty of support here in the House, but when the union security provision is in it, I do not have too much hope for it.

I will just make an appeal to all hon. members in this House before I sit down—to those who profess to believe in labour—to support this bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: To discuss the various amendments proposed in this bill might easily take the entire afternoon, but I think all I care to say at this time, Mr. Speaker, is this; the government has already announced its policy in regard to its future attitude in dealing with labour relations.

We believe our policy will bring about a greater degree of uniformity and will react to the benefit of workers and industry alike, and will assure a continuance of the good-neighbour relationships, and play a great part in the continuing prosperity of this province.

The government cannot accept this amendment to the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, it would be belabouring the point to speak at length on this bill. I have no intention of doing that.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: I agree with the mover of this bill, the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin), who has spoken for a few minutes, and developed his argument, I believe, excellently.

I rise merely to say I support this bill. It is not an ideal bill, but I suggest it would be far better than anything we have ever had in this province, insofar as labour-relations legislation is concerned.

I am sure it would go further in contributing toward labour-management relations if enacted, than will be the case if the bill now before the House of Commons in Ottawa, passes, and which we are more or less committed to apply, after it will have passed the House of Commons and comes into force, and I think in the best interests both of protecting the welfare of the working people and of the interests of improved labour-management relations, this bill, rather than the other, should be adopted.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of attempting in any way to traverse the arguments put forth by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) in support of this bill. However, I would like to make a few observations.

The first of these is, there was some doubt in my mind whether the motion for this bill was clearly in order or not, in view of Bill No. 124. I feel, however, the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has put his finger on exactly where that rests. The Legislature has approved, on second reading, and has taken through Committee Bill No. 124, which now stands on the Order Paper for third reading. It is perfectly obvious these 2 bills covering the same field cannot both become law.

What the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) puts forth is now an argument that Bill No. 124, adopting the Dominion Act, should now be allowed to disappear, and this is the bill which should be accepted by the Legislature and become law.

Therefore, I want to make it plain to hon. members of the Legislature if they were to vote for the bill put forward by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) they would at that point, be voting against the bill already approved by the Legislature.

I thought it might be of some assistance to the House to point that out clearly.

My second point is this; when Bill No. 124 was before the House, the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) read a statement as his argument in relation to the bill.

At that time, he used the expression "union security" because he had something to say about it then; and in the interests of the understanding of the House on that subject, I asked him to define what he meant, but he saw fit not to do so.

Now, his colleague, the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) has used the very same expression and in a way, I feel, I should point out to the House is illustrative of the danger of using the expression "union security" without its being interpreted, as one goes on.

When the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) spoke about union security in relation to the bill, he presented his conception of union security, which he put forward—

MR. CARLIN: Which is the working man's conception.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: —and what he advocated was the closed shop. He advocated the closed shop, that is what is in the record. That is the expression he used.

For the benefit of the House, I would like to distinguish between the "closed shop," for which the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) appeared to argue, and the "union" shop, because they are two entirely different things.

The closed shop merely means that anywhere it obtains, before any man can secure employment, he must already be a member of the union, and be put forward by the union, to secure his job. That means all employment in any establishment where there is a closed shop is absolutely closed to all people, unless they go through the medium of the union. The union, in other words, is the controlling agency as to who shall get the job.

The "union shop" merely means that management is free to hire anyone who presents himself for employment, but where a shop is unionized, if a man becomes a regular employee, he must afterwards become a member of the union which does the collective bargaining in that establishment.

I thought this might be of some importance to the Legislature in assisting them to appreciate the very great distinction there is between these two particular aspects of the union security. There are some others, but I wish to say at this point that my question to the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) was not a facetious one; it was one which I felt I was quite justified in asking, in order to have him to explain the terms. Because of the fact the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) had read somebody else's argument, and presumed to make it his own, I thought I should speak on the "closed shop," because I think, when he speaks on "union security" in his bill, what he really was trying to achieve was the closed shop.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): I agree with the sentiments expressed by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). I think the bill is too drastic in some of its measures. I am opposed to the closed shop, always have been, and I am at the present time. My record stands on that. They speak about "dictatorship," well, if this is not dictatorship, I want to know what is.

I feel the government has very good machinery set up for collective bargaining. If a union is in a shop, or in a plant, it is entirely up to the firm, and if the firm wants to give in and have a closed shop, I think that is their affair, but I do not agree with holding a gun at a man's head, and saying, "You have to join the union." I do not think it is fair.

We have closed shops and open shops. We have had various proposals brought to us, but I have always opposed them. I do not believe in forcing a man to join a union. If he wants to join a union, that is quite all right. I think the unions have been given great lee-way. The government has gone a long way to set up machinery for collective bargaining, and so on, and they ought to get together, and decide on a policy, but not try to tell the parties what to do.

I will vote against the bill.

MR. GEORGE I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, there is one thing I want to bring before the House. All the argument seems to turn around "union security."

I am supporting this bill because I think it would improve the working of the Labour Relations Board, and would be something I think which would be much better to do than to accept Bill No. 124. The argument during the debate on that bill was we were voting on something we did not know anything about, because it was impossible to be amended, and it might not be accepted by the Legislature.

I have been working in industry for many years, and we have a union shop. It is true, as the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has stated, there is a difference between a closed shop and a union shop, that is, a shop which has a union clause. But because there are two conditions, does not mean that a closed shop will not be accepted. I think the closed shop will be accepted in future years.

May I just refer for a moment to what Mr. Justice Rand said in his reasons for judgment in the Ford strike:

"The employees as a whole become the beneficiaries of union action, and I doubt if any circumstances provokes more resentment in a plant than this sharing of the fruits of unionist work and courage by the non-member.

"It is irrelevant to try to measure benefits in a particular case. The protection of organized labour is promised as a necessary security to the body of employees. I consider it entirely equitable then that all employees should be required to shoulder their portion of the burden of expense for administering the law of their employment, the union contract; that they must take the burden along with the benefits."

That is the question as to whether a person working in an industry should receive the benefits of the years of sacrifice, and work and contributions, in money and time, which have been made by members of the trade union movement, if a man should continue to work in an industry and refuse to join the union which has brought to him better working hours, better conditions, and other benefits.

To me it is similar to a person robbing a grave, taking the flowers off the grave, and taking them to a horticultural society, and accepting a prize.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): That is a little far-fetched.

MR. HARVEY: It is not. It is simply an aside, because there have been many sacrifices made by men in building up the trade unions, and securing the benefits of their work, their time and their money. I believe this is a very important part of this amendment, "Social Security."

Mr. Speaker, I will support the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has perhaps directed his discussion on this bill away from the main angles contained therein. He has sought to drag in the question of the closed shop. I do not know where he gets that idea. It is not set out in the bill.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I object to that statement. I did not "drag" it in. The question was brought up by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) who proposed the bill.

MR. GRUMMETT: The words "closed shop" came up while he was reading an extract from a book by Clarence Darrow.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: He thought Darrow could put it better than he could, that is why he read it.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is pure foolishness. The difference has been clearly explained by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). Speaking for myself, and not as a unionist, I do not think the closed shop will ever gain much headway. Perhaps 20 or 30 years ago, when we had the craft unions, it would have been possible for a union to exercise the closed-shop provision, but when you have the industrial unions of today, it is practically impossible.

If a man has a trade, he is trained, has served his apprenticeship, and has joined the union connected with his trade, whether he be a plasterer, a stone mason, or a bricklayer, he is trained in that particular trade, and he belongs to that craft. It would be quite possible to make use of the closed-shop union provisions in dealing with craft trades, but with our industrial setup of today, the closed shop cannot survive. That is my own personal opinion.

The union shop, however, is a much greater protection to all ordinary working men, because it provides that when a man has commenced working, within a certain period of time he must take out a union card and become a member of his union.

I have resided now for 27 years in the town of Iroquois Falls, where they have one of the biggest paper mills in America, the Abitibi Power & Paper Co. Ltd., and they insist on a man becoming a member of the union within 2 weeks of commencing his employment. The supervisor pulls his employment card, if he has not produced, in the meantime, a membership card in the union. That is, the employment card in the rack is taken out, to indicate to him that he must report to the office, and when he reports to the office, the supervisor tells him, "You have not taken out your union card." That is the agreement between the Abitibi Power & Paper Company, and the union, that a man must belong to the union. Therefore, it is a union shop.

Now, may I say to the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) that 2 years ago I invited him to go to the mill of the Abitibi Power & Paper Company, and see how unionism and employers can get along, because they do get along very well. If he should go to the men who conduct big business, like the great power and paper company, one of the largest in northern Ontario, he can find very good management-labour relationship, between the working men and the employers. It is one thing to go through the industries in southern Ontario, and another to go through the mines and industries in the north, and you will see no labour troubles in that big power and paper company, the Abitibi. I have never seen a strike, nor heard of a dispute in the Abitibi Company, in 26 years. The men sit down and resolve their difficulties without any quarrelling whatsoever.

That can be done in all labour, Mr. Minister (Mr. Daley), and if you, as Minister of Labour, would give the lead to labour in this province by seeing that the "best labour legislation" is put into effect in Ontario, it would help tremendously. You have boasted you have already done so. You have fallen far short of your boast.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) will permit a question; I do not know whether he would care to answer it or not, but I ask it for the purpose of clarifying the record.

Do I understand, as the Leader of the C.C.F. group in the House, he is in favour of the union shop in industrial unions, but opposed to the closed shop in that field of labour relations, and is, therefore, not prepared to agree with his colleague, the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) on a closed shop.

MR. GRUMMETT: I made it perfectly clear, Mr. Speaker, that I was speaking for myself as an individual, when I said I did not think at the present time the closed shop will meet the needs of labour. As I said before, the closed shop regulation can only apply where you have craft unions. The craft unions of today are becoming smaller and smaller, and the trend is toward industrial unions.

As for the statement made by my colleague, the hon. member for Sudbury

(Mr. Carlin); I have already explained that what he said was in relationship to a quotation from Clarence Darrow. That does not mean that he arose in this House and strongly advocated the closed shop.

Why not ask him the question, Mr. hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell)?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) said "Speaking for myself." I was wondering if he could speak for his whole group in that regard.

MR. GRUMMETT: In the House here I speak for myself. The 3 senior members of the government speak for 66. In our party, we each have an independent mind of our own.

MR. JAMES S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take exception to the remarks made by the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). I would like to ask him a question, if there was one of them ever worked in rural areas, and had to pick stones out of a lake.

MR. SPEAKER: May I call the hon. member for Renfrew South (Mr. Dempsey) to order.

MR. DEMPSEY: Well, Mr. Speaker, it bothers me that a lot of hon. members come down here and allege a love for the working man, and make themselves out as champions of the labour unions, when they are not.

The county I come from is a working man's county, and it is the working men who elected me, and I figure I am just as big a friend of labour as anybody in this country.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. GRUMMETT: I just want to answer the hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. Dempsey), when he spoke about "picking stones." I am sure my friend, the hon. Leader of the official Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows quite well the area in which I was born. He was born only 10 miles away.

May I say to the hon. member for Renfrew North (Mr. Dempsey) that I lived on a farm in that area until I was 17 years of age, and I have picked plenty of stones.

MR. SPEAKER: Call in the members.

The House divided on the motion.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 45th Order.

THE FUMES CONTROL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 45th Order, second reading of Bill No. 110, The Fumes Control Act, 1948. Mr. Carlin.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 110, The Fumes Control Act, 1948.

Mr. Speaker, the bill before the House at this moment is equally as important, if not more so—and I see my hon. friends laughing—as the others which were up a moment ago. It cannot be said in presenting this bill, we are presenting a bill which is strictly in favour of organized labour.

This bill desires to do something for that section of the people, for whom we would also like to see something done, the great farmers of that great section of our province, Sudbury and district.

The bill before this House, Mr. Speaker, has been endorsed by the Sudbury City Council, by the local unions, which represent some 10,000 workers, and by various municipalities, including Lizzard Valley, Chumsford, and a number of others.

Copies of the bill were sent to the farmers, who have studied it. This was done for the simple reason that they are the people affected by the sulphur fumes in that area, and they are the people best qualified to speak on its behalf.

I must say at this juncture, Mr. Speaker, that I cannot conceive any farmer, who is a farmer in the real sense of the word, and who wants to do something for the downtrodden farmer, fighting against this measure. I know it will be said this is a great company involved. I base my remarks on those made by the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) last year, and I have a feeling he tried to leave the impression with the House that I would, yes, go out of my way to close this great corporation. His words were these:

“The hon. member for Sudbury has stated he is going to persist and persist in his fight against this great corporation at Sudbury.”

That is not the issue, I want to tell you, Mr. Minister (Mr. Frost). I would be the last one in the world to close down that company. I know it is important to the economy of this nation, and it is not necessary to close down this company. The passage of this bill, and the implementation of the contents of it, would not mean this great company would have to close down.

We know that out in Trail, British Columbia, they have some kind of gas extracting process, which I understand is very successful. Not long ago I was speaking to people out there, and I asked them if the burns were as bad as they were before they used it, and they said, “No, the burns are comparatively few now.”

I have heard, and I do not yet know how authentic it is, that the very chemical which used to destroy the farmers' crops in that area, is now used to promote the growth of vegetation. It is sold to the farmers at cost price for fertilizer. I have been in contact with the Department of Research in Washington and I am advised there are several formulae, one a Swedish formula, and one an American formula, and in the opinion of the party with whom I was in contact, they feel it could be applied for a reasonable amount of money in the smelters at Copper Cliff against this chemical which is killing vegetation in a very rich section of the country, and it could be used there for fertilizer.

I feel something more should be done than just telling us every year "We pay $40,000 to $50,000 out to the farmers." I have been told time and time again by many, many people up there that the amounts they do receive equal just about 10 per cent. of the total damage which has been done. That information comes from impartial people, from farmers, business people, yes, even from the office of the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost).

I feel, somehow or other, the bill will not pass. I say it would be in the best interests of the nation if it were to pass.

Again I want to invite the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost), and I hope he does not look for me at the International Nickel Company's office, or the office of the Falconbridge. I have an office down in the centre of Sudbury, and the people know me, and I am not always away. If the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) will drop a line giving me 2 weeks' notice, I will arrange a meeting of farmers, to whom he can speak. They have agreed to that, and will come down, and will be very happy to meet the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost).

At the time the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) suggested he would be there, and tried to contact me, it was through the medium of the Sudbury Star. I telephoned I would be there, and would be happy to meet him at a given hour. I was called back, and told he could not meet me then, but would meet me some time later in the afternoon, and was leaving that evening at 10.15, I think it was. I had 12 farmers in my office, who would have treated the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) with courtesy. They would have explained just what this means to them and their families.

HON. MR. FROST: You did not say anything last October about 12 farmers being there. I hunted all over to find you.

MR. CARLIN: I will put this on the record, if you will give me 2 weeks' notice, I will get a meeting of 100 farmers to whom you may speak.

HON. MR. FROST: Will it take you 2 weeks to get back to your riding?

MR. CARLIN: It takes you a little longer than that to do some of the things you promised the people. You will not find the farmers in the Copper Cliff office of the International Nickel, nor at Falconbridge, but you will find them out on their farms, and sometimes they are not very happy people. I have seen farmers ploughing under their vegetation, because it was so badly burned, and I have seen them settling damages amounting to $2,000 or $3,000, for $300 or $400. The hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) will say, "Why do they not appeal?" They have no confidence in the board.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, nonsense.

MR. CARLIN: The hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) said "Nonsense." Let him take a trip up there and talk to the farmers.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: How are they enjoying the hydro up there?

MR. CARLIN: There is something more to their lives up there than just pressing a button.

I urge all hon. members of this House who are farmers to support the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, this bill is just as incomplete now as it was last October and on 2 or 3 other occasions when it has been before the House.

My hon. friend (Mr. Carlin) said he was not desirous of closing down the plant of the International Nickel Company, but I can assure him and the other hon. members of this House, that if such a bill as this passed in this House, the International Nickel would close down in a large way, and there would be thousands of men thrown out of work at Sudbury.

This is a matter in which, as always, we are interested. In August, 1946, I asked the Ontario Research Foundation to make an enquiry into this matter, which they did. I have here the interim report or summary by Dr. Wessman, and you can see how silly the bill is, in the light of these figures—just plain silly. If you would like to see the original report, I would be glad to show it to you and hope you learn something from it.

Take the figures concerning the nature and magnitude of the problem. This is from the Ontario Research Foundation:

“From data supplied by the Ontario Department of Mines, it is estimated that the amount of sulphur evolved in the form of sulphur gases from the Sudbury area averaged 920,000 tons annually in the years 1936 to 1940, and 1,256,000 tons annually through the years 1941 to 1945.

“The latter amount is about 10 times the amount of sulphur evolved at the Trail smelters, about 5 times the total sulphur imports into Canada, almost twice the American export of sulphur and about one-third the total world output of native sulphur.”

Imagine the enormous extent of that problem. Then, let us look at this:

“The sulphur recovery plants at Trail are probably the largest in the world. Up to 1937 they represented a capital cost of about $15,000,000 and they have since been extended considerably.”

And yet the amount of sulphur at Sudbury is 10 times that amount, so just multiply $15,000,000 by 10 and by the effect of this bill you put $150,000,000 against the International Nickel Company. And I will tell my hon. friend (Mr. Carlin) he will have plenty of people walking the streets the minute you get into that business. The proposal of this bill is so silly I will not take up the time of the House by going ahead with it.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): What would that amount of sulphur be worth?

HON. MR. FROST: It is not economical at all. It is an impossibility to deal with that quantity of sulphur. The amount of sulphur up there is 3 times the total export of the sulphur of the United States. The fact of the matter is, it is not an economic proposition. If it were an economic proposition, the International Nickel Company would have been seeing what they could do about it. They are paying $50,000 or $60,000 a year in claims, and they would be glad to get rid of it.

My hon. friend talks about what they say in Sudbury. Do you read the Sudbury Star?

MR. CARLIN: No, not very often.

HON. MR. FROST: It is a pretty good paper, it is not?

MR. CARLIN: For you, but not for the people.

HON. MR. FROST: It is one of the best papers in Ontario. When you start talking about the folks at home, see what your own paper said on the 31st of October in an editorial under the heading, “Unwise embarrassment.” Did you read that?

MR. CARLIN: Yes.

HON. MR. FROST: You did not read it to the House this afternoon. It would be very interesting. I will not read the whole thing, but one or two things that it says:

“The company has to a marked degree succeeded in entrapping the sulphur fumes, which later go into the manufacture of sulphuric acid. The company is still experimenting with ways and means of utilizing still more of the sulphur which now escapes, and is hopeful of achieving further noted successes along this line.

“Over the years the nickel company has paid out substantial sums to farmers whose crops were damaged. The manner in which these claims are paid precludes any possibility of the ‘simple, honest farmers’ being cheated by the ‘powerful corporations,’ to use Mr. Carlin’s phraseology.”

Then it goes on:

"To date during the current year, the Nickel company has paid out varying sums to farmers who claimed sulphur damages. The number of farmers who have filed such claims and accepted the company's offer without hesitation and without making an appeal, has been 533, to date. There may be more before the end of the year.

"In addition to the 533 farmers who have accepted the company's offers as satisfactory, there have been 4 others whose cases will be stated before and settled by the Government arbitrator."

That is, Mr. Murray.

"If only 4 farmers out of a total of 537 claimed against Inco during the current year were dissatisfied with the company's settlement, it is natural and reasonable to infer that 'the powerful corporation' is anything but tough in its dealings with the 'simple, honest farmers.'

"But International Nickel has other activities and interests besides settling sulphur fume claims."

I want my hon. friend (Mr. Carlin) to listen to this when he introduces a bill which would put thousands of working men in Sudbury on the street and walking the street. Listen to this:

"Among these other activities are providing employment for an annual average of more than 8,000 men. The company's annual payroll averages more than $20,000,000. It produces something like 80 per cent. of all the nickel in the world, in addition to a substantial amount of copper and considerable quantities of gold and silver. It has transformed Sudbury from a hamlet along the C.P.R. main line, to an important industrial city with a population, exclusive of its suburbs, of just under 40,000. Without International Nickel and its army of workmen, scientists and executives, Sudbury would still be a hamlet along the C.P.R.

"What would Mr. Carlin do with Inco. if he had his way? Would he socialize it, so that its operations would be conducted for use and not for profit, or would he force it to suspend operations, so that the fumes from its smoke stacks would not interfere with those whom he so patronizingly refers to as 'simple, honest farmers'?"

Mr. Speaker, I wish my hon. friend (Mr. Carlin) would go up and find out what the old home town thinks about his activities; he would not be introducing silly little bills like this. This bill is not acceptable.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I had not intended saying anything on this, but after the remarks of the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), I think it would be well if we really looked at the bill just for a moment or two.

Section 2 says:

"Every smelter, within 3 months after the coming into force of this Act, or within 1 month after commencing its undertaking, shall prepare and submit to the board"— which in this instance is the Ontario Municipal Board—

"they shall prepare and submit for approval a plan to control or prevent the discharge from the furnaces, chimneys or smoke stacks, operated by the smelters or any noxious or offensive gas or fumes or to render such gas or fumes so discharged, harmless or inoffensive."

Section 3 says:

"Every such application shall include evidence that the plans submitted represent the best practicable means for the purpose in the circumstances."

HON. MR. FROST: Could you do that in three months?

MR. OLIVER: That is the mechanics.

HON. MR. FROST: It is silly.

MR. OLIVER: Section 3 means only a practicable means would be considered. To shut down International Nickel by loading on them a financial burden they could not bear would not be, by any stretch of the imagination, a practical means of dealing with this problem.

Then in Section 7 it says:

"Not more than 3 months after hearing the application, the board shall make an order either approving the application or a modification or variation thereof or an alternative plan and requiring the smelter to institute and maintain such plan as may be approved by the board."

So the board has within its power, under the terms of this bill, to vary any proposal, to suggest a new proposal or to suggest an alternative one. So really there is no cause for alarm, as suggested.

HON. MR. FROST: Surely my hon. friend from South Grey (Mr. Oliver) is not so gullible . . .

MR. OLIVER: I am not any more gullible than you are.

HON. MR. FROST: You are so gullible you would take this problem involving 1,250,000 tons of sulphur a year, the magnitude of which I have explained. You would take that scientific problem and give it to Mr. Coulter on the Municipal Board and ask him to find a plan to deal with it and give the company 3 months to put it in. That is so silly and so fantastic, I would think my hon. friend would not even suggest it.

MR. OLIVER: What you have said is more ridiculous than one could imagine, coming from you, and that is saying something. You talk about Mr. Coulter of the Municipal Board handling all these fumes. Mr. Coulter of the Ontario Municipal Board has power, as I pointed out, not to take unto his bosom something that is impractical, but to vary the thing and deal with it in a business-like way. I have confidence the Municipal Board would not proceed along that line.

HON. MR. FROST: You have more faith in lawyers than I have.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): They are not all lawyers on that board.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): this matter has been around before, since 1944. I must say the remarks made today by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) are of a different character—

HON. MR. FROST: The Minister of Mines.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost). His remarks are different in tone than the things he said when the bill was before us in different sessions. It may be he is in a bad mood today as a result of his misbehaviour last night. If that is the case, we will have to forgive him. The same 66 are ready to roll over this bill as they have rolled over other bills and that the problem will not be disposed of. I would suggest to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost), in all seriousness, that in line with the very practical proposal put forward here a few days ago for the setting up of a standing committee on mining, that one of the matters which should receive careful and considered attention in that committee at the next session is the matter dealt with in this bill. I really do not think when you dismiss a bill presented in all sincerity by the hon. member from Sudbury (Mr. Carlin), as something that is plain silly and that the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) is irresponsible in bringing it forward. There is a problem here and some complication, and it may not be possible for this House, especially at this hour, to deal with it adequately. I do say this matter should be referred to your standing committee when it is set up at the next session and let these farmers, of whom the hon. member from Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) speaks, come down and hear Dr. Speakman and other people from the Research Foundation who have made a study of this problem. I think that is the best way to deal with it.

HON. MR. FROST: I would say, Mr. Speaker, in concluding this matter, I would be delighted next year to let the committee on mining look this matter over. We are not discharging this with a wave of our hands. Our people have studied these things for years. It is under study all the time. We have the very best scientists, the best combination of people we can get, to look after this thing independently. I would be very glad indeed to accept the hon. member's suggestion and next year give the hon. members of this House an opportunity of looking into this matter and giving them the very latest information. I can only say this, Mr. Speaker, I am not making any idle statements when I say that this bill is simply utterly unworkable and does not meet with the circumstances of the situation at all.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 46th Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 46th Order, second reading of Bill No. 142, an Act Respecting Fair Employment Practices. Mr. Salsberg.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 142, an Act Respecting Fair Employment Practices.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take a few minutes—and I hope only a few minutes—to explain the bill and its importance. I want to say at the outset that I do this with more than one regret. First, I regret the need for such legislation, and, in my opinion, there is a need for such legislation.

Secondly, I regret the fact that this type of legislation should be introduced by a private member, because if such legislation is required, it should be, of course, government policy.

I have had very strong feeling, of course, on this problem. I felt for many years, as do a great many people, that there is need for fair employment practices legislation in this province and elsewhere. However, I have never introduced legislation of this sort until now. I rise in this House at every session since I have been in the House and spoke about the need for such legislation and on all occasions appealed to the government to take action to introduce such legislation. To the credit of the government, I want to say in 1944 it did sponsor a measure which was a first step and a step in the right direction, to curb certain discriminations of this sort. That was a credit to the government and to the credit of the whole House, because everyone voted for it. If there is a difference of opinion, it is as to whether this type of legislation is required, and, if required, whether it will help. I say, Mr. Speaker, in respect to the opinions on these 2 questions, the wisdom of introducing this type of legislation, although I disagree with that, there is no doubt in my opinion that such legislation is required. Unfortunately there are firms, concerns and individuals, who practice discrimination. They are the small minority, that is true, but that small minority has caused a great deal of unhappiness and is acting contrary to what undoubtedly is the sentiment and wishes of the majority of people, and such legislation is meant only for that minority.

On a previous occasion I have read into the record case after case of discrimination in employment. I submit to the hon. members of the House that of all the forms of discrimination, employment discrimination is about the worst. There is nothing worse than for a person to find that he is denied the opportunity of working solely because of racial, religious or national origin. The fact that it is not widespread in the opinion of certain people, does not diminish the need for legislation of this kind. I have a photostatic copy of a slip issued by the employment and Selective Service of the city where a worker was not accepted, and the firm quite frankly wrote the reason for rejecting, "Nationality." I have a photostatic copy of another letter written by a firm to a young girl asking her to come in and take her unemployment insurance card because they found out that she is of certain national origin. I am not speaking of other examples because I do not want to burden the House with too many of them, except to say this, that many young students in our technical commercial schools are forcibly brought into this unfortunate situation every spring, and I say that principals of our commercial schools and of our technical schools will tell you how difficult it is for them to advise certain youngsters in the spring, when they are seeking jobs, that unfortunately certain jobs are not available to them, solely because of their racial or national origin.

How does the public feel about it? I suggest that the public is quite ready for such legislation. In June of 1947 The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion took a poll, a sample of public opinion on this issue. The question they put to the people was as follows, and I quote:

"In some parts of the United States it is against the law to refuse a man a job because of his race, colour, or religion. Some people approve of it because it ensures equality for all. Others disapprove, claiming that it interferes with employers. Do you approve or disapprove of such a regulation in this province?"

And the answer, Mr. Speaker, was 64 per cent. of those polled declared themselves in favour of fair employment practices legislation. I think that speaks very highly for the people who have in such preponderance expressed their approval of such legislation.

Now then, there is an opinion that legislation of this sort, far from remedying the situation, may do more harm. I want to say on this occasion—I meant to say it before—that if all business concerns were to follow the example of the newspaper publishers, for instance, there would be undoubtedly no issue. I want to use this opportunity to make a note of that, that the daily newspapers of this country to my knowledge—and that applies to all of them—have set an excellent example in employing people on the basis of ability and who have in their staff—that is true I think from coast to coast—people of all backgrounds and of all origins, and I want to now pay tribute to the newspapers of this country for that example.

Unfortunately, it is not quite general, and there is the opinion that to pass such legislation will do a lot of harm. Mr. Speaker, I do not recognize that there is validity to such an argument. I am not for half a second suggesting that anyone who opposes the introduction of this type of legislation because of fear that it may do more harm than good is not in favour himself of such legislation. I think that is true of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and a whole lot of other people. Nor am I allowing this opportunity to go by without making it abundantly clear that I have no doubt that discrimination of the sort I speak of is abhorrent to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and to the members of this government. But there is room for difference of opinion, and I do not agree that it would do harm. I think it would do good. I think it would establish this very important principle that the practice is outside the law, that it is disapproved, that it is obnoxious and that it should therefore not be continued, and it would have a tremendous educational value. It will help people to orientate themselves on it. There are states in the country bordering us where such laws have been introduced, and so I want to keep this issue alive. I might say—if I have not done so until now—that the Ontario Command of the Legion is in favour of that legislation. I might also add this—it has reached my knowledge that a very important committee of the Church, the Legion and the synagogues and other groups have now begun a study to learn the extent of employment discrimination.

Introducing this bill now, the first time I have introduced a bill—until now I have found other devices of keeping the issue before the House—I knew that such legislation would carry only if the government introduced it, and in the absence of government sponsored legislation it could not carry. But I feel that it is good to keep the issue before the public and before this Legislature. It will be what you might call "plowed under," but I dare suggest that, having been "plowed under," it will spring up again in this House at a future date, and

I hope that you will see it again in this House as a government measure, as I always hoped, and as I still hope, that it will on another occasion be brought in as a government measure, and as a government measure it could be far better equipped to handle the situation than my bill, as it is limited due to the fact I am a private member.

I hope this bit of discussion will be a contribution to the efforts to eliminate employment discrimination of all types and of all sorts and that in the future legislation that will curb it will be brought down. In the meantime, I say frankly, Mr. Speaker, I do not care whether there is or there is not a recorded vote. I am not seeking to have anyone commit himself if he is not ready to be committed on this question, and I know a lot of hon. members want to think this matter out and want to follow it through. I do hope, however, that at the coming session it will come up and come as a government measure and will then be a real further step forward in the fight against bigotry and against discrimination and for full equality particularly in the realm of employment opportunities.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney - General): Mr. Speaker, before the matter is put to the House, what the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) may have intended to indicate is that his purpose has now been served in putting the bill forward and thereby creating an opportunity for him to make the speech he has in the Legislature, and it may be that, having done so, he now wishes to withdraw the bill to let the matter stand pending the completion of the studies which he tells us are now going on on this subject, and I feel before I would wish to make any decision for the government on the matter that I would ask him to indicate if he wishes to follow that course.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, as I stated before, I had just learned of the beginning of the study, and in view of the statement of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that they will be interested in this study, I will be very glad to withdraw it and allow the government to follow this study and arrive at conclusions which I hope will be conducive to legislation of this sort, and with your permission I will withdraw it.

Bill No. 142 discharged.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Notices of motions, Resolution No. 1.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Notice of motion No. 1:

Mr. MacLeod—Resolution—That this House expresses its profound concern over the failure of the Federal Government to reconvene the Dominion-Provincial Conference for the purpose of reaching agreement on Taxation, Health, and Social Security Measures and a Public Investment Programme;

And this House strongly urges the Dominion Government to reconvene the Conference without further delay. Should it fail to do so, this House requests the Ontario Government to invite other provincial governments to an inter-provincial conference to give consideration to the aforesaid matters, and work out a common programme to press for action at the federal level of government.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): I move the adoption of the resolution, and then I would like to speak on it. Mr. Speaker, I rise to move the adoption of Resolution No. 1.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. members will recall, the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod), who has introduced this motion, went into very considerable and careful detail in expressing the views he held in regard to dominion-provincial matters during the budget debate.

It would seem to me that every aspect of this subject has been covered, and there has been the widest opportunity since the beginning of the session to say everything that can be said on this subject.

I would point out this is a double-barrelled motion. I am not criticizing it on that account, but merely pointing out it has 2 distinct purposes. One is to call for a resumption of the dominion-provincial conference and the other to call for a conference of the provincial governments in the event that the dominion-provincial conference does not materialize.

I do not think any resolution passed by this Legislature can advance any further the efforts which have been made to bring about a dominion-provincial conference. After all, there is on record—perhaps almost to the point of boring some of the hon. members—copies of letters which have been sent on behalf of this government urging the resumption of that conference.

Therefore, the first part of the motion raises no new issue. Nothing which can be said on it can in any way increase the understanding which the hon. members would have of the issues put forward by the motion.

So far as the second part of the motion is concerned, it would produce no practical results for the very simple reason that 7 of the 9 provinces have signed agreements with the dominion government. That, of course, is their right and was entirely a matter of their own judgment, but having done so, it is obvious no satisfactory results in the dominion-provincial field can be obtained by an effort to bring together the provincial governments to deal with dominion-provincial affairs, as distinct from inter-provincial affairs.

I need not remind hon. members that we have had many inter-provincial conferences on many subjects throughout the years, but the subjects covered by this motion are in connection with dominion-provincial relations. A conference on dominion-provincial relations, without the dominion government, would be ineffective, and for that reason the government is not prepared to support the motion.

The first part is a statement, which is merely a repetition of what the government has been saying. The second part is a request which the government regards as wholly impractical. For that reason the government cannot accept this motion and, without in any way seeking to limit discussion on it, I suggest to the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) that we have discussed this so fully and from so many angles that he might consider withdrawing the motion; or, letting it go to the vote without debate, in view of the fact it has been so widely discussed and that he himself took the occasion, to which I raised no objection, of so very fully discussing this particular subject during the budget debate.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): I want to assure the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and hon. members of the House I have no desire whatever at this late hour to deal with my motion in all of its implications, for the reason already indicated by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), but I did have a great deal to say on this question in the course of other speeches I have made here.

However, I must say that I did not place this resolution on the Order Paper without giving it some very careful consideration. I held very strongly to the view that all of the urgent problems which demanded a dominion-provincial conference in 1945 are still with us after 3 years.

Secondly, I want to say, in my opinion, that conference should not have been adjourned until a settlement was reached. Even if the conference had to recess for a period of weeks or months, I think it should have been held intact until these points of difference could be ironed out.

Thirdly, I want to suggest that perhaps the government of Ontario might have made a contribution toward keeping that conference in session, if it had been willing to offer a basis of compromise, which would have at least resulted in an interim agreement.

However, because of the breakdown of the conference which was adjourned on the motion of the Rt. Hon. the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King), we are on this day without a national uniform old age pension scheme, we are without a national health plan, we are without a well-planned public investment programme to meet the effects of any economic recession that might come along. In short, Mr. Speaker, the national unity which served this country of ours so well in wartime is absent when it is vitally necessary to meet the equally challenging problems of peace.

I say to hon. members of the government and to the House that in my judgment the supreme need of the hour, as far as our country is concerned, is to have that conference resumed without delay, and I think, furthermore, that every hon. member of this Legislature, regardless of his political affiliation, should be prepared to state his view on that question. That was what I had in mind insofar as the first part of my resolution was concerned. I think it would carry some weight with the dominion government if this Legislature were to unanimously call upon the dominion government to resume the conference.

As for the second part of the resolution: as the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has pointed out, it makes provision in the event of the federal government remaining adamant, for the government of this province to call a conference with the other provinces, in order to find some way out of the impasse in which we find ourselves.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has said there have been many inter-provincial conferences during the past year or so, that is to say, there have been conferences on labour matters, on agricultural matters, and so forth, but when I refer to an inter-provincial conference I am thinking of it in somewhat different terms. I am referring to the type of inter-provincial conference which was called in 1887 by the then hon. Premier Mercier of Quebec, who gave leadership to the other provinces which had any demands to make upon the dominion government. I have in mind, too, the inter-provincial conference that was called the year I was born, 1902, by Premier Parent of the province of Quebec, which was attended by 7 provinces, and which was concerned with differences chiefly with demands for higher subsidies from the dominion government.

Frankly, Mr. Speaker, I do not see how this present state of affairs can be allowed to continue. The Rt. Hon. Mr. King sits in his castle and says nothing in response to requests made for a resumption of the conference, not only by the government of Ontario, but by the governments of other provinces—the government of the province of Ontario, in particular, is able to score political points by its failure to reconvene the conference, and the people of Canada, including the people of Ontario, are caught between the upper and nether stones of what I would describe as “political expediency” on the part of both disputants.

Some day, some time, we have to make up our minds whether we are going to be a single nation based upon the federal principle of government, or whether we are going to have 9 different classes of citizens in this country, with an old age pensioner in British Columbia getting $40, an old age pensioner in Alberta getting $37 a month, and an old age pensioner in Saskatchewan getting $35 a month, and so on and so forth. It is simply going to undermine the future of Canada if this continual bickering between the provinces is permitted to continue.

Finally, I want to say again that I placed this resolution before this assembly because I thought the time was opportune for the leader of the Liberal Party in this House, if he does not mind my saying so, to express his opinion on the question as to whether the conference should be resumed, and similarly with the leader of the second group in the House. I think it would be a very healthy thing if the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King) knew that so far as this Legislature is concerned, there is no difference of opinion whatever as to the urgent need of reconvening the conference to deal with the matters which were on the agenda in 1945 and working out a solution which will be at once beneficial to the provinces and to the nation as a whole.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I thought perhaps some other hon. members were going to speak on this matter. I am not going to keep the House any length of time, but I think it is an important matter.

I totally disagree with the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) who has introduced the resolution. I do not think he has taken the proper method. To briefly explain our stand, I am going to read an amendment:

Moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Taylor, that the resolution now before the House be amended by striking out the last sentence so that the resolution shall read as follows:

"That this House expresses its profound concern over the failure of the Federal Government to reconvene the Dominion Provincial Conference for the purpose of reaching an agreement on taxation, health and social security measures and a public investment programme; and this House strongly urges the Dominion Government to reconvene the Conference without further delay.'"

We, Mr. Speaker, believe this matter is solely within the jurisdiction of the federal government, and that it is up to the federal government to call this conference together without delay.

MR. MACLEOD: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, since that is merely an exact quotation from a statement I have made at least 20 times in this Legislature, naturally the government will support the amendment.

MR. SPEAKER: I might say to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) that I put the vote in connection with the resolution, and my understanding of the rule is that after the vote is called, you are out of order in making an amendment.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I did not think the vote had been put.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think if it is merely a matter of the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) not having spoken up as rapidly as possible, if you feel inclined to do so, you might well accord him the opportunity of moving the amendment, because it was quite clear to me the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) was merely slower getting on his feet than he intended to be.

MR. GRUMMETT: I had just come into the House, Mr. Speaker, and I did not know the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) was going to finish so rapidly, and you were on your feet before I got on mine, Mr. Speaker. That was the only reason.

MR. SPEAKER: That being the case I will accept the amendment.

HON. MR. DREW: The last sentence is rather long, I would like to check it for a moment. Yes, it is all right.

The House divided on the amendment.

AYES: 54

NAYS: 9

The amendment approved on division.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in regard to the motion standing in the name of the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), the government accepts the motion and will table it.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I indicated there was one matter which I wished to bring forward, but by consent it was deferred until after we had completed the Orders, and I will now deal with it.

During this session the stage has been set for the greatest period of development in the history of this province. Many laws have been passed greatly increasing the possibility of expansion in every field. Legislative action has been taken which authorizes the government to proceed with the most extensive power developments ever undertaken in this or any other province of Canada. The magnitude of that undertaking is not yet fully realized. The change of frequency at an estimated cost of $191,000,000 is only part of a vast integrated programme which calls for public financing on a scale never previously contemplated by any provincial government. It will be necessary for the Ontario Government and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, under joint financing arrangements, to raise nearly $600,000,000 within the next few years. This programme embraces plans for the construction of new hydro-electric plants throughout the whole of Ontario, and particularly on the Ottawa and St. Lawrence rivers. It provides for the construction by the Commission for the first time of large steam generating plants. All this is inseparably related to the plans for frequency change-over, without which such a vast programme could not be undertaken. Only by having a standard frequency, under which it is possible to dispose of temporary reserves at any time in outside markets, could this government consider assuming the responsibility for deciding to proceed with construction on so vast a scale. It must therefore be regarded as one complete programme. The production of electric power at a level which will bring ever greater industrial, agricultural and other expansion, can only be carried forward with the adoption of the frequency change-over as part of one combined undertaking.

That being so, the Government has recognized the necessity of examining most carefully the situation with which it is confronted. Because of the immense amount of detail in carrying out the actual change-over in each home, store, office, mine, factory, or other consumer of power, the completion of the frequency change-over will take some years. But the major part of this construction, and much the largest part of this huge expenditure, will come within less than five years. All this depends upon financing through the public purchase of securities issued with the backing of the Ontario Government and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. The possibility of carrying out this huge undertaking depends directly upon the confidence of investors in the continuity of the programme for which this financing must be done. It is therefore essential that there be undisturbed continuity of policy for at least four years, within which the major part of this financing will have been completed. Many factors combine to establish that measure of public confidence which determines the real level of our financial credit. There must first of all be confidence in the government. There must be confidence that the programme for which the first financing is being done will be fully carried out in accordance with its original plans. There must be confidence that the general public will support so great an undertaking. There must, above all, be confidence that the operations for which the money is to be raised are sound, well planned, and within the economic strength of the province.

I find it difficult to believe that anyone will disagree with this summary of this situation. Let me then examine our position in dealing with the most important and most progressive overall plan now under consideration anywhere in Canada. The bill providing the legal authority necessary to carry out that part of the plan which relates to frequency change-over has been passed by this Legislature and soon will receive Royal assent. On a recorded vote, it received the unanimous support of every member of this Legislature. Unfortunately, that does not represent the unanimous support of the political parties represented in this Legislature.

Although every C.C.F. member voted for the bill before us, the Provincial Leader of that party has attacked our programme and in typically prejudiced terms challenged our good faith. While expressing our very high personal regard for the leader of that party in this Legislature, the government has no choice but to recognize that their Provincial Leader must be regarded as speaking officially on behalf of that whole party.

Moreover, the officials of the Ontario Federation of Labour have publicly identified themselves completely with the C.C.F. They have announced that they are organizing politically and raising funds to defeat this government. That is, of course, their right. But we must recognize that the C.C.F. members of this Legislature have also identified themselves with the activities of the officials of the Ontario Federation of Labour.

For that reason, we must pay very careful attention to the statement of the officials of the Ontario Federation of Labour in regard to frequency change-over and our great programme of electrical development. They bear an interesting similarity to what has been said by the Provincial Leader of the C.C.F. This is what he said:

"The Federation registers a distinct condemnation of the high-handed action and interference in the affairs of the hydro. We, as citizens of Ontario, are shareholders in this great public enterprise, and we regard it as a vital and necessary part of the economy of this great industrial province. Political interference can only be condemned in the most vigorous terms.

The lack of planning of your government and its consistent refusal to accept the engineering recommendations of experienced and competent technicians leaves us no alternative but to conclude that hydro is being used by your government as a pawn and political football.

Our members have lost considerable income through current hydro shortages—income that can ill be spared. We are, therefore, especially interested in the problem presented in the administration of our source of electrical power.

We would urgently request that this number one public problem be dealt with according to the recommendations of hydro's own able and efficient staff, presenting as it does a common problem over and above any political considerations whatsoever. It is in fact the very life blood of the economy of this great province.

We put forward the viewpoint that the extension of electricity into the rural areas of this province, to serve the many farming communities that now have no electric lights at all, is much to be preferred over removing the flicker from electric lights in a few large cities.

Heavy industry will continue to use 25 cycle power. Large industrial areas would not likely be changed to 60 cycle. Further, we do not subscribe to the proposition that Ontario is an "Isolated island" in a sea of 60 cycle power. There are several large areas on the North American continent remaining on the same frequency that we use in Ontario, primarily because of their industrial nature.

A hydro slogan used not long ago impressed us very much. It was 'Hydro is yours, use it!' Since hydro is ours, we further make strenuous objection to the dissipation of $200,000,000 of hydro reserves for a change-over from 25 to 60 cycle. We regard this as primarily a transaction to leave substantial profits in the pockets of large electrical manufacturing corporations."

Reports of speeches by the Leader of the C.C.F. Party in Ontario conform with this statement. No matter what the vote was in this Legislature, we have no choice but to accept this as the official position of the C.C.F. Party and to recognize that a continuing attack will be made against our programme upon that basis.

Now let me examine the position of the Liberal Party. The Liberals in this Legislature voted unanimously for the same bill. That, however, cannot be taken as to the position of the Liberal Party in regard to this subject. Again we have no choice but to examine what has been taking place outside this Legislature. The President of the Ontario Liberal Association, the Chairman of the Liberal Election Board, and many other prominent Liberals throughout this province have been unrestrained in their criticism of our programme.

They have been organizing an active campaign against our programmes through members of their party who hold office in the local commissions. They are doing their utmost to bring politics into those important local organizations which are such a vital part of the combined hydro-electric activities of this province. Only a few days ago you saw the reports in the press of recommendations purporting to be made on behalf of a committee representing municipal organizations, which challenged our whole programme. Significantly enough, this unsigned report was made public on the day that the delegates to the annual conference of the Ontario Liberal Association were meeting in Toronto. That report does not represent the considered opinion of the local organizations, but it does very clearly represent the campaign which is being conducted through some members of these local organizations in different parts of Ontario for a strictly political objective. Unfortunately, while that objective is to defeat this government, a perfectly legitimate aim for the Liberal Party, the effect of such a campaign is to create doubt, disturbance and lack of confidence, at a time when this could undermine our whole programme if it succeeded in any substantial degree.

When I announced the Government's decision to proceed with this tremendous undertaking, just a few days before the opening of this session, I indicated that this was a matter of direct concern to every citizen of this province. I pointed out that our whole great electrical system within Ontario is the property of the people of Ontario, and that in the end it was for them to decide what they wished to be done. I explained that every detail of the recommendations we had received would be placed before the Legislature, as well as before the representatives of the municipal organizations. That has been done. We have obtained the very best expert advice available anywhere in the world, and the recommendations of all those experts coincides entirely with the recommendations of our own highly skilled experts of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. Never was any project examined with greater care. Never was any project considered with a more detailed analysis of all the essential facts. Never did a project of this size and importance ever rest more completely upon public confidence.

In this very practical world, we are compelled to recognize that without adequate financing the very best of plans cannot be put into effect. As I said before, within a period of less than five years we will be called upon to raise by public financing nearly $600,000,000, over and above all our normal annual financing and our ordinary public borrowings. The simple truth is that this cannot be undertaken in an atmosphere of uncertainty and suspicion, constantly fanned and stimulated by activities of the nature to which I have referred, activities which are in accord with the statements made on behalf of both the Liberal and C.C.F. Parties. We can of course count on attempted sabotage by every means within their power on the part of the Communist Party.

While the Ontario Liberal Leader in the Legislature did vote for this bill, that does not represent the position which has been taken by leading officials of his party. While this House was in session, the Chairman of the Ontario Liberal Election Board spoke officially on behalf of the Liberal Party over a provincial radio network. Let me repeat to you just a few of the things he said.

"For some time George Drew has been attempting to set himself up as a champion of democracy versus Communism, and he has laboured hard in this respect. This is not surprising of course, when you consider Mr. Drew as the Leader of the Tory Party, and there always has been throughout the civilized world a battle between the two groups who desire absolute control; Toryism on the one hand and Communism in its various forms on the other."

He then went on to discuss our relationship with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. Referring to this subject he said, and I quote:

"Allow me to say something of the administration of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission as an example of the type of dictatorship Toryism is capable of as practised by George Drew."

He then proceeded with his effort to impress the public with the fact that we were controlling the activities of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission without any regard for the people of Ontario, and on different occasions throughout his speech referred to our "dictatorial attitude." He then said of me that in following the course we have, "He did not trust the people who are both owner and customer."

That was an official statement on behalf of the Liberal Party and was so advertised. That is obviously the line they intend to follow. Our re-organization of the Commission, and the plan we have introduced, are to be attacked as the dictatorial action by this government. This is the clear warning that no matter how substantial our majority may be in this Legislature, and no matter how capable we may be at the moment of carrying out our legislative programme as a result of that majority, the greatest project ever undertaken on behalf of the people of Ontario is to be subjected to a constant and irresponsible campaign of suspicion, misrepresentation, and above all the suggestion that we are following a dictatorial course which disregards the will of the people.

No government in Ontario has ever been more responsive to the will of the people. No government in Ontario has respected so completely the democratic rights of our people. They are the owners. We are merely their representatives. I have at all times asserted the right and duty of our people to settle great fundamental issues.

Speaking on behalf of the C.C.F. Party in this Legislature on April 6th, the member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) had this to say:

"If the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and his Cabinet colleagues are prepared to stake their political future on that record, we welcome the challenge. Let the people of Ontario decide."

In view of the importance of this issue and the fact that the whole future of this great project is at stake, I think it is desirable that the people of Ontario should have an opportunity to express their opinion. They will be given that opportunity in the usual democratic way on June 7th.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: "In His Majesty's name The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor doth assent to these bills."

MR. SPEAKER: May it please Your Honour:

We, His Majesty's most dutiful and faithful subjects, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, in session assembled, approach Your Honour with sentiments of unfeigned devotion and loyalty to His Majesty's person and government, and humbly beg to present for Your Honour's acceptance a bill intituled, "An Act for granting to His Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of the financial year ending the 31st day of March, 1949."

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: "The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor doth thank His Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, accepts their benevolence and assents to this bill, in His Majesty's name."

HON. RAY LAWSON (Lieutenant-Governor): Mr. Speaker and members of the Legislative Assembly:

It is now my duty to prorogue this session of the 22nd Legislature of the Province of Ontario. In doing so I wish to thank you in the name of His Majesty for your faithful application to the public questions which have been placed before you for decision. The legislation which my government has brought forward and which you have considered and approved is of unusual variety and importance.

To mention only a few of the 99 public bills, there are important provisions to support the building of new housing accommodation in the province; a measure to encourage the production and improve the distribution of milk; a bill which will establish a code of labour and industrial relations in uniformity with the federal law on this subject; a bill to provide new and increased support to public hospitals, and other health and welfare measures of considerable importance and extent. Furthermore, in all fields of provincial government and administration, education, agriculture, mining, administration of justice, highways, public works, municipal affairs, reform institutions, and lands and forests, progressive measures have been given legislative sanction in keeping with the expansion and development of the province which is now taking place.

In a further bill of unassuming proportions the legal foundation has been laid for a great transformation in our public hydro-electric power system. Not only is there to be a change in the frequency from 25 to 60 cycles, but the expansion of its power-producing capacities, already undertaken, will be pushed forward to provide the hydro-electric energy which will be needed in our expanding economy, not only in industry and in urban centres, but throughout every part of rural Ontario.

In 31 private bills you have also dealt with many special subjects requiring legislative action.

It is neither necessary nor desirable to review at length the many other measures which have been occupying your attention during the past six weeks.

I should like, however, to refer briefly to the tragic events of the past few days which have thrown a shadow of sadness over your proceedings. The death of Dr. Gordon Millen, the member for Riverdale, after a long illness, cut short a life which had been devoted in an unusual degree to public affairs and public service. This loss was followed by the tragic accident last Wednesday night, when Mr. William Robertson, the member for Wentworth, was struck down and killed on the highway, just outside the Parliament Buildings, and his companion and associate in the Legislature, Mr. Garfield Anderson, member for Fort William, was seriously injured. Mr. Robertson, only 51 years of age, came from Scotland to Canada in 1926, and had served in the Ontario Legislature since 1943. These misfortunes have shocked and grieved not only their families and those associated with them, but all the people of the province. Our sympathy goes to the families and friends of Dr. Millen and Mr. Robertson and our respect is extended to the memory of these two members, who will long be held in grateful esteem not only for their useful public service, but also for their warm personal qualities.

Satisfactory financial provision has been made for the ensuing year, and it is a matter of great encouragement that ample funds have been provided without any new or increased taxation. This, combined with the surplus of last year, resulting in the greatest reduction in the public debt in any single year, is indicative of the high level of productivity and employment which the province is now enjoying.

I conclude with an expression of my gratitude for the appropriations of public funds which I have just mentioned and with a renewal of my thanks for your services as legislators. It is my confident hope that under the guidance of divine providence the legislation which you have enacted at this session will advance substantially the general welfare and security of all of the people of this province.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER
(Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

It is the will and pleasure of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor that this Legislative Assembly be prorogued and this Legislative Assembly is accordingly prorogued.

The House prorogued at 5.17 p.m.
